JOE TOWNSEND

I have a heifer that has learned to jump the fence. She seems to think there is better feeding outside the fence. She'll jump the fence and have a ball eating. Suddenly she'll look up and see the other cattle have moved on down the fence so she'll head in that direction. After a while the others will move away from the fence and the heifer will become very upset. She doesn't want them to get very far away but they seem totally unconcerned, as though to say to her - you left us so its your problem. It's funny the heifer can jump only one way - out. She doesn't seem to know how to jump back in, kinda like some people I know.
They know how to get off the good track and out of step with the good way but never seem to know how to get back straight again. Finally I have to go call the heifer and open the gate and put her in. Some people as long as they live, periodically jump the fence and have to be hand led back to where they belong. As soon as the heifer is back in the pasture, she runs to join the others and you'd think she would never leave them. However, she soon forgets and jumps the fence again. I'm sure this is what God had in mind when he talked in the Bible about people being like a "back slider" heifer.

OOPS!

Metro's Plus Business has reported that when a newspaper goofed and ran an ad in the wrong classified column, it produced results anyway. The ad had been placed by a man seeking the whereabouts of his mother, whom he had not seen since he was four years old. If was supposed to run in the "personals" column, but ended up in the automotive section. A fellow looking for a car for his son saw the ad and knew the woman being sought. He called her, and she called her son that night, after 31 years of separation.

Present Day Myths

by: JOE TOWNSEND

Almost every news cast and paper some news item regarding the women's "lib" movement or something tangent to it. We find then we did not elect a President but a Mr. and Mrs. President. We now have women standing in the honor guard of functions in Washington. For those who prate about the percentage of women in particular segments of leadership etc. May I point out that the number of women in the honor guard percentage wise is far out of proportion to the number of women in the Armed Forces. We are told we have Mrs. President to tank for this. Seems Mr. President can't create enough problems. Mrs. President must share in compounding the confusion. It was announced recently that a lengthy study relative to women in the Armed Forces has been complete at no small expense to the taxpayer some great revelations were announced. It seems they found that women are shaped different from men and this creates uniform problems. Also the studied observation was that there has not been developed practical "cold weather" clothing for these female warriors. Finally it was found that women in actual combat conditions so not preform as well as men. Gee, its' great to know there are official papers spelling out some elementary findings most peopl have know all the time.

I guess what I'm trying to say is that there are fundamental differences between men and women based upon the sex difference. Anyone who reads the Bible knows this. Anyone who has intelligence enough to add two and two and get four knows this. Indeed even a blithering idiot would know this. It's high time some "women "libers" and politicians took their heads out of the sands of vote getting and glory seeking and straighten out their thoughts and actions. I'm glad there is a difference between a man and a woman and politicians will never be able to change this reality.

PUBLIC HEARING TO HELP ALLOCATE $21 MILLION FOR TWENTY-ONE COUNTIES

How and where over $21 million will be spent on social welfare services in this twenty-one county South Texas area will be the topic of a regional public hearing scheduled for June 6 in San Antonio. The regional hearing is sponsored by the Texas Department of Human Resources (TDHR), the agency charged with allocating the Title XX social service funds.

Social welfare services eligible for Title XX funding protective (anti-child abuse) services for children, including foster care and adoptions, community-based care for aged, blind and disabled, family planning services and employment services for low-income families.

"Last year the San Antonio regional office of T.D.H.R. contracted through over forty community agencies to provide social services to low-income families throughout South Texas," said Ron Gossen, spokesman for the agency. "These agency contracts amounted to over $6.8 million in state funded community-based services."

"Since Title XX funds can be utilized to provide various services and in varying degrees, the importance of concerned citizens to testify as to their needs cannot be over emphasized," said Gossen. "With the ability to to contract funds to meet specific needs, the TDHR regional office must be made aware of the specific needs within the twenty-one counties which we serve. This public hearing is one of the best ways to tell us."

The planning cycle for social services funding under Title XX of the Social Security Act dictates that a proposed comprehensive annual services program plan be published for comment. The proposed plan for the 1979 fiscal year, beginning October 1, 1978, has been produced by the state agency and will be available at the hearing. The proposed plan outlines what services the department plans to offer, who is eligible, how many persons will be served and the estimated cost.

The June 6th hearing is scheduled to begin at 8:30 a.m. at the Holiday Inn, 318 W. Durango Street, San Antonio.

We appreciate your business!

RANGE MANAGEMENT

Doctors tell us that the trials and rigors of our everyday life demand that we take some time off occasionally for a vacation and rest so we may grow new strength and vigor into our bodies.

Well, a grass plant needs a vacation occasionally also for the same reason that people do. It needs to recover from the wear and tear of grazing to rebuild its root system and develop a seed crop.

The vacation should be during the spring or fall growing season so the plant can make the most of its rest.

The season (spring or fall) of rest should be changed so the plant does not get a rest at the same time each year. Livestock will take the most palatable and better forage first simply because it takes good to them. These same plants take the most beating because of this preference. These plants weaken faster and can then be replaced by less desirable and less palatable plants.

When vigor weakens in a plant community, the overall weight of forage production goes down. This means less pounds of grazing material produced for use by livestock and wildlife.

A rest is necessary following brush control or re-seeding. When the brushy cover is removed and the grass and other plants suddenly have sunshine and extra moisture available to them. The result is lush growth and if livestock are not removed, they use these areas heavily and further damage a plant that has been weakened by the cover of brush.

The new plant seedlings coming up after a re-seeding operation are likewise tender and easily damaged.

A good rule of thumb is to rest for at least three months during the spring (April, May and June) or fall (September, October, and November) growing season. This should be done at least every two or three years to prevent deterioration of the range. A rest period more often will likewise be more beneficial.

Rotational grazing systems have this rest period built into them and these systems will improve the range much faster than a continuous period of grazing.

A piece of rangeland that is never grazed will begin to deteriorate after a few years of no use. An area that is overused or continuously used will do the same. The proper amount of treatment is between these two extremes.

RETAMA GARDEN CLUB

The Retama Garden Club completed its 1977-78 year with a picnic at the ranch home of Mrs. Leonard Frerich. Tables were set under the trees in the spacious, beautifully groomed yard. The members enjoyed studying the many kinds of flowers and vines and their arrangement in the yard. Lunch was served under the big shade trees. Mrs. Ester Kesteloot opened the meeting, and outlined plans for the 1978-79 year. Mr. Carl Esser, County Extension Agent, gave an excellent talk on plant and tree care, followed by a question and answer discussion period involving plant diseases, proper mulching and fertilizing, use of insecticides and general nutrition requirements for this part of the state. Club members and guests learned much about how to solve their garden problems and care for their fruit and nut trees.

GREEN THUMBS

by: JOE TOWNSEND

So finally we had some rain. Now I can stop watering the grass and the trees and the garden. This seems to be the feeling of some people. There is no good substitute for rain. But as good as rain is a small rain doesn't last forever. It's easy to fool ourselves into thinking everything is wet enough because it rained. That rain will last about as long as one good watering. So if you want your grass, beds and gardens to do well don't expect one rain (even a good slow 2 inch rain) to last all summer. Keep the water going to keep things green and growing.
