High court to re-examine voting rights law

MARK SHERMAN
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court said Friday it will consider eliminating the government's most potent weapon against racial discrimination at polling places since the 1960s. The court acted three days after a diverse coalition of voters propelled President Barack Obama to a second term in the White House.

With a look at affirmative action in higher education already on the agenda, the court is putting a spotlight on race by re-examining the ongoing necessity of laws and programs aimed at giving racial minorities access to major areas of American life from which they once were systematically excluded.

"This is a term in which many core pillars of civil rights and pathways to opportunity hang in the balance," said Debo Adegbile, acting president and director-counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

In an order Friday, the justices agreed to hear a constitutional challenge to the part of the landmark Voting Rights Act that requires all or parts of 16 states with a history of discrimination in voting to get federal approval before making any changes in the way they hold elections.

The high court considered the same issue three years ago but sidestepped what Chief Justice John Roberts then called "a difficult constitutional question."

The new appeal from Shelby County, Ala., near Birmingham, says state and local governments covered by the law have made significant progress and no longer should be forced to live under oversight from Washington.

"The America that elected and reelected Barack Obama as its first African-American president is far different than when the Voting Rights Act was first enacted in 1965. Congress unwisely reauthorized a bill that is stuck in a Jim Crow-era time warp. It is unconstitutional," said Edward Blum, director of the not-for-profit Project on Fair Representation, which is funding the challenges to the voting rights law and affirmative action.

EVEN WARRIORS NEED A LITTLE TLC

Donna Hogue of "Throws of Love" presented knitted throws to the Wounded Warriors who are visiting Pampa during a lunch held in their honor Friday at the Briarwood Family Life Center. At far right is Maj. Clay Wheeler, who is with the Patriot Warrior Foundation in Austin.

About 150 people attended a lunch Friday to honor the 11 Wounded Warriors who are visiting Pampa and going on a deer hunt today.

The Warriors traveled from the southern parts of the state — Houston, Austin and San Antonio — and staying as guests in several homes in Pampa.

Today, they will go deer hunting at several ranches near Pampa.

Colin Doyle, a U.S. Marine from Cypress, said he couldn't wait to go hunting.

Doyle lost his legs from an improvised explosive device during a grenade attack in Iraq.

"I just started with them (the Wounded Warriors) and am raising my 4-year-old son by myself," he said.

Maj. Clay Wheeler with the Patriot Warrior Foundation said they usually don't travel as far as they did to get to Pampa for hunting and fishing trips because of the cost of fuel.

But the trip to Pampa was worth he said, despite the lengthy travel.

"We found that Pampa gives more per capita than most communities," he said. "In the case of Pampa, we are going to do it next year."

His remark garnered a round of applause.

Though Wheeler is involved about with the VFW and other veterans's organizations, he said, "This is where I give most of my time back because I enjoy hunting, fishing and outdoor sports."

The Wounded Warriors in town for the deer hunt are: MSG Brian Moss - Army; SGT Bryce Cole - Army; SSG Charles Cooper - Army CPL Colin Doyle - Marines; SGT Gary Renick - Army; SGT Jhony Pleites - Army; SGT Rick Wilk - Army; SPC Robert Cole - Army; SSG Chris Byers - Army; SSG Troy Youngblood - Army; and MAJ Clay Wheeler - Army.

All agenda items are subject to action. The City Commission reserves the right to adjourn into Executive Session on any item should the need arise and if applicable to Texas law.

The commission meets on the third floor of City Hall, 201 W. Kingsmill Ave.

Pentagon timeline shows military response to Libya attack

By DONNA CASSATA AND LOLITA C. BALDOR
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — New Pentagon details show that the first U.S. military unit arrived in Libya more than 15 hours after the attack on the consulate in Benghazi was over, and four Americans, including the ambassador, were dead.

A Defense Department timeline obtained by The Associated Press underscores how far the military response lagged behind the Sept. 11 attack, due largely to the long distances the commando teams had to travel to get to Libya.

Defense Secretary Leon Panetta and his top military adviser were notified of the attack about 50 minutes after it began and were about to head into a previously scheduled meeting with President Barack Obama. The meeting quickly turned into a discussion of potential responses to the unfolding situation in Benghazi, where militants had surrounded the consulate and set it on fire. The first wave of the attack at the consulate lasted less than two hours.

Ambassador Chris Stevens was killed in the attack. Intelligence, State Department and military officials have released details on the response in an effort to answer Republican criticism

Promise to a dying wife: Rawlins man fights to change Social Security

RAWLINS, Wyo. — In the beginning, Tina chased Brian.

But since the end, Brian has been chasing the federal government for Tina.

As she was dying, she made a request.

She asked Brian to fight to change federal law so that terminally ill patients like herself could bypass a five-month waiting rule for Social Security benefits.

He said yes. Yes, because he loved her for 30 years.

Yes, because they believed that it was the right thing to do.

"It may be too late for me and you but what about all the others out there that are getting blindsided, just like we did?" Brian recalled her saying.

Fulfilling the promise to Tina Moyer has proven to be an uphill battle, maybe even impossible.

On days off, Brian Moyer sits in his quiet, one-story house urgently tapping away at a laptop with a mastiff, Holly, by his side.

But terminally ill patients like Tina don't have five months. They need the money immediately, Brian said.

Had Tina survived five months, her monthly benefit would have been $754. But because she died, Brian received a Social Security Lump-Sum Death Payment of $255.

"This rule is, from my perspective, the government's way of stonewalling in hopes that the terminally ill will die before any payment will have to be made," Brian wrote in the change.org petition.

There have been victories in Brian's fight.

The president of the Wyoming Association of Correctional Employees Local 626 wrote an email to members and encouraged them to sign Moyer's petition on change.org.

Morton suspect indicted in separate 1988 slayings, husband exonerated

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A dishwasher charged with killing an Austin woman whose husband wrongly spent nearly 25 years in prison for the crime was indicted Friday in a separate 1988 slaying, which occurred blocks away from the first.

The capital murder charge against Mark Norwood, 58, handed up by a Travis County jury was not entirely unexpected. For more than a year, authorities have said DNA evidence implicated him in the death of Debra Masters Baker and the 1986 killing of Christine Morton.

Norwood was indicted last year in Morton's death and is scheduled to stand trial in January. He has pleaded not guilty.

Michael Morton was exonerated in his wife's killing after serving 24 years in prison — making his among the most high-profile of the dozens of wrongful convictions cases in Texas. He was freed in October 2011 based on DNA evidence that wasn't available during his 1987 trial.

The fact that Baker was killed two years after the wrong person was arrested in Christine Morton's death has led the Baker family and groups like the Innocence Project to consider the what-ifs. Baker lived just blocks away from the Mortons.

Gas rationing, shortage fray nerves in N.Y.C.

By JIM FITZGERALD AND TOM HAYS
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — A gasoline shortage caused by Superstorm Sandy forced 1970s-era rationing on New Yorkers Friday, adding a fuel-gauge obsession to their frayed nerves and dwindling patience.

"I take passenger, I look at gas. I take another passenger, I look at gas," said New York City taxi driver Shi Shir K. Roy. "Tension all the time."

Though rationing that allowed private motorists to fill up only every other day seemed to help with gas lines, it didn't answer motorists' questions about why they had been waiting for days in hourslong lines to fuel up. The confusion led some, like Angel Ventura, to panic.

Ventura, who drives a delivery van for a camera rental company, has taken to hunting for gasoline every time his gauge drops below a quarter of a tank. "It makes me crazy, thinking I might hit empty and not be able to find it," he said.

As drivers waited on police-monitored lines, thousands more in the region got their power back for the first time since Sandy came ashore 12 days ago. More than 420,000 customers were still without power in New Jersey and the New York City area. President Barack Obama, who visited the battered Jersey coast two days after the storm, said he would survey the damage in New York next week from the storm, which the American Red Cross said will create its largest U.S. relief effort since Hurricane Katrina in 2005.

The gasoline rationing — first in the nation's largest city since the 1970s Arab oil embargo — forced motorists to line up depending on whether their license plate ends with odd or even numbers.

Mayor Michael Bloomberg said one-third of the city's gas stations were open Friday, compared to 25 percent the day before, and cautioned, "there's no guarantee that odd-even is going to make a big difference." His estimate was countered by the Energy Department, which said that more than 70 percent of the city's stations have gas available for sales.

Industry officials first blamed the shortage on gas stations that lost power, but now say the problem has shifted to supply terminals, which are either shut or operating at reduced capacity. Drivers are also quicker to top off tanks because they're afraid gasoline won't be available, AAA spokesman Michael Green said.

Tom Kloza, chief oil analyst at the Oil Price Information Service, said the densely populated New York-New Jersey area has fewer stations per capita than any other major metropolitan area, making the shortage an even bigger problem. He said rationing earlier might have helped in New York City.

"It does curb some of the manic or panic behavior," Kloza said.

Gasoline moves millions of New Yorkers, just as the subway does. Hundreds of thousands of people drive to work, especially from the outer boroughs, and taxis and delivery vans are part of every gridlocked intersection.

Friday was an "odd" day in the rationing plan, although not everyone had gotten with the program.

"Even? Odd? Whatever it is, I didn't have the right one," said Joe Standart, a 62-year-old artist whose even-numbered car was ordered off a West Side gas station line by a police officer.

Teniele Newbury, a mother of three, defended her need to use a car to go about her daily routine.

"People probably think we can take the subway," she said, "but I've got three kids I've got to drop off at three different schools. You try that on the subway with three little kids."

On Long Island, where odd-even rationing also began Friday, a spot check found shorter lines — 30 to 40 cars at most — and more stations with gas. In Brooklyn, car service owner Gary Lindenbaum said waits last week had been five or six hours.

Rights

But defenders of the law said there is a continuing need for it and pointed to the Justice Department's efforts to block voter ID laws in South Carolina and Texas, as well as a redistricting plan in Texas that a federal court found discriminated against the state's large and growing Hispanic population. "What we know even more clearly now than we did when the court last considered this question is that a troubling strain of obstructing the path to the ballot box remains a part of our society," Adegbile said.

Since the court's decision in 2009, Congress has not addressed potential problems identified by the court. Meanwhile, the law's opponents sensed its vulnerability and filed several new lawsuits.

Addressing those challenges, lower courts have concluded that a history of discrimination and more recent efforts to harm minority voters justify continuing federal oversight.

The justices said they will examine whether the formula under which states are covered is outdated because it relies on 40-year old data. By some measures, states covered by the law are outperforming some that are not.

Tuesday's election results also provide an interesting backdrop for the court's action. Americans re-elected the nation's first African-American president. Exit polls across the country indicated Obama won the votes of more than 70 percent of Hispanics and more than 90 percent of blacks. In Alabama, however, the exit polls showed Obama won only about 15 percent of the state's white voters. In neighboring Mississippi, the numbers were even smaller, at 10 percent, the surveys found.

The case probably will be argued in February or March, with a decision expected by late June.

The advance approval, or preclearance requirement, was adopted in the Voting Rights Act in 1965 to give federal officials a potent tool to defeat persistent efforts to keep blacks from voting.

The provision was a huge success, and Congress periodically has renewed it over the years. The most recent occasion was in 2006, when a Republican-led Congress overwhelmingly approved and President George W. Bush signed a 25-year extension.

The requirement currently applies to the states of Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia. It also covers certain counties in California, Florida, New York, North Carolina and South Dakota, and some local jurisdictions in Michigan and New Hampshire. Coverage has been triggered by past discrimination, not only against blacks, but also against American Indians, Asian-Americans, Alaskan Natives and Hispanics.

Before these locations can change their voting rules, they must get approval either from the U.S. Justice Department's civil rights division or from the federal district court in Washington that the new rules won't discriminate.

Congress compiled a 15,000-page record and documented hundreds of instances of apparent voting discrimination in the states covered by the law dating to 1982, the last time it had been extended.

Six of the affected states, Alabama, Arizona, Georgia, South Carolina, South Dakota and Texas, are backing Shelby County's appeal.

In 2009, Roberts indicated the court was troubled about the ongoing need for a law in the face of dramatically improved conditions, including increased minority voter registration and turnout rates. Roberts attributed part of the change to the law itself. "Past success alone, however, is not adequate justification to retain the preclearance requirements," he said.

Jurisdictions required to obtain preclearance were chosen based on whether they had a test restricting the opportunity to register or vote and whether they had a voter registration or turnout rate below 50 percent.

A divided panel of federal appeals court judges in Washington said that the age of the information being used is less important than whether it helps identify jurisdictions with the worst discrimination problems.

Shelby County, a well-to-do, mostly white bedroom community near Birmingham, adopted Roberts' arguments in its effort to have the voting rights provision declared unconstitutional.

Libya

that the administration was holding back what and when it knew about the assault.

Panetta and other defense officials have repeatedly said that they did not have armed aircraft or military teams near Benghazi that could have gotten there quickly.

But there have been persistent questions about whether the Pentagon should have moved more rapidly to get troops into Libya or had units closer to the area as the anniversary of the 9/11 attacks on America approached. In particular, there was at least a 19-hour gap between the time when Panetta first ordered military units to prepare to deploy — between midnight and 2 a.m. local time in Tripoli — and the time a Marine anti-terrorism team landed in Tripoli, which as just before 9 p.m.

A senior defense official on Friday said forces were at the ready around the globe, but it took time to assess the murky situation, evaluate the threats, put plans in place and get the teams there. With the situation on the ground rapidly evolving, military officials have said there were a number of potential scenarios that had to be evaluated, including concerns that the violence could continue for some time or there could be a hostage situation to which commandos might have to respond.

In a letter to Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., on Friday, Panetta specifically addressed the claim that the military could have dispatched armed unmanned aerial vehicles, AC-130 gunships or fighter jets to thwart the attack. Such aircraft were not in the region and not an effective option, he said.

Panetta said that based on a continuous evaluation of threats, military forces were spread around Europe and the Middle East to deal with a variety of missions. In the months before the attack, he noted, "several hundred reports were received indicating possible threats to U.S. facilities around the world" and noted that there was no advance notice of imminent threats to U.S. personnel or facilities in Benghazi.

His explanation, however, did not satisfy McCain. In a statement Friday, McCain said Panetta's letter, "only confirms what we already knew — that there were no forces at a sufficient alert posture in Europe, Africa or the Middle East to provide timely assistance to our fellow citizens in need in Libya."

Obama 2nd term means more big government

I expect that by the time you read this, President Obama will have been re-elected. Get ready for four more years of Big Bloated Government. Hurricane Sandy didn't help. The New York Times declared "a big storm requires big government," and my liberal neighbors agreed.

My science-challenged mayor, Michael Bloomberg, said the storm makes it imperative that America do something about climate change. He said this even though hurricanes have not increased and little evidence exists that man has much effect on climate. With Obama's re-election, we now will spend billions more on "green" strategies. But the Earth won't notice.

Other politicians say Sandy proves we need a powerful federal emergency management agency. So I invited the man who should be president, Rep. Ron Paul, to come on my show to give a sensible perspective.

Paul said, "We handled floods and disasters for 204 years before we had FEMA, and states and volunteers and local communities did quite well."

Paul's congressional district is on the Gulf Coast, so he knows what he's talking about.

"What we should have is real insurance," he said.

Real insurance means private companies make bets about floods with their own money. But America has little of that.

I know this first-hand. I built a beach house because government encouraged me to take the risk. Private insurance companies wouldn't insure most of us who built on the edges of oceans, and those that did charged high prices.

"Too high," said Congress, "so government must insure everyone!" They said they'd price it so taxpayers wouldn't lose — but as usual, they were wrong. Even before Sandy, federal flood insurance was $18 billion in the red.

And worse, cheap insurance encouraged more people to build on the beach. This is an absurd subsidy that should immediately be abolished.

But I fear I won't have much success convincing people. In "No, They Can't: Why Government Fails — But Individuals Succeed" (tinyurl.com/acdq7h), I explain how instinct leads us to assume that experts in Washington have the best tools to manage big risks. Most Americans believe that. Even Fox News anchors told me that "flood insurance is a role for the federal government!"

Viewers were angrier. One civil comment: "Libertarian is good on paper, but not in real life. Why would the Govt. turn its back when its people suffer?"

Because government causes suffering. As Paul put it, "Rich people get insurance subsidized by poor people, build on beaches. ... Their houses get washed away, and poor people pay to rebuild. ... It's a reason we're totally bankrupt."

Yes, it is. My house eventually washed away, and you paid. That's wrong.

Federal emergency management fails, too. After Hurricane Hugo, Sen. Ernest Hollins called FEMA "bureaucratic jackasses that should just get the hell out of the way."

So politicians promised they'd improve FEMA. But three years later, after Hurricane Andrew, Sen. Barbara Mikulski said, "Government's response to Andrew was seen by many hurricane victims as a disaster itself."

Again, the bureaucrats said they'd fix it. Then

It's in the book

My apologies, but for one week, I use this space to shamelessly — though with tact — feature a new book that's written to help people who don't know how to overcome alcohol and other drugs.

The little book is called "Now What? An Insider's Guide to Addiction and Recovery." It is neither profound nor deep. But it is practical. It reads fast, too, so it should help people move quickly from the problem to a solution.

Note that it offers "a" solution. That's because there are many pathways to recovery from alcoholism or drug dependence. The course laid out in this book happens to be one that works effectively for the author and several million other people. In other words, the advice is decidedly biased because it relies on the practical experiences of people like me. I wrote it. I know it because I live it.

The impetus for this book was the thousands of queries I've gotten over the years from addicts, alcoholics and their families, as well as employers, doctors, police chiefs, ministers, lawyers and social workers who deal with addiction all the time. Many of them come my way via this column, from places such as Kenosha, Wis., Sacramento, Calif., Dallas and Miami.

In 2010, this opening sentence of a letter from Marcy S. in Zanesville, Ohio, leapt off the page and jump-started this project. "HELP, MY SON IS DYING," she wrote. And together we have, though her son still struggles with alcohol.

Marcy and I have yet to meet, but she has allowed me to use the intimate details of her story in the book. Addiction and the fight for survival turn utter strangers into intimate friends when we are willing to share our stories. This book encourages us to do just that with one another and especially with the next generation of our own children and grandchildren.

I believe that it is impossible to overcome a problem until we first understand what causes it. That's why the opening chapter, "Swiss Cheese: The Addict's Brain on Drugs," explains the neuroscience of this illness by comparing the brain to a slice of cheese. A provocative thought, isn't it? Read the book for more.

I am always comparing addiction to other chronic illnesses. And it is one, except in one whooper of a difference, and that's in the totality of the consequences for those who have it and families who must endure through it. That's why I compare addiction to bowling in the second chapter. Read the book for more.

The third chapter dispels the notion that addicts must "hit bottom" before they are ready to get help. It implores families not to wait for that bottom, too. Because by then, it is too late, I argue. It isn't about giving up. It is all about giving in. And in the meantime, there are steps families must take to protect their own well-being, even if the addict isn't ready. Read the book for more.

In the fourth chapter, I explain what treatment is and what it isn't. There is no cure for addiction. There is a solution. For many people (but not all), treatment is the gateway to a life restored. But treatment isn't the end of the addict's journey. It is the beginning, which is why the next chapter lays out the framework of support that is so vital to recovery — a framework that is as much about the addict's personal responsibility of commitment and effort as it is about not going it alone — or, as the chapter suggests, "Changing I to We." Read the book for more.

Judge election night speeches by messages they convey

On election night, after the networks called Ohio for President Barack Obama and before Mitt Romney made a phone call to the president, it wasn't clear what was holding things up. Was it disbelief inside the Romney camp, or was it the sudden task of writing a concession speech that nobody thought would be needed?

TOM ROSSHIRT

Given the time limits and the sick feeling in his gut, Romney did an impressive job fulfilling his duty.

The duty of election night is a shared one. Once the winner is named and the loser concedes, the duties of the candidates converge. The goal is no longer to win; it's to make it easier for the winner to govern.

That's why a good concession speech and victory speech should be judged in part by the messages they convey to those not in the hall and not on your side. A good speech is a gracious speech, a humble speech. Humility marks the symbolic end of aggression.

The model is one of a vanquished military leader offering his sword to the victor, who refuses to accept it.

An election night speech isn't humble enough unless it was hard for the candidate to say. So until the speechwriters have something thrown back at them with irritation, they haven't tested the limits.

On Tuesday night, Romney said: "The nation chose another leader. And so Ann and I join with you to earnestly pray for him and for this great nation." Romney's faith, which won respect during the campaign in part because he refused to talk about it, gave this line credibility and made his pledge to pray for the president sound authentic.

Here's what I might have suggested to test the limits of Romney's humility; perhaps he would have used part of it: "The country has chosen a leader who embodies an inspiring aspect of the American story — a man who achieved great things and rose to extraordinary heights with talent, intelligence and hard work and without any advantage of birth, wealth or family privilege."

I probably would have lost my severance.

Obama's speech, too, was gracious. It was kind to mention George and Lenore Romney. It is good to honor your father and mother, but it's even better to honor the other guy's father and mother. It was gracious also for the president to say he is going to meet with Romney. It sent the message, "You're still important; your ideas matter."

The goal is to build good will. So it's important to bear in mind that people remember whether they liked a speech long after they've forgotten what was in it. That means that people remember feeling more than fact, and they especially remember surprises. So if you can surprise people with graciousness, their good feelings are likely to linger. Kind words in dark times rarely are forgotten.

In that light, here is what I would have suggested the president add to his speech Tuesday night:

"I want to say a few words right now — not to the people here in this room or to my campaign team here in Chicago or to my supporters across the country. I want to speak instead to the millions of Americans who voted for Gov. Romney and who are disappointed, even discouraged, to see me at this podium tonight in front of happy supporters — if you can even bear to watch.

"You hoped to see at this hour on election night the smiling faces of Gov. Romney and his team, and many of you believe that our chances for building a better country have been lost — at least for now.

"Campaigns are long, difficult, passionate quests. They fire the energy and idealism of a wide range of people and then leave many good and proud citizens discouraged for the future. In a close election, the results can leave nearly half the nation dispirited. In a large nation such as ours, that means nearly 60 million people. We cannot ultimately have a strong nation if 60 million vibrant, involved citizens feel discouraged or disenfranchised.

"I want to recognize your wishes, your hard work, your love of country and your doubts about me. I want to acknowledge your principles and your ideals. I promise you tonight that I will listen to you and to the representatives you have sent today to Washington with the deepest respect. I will do all I can within the constraints of my duties to answer your needs and meet your concerns for our country.

"I know that I am not the president that you wanted, but I am determined to be a better president than you expected."

U.S. economy growth likely stronger in Q3

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy appears to have grown over the summer faster than first thought.

U.S. companies sold more goods overseas in September, helping narrow the nation's trade gap substantially. And wholesale companies boosted their stockpiles after reporting their best sales in 18 months.

Those figures could lead the government to sharply revise its estimate of the economy's growth rate in the July-September quarter up from the 2 percent annual rate it estimated last month.

Macroeconomic Advisers predicted Friday that the government will estimate the economy's third-quarter growth rate at 3.2 percent when it issues its second estimate on Nov. 29. Economists at Barclays also predict growth at that rate. Economists at High Frequency Economics said estimated growth could be raised to 3.1 percent.

If they are correct, it would mark only the third quarter since the recession officially ended in June 2009 that the economy has grown at an annual rate above 3 percent.

"The third quarter is coming in much stronger than anybody had expected," said Ben Herzon, an economist at Macroeconomic Advisers.

Economists grew more optimistic Friday after seeing two September reports from the Commerce Department that weren't included in the government's initial estimate of growth, released Oct. 26.

Wholesale stockpiles grew 1.1 percent in September, and sales at the wholesale level rose 2 percent, according to a report released Friday. When businesses order more goods, it generally leads to more factory production and that boosts economic growth.

The inventory data followed a government report Thursday that the U.S. trade deficit narrowed to its lowest level in nearly two years because exports rose in September to a record high.

That means U.S. companies earned more from overseas sales while consumers and businesses spent less on foreign products.

The current October-December quarter began with promising signs on jobs and consumer spending.

Employers added 171,000 jobs in October, and hiring was stronger in August and September than first thought, the government said last week. And a separate report Friday showed that the University of Michigan's consumer sentiment index rose in early November to the highest level since July 2007.

Still, Herzon predicts growth is weakening in the October-December quarter to an annual rate of just 1.1 percent.

That's because he expects businesses have slowed their pace of restocking since the third quarter. And the government likely spent less on defense after a sharp rise in the third quarter.

"We don't think the fourth quarter will be as robust," he said.

Many economists expect growth to stay at 2 percent for the entire year, little changed from last year's lackluster 1.8 percent growth rate.

But Herzon said the economy could expand at a better pace next year. He is forecasting growth of 2.9 percent in 2013. He's optimistic that Congress and the administration will reach a budget agreement to keep big tax increases and spending cuts from taking effect beginning in January.

Those tax increases and spending cuts are collectively known as the "fiscal cliff."

"In our forecast, conditions in Europe gradually improve, and the fiscal cliff is largely avoided," Herzon said. "With uncertainty over the fiscal cliff resolved, business investment spending begins to improve."

came Katrina. Almost 2,000 people died. FEMA even got in the way of rescue efforts. Wal-Mart offered flood victims three trailer trucks filled with water.

FEMA turned them away. It prevented the Coast Guard from delivering fuel. It shipped 91,000 tons of ice for Louisiana hurricane victims to Maine and Arizona.

FEMA got better reviews this month, but the jury is still out. Let's see what reporters reveal in the coming weeks.

Even brilliant government bureaucracies become incompetent over time, because everyone must follow the mind-numbing rules.

Economist Steven

Horwitz researched prior disasters and says, "Firms like Wal-Mart, Lowe's, Marriott and McDonald's were major forces for good in getting resources to people in very desperate times, (but) FEMA was an absolute disaster. FEMA did not get into New Orleans in some cases for a week or 10 days."

No one says Wal-Mart should replace local police and firefighters. But local assistance is better. And each Walmart store manager knows his neighborhood's needs. "FEMA is situated in Washington," said Horwitz. "It does not understand as well the needs of local communities."

John Stosell is host of "Stosell" on the Fox Business Network. He's the author of "No They Can't: Why Government Fails, but Individuals Succeed."

Memory screenings offered

In an effort to detect Alzheimer's in its early stages, Accolade Home Care is offering confidential memory screenings on Nov. 12, at Borger Opportunities Center and Nov. 19, at Pampa Senior Citizens Center from 11 a.m.-1 p.m.

As of 2000, it was estimated that 270,000 Texans were afflicted with Alzheimer's. This number has increased over 26 percent to 340,000 in 2010 and is expected to jump to 400,000 by the year 2020. According to Dr. Phillip D. Isbelle, "Screening tests for Alzheimer's disease are simple, painless and very effective at identifying individuals in the early stages of the condition."

Most families affected with Alzheimer's usually involve a child caring for the parent. Charlene Rogers' circumstances are a little different than most. Charlene's daughter was diagnosed with Alzheimer's in 2005, at the age of 54. After two years of visiting doctors and specialists, Leann was told she has Alzheimer's. Leann turned to her mother and said, "Mom, I know there will be a day when I forget who God is, but I know, he will never forget who I am."

Sonora Henry understands the importance of early detection. At the age of 69, her mother's behavior began to change dramatically. She began wearing too much clothing in the summer, or mismatched shoes. She would go on walks, only to find herself in the police station not knowing where she was, or where she lived.

The screenings take roughly five to ten minutes to complete and consist of a series of simple questions and tasks. Each screening is administered by a qualified healthcare professional and provides individuals with information on Alzheimer's disease, dementia and successful aging and local resources.

Beyond the 'fiscal cliff' reason for optimism

CHRISTINA REXRODE AND MATTHEW CRAFT
AP Business Writers

NEW YORK (AP) — Forget about the "fiscal cliff."

That might be hard, considering the drama of this week. The stock market had its worst two-day plunge in a year after voters returned President Barack Obama, a Republican House and a Democratic Senate to power.

Investors fear the approaching cliff — tax increases and government spending cuts that begin to take effect Jan. 1 unless Obama and Congress can work out a compromise.

Economists say the hit to the economy next year could be $800 billion, enough to push the United States back into another recession. And financial analysts are predicting more market turmoil as the deadline approaches.

Lawmakers almost certainly will work out a deal — perhaps messily, unsatisfyingly and with lots of theatrics, but a deal nonetheless. But what happens after that, and to the market in Obama's second term?

Home prices are rising again in many parts of the country. Job growth is much faster than it was last spring. Consumer confidence and retail spending are up. And so is the stock market, this week's jitters notwithstanding.

Even some of those who think the economy and markets will run into trouble soon see better times on the other side of the cliff.

David Kostin, Goldman Sachs's U.S. equity strategist, expects a budget battle in Washington to send the Standard & Poor's 500 index down to 1,250 by the end of the year, about 10 percent lower than where it closed Friday.

Once the fight is finished, however, things should turn around quickly, he says. By the end of next year, the S&P 500 will reach 1,575, Goldman says, clearing its previous all-time high by 10 points.

There are factors that could still hobble the economy, of course.

Median household income has dropped every year since 2007, after adjusting for inflation. The unemployment rate is still high. The Federal Reserve warned last month that job growth, like U.S. economic growth, remains slow.

Here are three things you should watch as you plot an investing strategy for the next four years.

THE BOTTOM LINE
The traditional thinking is that a Democratic president equals higher taxes for businesses. But financial analysts at UBS aren't so sure. In a report before the election, they predicted that the corporate tax rate would drop under Obama or Romney.

And anyway, says Carol Pepper, CEO of the wealth management firm Pepper International in New York, companies aren't going to stop growing just because they're faced with higher taxes.

"That," she says, "is cutting off your nose to spite your face."

For more than three years, companies in the S&P 500 have improved earnings every quarter compared with the year before, according to market research company S&P Capital IQ.

Often, their growth has defied expectations. At the beginning of October, analysts were predicting that third-quarter corporate profits would fall nearly 2 percent compared with a year ago.

With about 90 percent of the companies in the S&P 500 turning in results, they're expected to be up more than 2 percent. And higher earnings generally send a company's stock higher.

That's no guarantee, of course. Revenue for the third quarter so far is up only about 0.6 percent, which means that companies' profit growth is driven not by selling more goods and services but by cutting costs, which can mean laying off workers or trimming salaries.

And compared with a year ago, the earnings and revenue growth is downright anemic. In the third quarter of 2011, earnings grew more than 17 percent over the previous year, according to S&P Capital IQ. Revenue was up more than 11 percent.

Still, if companies managed to increase profits during a slow economic recovery, they should have no trouble doing it if the economy really picks up.

THE CHINA MACHINE

You can't consider the future of the world economy, and therefore the future of the U.S. stock market, without considering China, the world's second-largest economy behind the United States.

You've probably heard that the Chinese economy has slowed. But it's still expanding at an annual rate of 7.4 percent, more than triple the U.S. rate, and far better than the contraction in most of Europe.

China's middle class is big and getting bigger. That makes it more expensive for U.S. companies to produce goods there because of higher living standards, but it also means more customers for American companies to sell things to.

Adrian Day, president of Adrian Day Asset Management in Annapolis, Md., says he's optimistic on China, though it's not without risks. Young people moving en masse from the country to the city can fuel social tensions, and the country's rules still prove baffling or impenetrable for many foreign investors.

"However pessimistic people are about China," Day says, "China's economy is still growing."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Nov. 11, 2012:

This year you often seek clarity by taking a walk, doing yoga and/or participating in some other activity that helps ground you. Your psychic energy is unusually high, and you frequently will test it out. If you are single, check out a new person very carefully ... even if you are introduced to him or her by a friend or family member. This person might not be exactly as he or she portrays him- or herself to be. Romance could flood into your life anyway. If you are attached, a partner could be very helpful. GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ Honor the differences between you and your loved ones. You could be overwhelmed by the possibilities. Remain upbeat and direct. Caring surrounds you, be it from a new love interest or from a compassionate child. Tonight: Put on your dancing shoes.

This Week: A work situation might need some adjusting.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★ You like what is happening with a special person at a distance. This person has a role as a dominant force in your decision-making. You are able to connect with a family member like you have not in a while. Listen to this person. Tonight: Happy close to home.

This Week: Allow your creativity to flow in a new direction.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ You say exactly what is on your mind. You might think you are expressing yourself in a clear and direct manner, yet others easily become confused. You will want to let them ask all the questions they need. Tonight: Meet a friend for dinner.

This Week: A family member or roommate could be full of surprises. Get ready.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★ You might be quite concerned about your finances. If you are in a partnership with joint assets, you could become even more concerned, as you'll find your partner to be unusually overgenerous. A parent or someone you look up to makes demands. Tonight: Make it your treat.

This Week: Someone might try to shake you up. Let it go, but stay on your toes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ Be direct with a partner. You can afford to lay your cards on the table. An intellectual hunch of yours is right-on. Follow through on it, and you might be surprised by the end result. Express your caring in a way that others can hear. Tonight: Whatever puts a smile on your face.

This Week: Use caution with all money dealings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★ Listen to the whispers around you -- there might be some validity to be found. Until you confirm what you hear, stay neutral. You might discover that the right thought or the right sentence could open someone up. Tonight: Let your creativity flow.

This Week: An eclipse in your sign promises new beginnings. Make conscious choices.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ Listen to a friend's suggestions. You might be surprised by the sudden lack of direction or confusion on the homefront. Others' positive energy flows and helps you sort out a situation. Discussions help clear the air. Tonight: Where your friends are.

This Week: Life seems to flow from Wednesday on.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ Take a stand, and you'll accomplish far more than you thought possible. Your instincts will carry you through a problem, though at first you might not be exactly sure whether you are on the "right" side. Continue to trust your sixth sense. Tonight: Visit with a loved one.

This Week: A surprise heads your way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ You could discover that a financial situation has caught up to you. It might not be as bad as you think. Get several different opinions, and you will feel supported. Allow more of your childlike spirit to come out. Tonight: Let the good times roll.

This Week: Stay focused. By Wednesday, allow your creativity to speak.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ Talk with others directly. Confusion keeps coming up, so take a pass if you are not sure. You will be a lot happier with the end results. Someone shares his or her feelings to the extent that you might even blush. Tonight: Togetherness works.

This Week: Stretch your mind to understand what is happening with someone.

Taylor Eric Fredriksson

Brian Eric and Stacie (Neff) Fredriksson are proud to announce the birth of their son, Taylor Eric. Taylor was born on September 26, 2012, in Concord, MA. He weighed 6 pounds, 11 ounces, and was 20 1/2 inches long. Taylor was welcomed home by his big sister, Gracelyn Elaine Fredriksson, 2 1/2 years old.

Taylor is the grandson of Raymond Dee and Meredith Elaine Neff of Pampa, Texas and Carl and Muriel Elaine Fredriksson of New Hampshire. He is the great-grandson of the late Ervin Taylor and Mary Neff of Laverne, Oklahoma, and Billie and Muriel Henderson of Wichita Falls, Texas.

ENDURING LOVE

Bill Hammer and Katherine Stroebel

Bill Hammer and Katherine Stroebel were married in Zion Lutheran Church, Pampa, Texas on November 10, 1962. Bill and Katherine were high school sweethearts in Cisco, Texas. In 1958 Humble County Oil Company transferred Katherine's parents Doc and Mary Alice to Pampa. Bill retired from Cabot Corporation with forty years of service. Katherine retired from Cabot Corporation with twenty-three years of service and then opened Baskets of Love. They are active members of Zion Lutheran Church. They base their long marriage on faith, family, and friends.

ENGAGEMENTS

Karis Fuchs and Ryan Zemanek

Jim and Denise Fuchs of San Antonio, Texas are pleased to announce the engagement of their daughter Karis Fuchs, to Ryan Zemanek.

Karis currently lives in Pampa, Texas. She graduated from Texas A&M University, and is currently employed with CAbi Clothing as a Clothing Consultant.

The groom is a graduate of Pampa High School. He attended Texas A&M University, and is currently employed with Bourland & Leverich. Mr. Zemanek's parents are Pam and Michael Zemanek of Pampa, Texas.

The bride and groom met 6 years ago at Texas A&M University, and will wed November 12, 2012 in Boerne Texas. The couple will reside in Pampa.

Hollywood's Red Carpet awaits Make-A-Wish patrons in Casper

By SALLY ANN SHURMUS

Star-Tribune staff writer, writer

In the world of fundraising, nothing tugs at people's emotions more than raising money for kids. And when the kids are sick, it's a slam dunk. And when the kids are sick and the event is over the top, people clamor for tickets.

On Saturday night, patrons of Make-A-Wish Wyoming will glam and step out from 6 to 10 p.m., to the Best Western Ramkota for the 10th annual Stories of Light Wine Tasting Dinner and Auction.

Limited tickets remain at $90 each. RSVP by Wednesday to 234-9474 or e-mail makeawish@wyoming.wish.org.

The wine tasting will feature a large variety of exclusive wines presented by Poplar Wine & Spirits. A gourmet dinner will be served, and portraits of wish children by artist Tom Loepp will be auctioned and then presented to the wish families.

Other live auction items include gemstones, Jackson and Disney vacation packages, "Your Name in a C.J. Box novel," a lunch at the Busy Bee in Buffalo with Longmire author Craig Johnson, and a once-in-a-lifetime experience to attend the world renowned Grammy Awards in Los Angeles.

The highlight of the evening will be inspirational stories and videos shared by wish families. Among those granted a wish was 13-year-old Zach of Casper, an eighth-grader at Centennial Junior High School. (Make-A-Wish policy does not disclose last names of its wish recipients.)

Zach likes video games and pizza but his true love is sports. In September 2010 at age 11, he was diagnosed with Acute Lymphoblastic Leukemia. After months of treatments, he is now in remission.

In September 2011, his wish was granted as he visited the Oklahoma Sooners in Norman, Okla., received VIP treatment, attended practices and dinners with the team and hung out in the locker room. He was even at midfield for the coin toss.

Guests on Saturday may dance to the big band sounds of the Tremors at the end of the evening and strike a pose in the paparazzi photo booth. Vintage Hollywood attire is optional.

Make-A-Wish Wyoming is a nonprofit organization that grants the wishes of Wyoming children ages 2-1/2 to 18 years old with life threatening medical conditions.

town's vote count

REHOBOTH, Mass. (AP) — It wasn't hanging chads or voter fraud that delayed the vote count in one Massachusetts town — it was a spider.

Rehoboth (ruh-HOH'-buth) Town Clerk Kathleen Conti says one of the town's aging voting machines malfunctioned Tuesday morning.

She called a technician, who said a spider web apparently prevented the machine's scanner from counting ballots. Conti tells The Sun Chronicle of Attleboro (<http://bit.ly/XmzmSj>) all Rehoboth's voting machines received preventive maintenance a month ago.

The vote count wasn't completed until Wednesday afternoon.

Rehoboth voters favored Republican presidential challenger Mitt Romney and incumbent Republican U.S. Sen. Scott Brown, but went for Democratic U.S. House candidate Joseph Kennedy III.

Rehoboth, with about 12,000 residents, is about 50 miles southwest of Boston.

Congratulations!

Pampa varsity boys' preview

By ZAC GREEN
zgreen@thepampanews.com

The fall sports season has arrived. The Pampa boy's varsity basketball team tips off their season Nov. 13 here in Pampa against San Jacinto at 7:30 p.m.

The Harvesters will bring back two returning starters in Tyler Powell and Derek Pollard. Powell is currently playing for the Pampa football team and will join the basketball team when the football season is over.

Freshman Cade Engle will be starting for the Harvesters along with three seniors, Ty Hutto, Jon Cox, Derek Pollard and junior, Cory Ponce. Once Powell joins the team he will be put into the starting lineup.

Varsity Boy's Coach Matt Embry hopes he won't have to ask any player to do too much this season. All 12 will have a role for the team, and he expects each 12 to perform their role to the best of their abilities.

"I am looking forward to spending time with this group of young men and watching them grow both as athletes and as individuals. We preach discipline, team and integrity. We can't wait for our kids to put that on display for our community," said Embry.

"I am excited for the opportunity to lead the Hustlin' Harvester basketball program. I am receiving a team that was in great hands and I hope to continue to build on the tradition that coach Miller and those before him built for Pampa boy's basketball," Embry added.

Pampa will have a tough pre-district schedule including two games against 5A teams in South Garland and Lewisville Hebron. The Harvesters will also play Burkburnett and Randall in pre-district play. Embry says those are just a few of the tough match ups to expect this season.

WHAT'S AT STAKE

Texas wants to keep up momentum of three-game winning streak after impressive road win at Texas Tech. It will be an emotional day for Texas as the Longhorns pay tribute to former coach Darrell Royal, who died Wednesday. Texas will line up in wishbone formation for first offensive play. Iowa State can become bowl eligible with a win.

KEY MATCHUP

Iowa State S Jacques Washington vs. Texas WR Mike Davis. Washington will have to protect the middle of the field and deep routes by the speedy Davis, particularly on play-action passes. Davis is Texas' top deep threat, averaging 38 yards on six touchdown catches.

PLAYERS TO WATCH

Iowa State: RB Shontrell Johnson is Iowa State's leading rusher and faces a Texas defense that has made a habit of giving up huge yards on the ground this season. The Longhorns were better last week against Texas Tech, but can't allow Iowa State's physical front line to start controlling the line of scrimmage.

Texas: RB Johnathan Gray is starting to take control of the Texas rushing attack. The freshman posted consecutive 100-yard games in his first two career starts, both Texas wins. He doesn't have touchdowns to show for

Aggies defense, Tide offense pretty good, too

By KRISTIE RIEKEN
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE STATION, Texas — The hype entering Saturday's game between top-ranked Alabama and No. 15 Texas A&M revolves around the Crimson Tide's dominate defense and the Aggies' prolific offense.

But that only tells part of the story. It overshadows Alabama quarterback AJ McCarron and Texas A&M defensive end Damontre Moore. McCarron is a Heisman Trophy candidate who hasn't thrown an interception. Moore is second in the nation in tackles for losses and tied for second in sacks.

Alabama's offense and Texas A&M's defense might both be a bit underrated, but both teams know these units can't be overlooked.

"All the way across the board, there are no weaknesses in this offense," Texas A&M defensive coordinator Mark Snyder said. "Each week when you go into a game, you see a weakness here or there that you may be able to attack. They're good across the board ... they're a complete offense."

Texas A&M coach Kevin Sumlin, long known for his high-powered offenses, has been impressed by McCarron's development. The junior has thrown for 1,849 yards and 19 touchdowns this season, the bigger the screen pass he threw to T.J. Yeldon for the touchdown that gave Alabama a 21-17 victory over LSU last weekend.

"For every quarterback there's that moment where you grow up," Sumlin said. "For AJ McCarron, the way he performed coming down the field to win was one of those moments. As an offense they continue to grow. They've got weapons all over the field."

But it wasn't only McCarron who got a boost from that big drive.

"That was just more motivation for us as an offensive unit," Alabama right tackle D.J. Fluker said. "Now we see that we can play at a high level at any point in the time in the game. That was the main thing. And I believe that win brought us a whole lot closer together."

Alabama coach Nick Saban knows facing the Texas A&M defense will be a challenge.

"Their defense is really good — they are very aggressive, they do a lot of different things, they run a lot of pressures," he said. "They are very, very aggressive in terms of loading the box and they are going to stop the run at just about all costs ... they have good players and have been pretty successful doing the things that they do."

Along with the talented skill players, the Crimson Tide has an offensive line filled with players who look to be headed for an NFL career. Texas A&M defensive linemen said this week that Snyder normally puts a star by a couple of top players on a team each week. This week every lineman had that star.

Most people figured that Texas A&M's offense would be able to hold its own in the move from the Big 12 to the Southeastern Conference this season, but some doubted that the defense could find success in the league. The Aggies don't mind that the offense gets the lion's share of the publicity. In fact, senior defensive lineman Spencer Nealy thinks the offense should probably get even more credit than it does for its success.

The Aggies have fared better against the run than the pass this year and are sixth in the SEC in run defense.

"We could care less what they think about us because that's what drives us," Nealy said about A&M's defense. "We're not the defense that you look at in the SEC and you're like: 'I want those guys.' We're a bunch of scrappy guys and we're going to go out there and play (hard). We like being underrated. Hopefully, Alabama looks at us like that and we can hit them in the mouth and prove them wrong."

No. 25 Texas Tech looks to end skid vs. Kansas

By BETSY BLANEY
Associated Press

LUBBOCK, Texas — Kansas coach Charlie Weis is tweaking a couple of routines heading into the Jayhawks' game against No. 25 Texas Tech this weekend.

It couldn't hurt to try something different. The Jayhawks are winless in Big 12 play and have just one win overall this season, so Weis is taking the team to Lubbock earlier and holding practice where they will play the Red Raiders on Saturday.

"We're not just going to go there to take a look at the wonderful stadium they have," Weis said. "We're going to get out there and we're going to go run around."

Kansas (1-8, 0-6) is looking to break an 18-game conference losing streak. The Jayhawks most recent defeat came in a 41-14 loss at Baylor, while Texas Tech (6-3, 3-3) is coming off a second-straight loss, having fallen 31-22 to Texas last week.

After five-straight losses to close last season Texas Tech doesn't want to see this year's skid extended.

The Red Raiders' 28th-ranked rush defense will be tested by Jayhawks running back James Sims, who would be leading the conference in rushing yards per game (124.7) had he played in more games. He served a three-game suspension to open the season.

Texas Tech is allowing about as many yards per game as Sims is averaging. Last week, Longhorns running back Johnathan Gray got 106 yards on 20 carries. Texas Tech coach Tommy Tuberville said Texas moved its offensive lineman around to create mismatches.

"That's one thing we have to work on and do a lot better job of getting lined up," he said. "You saw us. We were running — we were just trying to get lined up."

Weis said Sims is showing he's more than just a player who comes onto the field to carry the ball.

"Obviously, we're a run-first team," the first-year coach at Kansas said. "That's no secret. And he's the main guy. So, I think that what's really helping James is he's taking more of that leadership role on. And I think it bodes well for both him and us as we go forward."

Texas Tech is one of just two teams nationally — along with Florida State — that's ranked in the top 20 in both total offense and total defense. The latter represents a huge turnaround from last season when the Red Raiders were ranked near the bottom in several defensive categories.

"Now, all of a sudden, (Tuberville's) got himself a more complete team than just one-sided one way or the other," Weis said. "And being that he's a defensive guy by trade, I'm sure that brings a smile to his face, that they are playing much more stout on defense."

The team that'll be passing the ball more Saturday ran into some snags against the Longhorns. The Red Raiders squandered scoring chances inside the red zone against Texas and four times settled for field-goal tries.

Quarterback Seth Doege, who leads the nation with 31 touchdowns, was clearly frustrated.

Penalties twice inside the 20-yard line kept the Red Raiders from possible touchdowns, including one time when running back Kenny Williams crossed the goal line for a touchdown. But center Deveric Gallington was called for holding and Texas blocked an ensuing Red Raiders field-goal attempt.

"It just kind of came down to finishing and we didn't get it done," Doege said. "When it comes down to it, you've got to make plays and score touchdowns to win games, especially in this conference."

Weis believes that the Jayhawks having just played an up tempo team like Baylor could help them against the Red Raiders who like to get up to the line quickly.

"I think that it's a catch-22 there," he said. "I think that having just played against that tempo, there will more plays where guys are more ready to go. Rather than just getting ready to go, I think they will be more ready to go."

Oklahoma defense on alert for No. 14 Sooners against Baylor

By JEFF LATZKE
AP College Football Writer

NORMAN, Okla. — Javon Harris just couldn't wait to sneak an extra peek at the Baylor offense that caused him and the rest of Oklahoma's defense so many problems a year ago.

So, in the middle of a class early this week, Harris pulled out teammate Joseph Ibiloye's iPad and revisited the worst defensive performance in Sooners history.

"I shouldn't have been, but I was watching it in class," Harris admitted. "I've watched the Baylor game from last year a lot of times."

Harris and No. 14 Oklahoma (6-2, 4-1 Big 12) get their long-awaited rematch Saturday against the Bears (4-4, 1-4), who are leading the nation in offense even with Robert Griffin III no longer on the roster after winning the Heisman Trophy last season.

"They're a big play team and a home run waiting to happen," said Harris, who got benched during last year's 45-38 Baylor win, as Griffin's career day helped the Bears amass 616 total yards — the most ever allowed by Oklahoma.

"We're just going to continue to play our defense and do what we've been doing all year. We're looking forward to it, and I'm looking forward to another big game."

Griffin's replacement, Nick Florence, will face same secondary that was victimized in last year's game but with a different look. Harris has switched from free safety to strong safety, Tony Jefferson moved from nickel back to free safety and Aaron Colvin is now playing cornerback instead of safety.

All the changes under defensive coordinator Mike Stoops, who replaced Brent Venables, have led to the Sooners being ranked 12th in the nation in pass defense (170 yards per game).

"We've been complicated enough, but simple enough that we're not having breakdowns ourselves and giving up big plays because of our actions," head coach Bob Stoops said. "We've really reduced that."

The Bears, coming off their first Big 12 win against last-place Kansas, had lost all 20 meetings against Oklahoma before the breakthrough last November.

"We absolutely have confidence from last year," Florence said. "We beat them last year and it's a good deal and we will feed off of that, but at the same time it's a totally different year and we are a totally different team and they are a totally different team."

"So, yeah, we beat them last year. That's great, but it's a new year, it's a new time and let's write a new chapter this year."

For Oklahoma, this week marks a shift in the schedule to a stretch against three of the league's most potent offenses. Between the top-rated Bears and the Bedlam rivalry game against Oklahoma State's No. 2 offense, there's a road trip to face West Virginia and one-time Heisman contender Geno Smith.

"For defensive backs, now it's time for us to shine and go out here and do what we've been practicing all year for, really showing what we can do," Harris said.

Oklahoma's starters have allowed only one touchdown pass all season and haven't allowed any team to come within 200 yards of Griffin's 479-yard performance last season.

"You have your matchups and you still have to go do it and execute properly and be fundamentally sound in what you're doing. You have to go do it," Bob Stoops said. "We'll know what we're doing and so we'll see where it goes come Saturday."

On the flip side, Baylor's defense has given up the most yardage of any team in the Bowl Subdivision and will be trying to build on its best performance of the season. The Bears' 342 yards allowed to Kansas were a season low snapped a streak of five straight opponents who had gained at least 500 yards.

It also ended a four-game losing streak.

"It helps a bunch without question, because you have to feel right about what is going on in order to feel right as a team," coach Art Briles said. "It is definitely a boost to the morale and to the confidence, and it was much needed."

"Our initial goal every year is to get bowl eligible. If you can count to six, then you have a chance to do it. We are at four right now, so we need a couple of more wins."

it, but that's where bruiser Joe Bergeron comes in. Bergeron has 16 touchdowns this season, most in short-yardage situations.

FACTS & FIGURES

The Cyclones have two road wins this season. They beat Texas in Austin in 2010 for their only win in the series and Texas is just 3-7 at home in Big 12 games since 2010. As part of their memorial for Royal, the Longhorns will wear "DKR" stickers with his initials on their helmets. Iowa State SS Durrell Givens leads the nation in takeaways with eight, with five fumble recoveries and three interceptions.

Dilemma for TCU's Patterson vs. alma mater K-State

By STEPHEN HAWKINS
AP Sports Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas — Gary Patterson figures he was known more for playing his guitar than anything he did on the field as a Kansas State player back in the early 1980s.

During two years as a safety and linebacker for the Wildcats, Patterson played "a lot on scout teams, a little bit of special teams." But it was also at K-State where he started his coaching career, as a graduate assistant in 1982 for the school's first-ever bowl team.

Now three decades later, with the third-ranked Wildcats undefeated and in the thick of the national championship race, the Kansas native and TCU coach faces his alma mater for the first time Saturday.

"It's hard, because you love seeing, from their perspective, they've come so far and have an opportunity to be so close to playing for a national championship," said Patterson, TCU's winningest coach with 115 victories in his 12 seasons. "But also on our side of it, just try to get seven (wins)."

"It's a dilemma," he said. "But this is what they pay me to do."

TCU (6-3, 3-3) is in its inaugural Big 12 season and became bowl eligible with a double-overtime victory last weekend at then-No. 23 West Virginia, the league's other newcomer.

With Heisman Trophy front-running quarterback Collin Klein, Kansas State (9-0, 6-0) has its highest BCS ranking ever, at No. 2 behind defending national champion Alabama.

The Wildcats are three wins shy of possibly getting into their first BCS national championship game. There almost certainly is no chance of that if they lose any of their remaining games: at TCU and at Baylor before the regular-season finale at home against Texas.

"I'll be on some post office wall if I win. I'll be one person that can't cross the state line," Patterson said. "I used to say once

I cross the Kansas line, I knew I was within 30 minutes, somebody would help me. Now I cross the Kansas line, I need to not tell everybody I'm coming, except if you're a KU fan."

Patterson's time at Kansas State predated even coach Bill Snyder.

During his season as a grad assistant under Jim Dick-ey, Patterson worked with linebackers coach Mo Lattimore, who is now in his 17th year of his second stint on the Wildcats staff. K-State made it to the Independence Bowl that season.

"We played Wisconsin, which is kind of ironic," Patterson said.

Only two seasons ago, Patterson's Horned Frogs capped their 13-0 season with a Rose Bowl victory over Wisconsin. That was a different outcome than his first bowl meeting against the Badgers and sent TCU to a No. 2 final AP ranking.

Another twist is that this is the 10th game this season. In their 10th game a year ago, the Frogs won at then-undefeated Boise State and cost the Broncos any chance of a BCS berth.

Patterson is apparently doing his best to make this game the same as any other for his players.

"He hasn't really spoke too much on it," cornerback Jason Verrett said. "He's just ready to play."

Offensive lineman Blaize Foltz said the fact that Kansas State is their coach's alma mater "hasn't really been" a topic of conversation.

"I'm sure for him, it's just like another game," Foltz said.

After K-State, the Frogs have left only games at 19th-ranked Texas on Thanksgiving night and home against No. 14 Oklahoma. They are just trying to win as many as they can.

Snyder and the Wildcats are trying to stay in contention for a national title shot. They've come a long way since the coach arrived in 1989 — when K-State had gone winless in its previous 27 games and then was considered the worst team in the NCAA's upper division.

"Well, I was part of a couple of those years," Patterson said.

Patterson pondered the question briefly when asked if he hoped to eventually have a similar impact at TCU to what the 73-year-old Snyder has at Kansas State, where he's in his fourth season back after a three-year retirement.

"Hopefully to some extent we have already. We got as far as a Rose Bowl," Patterson said. "I'm not sure I'll be at 73 coaching. It's his passion, what he does. He's been very good at it, and it really says a lot about his energy and about how he does things. It's really truly, truly an amazing story."

Coming to Texas ballots: another Bush in 2014?

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — George P. Bush, a rising star among Hispanic conservatives and the grandson of one president and nephew of another, has taken the first step toward seeking elected office in Texas.

But it's unclear what his next step will be.

The 36-year-old attorney from Fort Worth has filed a two-page candidate reporting declaration with the Texas Ethics Commission but didn't list which office he plans to seek. Bush did not return messages at his consulting firm Friday, and his campaign treasurer was traveling in Oklahoma and unavailable for comment.

Still, word of yet another Bush coming to Texas ballots was cheered by Republicans across the state, where party leaders are well aware that they will need Hispanic voters if they want to continue dominating politics here over the next two decades the way did during the last two.

"It's a positive thing to have something besides old white guys like me on the ballot," said Texas Land Commissioner Jerry Patterson.

A Democrat has not won statewide office in Texas since 1994, but Hispanics accounted for two-thirds of Texas' population growth over the last decade and now make up 35 percent of its population.

Mitt Romney's failure to connect with Latinos is being cited as a reason for his defeat by President Barack Obama, who carried 71 percent of the Hispanic vote nationwide.

"I think George P. Bush is the future of the party," said George Antuna, who co-founded the Hispanic Republicans of Texas with Bush. "Whichever office he decides to seek, we will support him 110 percent."

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, "Renee," is 25 and is an intelligent and independent woman with a good job. She has been in a relationship with her boyfriend, "Bryan," for 6 1/2 years. They have been living together for the past two years.

Bryan is nice and has a decent job, and I like him. However, there is virtually no conversation between them about what their future together holds. Renee would like to get engaged, but she refuses to bring anything up to Bryan for fear that he will feel "pushed." She wants it to happen with no prodding. I maintain that it's perfectly acceptable to ask where he sees their relationship going.

At this point, I'd like to take Bryan aside and say that I love my daughter and would like to know what his intentions are. Is that totally inappropriate in this day and age? I worry she may be throwing away her best years on a dead-end relationship.

I know Renee would not be happy if I approached Bryan with this. Should I just keep my mouth shut and let her handle it? — MAMA ON A MISSION

DEAR MAMA: You are well-meaning, but this is one mission your daughter must complete for herself. Please tell her that after a relationship of six years — and living together for two of them — having a rational discussion with Bryan would not be "pushy." In fact, it's the intelligent thing to do. He may have commitment issues. Or he may need the "nudge." And frankly, if the romance is leading nowhere, Renee needs to know that an engagement to him is not in her future before she invests any more time.

DEAR ABBY: My niece is engaged to a really nice guy who is obviously gay and in denial because of his religion. My brother and his wife ignore it because, according to them, being gay is a "sin." This couple has been out of high school for two years. They are also both virgins, which is unusual.

I had a gathering at my home, and some gay friends attended. They noticed that he was gay and mentioned it to me. Should I just stand by and keep my mouth shut? — UNSURE IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR UNSURE: Yes, you should. Unless you are 100 percent sure the man is, in fact, gay, you should keep your feelings to yourself. Your niece's fiancé may be an effeminate straight man. And your gay friends' "gaydar" may have given them a false reading at your gathering.

DEAR ABBY: I have developed a horrible crush on my kids' tennis instructor. I am very happily married and would never, ever cheat on my husband, but this man makes my heart race. My kids and I spend a fair amount of time with him, and I'm afraid it's starting to show.

By the way, I'm pretty sure my feelings are reciprocated. What to do? — CRUSHING MOM IN THE SOUTH

DEAR CRUSHING MOM: It's not a question of what you should do, but rather what you should NOT do. Do not act on your feelings, do not spend time alone with him and do not tell anyone about it. Enjoy feeling like you are 16, and take your kids home after their lesson. In time, the feeling will fade — particularly if they develop an interest in another sport.

daily horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Nov. 12, 2012:

This year easily could be one of your most creative years yet, and you'll look back on it as being a very special time in your life. You often see the successful path to nearly any objective. If you are an artist, writer, musician or any other artistic field of expression, you could reach a pinnacle in your work. If you are single, your desirability speaks for itself. Your high energy and natural charisma make it nearly impossible for anyone to say "no" to you. Do not settle, as there always will be something better out there. If you are attached, your sweetie will say "yes" more easily. Curb a tendency to be too me-oriented; a partnership is a two-way street. A fellow SCORPIO reads you cold.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Work with certain individuals and engage in conversations with greater depth and insight. You might feel constrained for a short while, but that will pass. Your interactions with a higher-up will be tested once more. Tonight: Make time for a special person.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Defer to others, especially extremely creative individuals. You work well with someone who has a broader vision and deeper understanding than you. Let this person take the lead. You might experience some resistance from a key partner. Tonight: Try a stressbuster.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Pace yourself, and try to understand that you can accomplish only so much so fast. You might not want to express everything that is on your mind, but at this point, it might be wise to do so. Remain as direct as possible. Tonight: Make time for a visit to the gym or a brisk walk.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ In general, you are unusually resourceful. Tap into your creativity and ingenuity. A child or loved one might appear to be closed down. You initially might be a little touchy at first, but you will come around — just get out of your head. Tonight: Let your imagination lead the way.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Listen to your inner voice regarding a partnership. Financial matters are affecting both of you and could be a part of what needs to be discussed. You might not want to push someone away, but inevitably you will. Tonight: Happy head home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Listen to news, and be willing to reach out to a loved one. This person might be unusually shifty right now. Your creativity can create a comfort zone for both of you, in which you can handle some issues that need to be addressed. Tonight: Catch up on a friend's news.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Be aware of your spending and where it might be leading you. Your ability to get through a problem marks events that surround you. Relax with a family member over lunch. This person enjoys the extra time with you. Tonight: Treat yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Tap into your creativity for solutions, and use your efficient nature to complete more tasks than usual. Your plate is most certainly full. You could be overserious at the moment. Lighten up, and you will be able to relax. Tonight: Chat the night away.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Take your time making an important decision. Your intuition will help point you in the right direction with a matter involving home, family and finances. Remember, there are no problems ... only solutions. Tonight: Revamp your budget.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You have a way of making an impact that often startles others. You think with a traditional type of logic, yet sometimes you are willing to take a risk of unusual proportions. Express your thoughts to others so that your actions do not seem so far out. Tonight: Where your friends are.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Your ability to take a stand and impress your logic on others seems high at the present point. If you become too rigid in discussions, you could lose others. Do not mix someone's idea simply because it is not yours. Tonight: Into the wee hours.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Keep reaching out to someone at a distance who cares a lot about you. You sometimes slight this person by not showing him or her enough compassion. If you see a relationship changing, could this scenario be a possibility? Tonight: Make some phone calls.
