EXACUM..... (Gentianaceae).....

Exacum affine (German or Arabian violet), the only species of this small genus generally grown indoors, is a profusely flowering perennial ususally treated as an annual to be enjoyed when in flower but discarded as winter approaches. Plants are raised commerially fron seed sown in early fall. The best tine to buy a exacum is when it's flowers first begin to open, after which is should continue to bloom for several months.

PROPER CARE: Light: keep indoors exacums in bright light, but out of strong direct sunlight.
Temperature: these plants will flourish in normally warm room temperatures, but they need high humidity. Keep pots on tray of moist pebbles, and mist plants regularly.
Watering: Water plentiful as often as necessary to keep the potting mixture thoroughly moist.
Feeding: Apply standard liquid fertilizer every two weeks as long as plant continues to flower.

NEW TAX LAW ALTERS ESTATE PLANNING OUTLOOK

UVALDE--Future estate planning will undergo drastic changes, a result of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981. Many of these changes will be especially useful to farmers, according to Jose G. Pena, Texas Agricultural Extension Service management economist based here. Pena says taxes paid as a result of death place an unusually heavy financial burden on survivors and drastic measures have been necessary even in recent years to pay inheritance taxes.

"The new law promises to relieve this tax pressure," he stresses. "Once it goes into effect we should see a dramatic reduction in inheritance tax problems. We are already living with some of its new provisions, while others will take effect in 1982 and subsequent years." Pena says the new tax law is extensive and complex and will require careful study. He outlines some of the estate planning highlights of the new legislation:

*By 1987 the new unified transfer tax credit will rise to eliminate the tax on individual estates of $600,000 or less. Tax experts estimate this will eliminate at least 95% of all estate tax returns.

*Allows an unlimited amount of gift and estate transfer to surviving spouse tax free, unlike the 1976 Act which provided for a deduction equal to the greater of $250,000 or one-half the adjusted gross estate. However, many existing wills and trust include maximum marital deduction formula clauses under the old law. If these wills are not changed after enactment of the law to reflect new rules, marital deduction will be figured under the old regulations.

*By 1985 the maximum transfer tax rate will be reduced by 50% from the current 70% rate.

*More control of money or property will be left to the surviving spouse. A spouse can put his/her estate into a trust and when he/she dies, the remainder goes to their children. This life estate cuts out benefits going to spouses from second marriages.

*The annual allowable gift tax exclusion increases to $10,000 ($20,000 in case of married couples making a split gift.) Owners of large estates may transfer large sums of younger generations without incurring a tax liability nor using up their lifetime exclusion. A wealthy couple may want to place large gifts into trusts in order to control the age when the gift is actually distributed to recipients.

*There is no limit to the amount one can give every year to pay for someone's educational or medical expenses. However the money must be paid directly to the hospital, doctor or college.

*Certain additional properties will be eligible for current use valuation under the new law. Real property is generally included in a gross estate at its fair market value based on its highest and best use. If certain requirements are met, an election can be made to include family farms and real property used in a family business at its current use value which is usually below fair market value. The "current use valuation" provisions was included in the 1976 Act, but requirements for qualification were so complex they excluded many farms and ranches from eligibility. Experts estimate most farms and ranches will be eligible under the new law.

There are clearly many differences between the two laws that are substantial enough to behoove one to be come familiar with the new statute and its advantages.

"It is very important that you study its provisions with your financial advisor so you will know exactly how and when to take advantage of the hug tax breaks the new law offers," Pena emphasizes.

KINNEY COUNTY LIBRARY

BY: Marie Bixby

Dear K.C.,

Last week in this column we promised to announce the date of the meeting to be held within ten days when the attorneys in the library trial case would be present to answer questions, however, since we were apprised of the date on Monday, September 21st, that the meeting would be Wednesday, Sept. 23rd, there was no way to inform the public of this date as the CAVALRYMAN comes out on Fridays. Nevertheless, we did our best; Marie Myers and her telephone committee got busy and attempted to reach each member of the "Friends" to inform them of this meeting and ask them to spread the word.

Judge Postel arranged for Mr. Paul Green of Lang, Cross, Ladon, Boldrick & Green from San Antonio and Mr. Quinton Etzel of Doran, Gulley, & Etzel from Del Rio to be present at 7 p.m. in the county court room and available to answer any and all questions put to them concerning the delays and postponements of the Kinney County library trial. Next week we shall report to after the fact. Keep turned!

Mean time, it appears that research for building a criminal case has been postponed with the absence of our County Attorney, Mr. Tully Shahan, who has reportedly gone to China and is expected to return October 13th. We wish Tully well on his trip and trust he will get on our case immediately upon his return.

Charolotte Corey is now a certified Public Librarian, Grade IV having just received her certificate this past week. We congratulate you Charolotte!

Charolotte Corey, Elsie Sauer, and Marie Bixby attended the S.A. Major Resource Center Orientation Program for the Texas Library Systems Act Advisory Council, Lay Representatives and Librarians Tuesday, Sept. 17th. Marie Bixby went as a Lay Representative but was elected to the six member Advisor- Council replacing a member whose term had expired. The council serve as a liasion agency between the member librarians and their governing bodies and library boards to advise in the formualtion of the annual plan for service to be offered by the system; recommend policies appropriate to services needed; evaluate service received; Counsel with administrative personnel; and recommend functions and limitations of contracts between cooperating agencies. The functions of the advisory council in no way diminishes the powers of local library boards.

Yours truly,
Friends of the library

6) ROOM SIZE IS A PROBLEM

We are planning to assign observers as well as delegates to committees in order to make effective use of limited space, to avoid overcrowding, and to avoid turning away observers at the last minute from more 'attractive', but filled-to-capacity committees. Even with such planning, we anticipate that there will be little room left for non credential observers (walk-ins) due to the large size of the committees and the limited numbers of large meeting rooms.

As you can see, if many persons around the country charter busses, or showed up unexpectedly, there is a strong possibility that they will be unable to obtain lodging rooms, or attend sessions due to the fire code regulations.

Therefore, we are requesting that White House State Coordinators and Directos of Area agencies on Aging take active steps to inform persons, organizations, groups, etc., who have not been credentialed as to the anticipated space problem in regard to committee meeting attendance and hotel accomodations."

HUMIDITY

Maintaining a comfortable level of humidity in your home may help you hold down your energy costs.

If high home energy costs have you in a sweat—aim for the right level of humidity.

Dry air absorbs more moisture from your skin than does humid air. The evaporation of body moisture cools you off in hot weather, and makes you feel chilly in cold weather.

That's why a home with the right level of humidity will require less air conditioning in the summer, and less heating in the winter for people to feel comfortable.

Electric appliances that add humidity to the air, humidifiers, and ones which remove it, dehumidifiers, may be a wise investment.

WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE ON AGING

The Texas Department on Aging has asked us to pass this information to you.

"II. UNOFFICIAL OBSERVERS AT THE WHCOA It has come to our attention at the White House Conference on Aging, that various groups and/or organizations are planning to charter busses; for the purpose of sending 'official observers'. Additionally, many individuals have advised us that are planning to come to Washington, D.C., at their own expense (who will be treated as walk-ins) to observe the conference.

Please discourage unofficial observers from coming to Washington during the time of the conference for the following reasons:

- 1) The Conference is planning to accomodate approximately 2,000 delegates, 1,500 observers (official), 200 staff/media, 450 volunteers and contractors' staff; this totals approximately 4,250.
- 2) The largest room for plenary sessions at either hotel is at the Sheraton, and has a maximum capacity of 3,200 persons, according to the fire code regulation.
- 3) We were only able to reserve enough rooms in the vicinity of the two conference hotels to accomodate a maximum of 4,500 rooms.
- 4) Although we have contacted other hotels, they cannot guarantee, us more rooms, since for various technical reasons they have commitments to other conferences and the necessity of saving rooms for regular business customers, etc.

5) UNEXPECTED NUMBERS TO BRING SPOUSES Since a large number of delegates will be bringing their spouses, this has created additional demands for more beds. We are currently experiencing difficulty in locating enough rooms for the spouses of our 'official delegates' and official observers'. Spouses of official delegates and observers will be afforded an opportunity to room with their spouse in the hotel, but will not be allowed to participate in the Conference proceedings, except at the same level as walk-ins whose access will have to be tightly controlled. However, they will be able to purchase tickets

SHEEP & GOAT RAISERS CORNER

The Texas Sheep and Goat Raiser's Association hasn't found itself defending a U.S. Interior Secretary very often in recent years. We've usually been on the opposing side, for what we consider very sound reasons.

Now the tables have turned, and we're lined up beside Interior Secretary James Watt, also for what we consider plenty sound reasons.

Chances are these days if you see a picture of Watt in any of the popular media--newspapers, magazines or TV--or hear him mentioned on the radio, you can prepare yourself for a negative report.

IN fact, you can pretty well expect an outright on-pretense-of-fariness attack on the man's policies, his character, even his religious beliefs.

Photographs of protestors carrying signs with slogans like "What's wrong? Watt's wrong!" may substitute for pictures of the man himself, and in at least one such case it was obvious that someone on a magazine staff had inked over the wording on the signs so they'd jump out at the reader. The better to get the point across, you understand.

Why the venom? To borrow from the protestors and their media publicists --"What's wrong? Watt's reasonable!"

For decades now, environmentalists have had things almost entirely their way in Washington. They've locked away millions of acres of once-productive federal land and severely restricted the use of millions more, extending their control over hundreds of thousands of acres of intermingled state and private land in the process. They've tricked Congress into writing ambiguous and open-ended "environmental protection" laws and hand-picked most of the bureaucrats who were given broad authority to interpret and expand upon those laws.

The extremists and their organization have carried on their even more restrictive socialistic programs in the name of altruism and world-saving--and amassed incredible fortunes in so doing by playing on the emotions of people with no better plan to spend their money.

The problem with Watt is that he won't play that game--at least he won't officiate in favor of their team, and they're used to owning the referees in addition to pretending they own the football!

Watt has made it known in no uncertain terms that he's in favor of a balanced approach to environmental issues rather than the sort of single-minded insanity that now threatens to bury California's bounteous agriculture industry in a pile of fruit fly specks --and has already handed much of the Western Sheep industry over to the coyotes.

Where does the national news media fit into this picture? The same place it always fits when there's a conservative/liberal controversy-- somewhere left of center and leaning markedly. Need examples? Sticking close to the subject at hand, how many times have you seen an AP, UPI or network TV news story point out that California Gov. Jerry Brown's environmentalist intransigence is the only reason that fruit fly disaster wasn't stamped out a year ago when it was at more than a local headache? How many land-use or pesticide stories can you recall where environmental activities had less than a two-to-one advantage over their opponents in both space and quotations?

A recent issue of one of those magazines they use to fatten your Sunday paper carried a classic Watt story complete with the sign carrying protestors picture and a color cover showing Watt's face surrounded by oil derricks, strip mining equipment and loggers. You could tell which way the story tilted without even turning the page.

As so many have, this story began by making fun of Watt's religious beliefs, then tacked off a list of the things he's already done wrong". We at the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association don't see what's "wrong" about:

Calling a halt to more and bigger national parks--It's been nearly two years since the Government Accounting Office released a scathing report blasting the National Park Service's greedy land-grab tactics and recommending that the government not only quit gobbling up private land, but even give back some of what it's already taken. Watt is the first of the big brass to take heed, pointing out that the government is billions of dollars short of being able to take care of all the parks it owns now.

"Unlocking" some of the millions of acres of Western land removed from any productive use--Environmentalists are calling it a "land grab" by developers and other big nasties, but the truth is they themselves have been the "grabbers". They way they have things rigged now, these millions of acres virtually belong to a handful of backpackers who pay nothing for the privilege of "owning" them. We agree with Watt that these public lands should benefit ALL Americans, as they would if allowed to produce livestock, timber and minerals. As for being "scarce wilderness", most of this land is no more wilderness than the average West Texas ranch; and neither we nor Watt propose "unlocking" the remainder that truly qualifies as wilderness.

Turning some strip-mining rules and enforcement over to the states--which is where we fervently believe it belongs in the first place. Precious few of the Washington bureaucrats who write and interpret the rules we all live under have the foggiest idea what they're doing. As an example, federal rules now require strip-mining land to be returned to the same condition it was in before it was mined. Some farsighted mining companies are proving now that they can make former Western grazing land better than it was, but the airheads on the Potomac won't allow better, just the same as.

Actually, Watt's problem with the radical environmentalists stems more from what's wrong with them than what might be wrong with him or his policies. It is successes, the "eco-lobby" has been guilty of a great deal of excess, and the American people have finally come to realize that. Ten or twelve years ago people were falling all over themselves to support any scheme, half-baked notion or organization affiliated with the terms "ecology" or "environment". That's no longer true, and these vast organizations with their acquired taste for the monetary tithes of others are feeling the pinch.

By painting Watt as an ogre, they've have re-opened the gold mine, so to speak. We think their new vein will play out, but we hope James Watt and his refreshingly reasonable attitude don't play out first.

ENERGY SAVING WAYS

With FREEZERS

Strawberries from the garden in mid-winter? For unexpected company, a quick casserole that was made a month ago? A variety of meats and vegetables on hand without a trip to the market? All these items and more can be available to you, right in your own kitchen, thanks to modern day freezers.

With rising food and energy prices, freezers provide an easy and economical way to save money. Here are some tips from Whirlpool home economists that can help you get the most from your freezer:

- Keep the freezer fairly full and keep door openings at a minimum.
- Use air-tight packaging and wraps designed specifically for freezing. Food quality and flavor can be lost through improper wrapping.
- Cook in larger quantities than you need and freeze the excess for later use.
- Use your frozen foods. A steady turnover of food into and out of the freezer makes the best use of food, electricity and space.
- Organize freezer contents by type of item and label each package with contents and date. This lets you find foods quickly and reduces the time the door needs to be kept open.

KAZEN

By: Abraham (Chick) Kazen, Jr., M.C.

I introduced legislation last week which I hope will settle a problem unique in the history of South Texas--that plight of the wandering Texas Band of Kickapoo Indians.

It may be difficult to believe that in our modern age of space travel and scientific marvels that such a situation exists, but it does.

The Kickapoo story actually began in the early 1800's, when the Indians had to give up their lands near the Great Lakes in Wisconsin.

Until recently, the end of the trail appeared to be a scattering of huts under the International Bridge at Eagle Pass.

For more than a century, the Texas Kickapoo have divided their time between Oklahoma, where there is a federally-recognized tribe of Kickapoo; Mexico, where they farm on land which was provided for them in return for the defense of Mexican villages in the mid-1800's and Eagle Pass, the Indian's traditional contact point in the United States and where many of their dead are buried.

They are often described as "Traditional Kickapoo" because they have kept their ancient customs and have little contact with Mexicans or non-Indians in the United States. They are poor and some are in ill-health, but they have not received the desperately-needed federal services available to other Indians because their citizenship is clouded and they have never been officially recognized as a distinct tribe of American Indians.

The Texas State Legislature recognized the Texas Kickapoo as an Indian tribe in 1977, but it was later ruled that without specific authority of the federal government, no services could be provided.

More recently, the Texas Kickapoo have attracted widespread support from Indian organizations across the nation and from neighbors in the Eagle Pass area. Residents have furnished food and clothing to the Indians, who are settled on the flood plain near the International Bridge, and the City has installed a water spigot nearby.

The City of Eagle Pass, the Maverick County Commissioners' Court, the school and hospital districts and others have urged action to correct the federal oversight.

After a careful study of the situation, I introduced legislation to clarify the citizenship status of the Indians, many of whom already qualify for U.S. citizenship by virtue of birth. Under my bill, the Texas Band of Kickapoo is found to be subgroup of the Oklahoma Kickapoo. All members, estimated to be 600 and 700, would become citizens of the United States immediately upon final passage of the act, and a reservation would be established in Maverick County.

It is my hope that with this action, the United States will finally live up to the promise contained in a travel pass written by an Army Major in Oklahoma in 1832 and still in the possession of the Texas Kickapoos:

"This is to certify that the familys of the Kikapoo Indians, thrity seven in number, are to be protected by all persons from any injury whatever, as they are under the protection of the United States and any person so violating shall be punished accordingly."

NEW INHERITANCE LAW

AUSTIN--State Comptroller Bob Bullock's office Monday reminded Texans that a new state inheritance tax law took effect this month and will apply to estate of those who died on or after September 1, 1981.

The Comptroller's office reported the new law will save Texas taxpayers at least $20 million in death taxes the first year.

The new law did away with the state basic inheritance tax schedule and statutes, replacing the, with a law that ties Texas inheritance tax collections to a part of the federal estate taxes owed.

For example, under the old state law if the federal tax due was $5,000 the "federal credit" would be $500 and the state inheritance $700, resulting in the Internal Revenue Service collecting $4,500 and Texas $700.

Under the new law, Texas would now collect the "federal credit" of $500 and the IRS would collect $4,500, using the $5,000 example.

IN effect, the new law allows persons who owe federal estate taces to deduct from the amount due the federal government any inheritance tax paid to the state. The amount is determined by an IRS formula.

The Comptroller's office said this also means that if federal estate tax rates are cut, Texas inheritance taxes are automatically dropped back.

More than 45 other states have similar laws that piggy-back on the federal law.

Estates of those who died before September 1, 1981 are subject ot Texas' old inheritance tax law and tax schedule Bullock's office noted.
