Toklat' To Show at Movie House Sunday, March 5

A thousand-pound grizzly bear is one of the few remaining wild animals in the high Uintah Mountains of Utah; then add about 20 years of North American wild animal photography and you have "Toklat," an extraordinary new family film.

The wilderness picture will be at Movie House one day only, Sunday, March 5. Four shows start at 2:30, 4:30, 6:30 and 8:30 p. m.

"Toklat" has been in the making for over five years, and resulted in 125,000 feet of footage to be edited up with the right 4000 feet of film for the picture. Now in Technicolor, it's ready for the screen.

The film is about a gigantic grizzly bear (whose name, Toklat, is derived from an Indian tongue meaning ferocious). And a grizzly bear of the world's largest grizzly carnivores, is an animal indeed.

The film follows the development of Toklat from a cub to a full-grown bear during which time one can see glimpses of a grizzly bear thriving, surviving, in a mountain wilderness.

Leon Ames, a mountain man whose respect and understanding of animals, especially grizzlies, is based on a lifetime's experience in the wilderness. His task of seeking out the bear for the crime of self-defense, is a social statement on the way and nature's way.

Ames' commentary is amusing, poignant and poignant as he describes how he witnessed Toklat's growth for the years he knew him.

The picture also gorgeously captures the natural beauty of the wilderness and its changing seasons.

The picture was a labor of love. Its gentle plea to consider the possibility that wild animals have an inalienable right to the wilderness is well made.

CHARGE! "Toklat," the grizzly in the picture of the same name, plows through a stream for a better look at a shaky cameraman on location in the high Uintahs. The picture makes an unassuming social statement about threatened wildlife with emphasis on grizzlies. It will be at Movie House Sunday.

$1,420 that can be deducted by those in the $6,000 to $7,000 category represents 22 per cent. Of the $1,670 in deductions generally listed by families whose earnings are close to the average in Hall County, some $243 is for contributions to charity, $557 for interest paid on loans and installment debt, $560 for state and local taxes and $310 for medical and dental costs. These are purely guideline figures, cautions the Commerce Clearing House. It is not to be assumed that such deductions would automatically be approved by the Internal Revenue Service. Proper records must be available to support all claims for deductions.

Deductions For Income Tax Given For Hall County

NEW YORK—How much did I contribute to charity during the past year? How much did I pay in local taxes? What did my medical and dental expenses amount to?

These are some of the questions that Hall County residents are asking themselves these days while getting together their 1971 income and expense figures for that upcoming confrontation with Uncle Sam.

Local taxpayers who itemize such deductible expenditures on their income tax reports would like to know how their deductions compare with those taken generally by people with incomes similar to their own.

Some guidance, in answer to these questions, comes from the Commerce Clearing House, an authority on business and tax law, using data compiled by the Internal Revenue Service.

It has prepared a chart, based upon earlier tax reports, detailing just how much the average taxpayer in each income category has been deducting for contributions, interest, taxes and medical costs.

It shows that among families throughout the country with incomes equal to the Hall County average, approximately $1,670, equivalent to 20 per cent of gross income, is the normal deduction.

Although local families with incomes that are higher than this average have a larger amount to deduct, it represents a smaller proportion of their earnings.

For those in the $25,000 to $30,000 class, for example, deductions amount to $4,250, equivalent to about 15 per cent of adjusted gross income whereas the

TEACH THEM TO LIVE! TEACH THEM TO DRIVE!

If we were all good drivers, perhaps we could teach our own children the proper ways in which to handle an automobile and instill in our children the mental attitudes that are a fundamental part of safe driving.

Unfortunately, many of us are not really good enough drivers to teach our children. If we were, would a quarter of a million Texans be injured in traffic crashes this year?

Driver education classes are where our children should learn the habits necessary for good driving and acquire the mental attitudes indispensable to the safe operation of automobiles and trucks.

Only 68% of eligible Texas public school students will be given driver training this year. What about the other 32%? Doesn't this very substantial minority deserve the same benefits offered the majority?

Driver education should be made available to all Texas public school students before their eighteenth birthday. (That's when they can be licensed to drive without driver education.)

Do you agree with this? If you do, why not insist that schools be given enough money to teach driver education . . . to teach Texas children how to survive in traffic.

For information on traffic safety, contact the Governor's Traffic Safety Office, the Department of Public Safety or the Texas Safety Association, Austin, Texas.
