SWTJC

UVALDE--Enrollment this semester at Southwest Texas Junior College is the highest ever, according to Mrs. Vada Jessee, assistant registrar at SWTJC.

And in a nationwide trend of decreasing enrollments, an increase is certainly a point to be proud of.

Spring semester 1979 was previously the all-time high with 2,128 students, but this semester total enrollment reached 2,280, a 7.14 percent increase over spring 1979.

A breakdown of students into the campuses they are attending shows the Uvalde campus with 876 day students and 223 night students, and the Del Rio campus with 651, an increase of 83 students from the fall semester total.

Eagle Pass enrollment increased to 311 from fall's 305, and the Crystal City total rose from fall's 26 students to 67 for spring. Carrizo Springs had the greatest increase, from the fall semester total of 19 to the spring high of 71.

Dilley increased from 27 to 58, and Aserton has a total this semester of 23.

INDEPENDENT CATTLEMEN'S ASSN. OF TEXAS, INC.

The Independent Cattlemen's Association of Texas is urging all cattlemen to register to vote in the upcoming Beef referendum.

Cattlemen planning to vote must register first at the local county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCA) office from Jan. 28 to Feb. 6. The rules provide for one vote for each separate cattle business entity, be it an individual, family business, partnership or corporation. Absentee registration and voting will be permitted.

Voting dates for the referendum, which could provide a check-off of 20 cents per $100 sales of your livestock for promotion of beef if passes, are Feb. 19-22. For the referendum to be valid, 50 percent or more of those who register must vote. And for it to pass, a

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I lived in Brackettville, Texas and I went to school there when I was in the sixth and seventh grade, then my family and I moved away from there. I knew a lot of good respectful people there.

Now I am here in Georgia State Prison and I thought that you may find enough kindness in your heart to publish my letter and perhaps some one around there may remember me and write me. Look here this place is terrible and a whole world all by itself of nothing but an animal world.

I am very depressed and sick
from being so terribly lonely, it is getting very hard for me to cope with, loneliness picks on no certain age and it is really getting next to me. I am terribly lonely and am very desperate for some one to write me. I don't have no one to write to and no one writes to me, I don't get no visitors and this is my first and

LAST time ever coming to prison, this place is a whole world of its own.

Can you please find it in your heart to publish my letter. I want some one to write to and some one to share a smile with from time to time. I am white and a male, 30 years old. If any one, just some one who ever it may be will find it in their heart to write me I will write and answer them.

Thank you so very much for reading my letter, I am

FRIENDS OF THE LIBRARY

Dear Kinney County:

Dear Kinney County:

At a recent Women's Study Club Meeting three representative members of the Friends of the Library gave a comprehensive account of the past, present and future of the County Library. Mrs. Charlotte Golemon spoke about the past 13 years in which the Library began as a project of the Study Club and has developed into the county-owned, 10,000+ volumes facility.
Mrs. Charolette Corey spoke about the many services provided by the library, several of which are provided through the help of San Antonio District 10 State Library System. Miss Else Sauer spoke about the future of the Library. The need to meet requirements for state systems membership was highly stressed as many of the services provided at this time (such as our movie projector, screen, monthly films, speaker service and book purchasing service from state and federal funds which average around $800 a year) would be discontinued if our library fails to meet these in the near future. Those requirements which

Present Day Myths

by: JOE TOWNSEND

The U.S. Postal Service is for delivery. This is another myth. When it was completely political organization it was used as a lackey for whatever politicians wanted it to do. Now that is is a quasi government organization nothing has changed.
There is no logical reason why postal employees should be burdened with giving out food stamps
but they are and if they make a mistake they have to dig down in their pockets and pay. Couple with this onerous responsibility, the registration of aliens, sale
of bonds, disbursing income tax forms etc. it is not difficult to understand why mail dropped in the slot today wasn't delivered yesterday. The marvel is that mail service is as fine as it is.
Now comes a beaurocratic more that puts the saw blade in the cake.
Our fine U.S. Congressman, "Chick" Kazen, warned us in October that pressure would come to force us
to use the "Susan" dollar coin.
As usual he was 150% right. Soon when you go to the Post Office
you will be given these obnoxious coins in change. The Postal Service has been ordered to make all change using these undersized dollars. They are to give out one dollar bills only on "demand" and "if available". You can bet your "Sunday go to meetin'" hat

they will not have the bills available. Since the bureau-crates gigantic boondogle of minting millions of these coins that no one wants to use, they have decided to cram them down
our throats and make us use them.
We are in a sick situation when any autocratic bureaucrat who is not elected and not directly accountable to the electorate feels she can force Americans to bow to her petty desires. It's hard for postal employees to be caught in the middle but you can know I'll refuse to take any of these quarter-sized coins in change. I may have to take my change in pennies, but I'll not let some high handed woman in Washington tell me I have to use these coins. Were there not good reasons why they are unacceptable the American people would use them. For good and just cause they are and will forever remain a white elephant.

Snowbirds back along Rio Grande

By Connie Sherley
Travel News Service

BROWNSVILLE—The winter visitors from the north, the "snowbirds" to whom Texans give such a warm welcome, are back in numbers, coming to their favorite refuge areas as snow and cold weather grips the Upper Midwest and northern states.

Illinois sends thousands to Texas each winter, but there are large numbers of folks from Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana and other states, as well as from Canada.

Canadians, in fact, are coming in larger numbers each year, seeking either short or long respites from the snow and ice north of the border.

There can be some cool days and nights along the Rio Grande, as well, but nothing like the chill of the northern areas. And any cool spell that comes is of short duration.

Brownsville, an across-the-river neighbor of Mexico, is a favorite of snowbirds. They find comfortable housing, good accommodations for campers and trailers, good shopping, a pleasing climate and much to do.

Brownsville has the world-famed Gladys Porter Zoo, with a fine collection of endangered species, among others.

Nearby in Harlingen is the Confederate Air Force, a collection of World War II

the planes all are in operating condition.

McAllen with its oranges, grapefruit and palms and other nearby communities all have their quotas of winter visitors.

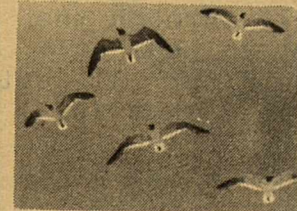

"Winter Texans", they are called by the affable Don Epperson, executive director of the Texas Tourist Council, which cooperates so closely with the Texas Tourist Development Agency in making information available and making sure, too, the visitors are well treated.

Gasoline has been in good supply in Texas, and the price per gallon has been about 7 cents cheaper than it has been in Chicago.

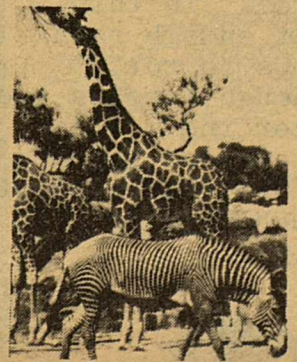

The "snowbird" belt extends to the Gulf Coast, with concentrations of tourists found at South Padre, Corpus Christi and on to Galveston, all of which enjoy warm winter weather.

For information about any particular area of Texas one may write to Dept.

GW, TEXAS, Box 5064, Austin, 78763. When traveling you will find answers to your questions at the local Convention & Visitors Bureau in towns and cities along the way, or at the information locations of the Texas Highways Department.

SOCIAL SECURITY

A victoria, Texas man plead guilty on Monday, January 7th, in the U.S. District Court, Corpus Christi, to one count of defrauding the Social Security Administration, according to Elvia Fuentes, Manager of the Eagle Pass Social Security Office. J. P. Young was charged with falsely representing that his deceased mother, Grace Young, was still living in order to continue to receive Social Security benefits on her behalf, Miss Fuentes stated.

Sentencing is scheduled for February 14th. The maximum sentence for such an offense is five years imprisonment and a $10,000 fine, Miss Fuentes said.

Miss Elvia F. Fuentes, Manager of the Eagle Pass Social Security Branch Office, reminds all employers that copy "A" of each Form W-2 they prepare for their employees, must be mailed by February 29, 1980, to the Social Security Administration, Albuquerque Data Operations Center, Albuquerque, New Mexico, 87180.

Form W-2 is a dual purpose report. It is used by the Social Security Administration to credit FICA wages to employees, and it is also used by the Internal Revenue Service for income tax reports. The FICA wages reported on Form W-2 determine the worker's future entitlement to Social Security benefits. Each employee is urged to review the W-2 to insure the name, social security number, and amount of wages is correct. Any error should be reported to the employer for correction.

we still do not meet are: 1) a paid librarian, 2) $5,000 per year minimum budget.

At this time the librarian and all library aides are working strictly on a volunteer basis. Our present budget is $3000 a year--$2,500 of this is Federal Revenue Sharing Funds and $500 memorials and gifts. By law the county could appropriate $16,000 of its county tax money to the library. That could pay a librarian and running expenses. Even so, there would still be a need for volunteer library aides. With the enthusiasm and growth of the Friends' membership, their voting power should be terrific. Four hundred or so Friends' votes might persuade some of the $16,000 for a paid librarian. Had the county been paying these librarians since the library began, it would have spent around $49,000 (minimum wage) for the two librarians. It doesn't seem like asking too much of the county commissioners to return some of the good faith and services of these dedicated women by providing enough finances for our county library to meet state requirements.

If you agree with us, then take a moment to write a letter to your county judge and/or commissioner. It's your library. You can choose to do nothing and watch it go down the drain, or you can speak out and watch it grow. The future generations of Kinney County are counting on you to protect our educational resources.

Friends of the Library

It is now time to trim trees. If you have an old tree with a great deal of dead wood in it, the most charitable thing you can do is to severly prune the tree. You may need to leave only short stumps of the major limbs. Almost all trees need to be trimmed. Mulberry trees need trimming more than most because they have a tendency to produce long ungainly limbs that spread widely and hang down. The shape of the tree is determined by the trimming. By all means all dead wood should be taken out of the tree. Any limb that conflicts with another limb should be removed. All cuts should be clean cuts entirely through the limb with care not to peel or tear the base remaining. All cuts should be at a slant, that is, not parallel to the earth. If the cut is clean and at an angle there is no need to paint or treat the wound. If done immediately, the wound should seal over before the sap beings to rise in the tree. In this area we do not get enough rain to cause the stumps to rot. Nor do we have enough insects and disease to endanger the wound. Nature will take care of the tree. Your tree will have fuller foliage and be much healthier if properly trimmed.

Sheep & Goat Raisers' News

Indication from Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus' office are that Andrus' original decision to cancel further research into predacide 1080 will stand. There had been some optimism that positive research data recently brought to the Secretary's attention might reverse that decision.

At a mid-January "predator summit" meeting in Austin, Andrus told stockmen that his decision was the result of heavy public controversy over 1080's alleged environmental hazards, specifically claims by environmentalists that the toxicant posed a threat to animals scavenging its victim's carcasses.

At that same session it became apparent that Andrus was unaware of research that casts severe doubt on the secondary poisoning claim. His public information officer, Harmon Kallman, says however, that Andrus has since been apprised of that data but has refused to alter his opinion.

The Secretary still maintains, Kallman adds, that emotional opposition would make public acceptance of 1080 a long uphill battle and that research funds could be better spent developing a new toxicant instead.

Considering all the evidence in favor of 1080 and the lack of any sound data supporting the charges against it, responsible biologists and stockmen insist that any controversy over the compound is either unfounded, intentionally fabricated, or both. Consequently, they question how any substitute toxicant can be expected to meet with less opposition. Andrus has so far avoided a direct response to that question.

Another major but unanswered question is how Andrus can expect any new, probably so-far undeveloped toxicant can be researched, herded through the tangle of federal red tape and put into use more quickly than 1080, considering its 30-plus years of documented field use. Consequently, many observers suspect the real motive behind cancellation of further research is simply another attempt to avoid the use of an effective predator control toxicant. The research ban, coming as it does just when studies have begun to turn strongly in favor of 1080 and against the official federal policy line, is also seen as an attempt to stifle further embarrassing scientific revelations.

There is still at least one more unanswered question, and it is sure to fuel further controversy. When it was revealed at the Austin predator session that Andrus was unaware of the most recent 1080 research, some observers wondered how fully interior's staff was passing along information reflecting positive aspects of studies on the toxicant. It was pointed out that basic findings of the secondary poisoning research, coordinated by U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service biologist Guy Connolly, were available as early as September to those attending a Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association meeting.

How, it was asked, could that information not have been made available to Andrus, engaged even then in final deliberations over 1080's future? Connolly has since stated that the findings were only part of what was to be a more extensive series of tests, and thus were not officially transmitted up the channels to Interior's hierarchy. That would probably have put the matter to rest, had it not been for what may yet prove to be an embarrassing slip by Interior staffers.

Interior's Kallman, when later asked by a reporter whether Andrus had yet heard of the study, volunteered that it "sounded like the same old story" that top-level staffers had been laughing about for quite some time. He was incorrect about some of the most basic details of the work, but nevertheless professed to have known of its existence.

That leaves at least three possibilities: 1. Andrus himself was aware of the secondary poisoning study but chose to act otherwise, probably the least likely possibility. 2. Andrus' office staff was aware of it but chose not to tell him. 3. Kallman, caught off-guard, felt that admitting ignorance of such relevant information would reflect badly on Interior and so attempted to present a more efficient picture of the agency.

Discounting the first possibility, this still leaves considerable doubt about the veracity of Andrus' staff; neither concealing the information from Andrus or attempting to mislead the public can be considered proper behavior.

The Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association believes there are several questions that deserve much more complete and sincere answers.

Recently the Rotary Club sponsored a Donkey Basketball Game to raise funds for the work of the club. The game was a glowing success. A word of thanks is due the School Board for granting the use of the old gym. It allowed a goodly number of people to enjoy a "fun" evening. The enthusiasm of the riders was outstanding. Young men and young women alike appeared to have a good time. The support given by the community was most encouraging. Many Fort Clark residents were in attendance. Such fine support by the town and people from Fort Clark will encourage more fine evenings of entertainment. The gym was filled to capacity including many chairs along the sideline. Thanks is due the Rotary Club for bringing this most enjoyable evening to Brackettville.

For some of us World War II is still not over

During the war, one of the materials used in shipbuilding was asbestos. Nobody knew it then, but breathing asbestos dust can cause serious lung diseases, including cancer. Sometimes it takes 30 years or more for asbestos-related diseases to show. Millions of workers in construction, mining, and parts of the auto industry involved in brake and clutch installation and repair may have been exposed, too.

If you think you're one of them, here's what you should know:

1. Even if you feel good, check with your doctor;
2. If you smoke you increase your risk, so stop;
3. Get prompt medical treatment for any respiratory illness.

* YOUR VOTE IS APPRECIATED *

On February 3, 1945, three years and six days after the capitol city of the Phillipines had been abandoned in the face of the Japanese onslaught, victorious American and Philippine forces hoisted the colors over Manila making good the promise of General Douglas MacArthur who swore, "I shall return!"

"We shall return" --- On January 31, 1980, a detachment of AMVETS will leave San Francisco International Airport and embark on an expedition to officially represent all American veterans at the two week long celebration of the 35th Anniversary of the liberation of Manila.

Led by National Commander Joseph R. Koralewski and his wife, the AMVETS delegation can expect to be well feated with receptions, parades and tours hosted by the Phillipino Government. Wallace Sheppard, National V District Commander and Don E. Peavy, Sr., Commander of AMVETS Post #57 in Fort Worth, will represent Texas AMVETS during the tour.

"AMVETS is deeply honored to stand as the official representative of America's veterans organizations on this historic occasion," said Koralewski. "Many of us returning, were among those who liberated the city of Manila and once again we express our support of the aspirations and goals of the Phillipino people."

Commander Sheppard said that anyone wishing to send a message or a gift to the Phillipino government in honor of this auspicious occasion may do so by sending it to AMVETS, P.O. Box 14409, Fort Worth, Texas 76117 or by calling 817/834/3925.

"In view of surmounting international crisis, perhaps now, more than ever, is a time to renew and strengthen our ties with our allies. I call on all Texans to help us carry a message of love and best wishes to the Phillipino people as they endeavor to maintain the freedoms we Americans helped them to obtain," said Commander Sheppard.

simple majority of those voting must favor the program.

After a thorough investigation of the pros and cons of the Beferendum, the members of ICA at the 5th annual convention this past summer voted overwhelmingly to oppose the Beferendum.

ICA opposition is based primarily on these points:

1. The Beferendum would allow the U.S. Department of Agriculture as a bureau to grow larger, more unwieldy and unresponsive to ranchers' needs.

2. If the program is implemented, the Agriculture Secretary would be able to appoint members to the Beef Board from eligible organizations.

The industry, even though it's paying for the Beef Board, cannot elect anyone, and eligibility of organizations is determined by the Agriculture Secretary.

3. Consumers would be on the board in addition to cattlemen. Even though they are to be in advisory positions in the beginning, the government could pass a law at a later date making them voting members. The Egg Board is facing this possibility and the Cotton Board, a model for the proposed Beef Board, has been very unresponsive to the producers who have put money into it and has distinguished itself only through internal problems.

4. If the Beferendum passes, the Secretary has the power under Sections 14 and 18 to seize and confiscate records and take you to court if you do not follow the value added procedure properly.

5. The Beef Board must turn in a budget to the Secretary for his approval and must justify amounts spent for advertising, research, sales promotion and consumer information.

6. No funds collected by the Beef Board can be used to influence government policy or action.

7. Foreign meat cannot be assessed because foreign producers will not be represented on the Beef Board. Since imported meat makes up a large percentage of the beef consumed in the United States, American ranchers would actually be advertising foreign beef at their expense.

Roy Wheeler, ICA president, said that cattle producers who vote in favor of the Beferendum are inviting the government into their private business.

An administrator with the USDA admitted at a hearing Oct. 16, 1979, before the subcommittee on Dairy and Poultry of the Committee on Agriculture in Washington, that producers who enter a promotion program of their products, enter into a partnership with the government.

The following is a direct quote taken from Barbara Lindemann Schlei, administrator, Agricultural Marketing Service, USDA, at the Oct. 16 hearing:

Ms. Schlei: "While industries would like to have the greatest possible alternatives available to them, they have a recognition that when they enter into a program such as this, in partnership with the Government, that that in turn does bring with it certain restrictions."

Watching Washington

We all know the fable of the grasshopper and the ant. The grasshopper lived for the moment, spending all his time and money having fun. The ant, on the other hand, worked hard and set a little something aside. When winter came the ant was able to get by on his savings while the grasshopper, who had saved nothing, was left shivering and hungry out in the cold. For many years now, even as individual American parents told their children the story of the ant and the grasshopper, trying to encourage them to save, U.S. government tax policy has had the opposite effect.

A popular and prevalent theory among economists has been that one of the factors causing the Great Depression of the 1930's in this country was excessive savings. According to this theory Americans were saving too much and spending too little and this helped bring on the hardships and dislocations of the depression. The theory may, or may not, have been valid 50 years ago. In any event it most certainly has no validity today. Americans are assuredly not saving too much today, yet tax policies that discourage savings and encourage consumption continue in force.

Let's look at the record. Last year we saved only 4.5 percent of disposable income. That was our lowest savings rate in 30 years. By comparison, the Japanese are saving at a rate of 25.3 percent. The French save at a 13.1 percent rate. Even the British rate of savings, at 6.6 percent exceeds ours.

Inflation, of course, does make it difficult to save. Prices in this country rose last year by more than 12 percent. With savings accounts paying interest rates of only 5 or maybe 6 percent you can't make much headway in a time of double-digit inflation.

Yet, other countries are suffering the ravages of inflation, too, and their savings exceed ours, so inflation can't be the sole cause of our situation.

The problem is that on top of inflation the thrifty American must also pay an income tax on the 5 or 6 percent interest earned in a savings account.

As Chairman of the Joint Economic Committee of Congress I became convinced some time ago that it is vitally important that government come up with incentives to encourage Americans to substantially increase their rate of savings. It is important for two reasons.

We had a baby boom after World War II, but in recent years birth rates have declined. As a result, at some point after the turn of the century the ratio of retired people—people who depend on savings, Social Security and pensions—to people who are actively working, will increase substantially. It is projected that the ratio will jump from approximately one retiree to every 3 1/4 workers to one retiree for every two workers.

Because of this we need to see a large increase in the rate of savings, instead of the decrease that has occurred over the past several decades.

A second important reason to increase the rate of savings is that this can help dramatically in the fight against inflation. Increased savings means increased capital which means increased productivity; and productivity is one of the most important factors in our efforts to hold down the cost of living.

The Senate has approved, 94-4, the Bentsen small savers incentive bill which begins the process of reversing tax policies that penalize saving.

This legislation would exempt from taxes the first $200 a year in savings account interest—and investment dividends—for an individual; the first $400 for a married couple filing a joint tax return.

This bill was approved as an amendment to the windfall profits tax and while it may be cut out of the final version of that bill, its overwhelming approval by the Senate gives strong indication that in coming months, in some form or other this incentive to save will be passed into law by the Congress.

The small savers incentive bill helps put government tax policy on the side of the ants instead of the grasshoppers. It will be an economic bonanza for America and for Americans.

A retired engineer writes: "I have bladder cancer. The fact that I smoked two packs of cigarettes a day all of my life seems to have played a role in my disease. Does the public realize this association?"

ANSWERline: While the association of cigarette smoking to cancers of the lung and the larynx (voice box) has been widely publicized, a series of studies have shown a correlation between bladder cancer and the tobacco habit. Most recently Dr. Ernst L. Wynder and Robert Goldsmith of the American Health Foundation studied the lifestyles and occupations of bladder cancer patients, both smokers and non-smokers. Wynder and Goldsmith's work agreed with previous studies indicating that 48 percent of newly diagnosed percent of male bladder cancer patients are admitted cancers and 31 percent of to hospitals.
