Sam Rayburn

(Editors note: The following was written by Congressman Walter Rogers, who as an intiminate friend of the Honorable Sam Rayburn. was in a position to know and understand this great leader.)

"It is now my sole purpose here to help enact such wise and just laws that our common country will by virtue of these laws be a happier and a more prosperous country. I have always dreamed of a country which I believe this should be and that is one in which the citizenship is an educated and patriotic people, not swayed by passion and prejudice, and a country that knows no East, no West, no North, no South, but inhabited by a people liberty-loving, patriotic, happy, and prosperous with its lawmakers having no other purpose than to write such just laws as shall in the years to come be of service to humankind yet unborn.

These words, in the author's handwriting, appear on a portrait which hangs in my office. They were penned in March, 1913, shortly after the author's election to the United States House of Representatives from the Fourth District of Texas. To me, they allow a clear vision into the integrity and unchanging character of the man who wrote them, Sam Rayburn of Last week Mrs. Rogers and I attended the services for Speaker Rayburn at Bonham as a nation mourned the passing of a great Texan and an outstanding American. Tributes to the Speaker have been offered from every corner of the landby the great and the small throughout the free world. They will form part of a memorial, the greater part of which will be an eternal monument in the annals of American government where the imprint of Mr. Sam's character will long be felt. I shall always count it a privilege to have served in the greatest legislative body in the world with Mr. Rayburn. We sometimes did not see eye to eye on a given issue, but I never doubted that his sole motivation was to serve America and the door to sell untaxed and un- But there is no third great power the cause of freedom with every ounce of his energy and sanitary fruit. One fact of the greatness of Speaker Rayburn is that neither opportunity nor invitation by circumstance to the abuse of an immense power ever tempted him on a single day, in a single hour of his unprecedented tenure in the Speakership. Had the Japs attacked Russia simultaneously with Hilter, in June 1941, Russia and communism would probably have crumbled. Hilter's armies reached the gates of Moscow by December, 1941, with Russia's communistic rulers panicing and fleeing the capital. However, the Russians brought their Siberian army west, as soon as the Japs attacked the United States, and with it, they probably saved Moscow and avoided a surrender.

Virginia Browder Gives Review For Little Theatre

On Nov. 20, the Memphis Little Theatre met in the home of Mary Mrs. Robert Spicer, Secretary of Lee Fields with Mrs. Ida Anisman Commerce Hodges; Mrs. D. A. sharing hostess duties.

Mrs. Virginia Browder gave a vivid portrayal of "The Shanty." Her costuming and stage setting were typical of the Guula Blacks.

"The Shanty," a play taken from the book "Old Mitt Laughs Last," by Clara Childs Puckett, is a story with a special appeal and flavor. It is a warm and tender tale of a Gullah Negro, untainted by isms and unperturbed by agitators for equal rights.

In following Old Mitt, the listener is transplanted into another world on the tiny self-sufficient Sea Islands off the coast of South Carolina, peopled chiefly by Tulla B. D. McKendree, Milton Beasley, and carried out the tradition of Seay, served the cake. blacks who call themselves ed by their own folklore and tra-

Whooping Island gots its name from Old Mitt's husband's grandpappy, Old Hermit Crabb. Since there was no bridge across Whishing Boo Creek, when the Islanders wanted to go to the crossroads store on Big Bull Isle, they had to cup their hands and whoop for Old Hermit Crabb to row across and ferry them in his little 'trus-me-Gaud-Bateau.

The review reflected the tragedy and rollicking childlike comedy of the Sea Island Negroes, their tricky work of human beings, gosties and spirits. Their simple philosophy and cheerful acceptance of life as they find it, might well be simulated by others. The following attended the meeting: Mmes. Carnis Combs, Verna DeBerry, Tomacile Greene, Charlene Greene, Peaches Harrison, Lottie Kinard, Jim Roark, Mildred Stephens, Cy Foxhall, Miss Helen Boswell, the reviewer, Virginia Browder, and hostesses, Mary Lee Fields and Ida Anisman.

Traditionally, Texans probably lay claim to more and better of most any and everything than any of the rivalling 49 states. Often as not, these Texas boasts are tongue-in-cheek accomodations to folks who just expect us to brag. In agriculture, however, the Lone Star State has a long list of firsts of which we ought to be reminded, just in case we ever need some "real" verbal ammunition.

Difficult as it is, it's necessary to start our tirade on pride with an admission: Texas is not first in the nation in total value of agricultural products. We rank fourth with a total annual farm income that exceeds two billion dollars, which is no small shakes. This is about a fifth of total income for the state each year.

Of major farm products, however, we can claim more production firsts than any other state. Some of these are:

Cotton: This is our most valuable crop, and far more cotton grows in Texas than in any state. Our farmers produce about four them about Lone Star agriculture. million bales a year, worth some 700 million dollars.

Beef Cattle: Here again we lead the nation, production-wise, and top in rice production, rivalled nearest by California. Our race farmers along the Gulf Coast have done a magnificent job in producing a superior product. Although we lead in rice production, we are pretty far behind in rice con- Dear Sir sumption. Rice: We are at or near the duction and certainly at the top in quality. These include, in part, poultry (the commercial broiler industry started in Texas) and eggs (we rank first in the South, seventh in the nation in egg production, and our eggs are the best); corn, which ranks second only to cotton in the amount marketed; vegetables, citrus, semitropical fruits, melons, dissidious fruits (peaches, pears, plums), pecans (this is where pecans first wewe found in greatest abundance), peanuts, and on and on.

Hall County Soil Conservation District News

The Great Plains Conservation Program is helping farmers and ranchers of the Hall County Soil Conservation District establish lasting conservation practices on their farms and ranches. The supervisors of the district are pleased with the interest shown by many farmers and ranchers .

Under GPCP the farmers and ranchers have planned to apply complete conservation programs to their farms and ranches. Several of them have applied the largest percentage of the practices that were planned under their GPCP plans.

Some of the conservation measures that have been planned and applied are: wells for livestock water, cross fencing, brush control (both grubbing and spraying) overseeding of poor condition rangeland, deferren grazing, seeding of cover in which to seed grass next year, waterway construction, terracing, diversion construction, underground irrigation pipelines, and a concrete drop structure.

Other practices available through the Great Plains Conservation Program are: erosion control structures, livestock ponds, land leveling, pipelines for livestock water. The Great Plains Conservation Program was initiated to encourage and assist the farmers and ranchers in the Great Plains area of the United States to carry out a complete conservation program their land. It was developed for this area due to the hazardous climatic conditions. With proper conservation on the land there should never be another period such as the dust bowl days.

The GPCP, as well as other conservation programs such as the Agricultural Conservation Program, was developed as a means of reaching the objective of the Department of Agriculture. This objective is "The use of each acre of agriculture land within its capabilities and the treatment of each acre of agricultural land in accordance with its needs for protection and improvement."

The technicians of the Soil Conservation Service, assisting the Hall County Soil Conservation District, will be glad to discuss the Great Plains Conservation Program with any farmer or rancher who is interested in the program. They may contact the SCS by letter, telephone, or per-
