DEPARTMENT OF HWYS AND PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION REPORT ON TOURISM

An up-to-date report on the Texas tourism industry has just been released by the people who see and serve more tourist than any other authority in the state, the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

From 12 Texas Tourist Bureaus operated by the Department, through a hundred thousand worldwide mailings of tempting Texas travel literature, and in the pages of Texas Highways magazine, the Department maintains a perpetual "Y'all come" campaign. And visitors do come. Where they come from, where they go to, how long they stay, and how much they spend are factors neatly averaged in the just-released Texas Visitor Industry Statistical report.

For those not intimidated by columns of figures, some intriguing perspectives are in the report. Take "Winter Texas" for instance -- refugees from the frigid Midwest who are right now overflowing the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Figures show they spend only half as much per day as do routine, short term travelers.

Cheapskates? Think again. Another column shows they stay, on the average, 11 times longer than their summertime counterparts. They spend an average of 2,122 per party during two and a-half months of leisure in the Texas Tropics, thus benefitting their South Texas Host by multiple million of dollars.

And what city do foreign visitors like best? San Antonio. In fact, San Antonio is among the top three favorite destinations for all categories of visitors.

There's more. The highway department enumerates how each Texas region shares the tourism pie. The report dissects tourism dollar spending for food, lodging, transportation and entertainment.

The Texas Visitor Industry report is a by-product of the state's hospitality business. Highway department tourist bureaus served more than 3 million travelers last year.

At the conclusion of their trips, nearly 30,000 such travelers returned questionnaires that formed the report's data base.

NEWS FROM SOUTHWEST JUNIOR COLLEGE

Of particular interest to those who believe there is "nothing new under the sun", local physician Dr. Jimmie Stewart, who serves as Southwest Texas Junior College's school doctor, recently presented a paper at the 11th Annual Symposium on Sports Medicine at the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio that may open a new feild of study.

"The thought of comprehensive medical care for the rodeo performer has long been ignored," Stewart said as he began his presentation to the distinguished group of doctors and researchers.

"I had called the coordinator of the conference earlier to request that a presentation on the treatment of rodeo related injuries be added to the schedule," he explained. "I agreed to present what I had learned in working the SWTJC rodeo team after he told me that no substantive research had been conducted on the topic and that there was no 'expert' in existence that he knew of."

After his presentation, Dr. Stewart was approached by Dallas Cowboy's team physician Dr. Pat Evans, who has worked with rodeo injuries in Mesquite, Texas area; and President of Medidyne, Inc. Byron Donzis, who developed Earl Campbell's thigh pad and Dan Pastorini's Flak jacket.

The two prominent practitioners in sports medicine were interested in working the Uvalde physician in researching the treatment and prevention of rodeo injuries, perhaps using the SWTJC Rodeo Team as the experimental group.

SHERIFF'S CORNER

BY NORMAN HOOTEN

This Friday, February 10, 1984, marks the second week since U.U. Customs Officer Richard Latham was kidnapped from the U.S. Port of Entry in Del Rio and transported down Hwy. 277 and then walked down into a deep, brushy ravine near Eagle Pass with his hands cuffed behind his back and shot twice in the back, execution style, with his own gun.

A car containing two of the suspects, both Mexican Nationals, was stopped near Dryden the following day by DPS Troopers and one of the suspects shot himself in the head. The remaining suspect was taken into custody at the scene.

The search for the remaining two suspects continued along the U.S. Mexico border gradually being centered around the El Paso area. The third suspect was captured at a motel in El Paso on Friday, February 5, 1984 after surrendering himself to authorities at the International Bridge in El Paso.

The shock, anger, frustration and sorrow over the loss of Richard Latham in such a brutal, unnecessary manner remains, especially among those of us in law enforcement who have lost one of our own.

The fate of Richard Latham is one that all of us in law enforcement think about from time to time. We all know that the possibility of having a similar experience happen to one of us is a very real in these days and times. It is happening more and more often all over Texas and the United States.

Consider the brutal death of Clyde Hobbs, Deputy Sheriff in Uvalde County. He stopped a car, alone as most of us are, containing burglary suspects. He was attacked by four vicious criminals and the signs of his struggle against overwhelming odds were strewn for forty yards down the highway right-of-way before he was overpowered and his head repeatedly smashed and crushed by his attackers using a 12 pound rock and an iron tire tool.

Consider the recent brutal and senseless murder of the La Vernia Deputy Sheriff. Kidnapped, tied up, placed in the trunk of his patrol car and shot repeatedly until he was dead. The murderers then proceeded to wear some of his clothing and used his patrol car to rob a bank.

Consider the recent shooting of the Brady, Texas Chief of Police. He was shot twice as he walked up beside a car containing an ex-con who had been released from prison and had come to Brady looking for Sheriff Glen Weatherman and had made statements that he intended to kill the Sheriff. After shooting the Police Chief, the ex-con then shot himself in the head.

All the criminals responsible for these heinous crimes have been captured or have killed themselves. The survivors are all in jail awaiting trial.

But how long will these men remain in custody? Their trials will last for years as legal appeal after appeal is heard in the various courts. All of this assuming that they are convicted. Hundreds of thousands of our tax dollars will be expended providing these cruel misfits with all the comforts they require and ask for. Special privileges such as access to legal libraries is required by law. Most will be using court appointed attorneys, paid for with our tax dollars.

Special - Extra Special - care must be exercised by all peace officers and jail guards who come into contact with these prisoners to make sure that some small act is not a violation of their "civil rights". A small technical violation could, and judging from many recent court decisions, most likely would result in their being released back into society for a "violation of their civil rights".

In the meantime their victims, the brave, often lonely, peace officers who worked long hours, most often alone, for small salaries, lie cold in their graves. Their families left in sorrow and grief, often in hard financial condition. Small children and loving wives are suddenly faced with a cold, hard fact. Their father and husband will not be coming home - EVER!

Justice is described in Webster's New World Dictionary as (1) fairness, (2) being correct, (3) reward or penalty as deserved, (4) the use of authority to uphold what is right, just or lawful.

I am sorry to say that it becomes harder and harder for me to see "justice" when honest, hardworking, law abiding peace officer or citizen is brutally murdered and then hundreds of thousands of our hard earned tax dollars are spent providing the killers with all the comforts, special privileges, and attorneys for years and years of trial and appeal - being most careful during all this time NOT to violate his "civil rights". JUSTICE?

Then our society will let small children and others die a slow, painful death for lack of money to have medical care in the form of liver transplants and kidney transplants, and other needed medical care that they are unable to obtain for lack of funds. JUSTICE?

We Can't Let Our Students Put Their Brains On "Cruise Control"

By Mary Hatwood Futrell
President of the National Education Assn.

Four years of English. Three years of math, science and social studies. A half-year of instruction in computer science.

Does that curriculum sound too rigorous or demanding for high school students? Of course not. But the National Center for Education Statistics says that less than two percent of today's graduating students now meet these minimums.

It's time to get tough and firm up high school graduation requirements. Let's prepare our students for life in a vastly more complex society than any of us could ever have imagined. And if we expect our students to thrive—not just survive—we need to give them skills to cope with the relentless demands that will be placed on them as adults.

Reduced to its simplest terms, we must teach our students how to think, communicate and understand their world.

What kind of skills will that take? Our students today need to learn both kinds of literacy skills—English and computer—as well as how to think critically and analytically. They also need both more science and math, which are crucial to a high tech economy, and more instruction in the arts and humanities that are basic to any well-rounded education.

Along with more rigorous coursework, it's time to put our students on notice that the days of social promotions are over.

We teachers know parents never like to hear that their children haven't learned the skills necessary to move on to the next grade. But we've seen the damage that results from promoting students who are academically unprepared for a higher grade. Undeserved promotions only set students up for academic disaster later on.

Let's not insist on promoting children who aren't ready. Let's instead work together—parent and teacher—and do our best to help our children learn. Let's work to raise educational standards and fight the cut-backs—at all levels of government—that threaten quality education.

Legislatures in more than half the states have already taken steps to upgrade their standards. In the last three years, for example, 17 states have required students to take more courses in math, 12 states have done so in science, 10 in social studies, eight in English, and five in foreign languages.

But with all of the attention today on educational excellence, we need to keep in mind that it takes more than good intentions to accomplish academic reforms. It also takes money.

It takes dollars to pay the salaries of additional math and science teachers... to purchase up-to-date textbooks... to properly equip labs and classrooms.

Quality education doesn't come cheap. As the recent National Commission on Excellence in Education report concluded: "Excellence costs. But in the long run, mediocrity costs far more."

the debate featured questions from students at the University of Texas.

Rob Mosbacher, a Houston businessman and former senior advisor to Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker (R-Tenn.), and Rep. Ron Paul (R-Lake Jackson) participated in the debate for Republican candidates. Rep. Phil Gramm, the other candidate for Republican nomination, declined to debate in the statewide forum.

The Active Consumer

Active consumers are urging their legislators to overturn a directive from the Federal Communications Commission to local telephone companies to raise their service rates.

Some 92 percent of Americans have telephones. Now, many of them are writing letters to their legislators in the hope of holding down their phone bills.

The legislators are opposing a directive from the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) that tells local phone companies to raise their rates. The increase is called an "access charge." You pay it for the opportunity to make long distance phone calls. Whether you make long distance calls, or how often you make them, doesn't matter.

In the past, long distance carriers paid such fees and they helped support the local system. Now that AT&T has been broken up, con-

NEWS RELEASE FROM BOB BULLOCK STATE COMPTROLLER

State Comptroller Bob Bullock Friday sent checks totaling $105.4 million in local sales tax payments to the 980 cities that the one percent city sales tax.

Statewide, 1984 payments are running 2.57 percent ahead of last year. However, because of changes in reporting requirements that converted 15,000 small - and medium sized taxpayers from quarterly to monthly payment schedules, it is difficult to compare raw payment figures for 1984 with the same period last year, since what were quarterly payments last year are now spread over three months.

"Even with the bookkeeping changes, these payments reflect the recovery that is underway in our state economy," Bullock said. "When it's all said and done, Texans apparently had the best Christmas in our history in terms of retail sales."

Houston received the largest check - for $19.2 million - for a 1984 total of $27.4 million, down 3% from last year. Dallas' check for $12.6 million brought year-to-date payments to $18 million, up 5%.

San Antonio's payment was $6.6 million for a $9.1 million 1984 total, up 14%. Austin's February check for $4.1 million brought its yearly total up to $6.1 million, up 9%.

Fort Worth received $3.7 million for total payments this year of $5.3 million, down 1% from 1983. El Paso's check for $2.2 million brought its year to date total to $3.3 million, up 7%.

Kinney County, Brackettville payments up 3%.

Bullock also sent checks to the Metropolitan Transit Authorities in Houston and San Antonio.

THE MANHATTAN RHYTHM KINGS TO PLAY DEL RIO

Del Rio Community Concert Association presents the second concert of the 1983-84 season. The Manhattan Rhythm Kings Monday, February 13, at the Eighth Grade Auditorium, 315 Griner. Admission is limited to members of the Community Concert Association.

The Manhattan Rhythm Kings, Hal Shane, Brian Nalepka, and Micheal Reeder, have gained immense popularity through their impeccable performances of the best American popular music. Concerting on a repertoire from the 20's, 30's, and 40's in the manner of Paul Whitman's Rhythm Boys and the Boswell Sisters, or in close harmonies as in the Mills Brothers or the Andrew Sisters, they bring the music to life as it was meant to be heard, singing, dancing and playing an impressive variety of instruments.

They have played New York City's finest supper clubs and night spots on such as the Bottem Line, the Savoy and Sardi's. Their television credits include the Today Show, Tom Snyder Show, NBC's Live at Five, and a CBS evening news feature.

'Everybody talks about saving energy. Good Cents helps you do something about it.'

"I've been building homes for a long time. So, when CPL came to me with the program for Good Cents homes, I could see right off that this was something brand-new and rock-solid.

"Here's a house with energy-saving features built right into it from the foundation up. And all those features work together so well they reduce energy usage as much as 50% for heating, air conditioning and hot water.

"That's pretty impressive! You may not realize it, but you probably buy more energy for those three items than you do for everything else in your home. And when you cut that amount of energy in half, we're talking about substantial savings every month in household operating expenses."

If you're considering a new house, choose one that's less expensive to live in: a Good Cents home. Offered by CPL to help you get more value for your energy dollar, the program was developed after years of research into the most energy-efficient measures available today.

As many as ten special features are included in Good Cents homes. Features like added insulation in walls, ceiling and foundation...highly efficient water heating...good attic ventilation...quality windows and doors...and an efficient heat pump that provides both cooling and heating from a single system.

Before you decide on a new home, you'll want more information about Good Cents. Get the details from your CPL office or from your builder, realtor, designer or architect.
