Rain, which was general over most of the county, but varied in amounts, fell during the past few days. A few light showers also fell in Memphis this morning, as the drouth has been broken.

Here in Memphis, the official total rainfall for the week, as reported by Rayford Hutcherson, was 1.40 inches, with the largest amount being recorded Tuesday afternoon.

Tuesday's rain was accompanied by hail with stones about one-quarter to one-half inch in diameter. The hail and rain was heavier in the south portion of Memphis than in the north part.

The largest amounts of rain fell in the Newlin area and in an area south of Turkey, reports indicate.

The J. N. Helm, Jr., farm and surrounding areas, four miles east of Newlin, received 3.8 inches in one rain, Sunday, and .60 in the rain Tuesday. At Newlin, about three inches of precipitation was recorded for the week.

Estelline received a total of three inches during all rainstorms this week. Sunday, the wind velocity was so high that it tore off a portion of the roof of the Estelline Lumber Company's lumber shed. Numerous trees were damaged by the high winds.

A total of about two inches was reported in the Parnell area west of Estelline, but rainfall was heavier to the south.

On the L. A. Tucker farm about five miles south of Estelline, it was reported that it rained 1.50 inches, 1 inch, and .40 of an inch at different times during the past five days.

At Lakeview, a week's total of 1.90 inches was recorded, with approximately that amount covering the area between Memphis and Lakeview. West of Lakeview, rainfall was lighter, with about an inch reported at Lesley and Brice.

It also appears that areas north of Memphis had good rains as the Paul Montgomery farm northeast of the city received a total of 1.7 inches since last Sunday.

Turkey reported that the town itself had received about 3 inches (Continued on Page 8)

About 75 Enter Golf Tournament

Members of the Memphis Country Club turned out en masse for a Memorial Day best-ball tournament Tuesday afternoon and 16 teams lined up for the start about 1:15 p. m. About 75 golfers participated.

But, as most of the teams were about half way through playing off the nine-hole tournament, a rain and hail storm swept in from the southwest, running everyone off the course.

Before the rains came, several of the teams had finished the round and had posted scores. Other teams with good chances waited until the rains let up and sloshed over the course to finish. Other teams, especially those who had just begun their round, were unable to finish and posted no scores.

Two teams came in four under par to set the pace. The team captained by Alan McNally with Lester Campbell, Mac Miller, Myrtle Heim and Clyde Smith, and the team captained by Mackie Allen with Jerry Scott, Johnny Harrell and Hattie Dem (Continued on Page 8)

Junior Colleges Come Of Age!

A unique social invention, the two-year junior college, may well turn out to be the most important contribution of the United States to education around the world, an article in "The Rotarian" an international magazine this month reported.

Centers of higher education, such as we have in Texas in cities throughout this state, have attracted a maximum of young people to the doors of advanced knowledge, at an expense which has continued to climb, year by year.

It is the desire of all parents to give their children every opportunity as far as advanced education and finances for such will allow. Many families are saving now to educate their children in future years.

In future years, our colleges and universities will be even more crowded than they are now, and the cost of a four-year education at one of them is expected to double what it is today.

In 1966 one out of every five U. S. college students was attending a junior college. Most of this segment would not have been in college at all except for the availability of two-year public colleges in their home communities or in neighboring communities.

It is predicted that by 1975 there may be more than 1,000 junior colleges in the U. S. with enrollment surpassing two million. No wonder the U. S. suddenly has become acutely conscious of the junior college. It is the only way to accommodate the flood of college students who are postwar babies of the 1940's.

Junior colleges are also ideally suited for technical training as well as providing the basic years of education for college degrees. In this time when the need for teachers is acute, many are finding that a two-year study at a junior college, and the last two years at a senior college will qualify them for a teacher's certificate.

With almost 200,000 new technical jobs coming into being annually in the U. S. in this age of automation, the junior college role in training both young people and adults for technical and sub-professional work takes on even greater importance.

Every new invention placed on the U. S. market today requires service personnel to keep it running.

There are many countries following the U. S. lead in establishing junior colleges. And with education in the spotlight everywhere in the world, this unique contribution to higher education will help to set the pattern for college development in many countries in years to come.

What Other Editors Say

Summer Jobs Here?

A complaint that might have been echoed by hundreds of young people in scores of small towns in our area was aired in a letter to the editor of a newspaper in one of our neighboring towns recently . . . a complaint that young people are unable to find summer jobs at home which will help them earn money for college in the fall.

Because the town might well have been Canadian, we'll not name it here . . . but portions of the letter, we think, will bear repeating and ought to be read thoughtfully and seriously by our own business leaders:

"Recently I attended the West Texas Chamber of Commerce Infocade '67 at Amarillo. I believe that the young speaker from Permian High School might have had our town in mind when he wrote his speech. If our people do not take into consideration what he is saying and provide more summer and after-school jobs, they will lose the progress and population of tomorrow. After all, why should we return to our home town to try to get a job when we know that we have tried before and failed. Surely there are opportunities elsewhere.

"Please take into consideration what J. C. Nickens, the young man I was speaking of, says in this message:

"At the outset, please understand that we are not advocating taking over, but are requesting that we be taken into the planning for a better West Texas.

"We are only asking that the adult leadership of West Texas stop considering us as being too wet behind the ears to help in constructive plans, and that we be allowed to join in a partnership of talent and teamwork to move West Texas forward . . . and that the psychological moisture behind our ears be used to solve the water problem instead of ignoring progress."

"To utilize and keep valuable man-power in our cities, Nickens suggested that we need to be made to feel wanted and a part of our town . . . that our talent is a meaningful part of the resources of our community. With employers turning us away from much-needed jobs, we feel everything but wanted. Please don't think that I haven't scoured our fair city for a job that pays enough to be profitable. Believe me, I have looked, and a job for an 18 year old girl who is fresh out of high school and has a desire to go to college is a rare thing."

So writes one small-town teenager to one small-town newspaper, and we suspect the complaint could be multiplied by as many towns and as many teenagers as there are. This could be Canadian's problem, too.

It isn't easy to solve . . . business owners have their own problems, and part-time summer help may not appear to be the most profitable investment in the world from their standpoint, either. But the kids have a case . . . and an argument. They are our future.

In Canadian, the Chamber of Commerce, in cooperation with PEP, is maintaining a free employment service . . . free to employed who make jobs available, and free to youngsters (and others) who want work. Keep it in mind . . . you may be a part of the solution to a problem.

A Boy Wanted!

Boy Wanted: To Fill Important Position.

He must have a clean face, clean habits and a clean shirt. Need not know how to roll a cigarette or how beer tastes; and if he is not up to date on all the smutty jokes in the pool room, his ignorance will be overlooked.

He must be a boy who treats his mother and sister — and every other boy's mother and sister — with respect and does not refer to his father as the "old man."

He need not be especially brilliant at school, but he must be studious and persevering, never cheating in his examination or passing a problem until he has mastered it.

He must be truthful, prompt, obedient and industrious. He must make his employer's interest his interest and never be afraid of earning more than his wages.

He is wanted to respond at once to any number of opportunities. Merchants want him to sweep out the store for a few years and ultimately to take charge of it.

Newspapers want him to commence at the bottom and work to the roomy space on top.

He is wanted everywhere — in the law, in medical practice, in the counting room and to run great public works. The people who pay big salaries are looking for him.

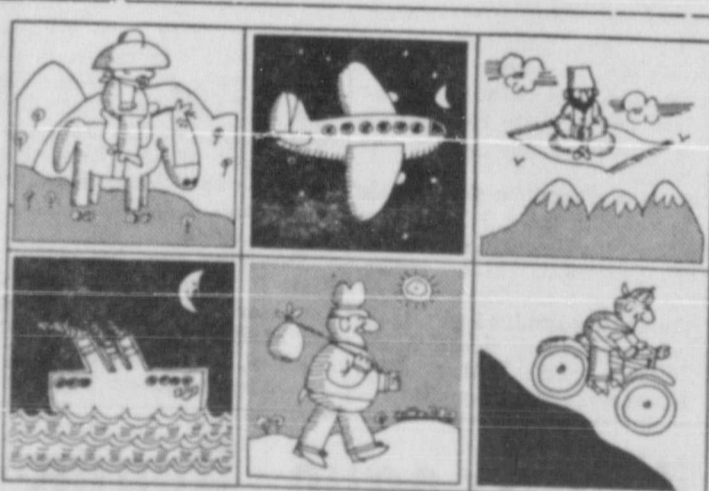

The people want him for judge in the court, members of congress, senator and for president and the nicest girl in the world wants him for her husband.

Chairman Reports on Beautification
Project This Week

The rains have come; Things are brighter, smiles are wider, everyone has a lighter heart. Springtime is here and prospects for Hall County and Memphis are looking up. Now, citizens have more beautiful lawns, more lovely flowers and greener lawns, stated members of the beautification committee of the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday.

Now is the time to urge everyone to help make Memphis a more beautiful city in which we all live, said Mrs. D. L. C. Kinard, chairman of the committee.

Somebody owns every foot of ground in our city, whether it be an individual, an industry or the city, and each one of us is responsible for the upkeep of that part which is his own—to keep it clean and free from weeds and to make it as beautiful as it is possible. It costs little for cleanliness and for beauty. It is so rewarding," the chairman stated.

We are including Morningside in our plans and each month we hope home and yard will be designated for honorable mention," she added.

"We are pleased with the decision of the judges for the 'Home of the Month,' as well as second and third places and designated for honorable mention. Anyone of these could be first in the June Judging except the 'Home of the Month' that received first."

At the end of the growing season, colored pictures of each of the number one winners will be presented. These will be given through the courtesy of the 1913 Handy Club. The members are working in close cooperation with the beautification project.

During the third week in June, out-of-town judges will make their decision for that month.

MEMPHIS

and County Comments
—By HAC

There will be no cotton burs in Memphis this fall and this fact is being brought to the attention of local ginners by installing special equipment to take care of the pollution problem with which the people of our city have lived from time immemorial (at this time) the first burs were burned. A feature story will be published at a later date giving full details of this program to eliminate the pollution of the air by cotton burs. The problem is not head-on by the ginners.

For 23 years, I have listened to complaints of various individuals about this necessary combustion by fire of cotton burs. Pressure was brought to me to have a comment, something like this: "Smells like a city for Hall County." One of the local residents went to the "ginning season" with the spirit of my expression. But the health of all is the dominant factor. The pollution of the air we breathe as a crop is ginned has come to an end.

The drought has been broken, and things will be looking up for the area. Reports from different areas as this is written late today, is about one inch precipitation in extreme western part of the county to about five inches in an area east of Newlin. As the old timers would say, best seeds will be planted as fields dry up, and the dead pastures will be green in a short time. This is something we will continue to live with. The gamble of the Hall County farmer with the elements is a matter of record. From the planting starts until crops

As the years go by, commencement seems to mean more to me. The high school graduates received deserved congratulations from individuals and business firms. The messages were sincere. They tell the area's faith in the future . . . the progress which is dependent upon the goals of our young people which they will strive to attain. We believe our affairs will be in good hands in the years to come.

The following is lifted from my files. It comes from an editorial in the News at Clarendon, issue of Oct. 31, 1934: "That man has solved one of life's greatest problems who has learned the art of adopting himself to the changing world in which he lives. It may be necessary for him to readjust several times during his lifetime, and even change his occupation and means of earning a livelihood. The wise man keeps his mind elastic enough to make these adjustments. The first step is in learning to respect the opinion of others." This was written by a country editor in the midst of the depression, which a huge number of the adults today do not remember. They do not know about the problems of the 30's—and many of them do not like to listen when the older folks describe them. The above is worth re-reading.

This interesting clipping was recently published in the Quannah Tribune-Chief: The Dutch have found a substitute for money. Dutch banks have announced plans for a computerized money transfer system cutting out the use of checks and cash. As usual, some Americans have done then one better. They have found a substitute for work, welfare checks.

We live constantly with the problem of production—the food and fiber, especially, which is necessary for the existence of mankind—and our basic economy is guided by this demand. Now a publicity release comes from the American Petroleum Institute. It says that the seas around us may one day contain underwater communities with floating glass bubbles that house workers, hotels for tourist, submarine-like trains, and farms where marine plants are cultivated and sea animals, such as whales, are bred for the market. It points out that oceans cover 70 per cent of the globe, and have 80 per cent of the animal life of this world; and that we have virtually untouched this source of food, drugs and minerals; that the quest is just begun. This brings to mind the "new frontier" which has been searched for as an incentive to appeal to the young and adventuresome in the years to come. It is recalled to mind, as we watch the graduates accept their diplomas. What does the future hold for them—and their children? How will the exploding population of our earth be fed and clothed in 2067? Those of my age will not be around when this kind of development will be pushed, but it is in the thinking stage at the present time.

From the University of Texas as M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute comes a report that an experimental unit there accepts blood from donors and separates certain components needed for treating cancer patients. It offers several possibilities for cancer research and treatment, delving into what causes the disease and possibilities of cure. This is the latest report from medical science pertaining to the disease which is afflicting a large percentage of the population.

Texas Receives Approval For Health Grant

AUSTIN.—Approval of a Public Health Service grant to Texas of $315,659 for a statewide immunization project has been announced by Dr. J. E. Peavy, state health commissioner.

The funds will be used to wage immunization campaigns in cooperation with local health departments and medical societies. Aim is to combat measles, polio, diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough, Dr. Peavy said.

The project will last until April 30, 1968. An additional year has been tentatively funded with $325,000 for a continuation of the project, Dr. Peavy added, and a supplemental budget of $35,775 for polio vaccine for use this year has also been requested.

Texas has an estimated 1,550,000 preschool children, with 40 per cent of these, or 620,000, believed susceptible to measles; and at least 30 per cent, or 465,000, are susceptible to polio.

There are no state laws requiring immunizations for entry into elementary school, such requirements being matters of local school board option. Most school systems do recommend and many require diphtheria and smallpox immunizations prior to school entry. In many areas polio and measles inoculations are also recommended.

At present immunizations are provided through 64 health departments located throughout the state, and covering about 75 per cent of the population, the health commissioner reported. He said these are administered through various types of clinics using diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis vaccines manufactured in the State Health Department laboratories.

Polio and measles vaccines are purchased from commercial outlets, he said.

"Health departments, with cooperation from private physicians, have actively promoted immunizations in the past among the preschool and school-age population," Dr. Peavy said, "but many preschool children are not being reached by the usual and customary procedures."

The current state plan to make 1967 the "measles eradication year" coincides with a national project urged by President Johnson and already outlined by U. S. Surgeon General William Stewart.

"We hope that by the end of 1967 a case of measles will be a thing of rarity," Dr. Peavy said.

The commissioner said steps will also be taken to organize intensive polio campaigns in certain areas of greatest need—or, those counties with one or more reported cases during the past two years. These campaigns will be conducted in cooperation with local health departments and county medical societies in the state, he indicated.

LIBRARY LORE

By Jim Roark

"Remember this, Roberto, one's words must glide across the page like a swan moving across water. One must be conscious of the movement without a thought of what is causing it to move."

"The Secret of Santa Vittoria" by Robert Crichton is number three on the list of the ten best-sellers. The title might lead you to believe it is a mystery story, but you would be wrong, as the secret of this Italian hill town is revealed early in the story. It is a rollicking novel with a somber undercurrent—a wonderful story. As in the above quote from it "the words glide across the pages like a swan moving across the water."

The reader is on a bobbed racing in suspense, understanding of the intricacies of the Italian mind, and seeing ordinary men rise to great heights in extraordinary times. Speeding along with the compelling style of the author's writing until the very end.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Boone and children have returned from Austin where they enjoyed visiting Mrs. Boone's brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Denman Moody, Jr., and with friends, Mr. Moody is a law student at the University. While there Mr. Boone was a guest of Senator Jack High-tower at the senator's luncheon.

New Barbecue Recipe Gives Outdoor Cooking 'Saucy' Turn

Many folks in Texas, the breath of spring is a faint waft of charcoal smoke. Outdoor cooking leaps to action on warm days, and new cook-out recipes are being developed around the theme of spring buds.

People who bake buns make a business to know all the details of the cook-out. So, from the Bakeries comes several suggestions for the preparation of the grill.

When selecting meat, be sure the color is bright red. A little salt adds flavor. The less fat the patties, the juicier they are. Tender the burger will be if the meat is loosely packed. While broiling, turn the burgers only once. Do not turn them over until they are done.

Burgers are at their best when served on buns that are warm or hot. If you like garlic, brush the buns with sliced buns with butter before warming.

Or, buns may be wrapped in foil and heated on the back of the grill while the burgers are cooking.

Some of the best cook-out ideas come from the deep South where the barbecue is an institution. The secret of success is in the sauce. Here, brought up-to-date for modern ingredients, is a tangy sauce used for many years throughout the South. It's yours for the cooking from Mrs. Baird's.

Jerry Hooser To Get State's 4-H News Media Award

Jerry Hooser, manager of Radio Station KBGH, Memphis, received a letter this week from Floyd Lynch, State 4-H Club leader, stating that he had been selected as one of three recipients of the Texas Youth Development 1967 news media award as a friend of 4-H.

Hooser, a native of Memphis, a graduate of Memphis High, and son of County Agent W. B. Hooser, has managed the radio station here since it went on the air over a year ago.

He will be honored at a formal ceremony June 6 at 7:30 p. m. in G. Rollie White Coliseum at Texas A&M University. He will attend a press conference at 4:30 p. m., that day in the Birch Room of the Memorial Student Center, where pictures will be made of all of the honorees.

The report stated that Jerry, a public spirited young man of 26, has given willingly of his personal time and time on KBGH radio each week, the report said. He has thoroughly stressed and promoted all phases of 4-H Club work and Extension work using skits, taped speeches by the county agent, adult leaders and members of the Hall County Program Building Committee, advance notices of shows, meetings, workshops, tours and programs for 4-H work and Extension work.

Southern Barbecue Sauce

1 cup Ketchup
1-3 cup Worcester sauce
1 cup water
1 teaspoon chili powder
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon salt
1/4-cup minced onion

Mix all ingredients in a small sauce pan and bring to a boil. Simmer five minutes.

Use this sauce to brush on hamburgers just before broiling. Brush again before turning. Keep sauce hot on grill to spoon over cooked burger just before serving on bun.

If sloppy-joes are favorite at your house, this sauce may be used to make a delicious new version. Brown two pounds of hamburger meat and one cup of chopped onion. Add sauce and cook a few minutes. Serve on Mrs. Baird's buns.

If you have enjoyed barbecued roast or ham, the barbecue sauce may be used as a baste during the last 30 minutes of cooking. Slice meat and serve on bun topped with additional sauce.
