HEY, IRAN

AMERICAN PATRIOTISM IS BACK !!!!!

These past few days I have witnessed something that I was wondering if I would ever see again...A true patriotic feeling among all the people of our great country. Not since World War II, have the American people showed a spirit as they have recently. The enthusiasm that bonds people of a nation together.

Not since Pearl Harbor have the people of this nation come forth with the emotions that they did on the release of our Heros from the hands of the BARBARIC IRANIANS. It is a shame that we as a nation must be "clobbered" by heathens to get our dander up.

I couldn't help but get choked up when the President and the returning heros sang Irving Berlin s "God Bless America" in front of the White House. I doubt very seriously if any Iranian student groups will contemplate any demonstrations on the campuses of our colleges. Jane Fonda may even hide in a closet.

Americans of all Colors, Creeds, and Religious backgrounds are tired of being "shafted" by heathens that we hold out our helping hands, hearts, and pocketbooks to! As the Japanese Admiral said just after their attack on Pearl Harbor said: "We did not win a victory we awoke a sleeping Tiger!" It is a shame that the ignorant Iranians do not supply a study of history.

Not only the return of our heros has brought our patriotism back, but

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

What is wrong with our community? I attended a meeting for Little League parents and there were five people who made a showing. What is going to happen to our youngsters between 9 and 12?

It appears that if the parents don't care to attend the meeting, they will be the first ones to gripe.

I don't have any children, I attend the meeting for the benefit of the youngsters. I have noticed in past seasons that coaches turn out if their children play on the team.

But now it's at the point where we can't get any Board of Directors due to the fact that all their children have graduated from Little League. I realize that most people work and don't have the time to donate. But they did find time when their sons played. So why not help other children now until their 12 years of age. We have a little League field that looks like 50 head of cattle could well nourish themselves.

Why can't we have something done? Remember you were between the age of 9 and 12.

/s/ Jerry Tremblay

LOOS CONNECTION

The Post Office here, in Brackettville, this week is asking for comments on a proposal to not put mail up on Sundays in the local Post Office boxes. According to Postmistress Mrs. E. Hinds comments on the proposal should be made to the post office as soon as possible.

It was just a few weeks ago that some of the "Mental Giants" of the postal service requested our comment on closing the windows at the local Post Office during noon hour. This ridiculous proposal would have deprived many of our citizens that only have their lunch hour to conduct post office business.

It is hard to believe that the bureaucrat that came up with this is playing with all his marbles....First: It takes just so many seconds to put a letter in a box...if it is not done on Sunday it will just cause a backlog on Monday...Second: Boxholders pay a fee for this service...Thirdly: Our local Postal service does not offer door delivery as in most communities....YET they are proposing even more increased postal rates! LESS AND LESS SERVICE FOR HIGHER RATES.

Maybe President Reagan should hire one of United Parcel Service executives to run the postal service...after all they pickup and deliver cheaper, and faster and they make a profit without selling millions of dollars of little pieces of paper (stamps) to collectors.

If these bureaucrats are really interested in our community they should think about improving the out-moded post office and giving our local hard working postal employees some more help.

GO TO THE POST OFFICE AND LET YOUR VIEWS BE KNOWN.....

Kinney County LIBRARY

Dear K.C.,

The essay contest is in progress. All are invited to enter by interviewing an older family member or friend for material for your essay. What did they do after supper in the evenings without cars, radio or TV for entertainment? Did they walk or ride a horse to school? How was school then different from now? Did they have football teams then? What did they wear? Did teenagers have the freedom then that they do today? Compare the advantages and disadvantages of the way life was lived then with how we live today. Try to make your essay Kinney County oriented---- Could be that your story will be in a history book some day. Little has been printed about Fort Clark and Brackettville and how the people lived in the 1800's. Let's not let the stories die untold.

The K.C. film library for February include subjects from consumer ed. to history, science, religion and crafts --more! The films and equipment to show them are available for check out overnight or week-ends. Check with the library for more information.

New books are now ready for circulation; a few of which include Baby Dance by Elysa Markowitz, a program for the family expecting a new baby; The Complete Guide To Motorcycle Repair And Maintenance by Neil Schultz; Be a Guest At Your Own Party by Florence Lowell; and Going Metric the Fun Way by Eva Lee Baird, a collection of activities, jokes, puzzles, riddles and magic tricks that Check and see what else we have.

Thanks goes to Teresa Simmons for the donation of a collection of paperbacks for the trade shelf.

THE ROMANCE OF A ROSE

Roses have one of the most colorful histories associated with any flower. Since the beginning of time, writers and poets have written countless tales about Roses.

Shakespeare brought the rose into almost every play he wrote. Chaucer also fell under the spell of the rose in his works.

Centuries ago in Vienna, it was customary for a bridegroom to send his bride-to-be a silver rose before the ceremony.

One wonders how the rose came to be the flower associated with love and romance. Going back to Greek mythology, the God of Love was Eros. Reverse the letters and Eros does spell Rose. Flora, the Goddess of Flowers is credited with the creation of the rose. Flora was overcome by the death of her favorite nymph, and begged the Olympian dieties to transform the mortal body of her nymph into an immortal flower----Thus the rose was born. This is one of several mythological tales of the beginning of the beautiful rose. There are also as many tales on how roses develop their colors and thorns.

In one legend, Cupid has the credit for originating the thorns. Zephyr has a rose for his lover, that would only open with his caress. One day, Cupid kissed the rose and was stung on this lips by a bee hiding in its

DIABETES POSES GROWING THREAT TO SIGHT
WARNS PREVENTION OF BLINDNESS SOCIETY

With the number of diabetes in the United States on the increase, an eye disease linked to their condition is rapidly becoming the nation's leading cause of blindness reports the Texas Society to Prevent Blindness. Called diabetic retinopathy, it causes vision loss for some 4,700 adults each year.

"The longer a person has diabetes, the greater the risk of retinopathy," says R.E.Margo, M.D., of the Prevent Blindness Medical Advisory Committee. "It most often affects those who have had diabetes for 15 years or more," he added.

"It is estimated that as many as 10 million Americans have diabetes," he went on. "To alert those at risk about the prevalence of retinopathy and the need for regular eye care, the Society has just issued a pamphlet describing the eye disease and its treatment."

In retinopathy, the small blood vessels nourishing the retina, the eye's back layer which is vital to vision, weaken and break down, the pamphlet explains. The disease is unpredictable; episodes of blood vessel damage can be followed by self-healing and loss of symptoms. While a majority of long-term diabetics have some blood vessel damage, only about 5 percent develop actually severe vision impairment of blindness. Even so, it is essential that all diabetics be aware of the potential problem and schedule regular eye examinations with an ophthalmologist (medical eye specialist) since early diagnosis improves the chance of saving sight in most cases.

The pamphlet further explains that the disease is treated most often with photocoagulation, the use of an intensive beam of light, usually a laser, to seal the affected blood vessels. A national study to investigate other treatments of the eye disease is currently under way at major medical centers, sponsored by the National Eye Institute.
