City Commission shoots down proposed tax rate increase

After much discussion, the Pampa City Commission approved a tax rate of 0.621027. They met again Tuesday evening to discuss changes to the budget to accommodate this tax rate.

■ Tax rate of $0.621027 approved on 4-1 vote.

The Pampa City Commission met on Monday evening for the first of a two-day agenda. The meeting was held at 5:30 p.m. in the M.K. Brown Auditorium to accommodate the number of attendees expected, as per request of citizens who attended the previous meeting at city hall last week.

At this meeting citizens signed cards before the meeting was in session to have time to speak to the Commission before the voting process began.

Monday's meeting served solely to approve a tax rate.

Roxane Funderburk was the first of the citizens in attendance to be heard, and she said that she didn't want the tax rate to increase and would like to hear why community members were called to the meeting, as it was not previously made clear.

After she was finished speaking, mayor Brad Pingel addressed the crowd saying that the only item on agenda was to set a proposed tax rate.

Mike Price then spoke, and he started off by thanking the commissioners for the job that they do and for taking both prosecution and the praise that comes along with being in their respective positions. He added that he was at the meeting because he was out of town for the last meeting and said he thought it was made obvious that the community as a whole does not want to see an increase in the tax rate. He also said that he has tenants and is facing increases from other facets, including the appraisal value increases, and he wouldn't like to see any more. He then said that he thinks Commissioners need to listen more to the citizens and that there needs to be some restructuring.

Another Pampa resident said that she didn't hear one voice speak up for the tax rate the Commissioners were trying to pass in the last meeting (0.717584). She added that the median income in Pampa is around $50,000 and that the Commissioners need to be listening more to the community members they represent.

Debbie Heiser, local business owner, said that when she renovated the building she runs her business in, the taxes increased tremendously. She has since decided

True heroes for children

SUBMITTED BY
CASA OF THE HIGH PLAINS

The arrests of several celebrated professional athletes who some may call heroes have made national news. With widespread criticism of the way the NFL has handled these initial cases of child and domestic abuse, more incidents are unfortunately surfacing. Until recently, these players have not only escaped accountability and sanctions on game day, but have also somehow retained their images as positive role models.

It seems that the word "hero" is thrown around quite loosely these days. A hero is defined as a person of distinguished courage or ability, admired for his or her brave deeds and noble qualities — someone who, in the opinion of others, has heroic characteristics or has performed a heroic act and is regarded as a model or ideal. Though it's important to remember that there are indeed athletes who are heroic away from their sport and sacrifice time or money to help others, there are many others who are not deserving of the title.

In spite of recent events, many children will continue to view these athletes as heroes. But for more than 46,600 children in the Texas foster care system, their dream is to have a loving, safe and permanent home, and all they need is an everyday hero to fill that role.

AMARILLO – The Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) conducted a traffic stop Friday on Interstate 40, yielding over nine pounds of methamphetamine valued at over $325,000.

At approximately 9:57 p.m., a DPS trooper conducted a traffic stop on a 2002 Chevrolet Tahoe traveling eastbound on I-40, for a traffic violation, near Conway in Carson County.

The occupants of the Tahoe were identified as Berenice Carrillo, 35, and a juvenile male, both

Airstrikes in Syria: US, Arab allies hit IS sites

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. and Arab allies launched what leaders declared would be a long and sustained military assault against Islamic State strongholds in Syria and Iraq, and the U.S. simultaneously targeted an al-Qaida cell said to be plotting imminent attacks on American and other Western interests, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

Hours after the barrage of airstrikes began, Lt. Gen. William Mayville said the attacks took out key Islamic State training camps and facilities. But he said it was too early to tell if they were able to disrupt a terrorist attack being planned by al-Qaida militants, known as the Khorasan Group. He said the group was "nearing the execution phase" of an attack against Europe or the U.S.

President Barack Obama said that Arab support for the airstrikes "makes it clear to the world this is not America's fight alone."

"We're going to do what's necessary to take the fight to this terrorist group, for the security of the country and the region and for the entire world," Obama said as he left Washington for meetings of the U.N. General Assembly in New York.

Army Gen. Martin Dempsey, the top American military official, said the U.S. and its Arab allies achieved their aim of showing the extremists that their attacks will not go unanswered.

The U.S. and five Arab nations attacked the Islamic State group's headquarters in eastern Syria in nighttime raids Monday using land- and sea-based U.S. aircraft as well as Tomahawk cruise missiles launched from two Navy ships in the Red Sea and the northern Persian Gulf.

Gen. Mayville, director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said at the Pentagon that the U.S. carried out the vast majority of the strikes in an operation against the Islamic State group that he said would continue and likely last "in terms of years." But he declined to provide details on what the Arab nations did. He said the strikes included Islamic State militants' financial centers in order to disrupt the well-funded group's activities.

In Syria, activists said the strikes hit targets in and around the city of Raqqa and the province with the same name. Raqqa is the Islamic State group's self-declared capital in Syria. Rami Abdurrahman, who that she will be leaving the community because she doesn't feel that the necessary progression in the city is here. She also said that she feels that she may never sell her building if the tax rate increase were to be approved. She added that people are leaving Pampa and will continue to do so, and Amarillo will see an increase in business from Pampa residents unwilling to spend their money here.

One woman wondered if the city has looked into getting grants for projects such as the elevator in city hall that has been needing a replacement for a few years now. She suggested that the Commissioners look at cutting unnecessary positions on the Council and said she doesn't understand how the City got into this big of a bind (referring to the $26 million debt). She also suggested that the City rely more on local prisoners to do some work in the community, as she has not personally seen a lot of that lately.

Another Pampa resident voiced concerns for the community and felt that the proposed tax rate increase would stifle the town's growth. This resident also encouraged the Commission to think rationally about how it plans to approach any type of tax increase adding that they should not try to fix everything all at once because that doesn't work and never will.

After a few questions about where the amount of debt from the city has come from, Pingel explained that $11 million comes from the City's general fund and $15 million is from local projects that the community has been in favor of passing over the past few years.

At this point, the public hearing portion of the meeting came to a close, and the voting process began. To start things off, Commissioner John Studebaker made the motion to consider the 0.717584 tax rate and Commissioner Karen McLain seconded the motion. After there was a motion and a second, the possibility of amending the tax rate arose. Studebaker made the motion to amend the tax rate to 0.665. There was not a second on that motion.

From there, Commissioner Chris Porter made the motion for an amended tax rate of 0.645, and McLain seconded the motion. Dixon said that he still felt like that number was too high. McLain said that there has to be something done in order to move forward. She added that she didn't feel as if the rate could be moved back any further than that number. Dixon then made the motion to amend the rate to 0.621027, which is what the current tax rate is. Studebaker seconded this motion.

At this point, Pingel spoke and reminded the audience that it costs more to live today than it did a year ago, and it costs more to run a business today than it did a year ago. He added that he believes tax dollars are the only way to produce revenue for the city.

McLain then said that the tax rate has been as high as 0.69 in past years.

From there, the Commissioners held a vote on the amended motion. Studebaker was the only Commissioner to vote against any sort of amendment of the tax rate. He was also the only one on the Council to vote against the amended tax rate of 0.621027. Both of these motions passed on first reading due to a majority vote.

Adjustments to the city budget were discussed after press deadline Tuesday evening and will be published in Thursday's edition of The Pampa News.

ter of Miller's hometown of Erick at the intersection of Route 66 and Sheb Wooley.

The Lost Creek Ranch Arena will transform into a concert venue when top regional acts take command of the stage and fill the giant space to the rafters with great music. The lively mix of Country and Red Dirt music artists includes Chad Sullins and the Last Call Coalition (Stillwater, Okla.), J.W. Lane and County Road X (Wheeler), Atteberry Station (Wellington), Tyler Wilhelm and a Few Dollars More (Elk City, Okla.), and from Nashville, Dean Miller, Roger Miller's son, will be performing songs from his latest album including the title track, "Till You Stop Getting Up."

The day starts with a new tradition that will heat up some old rivalries and is bound to start new ones with the first-ever, Oklahoma-Versus-Texas "KING OF THE ROAD CLASSIC CAR AND TRUCK SHOW." Winners in various classes will be awarded a unique 1st Place prize: A custom-made, personalized ROGER MILLER "KING OF THE ROAD" jacket.

For some, the most thrilling show entries will be in the "Baddest Pickup Truck" class. These trucks must be the toughest, strongest and best looking for their owners to earn their KING OF THE ROAD jacket.

Day-time visitors will enjoy live music, savor food from an excellent vendor line-up and shop around for new family treasures at the arts and crafts booths inside the arena.

Weather will not be a major factor for this year's festival: With the exception of the car and truck show, all activities will be held inside the enclosed Lost Creek Ranch Arena.

Donny G. Liles, Managing Partner of ALL Entertainment LLC and founder of the Buckin Wild Music Fest gladly accepted the opportunity to collaborate on this year's Roger Miller Festival. The first annual Buckin Wild Music Fest drew nearly 3,000 people on July 18-19 at Lost Creek.

"People from Erick and Sayre, Oklahoma as well as Shamrock and Wheeler, Texas are working together on the new Roger Miller Festival, and that's the really cool part," said Liles, "neighboring communities partnering up to create a great event for more people to enjoy."

"Roger Miller was one of a kind and ahead of his time," says Debra Finsterwald, Roger Miller Museum Board Chairman. "Generations will enjoy his timeless music, witty quotes and stories about his extraordinary life. Roger would have loved this year's event - the support of so many people, the music line-up and the King of the Road Car and Truck Show on Route 66 so close to his home are a great tribute!"

• Full-Day tickets including the evening's concert: $30 adults / $15 for kids under 12.

• Half-Day tickets, 10 a.m. - 5 p.m., (Live music, King of the Road Car and Truck Show, arts & crafts, great food): $10 Adults / $5 for Kids less than 12 years old.

• Kids under age 4 attend free of charge.

• Free parking

• Campsites sold separately:

$30 for two nights Friday-Saturday, Oct. 24-25

$20 One night.

Bring lawn chairs and camp all weekend if you want - there is plenty of space at Lost Creek Ranch and Arena. Bring your dancing boots, have a beer and enjoy the concert. Detailed information and ticket outlets will be announced soon. Meanwhile, keep up with us on www.rogermillerfest.com, Facebook "Roger Miller Music Fest."

Make your plans now to come to the 2014 Roger Miller Festival on Saturday, October 25.

Every ticket purchase supports the museum's work to preserve the legacy of Roger Miller.

Country music singer and songwriter legend Roger Miller came from humble beginnings on a farm near Erick, but rose to stardom in the country music world in the 1960s and continued until his untimely death in 1992. With such legendary hits as "King of the Road" and "Dang Me," Roger made a name for himself as an original. He also wrote #1 Hits such as "Invitation to the Blues" for other artists including Ray Price. He penned the hit Broadway musical, "Big River," which earned seven Tony Awards in 1985. Roger Miller was voted into the Nashville Songwriters Hall of Fame in 1973 and the Country Music Hall of Fame in 1995. His iconic music was recognized with 11 Grammy Awards during his lifetime.

make these children's dreams a reality. CASA volunteers are everyday community members that are specially trained and appointed by judges to advocate for children in the child welfare system to ensure that children have a voice in court. They get to know a child or sibling group and any relevant contacts in the children's lives in order to gather information about their physical, emotional and educational needs, and they strive to help the children move out of the temporary foster care system and into safe, permanent homes as quickly as possible.

Research has shown that children and youth in foster care who have CASA volunteers spend less time in foster care, perform better in school and are less likely to return to foster care after a permanent placement.

CASA volunteers are often the only adults consistently present in these children's lives after they enter state custody.

Each of us has an obligation and an opportunity to break the cycle of child abuse and neglect. If you see abuse, report it to 800-252-5400 or go to www.txabusehotline.org. If a child's life is in danger, call 911.

You don't need to be a sports star, actor or celebrity to be worthy of being called a hero. With 46 children being removed from their homes every day due to abuse or neglect, there's a growing need for heroes to enter into these children's lives. Be a hero for children in foster care by becoming a CASA volunteer. Call CASA of the High Plains at 806-669-7638 or visit www.BecomeCASA.org today for more information.

heads the Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, told The Associated Press, "There is confirmed information that there are casualties among Islamic State group members."

In all, America and its Arab allies launched more than 200 airstrikes against roughly a dozen militant targets in Syria during the assault that began Monday night, a U.S. official said. A majority of the missiles fired from Navy ships targeted the Khorasan Group, said the official, who was not authorized to provide mission details so spoke on only condition of anonymity.

The strikes weren't coordinated with the government of Syrian President Bashar Assad, Mayville said, but Syrian and U.S. officials said that the U.S. informed Syria's envoy to the U.N. ahead of time.

Mayville said the Syrian government did not interfere with the operation. He said the strikes did not specifically target Islamic State group leaders, and that he was unaware of any civilian casualties.

Apparently trying to position his government on the side of the airstrikes, Assad said Tuesday that he supported any international effort against terrorism. He spoke during a meeting with Faleh al-Fayadh, an envoy of Iraq's prime minister.

American warplanes also carried out eight airstrikes to disrupt what the military described as "imminent attack plotting against the United States and Western interests" by the shadowy Khorasan Group, a network of al-Qaida veterans working with the Yemeni branch of al-Qaida, known as Al-Qaida in the Arabian Peninsula, to get foreign fighters with Western passports and explosives to target U.S.

Obituaries

Joe Richard Donaldson

Joe Richard Donaldson, MD, 96, of Pampa, died Wednesday, Sept. 17, 2014, in Austin. His body was donated to University of Texas Medical Branch at San Antonio. Memorial services will be announced at a later date by Carmichael-Whatley Funeral Directors.

Joe Richard Donaldson

Dr. Donaldson was born Sept. 24, 1917 in Cleburne, to Charles Lyle Donaldson and Anna Bell Willis. He went to grade school in Amarillo then junior high school and high school in Lubbock. In 1939, he graduated from Texas Tech University in pre-med. Then he attended the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston and finished his medical degree in 1944. He belonged to Phi Chi fraternity and was a member of Alpha Omega Alpha, an honorary medical society. He completed his internship and surgery residency at Indiana University Medical Center in Indianapolis from 1944 to 1948.

It was in Indianapolis that he met and married Laura Ellen "Johnnie" Johnson in February 1946. Johnnie was the head surgical ORN (Operating Room Nurse).

After a short stay in Lexington, Ky., Dr. Joe and Johnnie moved to Pampa, Texas in 1949. Dr. Joe was associated with the Overton Clinic and became partners with Dr. Ed Williams after Dr. Overton retired in 1966. After Dr. Williams retired, Dr. Joe had a solo practice until 1996.

Dr. Donaldson was very active in medical affairs and worked closely with the Texas Medical Association, the Southern Medical Association, the Society of Abdominal Surgeons, the Alumni of the University Medical Branch in Galveston and the Top of Texas Medical Society. He was Chief of Staff and Chief of Surgery at Highland General Hospital and nine years as Trustee at Pampa Regional Medical Center.

In Pampa, Dr. Joe worked in many organizations - Lions Club, Pampa Chamber of Commerce and Gold Coats, Tri State Seniors Golf Association, Pampa Youth and Community Center, Alumni of Texas Tech, Red Raider Club, Pampa Masonic Lodge #966, Lubbock Scottish Rite Consistory, Pampa Shrine Club, Habitat for Humanity, and others. He was a member of the First Methodist Church and served as president of the Men's Class and Methodist Men. Later he served as a greeter every Sunday morning.

His life was totally involved in his family, the practice of medicine, his church, and his community - and golf. He always had a smile for you and was known to tell a good story or two. He shared his garden and his fruit ministry with all his friends.

Joe treasured Johnnie, the love of his life, for almost 67 years. She died in 2005, and now they are finally together again. He loved his four children - Ann, Gail, Richard and Jill, as well as his four grandchildren and one great-grandson.

Survivors include his children, Ann Hoskins and husband Tom of Blanket, Gail Kincaid and husband Gene of Austin, Richard Donaldson and wife Nancy of Austin, Jill Donaldson of Dallas and Evelyn Johnson of New Zealand (adopted daughter and AFS student); grandchildren, Joe Montgomery, Laura Kincaid and Uma Wilson and husband Shannon, all of Austin and Prabha Donaldson of India and a great-grandson, Vishak Wilson, of Austin.

In lieu of flowers, memorials may be made to Texas Tech Alumni, Pampa Scholarship Fund, c/o Janyth Bowers, 11930 W. Ragsdale Road, Pampa, Texas 79065, Pampa Habitat for Humanity, 736 S. The railroad industry in Pampa

Even before the discovery of oil, Pampans had longed for a north-south railroad route to match the excellent east-west service of the Santa Fe.

COURTNEY OXLEY

Organization of the citizenship through the Chamber of Commerce and the Board of city development had obtained the Clinton, Okla. and Western in 1927-28, and local citizens began to look more intently for a connection to the south. The Fort Worth and Denver and its parent Burlington Northern became interested in establishing a line from Childress to Pampa.

Although the project was complicated by rival groups — the Pock Island and Santa Fe, the Board of City Development and local citizens persisted in their efforts to obtain the railroad that would provide a more direct route to the Central Texas and Gulf points. On Aug. 5, 1930, the Pampa Daily News “extra” announced that the Interstate Commerce Commission had granted a certificate of public convenience and necessity for the Pampa-Childress line, with the stipulation that work should begin on or before Dec. 31, 1931, and providing that the Rock Island and Denver Northern should jointly construct and use the line between Wellington and Shamrock to prevent a duplication of expenditure.

After the Rock Island decided to default on the Quanah-Shamrock project, the I.C.C. gave the FW&D a permit to proceed alone. It was necessary to obtain right-of-way and to employ engineers and contractors. The laying of rails was completed on June 14, 1932, and the first paid freight arrived on June 27.

The FW&D was ready to celebrate the completion of the 110-mile, four-million-dollar railroad that was the only major railroad constructed in the United States in 1932. Coming northward from Childress to Pampa, the railroad passed through Wellington, Shamrock and Lefors, Lesser points were Abington, Smithdale, New Loco, Lillie, Samnorwood, Denworth, Magic City, Meldavis (near Lefors) Wesco and Elfco. At 4:30 a.m. on Friday, July 15, 1932, a number of Pampa citizens left on a special train for Childress so that they could return to Pampa on the first passenger train from Childress to Pampa.

Upon arriving at Childress at 8:15 a.m., they were served a chuck wagon breakfast. At 9 a.m., more than 1,600 persons boarded two special trains headed for Pampa. The first train carried the delegation from Pampa; the second train carried railroad officials, state candidates, including Governor Ross Sterling, C. V. Terrell and E. O. Thompson, and special cars from Fort Worth and Wichita Falls.

Because of speaking programs and slow re-loading at Wellington and Shamrock, the special trains were late in arriving at Pampa where a parade had begun at 2 p.m. Bands from Wellington and Shamrock and the Fort Worth and Denver band from Fort Worth played for the parade. When the special trains arrived at Pampa, the huge throng flowed through the business district and stopped east of the courthouse where Governor Ross Sterling and Railroad Commissioner E. O. Thompson spoke to the crowd.

After the parade “broke,” invited guests went to the high school gymnasium (corner of Cuyler and Browning) where the Board of City Development hosted a barbecue served by junior chamber of commerce members. The Canary Sandwich Shop barbecued Gray County beeves for the occasion. A program broadcast by remote control over station KGRS began at the First Methodist Church at 3:15 p.m.

Governor Ross Sterling was not able to attend because he had an engagement in Borger. The program was to welcome railroad officials and to give them an opportunity to be heard. Ralph

Even libs say no to Hillary in 2016

Last week, Hillary Clinton returned to Iowa for the first time since her 2008 presidential campaign loss, saying, “I’m back.” She continued: “It’s true. I’ve been thinking about it,” referring to another run in 2016. But the truth is that even many of her esteemed liberal cronies think it’s a bad idea.

I know that billionaire buddies such as Wal-Mart heiress Alice Walton, philanthropist Jon Stryker and progressive globalist George Soros were among 32 other wealthy elites who helped the former first lady raise over $4 million last year for the “Ready for Hillary” super PAC. However, outside of her super-rich comrades — who have clear self-invested interests in resurrecting and ensuring a Clinton dynasty — hosts of other liberals are petrified of the prospect of her becoming president.

Most expect us conservatives to oppose the 2016 presidential campaign of Hillary Clinton, but listen to the liberals themselves. They’ve already done our bidding.

Let me give you 10 — among many other — liberal cases against Clinton, in their own words, including one from Clinton herself.

10) “It’s possible, even likely, that by 2016 the electorate will be restive, and ready for more change than a pillar of the Obama administration could provide. ... Progressives might think it’s time to run a national campaign from the left, particularly on issues of national security. And it might indeed be time for a challenge to the bipartisan national security consensus that’s hardened since 9/11, as exemplified by the centrist-liberal crowd that feted Clinton at the Saban forum. It would be hard for that campaign to be Hillary Clinton’s. ... I do think people have valid reservations about the nepotism and inbreeding of our political elite. ... Like it or not, Clinton is inextricably tied to Obama’s presidency. If he stumbles ... her candidacy will be wounded if not doomed.” — Joan Walsh, former editor-in-chief of Salon.com and presently an MSNBC and CNN political analyst, writing for Salon.com

9) “You can’t be the candidate that shakes down more money on Wall Street than anybody since, I don’t know, Woodrow Wilson, and be the populist. You can’t be the one to say we’re going to focus on rebuilding America if you voted to go to the Iraq War. There were 30-some Democrats who voted against that. ... Are we going to choose more leadership that is going to roll over and get scratched on the belly by corporations like a fat dog?” — Brian Schweitzer, former Democratic governor of Montana (2005-13), to Time magazine

8) “(Clinton) cannot simply ignore the controversies and wage an energetic defense, a full embrace of America’s international record at a time when (Barack) Obama is scoring the lowest poll numbers of his presidency on that issue. Obama’s foreign policy looks like a key vulnerability for Democrats in the next presidential election. ... Clinton did not get everything right. Her failure to list Nigeria’s Boko Haram as a terrorist organization, for example, was a mistake. And to the extent that she did play a role in Obama’s foreign policy, she cannot completely disassociate herself from his failures.” — world affairs columnist Frida Ghitis, writing for CNN

7) “The first real handhold that the president had in climbing out of single digits in the Democratic primaries in 2008 is that he had condemned the Iraq War and Hillary Clinton had voted for it. It was the first real difference between the president, and most of the rest of the field. For me, I could be wrong, but I still think a vote for that war still should be a deal-breaker in Democratic primaries. Some mistakes you can’t walk back.” — Charles Pierce, lead political blogger for Esquire

6) “We cannot have the party go back to the center. And we can’t have Rand Paul talking about Ferguson and race and not Hillary Clinton, when she is the senator from the state where the (Eric Garner) chokehold case was. ... This is now a national, central issue, and anyone running for president needs to come up with a formula, or in my opinion, they forfeit their right to be taken seriously. ... I’m amazed that we are not hearing from leading candidates — Chris Christie or Jeb Bush or Hillary Clinton.” — Al Sharpton, civil rights activist

5) “Many liberal and

Hump Day with Humphrey

Bulldog characteristics and Humphrey

I don’t really have anything new to tell about Humphrey. He’s pretty much just been hanging back and behaving like an average dog lately, which is unlike him.

LINDSEY TOMASCHIK

Rather than skipping out on this week’s column, I did some more digging on pet360.com to learn more about the English bulldog breed as a whole.

Keeping in mind that Humphrey is not like the average bulldog, the first article I stumbled upon was one about the messiest dog breeds. The English bulldog fell somewhere in the middle of this list, and here is where Humphrey redeems himself a bit. My hound has a smaller under-bite than most others of the same breed, which means he really doesn’t drool all that much. I still try to keep my distance some immediately after he eats or drinks, but that’s something most, if not all dogs have trouble keeping in check. Humphrey really doesn’t require all that much upkeep or grooming. I think English bulldogs shed more than a lot of other dog breeds, which would probably be my only complaint with Humphrey.

Pet360.com referred to bulldogs as “A short dog with a powerful build and lots of wrinkles, bulldogs have loving and gentle dispositions. With a low activity level and friendly nature, bulldogs make excellent couch companions and may need to be motivated by their owner to go outside for exercise. Their short muzzles can cause breathing problems, however, including frequent snorting and sneezing. Bulldogs are also known to drool quite a bit and will need their wrinkles cleaned.”

I agree with everything in this excerpt until the point where it says they may need to be motivated by owners to go outside and exercise. I lucked out in finding a bulldog that loves to go outside and play, and he has a ton of energy, which sometimes wears me out before him. I’m reluctant to admit it because I know we may have a rough winter with snow, but I’m almost ready to see his excitement for the first snowfall of the year. He leaps around the yard catching snowflakes as they fall, just like a child. It’s precious to see that innocence, even in a dog.

Moving on to the short muzzle part, I can definitely relate to this with Humphrey’s snorting, though I think I’ve only heard him sneeze one time since I’ve had him. Last night he slept on the floor beside my bed, though, and I will say that at 5:04 a.m. I was woken up by his snoring, and I wasn’t happy about it. It’s part of what comes with having an English bulldog though, I suppose.

The next article I read named bulldogs the number two most affectionate dog breed (second to the Bichon Frisé, which is a breed I know next to nothing about).

Pet360.com said “Among the most popular breeds according to the AKC, bulldogs are loveable, gentle dogs known for making wonderful family pets. They’re patient and good-natured with children and tend to form strong bonds with family members of all ages.”

I agree 100 percent with this statement. I believe that Humphrey will never forget those with whom he bonded with from the beginning, and that’s obvious to me because these are the people he is still most affectionate with today. It’s clear to me who he’s most comfortable being around because he isn’t moving a mile a minute and is actually able to relax.

He remembers places we have been before, too, and he runs right up to people he remembers having met before. He’s arguably the most social dog I’ve ever owned, and he loves the attention he gets when people recognize him in public. It’s almost as if he’s saying “Wait mom, these are my people; they know me!” He’s gotten to the point where he just expects people to know who he is. His popularity has begun to go to his head. He even ran straight into an open apartment door the other day while we were out visiting a friend, which COMPLETELY mortified me, but luckily they laughed it off as I chased him down. I won’t be forgetting his leash again, that’s for sure! Thank you, kind strangers.

Budd, president of the Burlington system, said that the railroad was built by faith in perilous times. He praised Pampa citizens for procuring the permit from I.C.C. and in obtaining the right-of-way. He commended the contractors, pointing to the nicely chiseled cuts and symmetrical fills. The locating engineers were praised for bringing the road up on the plains with a minimum grade.

Those who had expected the new roadbed to be rough and crooked were surprised to note the smoothness with which the six coaches, pullman and baggage car moved over the shining ribbons of steel. The Fort Worth & Denver Northern had purchased land from John Hyatt for a depot and other structures necessary for its operation at Pampa. On May 10, 1932, the firm of Glover and Boyington was awarded a contract to build the railway station. The building, one of the most modern and up-to-date on the FW&D line was completed and occupied by the office staff on August 9.

Although the building has always been at the present location, it has been listed otherwise in city directives: 510 S. Russell in 1933, 201 W. Brown in 1947, 512 S. Russell in 1969 and 514 S. Russell in 1990.

Agents for the FW&D

depot in Pampa have been 13. Glen Kerss in 1932, J. Leo Southern in 1939, Delaney M. Dickey in 1940, Forrest O. Montgomery in 1954, A. C. Latham in 1960, Bobby G. Mongingo in 1962 and Charles B. Querner in 1969. After the railroad teased operations, the building was occupied by Magabar Drilling Mud Service from 1970 to 1975, Mc-A-Doodles screen painting in 1990 and C.J.'s.

To learn more about Pampa and the Gray County area, visit the White Deer Land Museum in downtown Pampa. progressive activists don't trust Clinton because they think she sides with big banks and big money instead of the middle class and they're wary of her on national security. ... Possibly the biggest concern among liberals is Clinton's coziness with Wall Street, their big bogeyman. Since leaving the State Department in 2013, she has spoken at events sponsored by Wall Street giants like Fidelity, Goldman Sachs and Ameriprise Financial, and during her Senate runs and 2008 presidential run, Clinton defended lobbyists." — "Why many liberals don't trust Hillary Clinton," by Dan Merica

for CNN

4) "I don't think she has been aggressive on the banks. When I think of Hillary Clinton, I actually think she is in bed with some of the banks and Wall Street is her ally." — Nelini Stamp, a progressive political organizer from New York

3) "If there was an actual, authentic 'I am going to listen to you about your issues' from Clinton, instead of kind of pounding the drum of inevitability and stampeding over the left on her way to assumed victory, that would be effective. ... You wonder if it is a pivot or whether she is saying what the moment demands." — Sally Kohn, a progressive activist and CNN contributor

2) "(Clinton) basically seems to be taking positions that are very similar to the vision of America's role in the world that (in 2008) Democrats rejected." — Michael Cohen, a fellow at The Century Foundation and a former speechwriter for several Democratic politicians

1) "I have to admit that a good deal of what my husband and I have learned (about Islam) has come from my daughter. (As) some of you who are our friends know, she took a course last year in Islamic history." — Hillary Clinton, addressing members of the American Muslim Council at the first White House celebration of Eid al-Fitr, on Feb. 20, 1996

US officials: Terrorist group was nearing attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Barack Obama's decision to order airstrikes against an al-Qaida cell in Syria known as the Khorasan Group was based on intelligence suggesting that the group was close to carrying out a terror plot against the U.S. or Europe, administration officials said Tuesday.

On the same night that U.S. and Arab allies carried out more than 200 airstrikes against the Islamic State group, the U.S. alone launched strikes against eight Khorasan Group targets near Aleppo in northwestern Syria, Pentagon officials say.

Briefing reporters at the Pentagon, Lt. Gen. William Mayville, who directs operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the Khorasan Group was nearing "the execution phase of an attack either in Europe or the homeland."

Last week, James Clapper, the director of national intelligence, said the Khorasan Group posed a "potential threat." But senior Obama administration officials, briefing reporters Tuesday under ground rules that they not be identified, said the intelligence was both more precise and more dire than Clapper suggested.

"We were monitoring active plotting that posed an imminent threat to the United States and potentially our allies," one official said. "That was the united view of our intelligence community."

The Khorasan Group, which consists of al-Qaida veterans who fought in Afghanistan and Pakistan, is focused on attacking the West, not the government of Syrian President Bashar Assad, Mayville said.

"We know that the Khorasan Group has attempted to recruit Westerners to serve as operatives or to infiltrate back into their homelands," he said.

"The Khorasan Group is clearly not focused on either the Assad regime or the Syrian people. They are establishing roots in Syria in order to advance attacks against the West and the homeland."

Mayville added that it was too early to describe the effects of the strikes against Khorasan Group targets, or say who may have been killed.

A senior administration official said the plan to strike the Khorasan Group "is something that has been on our radar for several months and it is an action that we were contemplating separate and apart from" the airstrikes against Islamic State group positions in Syria.

While the Islamic State group has broken from al-Qaida, the Khorasan Group consists of veteran operatives known to U.S. intelligence officials.

The Associated Press first reported September 13 that U.S. intelligence officials had identified the Khorasan Group as a top threat, in part because the group had been working with bomb makers from al-Qaida's Yemen affiliate to test new explosive devices that could go undetected by Western airport security measures.

A senior Obama administration official confirmed that the group had been testing bombs at its Syrian camps. The official said the Transportation Security Administration's decision to ban uncharged laptops and cellphones from certain flights, and other enhanced security measures, was prompted by the Khorasan threat.

A U.S. official briefed on intelligence confirmed reports that the group is led by Muhsin al-Fadhli, a Kuwaiti who spent time in Iran and has long been identified as a significant al-Qaida player. U.S. officials said they did not know whether he was killed in the American airstrikes.

Sierra Leone: 130 Ebola cases found in lockdown

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone (AP) — Health teams that went door-to-door in Sierra Leone found 130 confirmed cases of Ebola during a nationwide shutdown to slow the spread of the disease, an official said Tuesday, as authorities consider repeating the unprecedented exercise.

About 70 more suspected cases are still being tested, said Deputy Minister for Political and Public Affairs Karamoh Kabba. In addition, 92 bodies were found during the three-day campaign, during which teams handed out information about the disease to more than 1 million households. It is not yet clear how many of those bodies were positive for Ebola.

The Ebola outbreak sweeping West Africa is believed to have sickened more than 5,800 people and killed more than 2,800, primarily Liberia, Sierra Leone and Guinea. The World Health Organization has warned that even those high tolls are likely underestimates. The unprecedented size and sweep of the outbreak has led to dramatic measures, like the cordoning off of entire communities in Liberia and the shutdown in Sierra Leone.

The outbreak has overwhelmed already weak health systems: A shortage of ambulances has stranded many of the sick at home, others have been turned away from teeming treatment centers and bodies have sometimes not been buried for days. Kabba said Tuesday that there are still delays in collecting bodies in Sierra Leone.

In recent weeks, promises by Western countries to send in more health workers and build more treatment centers have been made and Sierra Leone said it prepared temporary treatment centers for whatever cases it found during the lockdown.

Though many experts initially raised doubts about the lockdown's ability to slow the outbreak, saying it would be hard to keep the country's 6 million people at home, the government has hailed it as a success, and it now considering doing it again.

President Ernest Bai Koroma said on the radio Tuesday that he is "mainly satisfied with the whole process, as it has helped reaching more homes and bringing to the fore many sick people and corpses."

The committee coordinating the Ebola response is still analyzing the results of the lockdown and Koroma said he will listen to the committee's advice about whether or not to have another lockdown.

Dr. David Heymann, an Ebola expert, said reaching so many people with information about Ebola could be crucial to stopping the outbreak. Six months into the world's largest-ever Ebola outbreak, confusion, fear and misunderstanding about the disease is still hindering efforts to control it.

"It's important for African governments to innovate and find new ways of getting messages out to the people," said Heymann, professor of infectious diseases at London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine.

"(The lockdown) seemed to pass without violence and it went against much of international advice. Maybe it's the innovation that will make a difference."

In a sign of how much mistrust and misunderstanding still reigns, teams that were going door-to-door in Sierra Leone reported hearing rumors that the soap they were handing out was poisonous. People sent to treat patients, disinfect homes or provide information about Ebola have come under attack in some communities because of fears they are spreading the disease. One such team was killed last week in Guinea by villagers.

If more isn't done to control the outbreak, the case toll could hit 21,000 in the next six weeks, WHO predicted in a study published Tuesday. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention also released its own, more dire predictions Tuesday, based partly on the assumption that Ebola cases are being underreported. The report says there could be up to 21,000 reported and unreported cases in Liberia and Sierra Leone alone by the end of this month and that cases could balloon to as many as 1.4 million by mid-January.

Experts caution that predictions don't take into account response efforts, which have ramped up in recent weeks.

Ebola, which is transmitted through bodily fluids, has no licensed treatment or vaccine. But some experimental drugs have been tried out in this outbreak. There are now plans for more organized trials in West Africa, possibly as soon as November.

Animal Defenders International calls for traumatic monkey separation experiments to be halted

SUBMITTED MADISON, WIS. — Animal Defenders International (ADI) is calling on the University of Wisconsin at Madison to halt plans to revive traumatic and needless research that will see newborn monkeys torn from their mothers and subjected to a series of stress tests to measure factors leading to the early risk of suffering from anxiety disorders and depression. It has been more than 20 years since the widely opposed tests, funded by the taxpayer but considered a poor model for studying such conditions in people, were conducted at the University.

ADI President Jan Creamer said: "ADI urges the University of Wisconsin to halt plans to revive its outdated maternal deprivation experiments which teach us nothing about the human condition and will cause profound suffering and irreparable trauma to the baby monkeys and the mothers from whom they will be torn."

For the experiment, researcher Ned Kalin will remove 20 newborn rhesus macaque monkeys from their mothers and keep them isolated in an incubator for three to six weeks. The infant monkeys will be paired up aged three to five months, and then at six months the pairs will be split and given a new cage mate. All animals will be exposed to a series of "stress inducing tests", one of which will involve a live snake.

Meanwhile, another group of 20 infant monkeys will be subjected to the same tests, but will not be separated from their mothers until 6 months old. Instead, their mothers may be anaesthetized as required to prevent them protectively defending their babies, when researchers take them for testing. Blood samples, skin biopsies and cerebrospinal fluid will be taken from the young monkeys for which they will be anaesthetized or restrained, in addition to brain imaging. Once the tests are complete, the infants will be killed at one to one and a half years of age and their brains removed for analysis.

There is no indication that the influence of gender based differences on research results will be taken account. Similarly, there is no mention that ketamine, used for anaesthesia, can act as an antidepressant and has been linked to brain cell death in rhesus macaques, with animals less than five days old being more sensitive. In addition, restraint devices, which will be used during the course of the experiment, are known to cause fear and distress in monkeys, further influencing results.

Harry Harlow conducted similar maternal deprivation experiments at the same university from the late 1950s which continued for decades.

There is little recognition of the devastating psychological effect that separation from their mothers will have on the infant monkeys, although the possibility of self-injurious behavior and diarrheal illness is mentioned. Separation from the mother is the most profoundly stressful event a young macaque can experience and rearing primates in isolation is known to cause abnormal behaviors including self-clasping and self-aggression.

The use of animals as a model for human depression and anxiety has been questioned by experts. The complexity of human anxiety disorders, which affect about 40 million adults in America, may include genetics, environmental and social factors, which cannot be replicated in animals. It has been stated that "the chance of creating animal models which consistently reflect the human situation is quite poor."

Jan Creamer states: "There is absolutely no justification for bringing back these archaic and horrific monkey deprivation experiments. We urge the University of Madison to consign them to the past where they belong and use the hundreds of thousands of dollars instead to focus on helping the many millions of Americans who suffer from these disorders."

Freshmen wins 1/3; JV swept by Lady Dons

jlee@thepampanews.com

AMARILLO — The Pampa Lady Harvesters freshmen and junior varsity volleyball teams competed at Palo Duro against the Lady Dons this past Saturday morning in Amarillo. The freshmen won the first set but lost the final two 25-20, 14-25 and 17-25. The junior varsity was swept by their Palo Duro counterparts 25-13 and 25-13.

Freshmen squad wins first set

The Lady Harvesters' freshmen squad jumped out to a 3-0 lead. The Lady Dons scored three points of their own, followed by the Lady Harvesters scoring one, followed by another trade of three points, keeping the game tied at 7-7. The Lady Harvesters went on a 7-2 run spear-headed by the efforts of Tya Hayes and Gracee Gill. Gill even scored two consecutive points extended their lead to 14-9. Three of the next Lady Harvesters' points came from Madison Roby as they Lady Harvesters held an 18-11 lead. The Lady Harvesters received points from Alexis Avila and Calista Bolin in their final seven points and won the set 25-20.

In the second set, the freshmen squad remained competitive until the Lady Dons, who had a 16-12 lead, went on a 7-2 run that all but wrapped up the second set, sending the match into a third set.

The Lady Harvesters had a 2-0 lead thanks to Avila to start the final set. The Lady Harvesters and Lady Dons traded blows until Hayes, Avila and Kaylea Giles strung together a 4-0 run to take a 11-9. But a 10-1 run helped poise the Lady Dons to win the set 25-17.

The Lady Harvesters freshmen squad start district play on Saturday at 2 p.m. at Dalhart.

Lady Dons JV too much for Pampa JV

The Pampa Lady Harvesters' junior varsity squad fell in two sets to the Lady Dons junior varsity by similar 25-13 scores.

The match was back-and-forth to start which included a score from Lauren Tollerson to make it 6-4.

But the Lady Dons went on a 14-5 run, pulling away with a 20-9 lead. The Lady Harvesters strung together a 4-0 run which included three consecutive scores from Harper Kelly. But the Lady Dons were too much for the Lady Harvesters and took the first set 25-13.

Much like the first game, a 2-0 start for the Lady Harvesters led by Kelly wasn't enough as the Lady Dons pulled away with a 16-3 run. The Lady Harvesters had two runs where they scored three points straight, but the Lady Dons were too much for them and took the sweep with a score of 25-13.

The Lady Harvesters return to action on Saturday following the freshmen match at Dalhart.

EXTRA INNINGS

Winston needs to learn discipline.

By now I am sure most of you have heard at least once, if not all of the times, Jameis Winston has gotten into trouble. Winston was the Heisman Trophy winner last year and is the quarterback of the National Championship team Florida State.

Here is a rundown of times Winston has found himself in trouble with the law and/or university.

- November 2012: Winston and friends were caught with guns on the FSU campus. They told police they were using pellet guns and shooting squirrels. Later that night, the players decided to have a BB-gun fight at their apartment and it caused $4,000 in damage.

- December 2012: Winston is accused of raping a woman in his apartment. The case is dropped, but then nine months later it is brought to the State Attorney. They determine there is not enough evidence for criminal charges.

- July 2013: Winston is accused of entering a Burger King and helping himself to a coke from the fountain machine without paying for it. An employee stated she gave Winston a water cup and he filled it several times with coke. No charges were filed.

- April 2014: Winston is accused of stealing crab legs from a supermarket. He told police he "forgot" to pay and apologized. He had to serve community service and was suspended from the FSU baseball team until his time was served.

- May 2014: Winston did not show up to a code-of-conduct hearing for two teammates that were witnesses during the alleged Winston rape. He claims he was not told he had to be there.

- September 2014: Winston jumps on a table at the student union and screams a sexually charged expletive-laced phrase that has been making the rounds on the Internet. He was suspended for the first half of the game last weekend with Clemson initially. FSU officials later found Winston had not been entirely truthful so they suspended him for the entire game. He suited up for the game and was participating in warm-ups when head coach Jimbo Fisher told him to go back to the locker room and change. Fisher and other FSU officials say it was their mistake for putting his pads in his locker. Winston apologized once again.

Winston is only a sophomore but this is another case where I think college players should be required to attend all four years of school before going into the NFL. We have seen it with Johnny Manziel and others. The players are not at a mature enough state to be able to play the game at a professional level, much less handle themselves off the field.

If you are like me you like patterns and you tend to follow them. If you look back at that time-line what is the common denominator? It's never Winston's fault. "Oh I didn't know I wasn't supposed to dress out for a game I was suspended for." "Oh I didn't know I had to be at this hearing." I "forgot" to pay. And the list goes on and on. And he can apologize all he wants to but he has to change and change fast. Heisman voters vote not only based on performance but also how these athletes are off the field. I can tell you one thing he has pretty much played himself out of being able to win back-to-back Heisman trophies.

Quarterbacks should be role models. Look at Drew Brees, Peyton Manning, Tom Brady, etc. You don't see their names out there for stealing, doing drugs, getting DUIs, etc. If Winston wants to be a successful NFL quarterback he needs to mature and fast. It is always better to be truthful and hone up to your mistakes.

If you constantly deny that you did anything wrong, well then you don't learn from your mistakes.

Poop, magic and dinosaurs

When you are dealing with grandkids, you just don't know when you are going to have one of those "most special" moments that you would gladly pay hundreds of dollars for a recording of when the conversation is over. Last week I had one of those with Jackson, my five-year-old grandson from Chicago.

We were having our clan gathering near South Fork, Colo., at the vacation home of my father-in-law, Harold Lawley. I had just finished fixing breakfast for everyone who was up and decided to take my coffee and two pieces of bacon out on to the porch facing the Rio Grande River and the mountain. It is probably my most favorite place on planet earth. I had not been sitting there long when I heard the screen door open and out came Jackson. Now it isn't unusual for one of the of the grandkids to come looking for me, but it usually is to ask a quick question or ask a favor. This particular morning was unusual in that Jackson came out and sat in the other seat on the two-person swing. That is when the golden moments began.

Jackson began our conversation with a question: "Pawdad, where does that go?" I wasn't sure what he was talking about so I asked for a clarification. "The bacon, pawdad. Where does the bacon go?" "Humm. Well, Jackson, after you chew up food where does it go?" He replied that it went to our tummy. "Correct. But did you know that in our tummy our body breaks down the bacon and gets all of the good out of the bacon that it can and then sends the part that can't be used away." "Away where, pawdad?" "Good question, Jackson. It turns it into poop and we poop it out in the bathroom." "Really, pawdad? Wow!"

"Pawdad, how did we get here?" I reminded him that we had driven to Colorado in their van and our truck. "No, pawdad, people; how did people get here?" Now I knew that he knew the story of Genesis 1 very well and could recite what was made on each day so I wasn't sure what he meant. "What do you mean, Jackson? You already know that God made people." "Yeah, but how did He do it, pawdad?" "Well, Jackson, the Bible says that God took the dust of the ground and made Adam. And after that He breathed into Adam's nostrils life. Whew! Then He took one of Adam's ribs and made Eve." "How did God do that, pawdad?" "Jackson, I don't know. It just says that God put Adam to sleep and then opened Adam up, took out a rib and closed the place up. I don't know if He did it with a knife like a doctor does, but somehow He did it."

"What about everything else, pawdad?" "Genesis says that God spoke everything into being. One second there was nothing and the next God spoke and the earth and all of the planets were there." "Like magic, huh pawdad." "No, Jackson, not like magic. Magic is a trick where a magician makes it look like he does something that he really didn't do. Magic isn't real. What God did in Genesis was REAL! It really happened. Understand the difference?" "Uh huh." (I can't remember how many times the rest of the week he asked me if something was real or if it really happened.)

"So pawdad, what about dinosaurs?" "Wow, Jackson, that is a great question. What did God make on the fifth day?" He used the creation song that nana taught him to say, "God made birds and fish alive." "That's right. And did you know that some of the dinosaurs lived in the water like the fish? So God made them on day five of Creation. What did God make on the sixth day?" "Animals and man that day." "That's right. And among the animals made on day six were the land dinosaurs. God did an amazing job in Creation, huh." "He sure did." "But Jackson did you know that from the time of Adam until Noah, people and all of the animals got along and weren't afraid of each other and didn't hurt each other either. That is why people and dinosaurs could live together in peace. Pretty kool huh." "Yeah it is, pawdad."

Finally I decided to mention something to Jackson that I was pretty sure was way over his head, but I thought I'd leave that up to the Lord and Jackson. "Hey Jackson, did you know that one of these days you might be right here on this same porch when you are much older, maybe even old enough to be here with your own kids?" He looked a little confused. But I wanted to make sure that he heard me say something, even if he didn't remember it (that's why it is in this article). "When that day comes, Jackson, pawdad probably won't be here." "Where are you going to be, pawdad." "Well, by that time I'll probably be at home in heaven with Father God." "Oh." "So if you are ever here on this porch looking at the river and mountain and you remember the times we were here together and me not being here makes you sad, you remember that I'm happy in heaven with God. Don't be sad for me, be happy for me." "OK, pawdad."

At that moment Jackson was off to where the other grandkids were playing and I was pouring out thanksgivings to Father God for those precious moments. Thanks again, Father.

Autumn

The Bible tells us, "To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under heaven." (Ecclesiastes

DAVID BOULTER

3:1) The time of year that reflects the echoes of the happiness of summer and girds itself for the coming cold of winter is known as autumn. Perhaps no season of the year touches our emotions as does autumn.

Autumn is the season of leaves, when God touches each leaf with a different color and blends it into a beautiful tapestry that no artists could capture. It is a season of stacks and piles of leaves and the smell of their burning in the cool air.

Autumn is a season of crisp cool air, when God's air conditioning causes a spring in our step. There is a sharpness in the air that no other season can bring.

Autumn is a time of shared stories, as wide-eyed children tell teachers and their classmates that this was the best summer ever. They explain with excitement the trip to Grandpa's farm, the feed of squirrels in the mountains and the catching of the biggest fish ever, which must have weighed eight ounces.

Autumn is a time of football games, cookouts and cheerleaders. It is a time when every team is undefeated and dreams of the championship.

Autumn is a time of tears, when parents say good-bye to college students who it seems only last year were in kindergarten. It is a time of wondering where the time has gone.

But Autumn is also a wonderful time of dedication. The turning of the grass, the drying of the leaves, the finding of summer all around us, the reminder that Jesus died as a branch of wheat two thousand and fourteen years ago at Calvary. The Savior died that we might live.

As autumn brings to our minds His death for us, the hope of spring calls to our minds His resurrection and new life. These same trees shall be green with new leaves, that dying flower shall bloom again, the green grass will grow. All around us, even in the seasons, "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth His handiwork. Day unto day utters speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge." (Psalm 19:1-2) Look at God's message of grace this autumn.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Thursday, Sept. 25, 2014:
This year you move into a period where your social life is highlighted. You will network professionally and expand your personal circle as well. You know what you want, and you have the ability to achieve it. Review your long-term goals, as you could discover that you might not want to pursue one of them anymore. If you are single, consider what you want in a relationship. You will have a lot of opportunities to make a match that could work well. If you are attached, the two of you will be seen together more often. You also will manifest a mutual goal that will bring both of you ear-to-ear smiles. LEO always is a good friend to you.
The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult
ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Someone could compare you to lightning: nearly impossible to stop, with flashes of great ideas. A partner or friend could have a problem dealing with your sparkle and energy. Be gracious about any negative comments. Tonight: Be sensitive to a loved one.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Others often expect a lot from you, whether or not you are willing to give it. Your caring could move a personal matter past a problem and help the other party realize that the situation might not be as bad as he or she believes it to be. Tonight: Pace yourself, but make time for the gym.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Your imagination could go to extremes as you attempt to infuse a situation with a little more fun and creativity. Understand what is happening with a child or loved one. This person really thrives with your attention, support and caring. Tonight: Pretend that it's the weekend.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ Staying close to home might not be as pleasant as you would like. It is likely that someone you need to respond to will demand your feedback, if not your presence. Curb a tendency to go overboard with spending. Tonight: Happiest at home.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Your personality will come out in a presentation or when having a discussion with a loved one. You will be more open to unexpected solutions than to traditional ones. Make sure to return all calls. Tonight: You can be found wherever the action is.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Sometimes you underestimate how much you have to offer. You could feel as if no one is listening to you. Just because you do not receive the rousing response you desire, it does not mean that you were not heard. Have patience, please. Tonight: Your treat.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Avoid being scattered at all costs. You might need to place limits on a situation that could irk you or cause you a problem. Your friends will be a major distraction, but one that you will appreciate. Say "yes" to the moment. Tonight: Just don't be alone!
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ You could be inordinately tired, as all the happenings around you could drain you far more than you realize. Try not to overreact. In fact, pull back if you suspect you are withered! Go for a walk, and handle important matters later. Tonight: Make tonight just for you.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You might want to use some of your high energy to help a child or loved one who could be off-kilter. You seem to find solutions where others cannot. Be direct in how you deal with a loved one. Spontaneity is the only path. Tonight: Out and about.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Be aware of your limits when dealing with a boss, friend or older relative. You could be taken aback by this person's requests. Someone close, perhaps a family member, will chime right in and make a situation better than it has been. Tonight: Could go till the wee hours.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Take an overview, and understand where others are coming from. Otherwise, what you see happening will make little to no sense. You might just decide to cut off a conversation with a difficult person. Tonight: Have a leisurely visit with a loved one.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You will get a better sense of where someone else is coming from. You could discover that a loved one simply might be reacting to you. Laughter will energize both of you and allow more fun. Count your change carefully. Tonight: Go with someone else's choice.

Coke, Pepsi pledge to reduce calorie consumption

NEW YORK (AP) — Coke, Pepsi and Dr Pepper said Tuesday they'll work to reduce the calories Americans get from beverages by 20 percent over the next decade by more aggressively marketing smaller sizes, bottled water and diet drinks.

The announcement was made at the Clinton Global Initiative in New York City and comes as the country's three biggest soda makers face pressure over the role of sugary drinks in fueling obesity rates.

In many ways, the commitment follows the way customers' tastes are already changing: People have been moving away from soda on their own for several years. In response, Coca-Cola Co. and PepsiCo Inc. have been pushing smaller cans and bottles, which tend to be more profitable and are positioned as a way to control portions. They've also rolled out flavored versions of Dasani and Aquafina, respectively, as demand for bottled water has grown.

John Sicher, publisher of the industry tracker Beverage Digest, said the commitment announced Tuesday appears to be a response to the growth challenges the companies are facing, in part because of health concerns.

Between 2000 and 2013, Beverage Digest estimates the calories people got from drinks fell by about 12 percent.

Susan Neely, president of the American Beverage Association, said the commitment with the Alliance for a Healthier Generation is intended to take such trends "to an ambitious new level." She said the companies will focus their efforts on communities where there has traditionally been less interest in lower-calorie drinks.

On stage at the event, former President Bill Clinton noted that drinks can make up a greater share of lower-income people's calorie intake.

The initiative could also be a way to get out in front of campaigns for more aggressive tactics to fight obesity, which the industry has fought. The American Beverage Association has spent millions of dollars campaigning against taxes on sugary drinks, for example. In the San Francisco Bay Area, it is now working to defeat a proposed tax set to go before voters in November.

Instead of such government measures, the beverage association has touted the need for greater awareness about choices and the need to balance calorie intake with physical activity. That will be one component of its new push, with an ad campaign called "Mixify" aimed at teens set to start airing on national TV this week.

The association also noted companies will provide calorie counts on places such as vending machines. A federal regulation is expected to soon require such disclosures, but Neely said beverage makers will go farther by providing some sort of "nudge" for people to make better choices.

The association said it will hire an independent evaluator to track its progress.

It isn't the first time the industry has partnered with the Alliance for a Healthier Generation. In 2006, the American Beverage Association also announced an agreement with the organization to remove full-calorie soft drinks from schools. That came after the threat of legal action by the Center for Science in the Public Interest, said Jeff Cronin, a spokesman for the nutrition advocacy group based in Washington, D.C.

Michael Jacobson, executive director of CSPI, said the announcement shows "the industry is seeing the writing on the wall" and that it's a way for the industry to burnish its reputation.

Dear Abby...

By Pauline & Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I am a 4-year-old divorced father of two. I have had a girlfriend, "Dawn," for about a year. She has met my kids, but she's still uncomfortable with the "situation." She has concerns about me having been married before, such as having experienced many of the firsts she has yet to enjoy.

Dawn doesn't like being in my house because I had it when I was married, and she says my kids remind her of my past. She says she doesn't want to share me with anyone, including them.

When we're alone, we are absolutely phenomenal as a couple. We love and care about each other deeply. This is causing a tremendous amount of stress on us, and neither of us knows how to handle it or what to do. Please help. — TWO'S COMPANY IN ILLINOIS

DEAR TWO'S COMPANY: Forgive me for being blunt, but you need to break it off with this woman before you waste any more of her time or yours. You may be crazy about Dawn, but your first responsibility must be to your children, and she has made it clear how she feels about them.

You may be phenomenal as a couple, but there are more people involved than just the two of you. She needs to find someone who has no encumbrances, and you need to find a lady who has a greater capacity for love than Dawn appears to be capable of.

DEAR ABBY: I often eat out with friends when we travel and when we're here at home. Some of them bring their own canned drinks or powdered drink mix to add to water served by the restaurant. I have an uneasy feeling about this. I don't think it is right to take my own drink into an eating establishment.

I have never said anything negative about it, but I haven't joined in the practice. Is my discomfort MY problem? What do you think about this? — TESTY SOUTHERN BELLE

DEAR BELLE: What I think about it is less important than what the restaurant does, and not knowing the reason your friends behave this way, I am hesitant to judge them. I'm not sure what kind of canned or powdered drink your friends are bringing, but if they are on some kind of restricted diet, then it's what they need to do for a while. If the restaurant objected, the manager would either tell your friends not to do it anymore or institute a charge to make up for the lost income.

DEAR ABBY: I have been with "Russell" for four months. We live together and eventually would like to be married. Russ is very honest. He told me he had impregnated a woman prior to me and she was eight months pregnant. I asked him to contact her on my behalf so I can meet her, since we plan on having a future together.

When I called the woman to suggest we meet somewhere, she cursed me out for contacting her and for telling her she can't communicate with Russ unless I'm involved. When Russ told her the same thing, she ordered him not to contact her again.

Russ has tried calling her since then because he wants to be involved in his child's life, but she never called him back. What do you think we should do? — LOOKING TOWARD THE FUTURE

DEAR LOOKING: What Russell should do — and you, as well — is talk with an attorney to establish exactly what his rights and responsibilities will be to his child, once paternity has been established.

TO MY JEWISH READERS: At sundown, Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, begins. This is the beginning of our time of solemn introspection. "Leshana tova tikat-levu" — may each of us be inscribed in the Book of Life and enjoy a good year.

You have requested to have your blood drawn by an employee of Pampa Regional Medical Center. The purpose of this blood draw is to obtain specimens for laboratory testing.

1. PROCEDURES: If you agree to this procedure, the following will happen. Blood will be taken from a vein in your right or left arm or the top of your right or left hand. The blood draw will take about 10 minutes of your time. After the draw the blood is centrifuged, labeled, packaged and sent for testing.

2. RISKS/DISCOMFORTS: The risks of having blood drawn include temporary pain from the needle stick, bruising, and rarely, infection. Some patients may experience dizziness, possibly lightheaded or rarely fainting. In this case, the needle will be removed and the phlebotomist will proceed to keep the patient comfortable.

3. AUTHORIZATION: I have read this consent form. All of the questions I have asked have been answered to my satisfaction. I agree to this procedure.
