Representative Ken King heading to Austin for legislative session

King plans to tackle education and transportation issues.

By JOHN LEE jclee@thepampanews.com

Representative Ken King (R), Canadian, is packing his bags and getting ready to head to Austin for the Texas House of Representatives legislative session.

During the legislative session, which starts on Tuesday, King said that his primary focuses will be on education and transportation and making sure the Panhandle area is not forgotten in Austin.

King said he plans to remain on the public education committee after recently that they may be able to take a foreign language class online that may not be offered in Pampa.

It also allows for inter-district cooperation.

As far as transportation is concerned, while the big cities may worry about congestion in their major highways (as governor-elect Greg Abbott alludes to), King wants to improve our farm-to-market roads.

King said that our farm-to-market roads are important especially in our area with the farming and transporting of goods and are in need of a long overdue overhaul.

"Our Farm-to-market roads haven't had a real upgrade in a number of years," King said. "We are adding 100,000 Texans a month to our infrastructure, it's time to make some choices."

TODAY IN SPORTS

King is going to be watching to see what the Federal Government is going to push onto the State of Texas. He said that funding for education and human services is now equal when education used to have most of the budget.

As for the ever-controversial Affordable Care Act, King said Texas is still fighting it and that probably won't change under Abbott.

The Texas House of Representatives regular legislative session is held 140 days every odd year. The governor does call special sessions periodically as well.

HOC holding dance tonight

STAFF REPORT

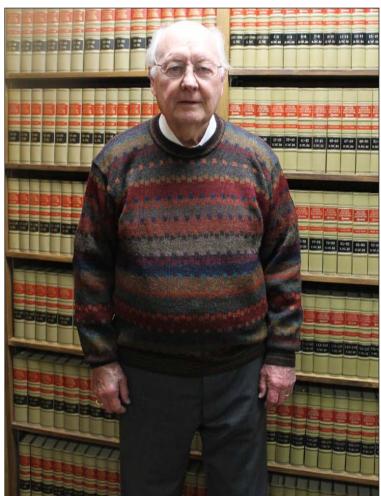

Lawyer Don Lane retires after 54 years

Farewell gathering to be held at 4 p.m. today at FUMC.

After serving the Pampa community for 54 years, Don Lane has closed his law practice and will be retiring at the end of this week.

There will be a farewell gathering held in the gathering room of First United Methodist Church at 4 p.m. today, and all community members are welcome to stop by the event to wish Lane best wishes in his retirement and to thank him for serving this community for all these years.

Don R. Lane's Pampa law office, which is Pampa's House of Cheer will be holding a dance for PJHS students tonight from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Pampa Optimist Youth Club, which is located at 601 East Craven Avenue. Admission for the dance is $5, and proceeds go toward raising money for HOC's national competition entry fee in February.

If they win at the national competition, they will have the opportunity to go to worlds, which is the highest stage of competition. HOC coach Karami Rice refers to worlds as the Olympics of cheerleading, and this competition is hosted at Disney World. For more information, contact Karami Rice.

All Pampa Junior High School students are welcome and encouraged to attend this event.

from First Baptist Church, has been open in Pampa since 1960. Born and bred in Pampa, Lane is a graduate of Pampa High School and received both his bachelor of arts and law degrees from the University of Oklahoma in Norman, Okla.

When asked what his most memorable moments are from providing his services to the area, Lane took some time to reflect before saying that his favorite part of the job has been working with the wonderful clients, who have been very appreciative and supportive of him over the years.

"I will miss working with and being asked to help people with their legal matters," Lane said.

Although he has no immediate plans for his retirement, he said that he is looking forward to his time being his own, as well as spending time with his wife, Susanne.

Attempts to dupe immigration agents on the rise

By Julián Aguilar The Texas Tribune

EL PASO — Hundreds of thousands of undocumented immigrants gamble their fate with human smugglers or deadly rides atop freight trains to enter Texas. Tens of thousands of others instead try a more brazen approach: handing fake documents to federal agents at ports of entry.

The number of people turned away or detained at Texas ports — what the Department of Homeland Security calls "inadmissibles" — increased by about 25 percent during the government's 2014 fiscal year, according to statistics. Most were denied entry after presenting false or stolen documents.

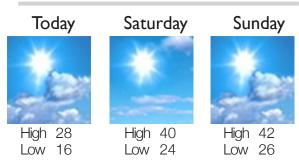

Customs and Border Protection agents working the Laredo field office, which includes the ports from Del Rio to Brownsville, found about 39,000 would-be crossers inadmissible, up from about 31,800 during the 2013 fiscal year. The El Paso field office, which extends from the Big Bend area to El Paso and through New Mexico, reported about 10,170 inadmissibles, up from the previous year's 7,855. Illegal crossers caught between the ports of entry have a slight chance at staying in the country by claiming asylum. But those caught presenting false documents, or trying to use someone else's, at a port might never be able to gain legal access to the country, even through marriage or sponsorship, said Dan Kowalski, an immigration attorney and editor of Bender's Immigration Bulletin, an immigration newsletter.

"You could almost say it's a perma-

How lower oil prices could fuel more hiring in US

In June, when oil cost $107 a barrel, U.S. employers added a healthy number of jobs — 267,000. Now, with oil below $50, hopes a tax cut for everybody are rising that hiring in the United States is poised to intensify.

Goldman Sachs forecasts that if oil stays near its current price, the economy will add 300,000 more jobs this year than if the price had remained at its June level. Stronger job growth is foreseen at retailers, auto dealers, shipping firms, restaurants and hotels — all of which will likely show gains in Friday's jobs report for December.

From gas-station prices to utility bills, consumers and businesses are now enjoying savings on basic energy costs. It means more people can splurge on purchases from clothing and appliances to vacations and dinners out. That stronger demand will likely require some businesses to step up hiring, which would circulate more money through the economy and perhaps fuel further job growth.

Just as critically, cheaper gas is suppressing overall U.S. inflation. Lower prices keep down yields on U.S. Treasurys. Lower yields, in turn, serve the housing market by reducing mortgage rates and potentially producing more construction jobs. This week, for 2014 Honda Civic. example, the average rate

New math on college campuses

The New York Times published a provocative news story called

"The New

No, it's

it's about

the changing ratio of males to females on most college campuses.

Long ago when I went to college, campuses were about 70 percent male, and until 1970 it was still nearly 60 percent. Today, however, the male percentage has fallen to the low 40s on most campuses.

The American Council on Education reports that women have averaged 57 percent of enrollments since the year 2000. Women received nearly 60 percent of all college degrees conferred in 2010. This has dramatically changed social relationships and interactions among students. Most girls and even some boys do not like this change, but nobody knows what to do about it, and few are even willing to discuss it. One female student described the new relationship between the sexes like this. "Out of that 40 percent male population, there are maybe 20 percent we would consider dating, and out of those 20 percent, 10 have girlfriends, so all the girls are fighting over that other 10 percent." Anybody who understands human nature realizes that this situation changes behavior. Girls do not want to get left out in the cold, so they compete for men on men's terms. This results in more casual hook-ups that are dead-end encounters with no future and no real romantic relationships. A psychology professor described this bluntly: "When men have the social power, they create a man's idea of relationships: more partners, more sex, no commitment." Colleges claim they grant admissions based on academic merit, and girls come out of high school with better grades than boys. But that doesn't always mean they are smarter or more capable of doing college work or succeeding after graduation.

Boys do far better on average than girls on the SAT test for mathematics, which means the failure that boys are better prepared than girls for STEM majors in college. This has been true arithmetic; every year for more than 40 years. Nearly twice as many boys as girls attain very high scores on the Math SAT, with an immense difference at the high end. But the job market for STEM graduates is not as good as it should be because of corporations? preference for hiring lower-paid, easy-tocontrol foreigners on H-1B visas, so many American guys decide that the high cost of an engineering degree is not worth it.

A party at war with itself

For the third time, the cops of the NYPD have turned their backs on the mayor of New York.

The first time was when Mayor Bill de Blasio arrived at Woodhull Hospital where mortally wounded officers Rafael Ramos and Wenjian Liu had been taken on Dec. 20. The second was when the mayor spoke at Ramos' funeral. The third was at Liu's service on Sunday.

Detestation of de Blasio among the NYPD and the cops who came from across the country to stand in solidarity with their slain brothers is broad and deep.

And, in a way, de Blasio served as stand-in for Al Sharpton, Eric Holder and President Obama. For all four gave aid and comfort to the war on cops that has raged since Ferguson last August when Officer Darren Wilson shot and killed an 18-year-old who tried to grab his gun.

When a Staten Island grand jury declined to indict the NYPD's Daniel Pantaleo in the chokehold death of Eric Garner, after the 350-pound black cold-blooded assassinations of cops man, suffering from heart disease, diabetes and asthma, died resisting arrest, the war on cops went viral and national.

De Blasio, Sharpton, Holder and Obama were all out on point saying that blacks, especially young black males, were all too often victimized by racist cops. And black kids needed to be taught that.

Brimming with moral outrage, protesters took to the streets, blocked Times Square and Grand Central, disrupted Macy's during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays, and shut down malls, highways and bridges across the country.

Though their lawlessness was rampant and their chants bespoke a hatred of police, who were compared to the KKK by marchers yelling for "dead cops," these protests were indulged and described as "peaceful."

So it was that on Dec. 20 a deranged criminal decided to make himself famous by putting "wings on pigs" and executing Ramos and Liu in Bedford-Stuyvesant as payback for Garner and Brown.

Suddenly, the real America revealed itself, an America enraged at the and disgusted with those who had pandered to anti-police protesters. And the America that revealed itself is not good news for the Democratic Party.

For we have seen this movie before, half a century ago.

After LBJ's victory over Barry Goldwater came the riots of the 1960s Watts in 1965, Newark and Detroit in 1967, and 100 cities, including D.C., after Dr. King's assassination in 1968.

These riots produced deaths, thousands of arrests, and looting and arson on a scale requiring the National Guard and federal troops. And these rampages were perhaps the principal factor in turning Middle America against a Democratic Party that had been the nation's majority party since 1932

In 1964, LBJ won 61 percent of the vote. Four years later, his vice president, Hubert Humphrey, got less than 43 percent.

What happened? A civil war had taken place inside the Democratic coalition, not unlike what is going on now. Today's conflict, though not

Letter to the Editor A call to action for business owners

A shocking 46 percent of recent college graduates work in jobs that do not require a college degree. Boys are more likely than girls to look at the cost-benefit tradeoff of going to college. The imbalance of far more women than men at colleges has been a factor in the various sex scandals that have made news in the last couple of years.

So, what's the solution? One solution might be to impose the duty on admissions officers to arbitrarily admit only half women and half men. Another solution might be to stop granting college loans, thereby forcing students to take jobs to pay for their tuition and eliminate time for parties, perhaps even wiping out time for fraternities and sororities. I went through college while working a full-time manual-labor job, and I don't regret a minute of it; it was a great learning experience.

Another solution would be to reinstate all the men's sports that were cancelled by an extremist feminist application of Title IX. the federal law that prohibits discrimination against female students. The feminists have misused that law to abolish many men's sports in order to achieve a statistical equality between the

To all business owners, I, Jim Free and family, am donating $100 to help the Gass family after Sgt. Gass was shot and injured on a domestic call. This officer and all police officers put their lives on the line to protect and serve this community every single day.

I challenge every business owner to meet or beat duty whether they will this donation.

This Sgt. and his family will have many expenses during his numerous surgeries. The expense of motels, gas and food will take a big burden on his family.

most pressing issue "climate change."

A month ago, during the U.N. climate change conference in Lima, Peru, the Pope warned of the dire consequences of climate change and declared that the "time to find global solutions is running out."

Last October, the Pope said: "An economic system centered on the god of money needs to plunder nature to sustain the frenetic rhythm of consumption that is inherent to it.

"The system continues unchanged, since what dominates are the dynamics of an economy and a finance that are lacking in ethics. It is no longer man who commands, but money. Cash commands.

"The monopolizing of lands, deforestation, the appropriation of water, inadequate agro-toxics are some of the evils that tear man from the land of his birth. Climate change, the loss of biodiversity and deforestation are already showing their devastating effects in the great cataclysms we witness."

So Pope Francis condemns both wealth "inequality" and greedy capitalism — at the same time. That is a contradiction.

History shows that raising a country's standard of living addressing its wealth inequality — requires economic freedom and free markets, a.k.a. capitalism. Economist

Milton Friedman said of of improving the lot of all the economic systems the ordinary people that known to man, capitalism, by far, moves more people out of poverty:

"The world runs on individuals pursuing their separate interests. The great achievements of civilization have not come from government bureaus. Einstein didn't construct his theory under order from a bureaucrat. Henry Ford didn't revolutionize the automobile industry that way. In the only cases in which the masses have escaped from the kind of grinding poverty you're talking about, the only cases in recorded history, are where they have had capitalism and largely free trade. If you want to know where the masses are worse off, worst off, it's exactly in the kinds of societies that depart from that. So that the record of history is absolutely crystal clear, that there is no alternative way, so far discovered, can hold a candle to the productive activities that are unleashed by the free-enterprise system."

The world's two most populous countries are China and India. In the last 50 years, both countries changed course and began pursuing free markets and encouraging entrepreneurship. As a result, tens of millions of people from India and China are no longer poor. The progress has been nothing short of staggering. Global inequality is declining - thanks to China and India, which account for more then one-third of the world's population. While the Chinese government avoids the 'c" word — capitalism — its embrace of freemarket reforms has lifted millions out of poverty. Similarly, in India freer markets spark a growth rate that now exceeds nearly so violent, is daily nationalized by cable and the Internet.

All of America watched what happened in Ferguson night after night, and saw the aftermath of what happened on Staten Island, and observed what happened Dec. 20 and then at those funerals.

Americans began openly and viscerally to take sides. And from the new defensiveness of de Blasio and the muted responses of Sharpton, Holder and Obama, there is no doubt who has lost this battle. A sundered America is siding with the cops and turning against those who turned on the cops.

Something like this happened in Chicago in August 1968: Police, after constant provocation by foul-mouthed radicals, chased them down, clubbed them, and arrested them in Grant Park.

The networks and national media denounced a "police riot" and liberal Democratic Senator Abe Ribicoff said Mayor Richard J. Daley's cops had used "Gestapo tactics in percent of its votes. The political point: In the 1960s, both George Wallace and LBJ were Democrats. Mayor Daley and the radicals cursing his cops were Democrats. The students who took over Berkeley and Columbia, and the deans and professors whose offices they trashed, were all liberal or leftist Democrats.

The '60s wars over social, moral and cultural issues were bloody scrimmages on the home field of the Democratic Party.

So it is today. Whether the issue is income inequality or the evil of Wall Street, police brutality or black criminality, the hostility and anger among Democrats over these issues makes the Tea Party vs. the GOP establishment look like a badminton tournament on the country club lawn.

To repeat, worldwide income inequality is shrinking. The Atlantic magazine cites researchers who confirm the shrinking global inequality gap: "First, consider inequality. Academic researchers - from Xavier Salai-Martin of Columbia University, to Surjit Bhalla, formerly of the Brookings Institution and Rand Corporation, to Paolo Liberati of the University of Rome all agree that global inequality is declining. That is because 2.6 billion people in China and India are richer than they used to be. Their economies are growing much faster than those of their Western counterparts, thus shrinking the income gap that opened at the dawn of industrialization in the 19th century, when the West took off and left much of the rest of the world behind.

"Paradoxically, the shrinking of the global inequality gap was only possible after India and China abandoned governments incentivized people to create more wealth. Allowing inequality to increase at home, in other words, diminished inequality globally. And global inequality, surely, is the statistic that should most concern the leader of a global religion."

Bono, the musician and philanthropist, has spent much of his life pursuing aid for Third World countries. But he had an epiphany. Capitalism, Bono said, lifts far more people out of poverty than aid ever will: "Aid is just a stopgap. Commerce (and) entrepreneurial capitalism takes more people out of poverty than aid. ... In dealing with poverty here and around the world, welfare and foreign aid are a Band-Aid. Free enterprise is a cure. Entrepreneurship is the most sure way of development." Any questions?

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

 $\star \star \star \star \star$ Understand what is happening with a child or new friend. You probably have been in a similar situation and easily can empathize. Know that anything is possible. Your sense of humor will emerge when letting go of the week's hassles. Tonight: Add more spice to your life.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★ Stay close to home. If you feel alone, invite a loved one over to join you. You could be in the mood for some deep conversation. You might want to share some news as well. Listen carefully to any feedback this person has for you. Tonight: Surrounded by good music.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

* Your sixth sense will help you understand a conflicted personality in your life. You might wonder what you should expect from this person. Be open, and let go of any expectations. Your relationship will evolve if you can relax and share more. Tonight: Tell it like it is

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ You might be pushing someone away without intending to. Detach, and as you observe your interactions, vou'll discover how much you have not been paying attention. You probably will need to follow this procedure several

* You might want to rethink a choice that makes you quite uncomfortable. A decision made today needs to be revisited at least one more time. You could be surprised by what comes up for you. Touch base with a new friend. Allow your inner child to emerge. Tonight: Have fun.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★ Confusion seems to mark your interactions. When meeting someone, make sure you are on the same page. Otherwise, you easily could be like two ships passing in the night. Voice any concerns you might have about a family member's well-being. Tonight: Play it low-key.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

* Your friendship means a lot to a close friend. Make plans to get together with this person. Your imagination tends to be a source of delight for more than just you. Wherever you turn up, no matter what plans you make, you will be well-received. Tonight: Take a friend's lead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★ You might be in a position where you find yourself taking on more responsibility. It could be as simple as bringing family together for a special occasion. You'll need to keep a tight rein on your finances; otherwise, you easily could overspend. Tonight: Others seek you out

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ A loved one or close friend could be as enthusiastic as you are about a particular project. Stay easygoing with regard to a problem or disagreement, and try to detach before making any judgments. Give yourself time to work this out. Tonight: Take a drive to a favorite spot.

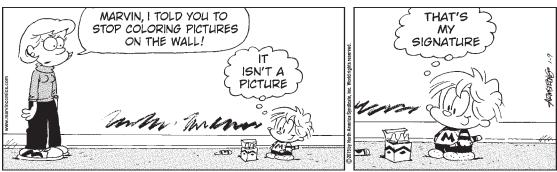

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ You will choose to relate to a friend on a one-on-one level. You could be distracted by what is happening between you. Take a day trip together or go off to a movie or an art show. Avoid making judgments and becoming controlling. Tonight: Whatever makes you happy.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ Your intuition might tell you that your way of communicating could be difficult for a loved one to accept. Make an effort to be more in touch with this person's style, and be willing to try out his or her suggestions more often. Tonight: Out and about socializing.
