OFFICIAL LITTLE LEAGUE SCHEDULE

"OPENING DAY CEREMONIES"
SATURDAY APRIL 28 9:00A.M.

LITTLE LEAGUE FIELD

Monday night kicked off not only the first game of the Little League season, but they very first Girl's Softball Game in Kinney County. Spirits were high and many people were present to observe the game. "The New Kids," managed and coached by the husband/wife team of Leonard and Elaine Luna, were triumphant over the "Silver Roses," managed by Linda Sharp and coached by Melanie Jones. Volunteer umpires for the game were Manuel Pena, David Esparza and Buck Smallwood.

The first game of the Little League Season will be held Tuesday night at 5:30 with the Lions meeting the Astros for the first game and the Rams playing the Cowboys in the second game.

The official "Opening Day Ceremonies" will be held Saturday, April 28 at 9:00 a.m. at the Little League Field prior to the first game of the T-Ball League. Playing Saturday will be the Cardinals and Bombers, first game; and the Fireballs and Top Guns in the second game. Plans call for all four Commissioners to throw out the first ball. The County Commissioner's Court has greatly aided the Little League Program and all youth in this community by providing the funding to improve and create a safe, and more than adequate, playing field for the League. The Board, Managers, Coaches, Parents and Children are truly grateful to Bill Bizzell, Rosemary Slubar, Joe Garza and Rueben Fuentes.

The Little League is going through many changes and is growing by leaps and bounds this year. As with all growth things happen that are unexpected, both good and bad. The Board of Directors is doing its best to see that all children play under the safest conditions, with the best management possible. We do still need financial support from our community. Equipment must be purchased, insurance bought and the field has to be maintained. All of this is VERY EXPENSIVE. Please donate to your local Little League Program. Finances are an ongoing need.

"ENVIRONMENTAL PRESIDENT" MUST ACT

This was a long time ago, kiddies, when gas guzzlers had tailfins, smokestacks spewed glop that rotted forests and nobody cared that we were ripping a chunk big as the United States out of the ozone layer. You wanted clean air? Turn up the air conditioner. It was 1961, and Gaylord Nelson, governor of Wisconsin and later a U.S. Senator, was hitching a ride in the limo with President Jack Kennedy. Nelson bent Kennedy's ear about "conserving the environment."

Kennedy, Nelson remembers, looked baffled. "Gaylord, I've never given any thought to this issue", said Kennedy. "I've lived in cities. I didn't know a problem existed."

Now, three decades later, we're approaching the second Earth Day (which ex-Sen. Nelson invented), and Nelson worries that the incumbent U.S. president is almost oblivious as Kennedy was.

Is George Bush behaving like the "environmental president," or running a political scam?

"The jury is still out - and getting nervous," said Nelson, a leader in the Wilderness Society. "The question is in how great depth Bush understands the issue. He's spent more time criticizing flag-burning than on the environment. What kind of priority is that?"

You'd think avid fisherman-boater-hunter Bush would be something of an eco-freak. But in the war between the "greens" (zealots who would move fast to protect the globe) and "browns" (business establishmentarians who would protect profits), Bush plays the middle ground.

"Sure, I want a clean environment," he waffles, "but I'm not going to shut down the economy."

Translation: Go slow, churn out reports, do nothing rash.

So far Bush has gotten a gentleman's "C" on the environment, mainly because he's no Ronald Reagan. But this week - and not merely because of this Sunday's Earth Day eco-fest - Bush has to show his true colors.

Seventeen nations are sending representatives to the White House for a two-day conference on global warming, that potential cataclysm of drought, flood and cancer the Bush team prefers to laugh off. Already the White House parley is rapped as a public relations fraud.

"It's really a smoke screen to cover up the administration's inaction," Daniel Becker of the Sierra Club says scornfully.

More bitingly, Europeans charge the Bush administration has stacked the deck so the global-warming powwow will paper over Bush's do-nothing approach.

"The whole agenda is a kind of one-way traffic," Dutch delegate Pier Vellinga complains. "It focuses on economic issues, not political will."

It's curious to hear Dutch, Irish, Germans and other Europeans chastising the World's Most Advanced Nation for selling out the 21st century. No wonder they're skeptical. White House adviser Michael Boskin scoffs that the warming threat "roughly translates into a temperature change less than moving from Washington to Atlanta."

Never mind that the National Academy of Sciences (700 members, 52 Nobel laureates) predicts greenhouse gases will warm the earth by four to nine degrees by next century's end.

Or that United Nations experts will move up that projection to 2050. That could mean U.S. droughts, bread lines and heat waves that make the summer of '88 feel like paradise.

"Maybe it will take an environmental Pearl Harbor," says Lester Brown of Worldwatch. Meaning: too late.

The "green" crowd worries that Bush is brainwashed by White House Chief of Staff John Sununu, a pro-industry mole who shrugs that "faceless bureaucrats" want to take "cars away from Americans." Earth Day leader Dennis Hayes calls Sununu "James Watt with more hair."

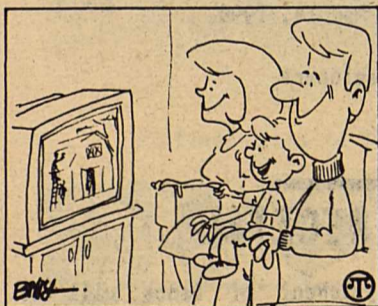

"This is a presidential challenge greater than any war or depression," Nelson says. "If Bush knows it's serious and does nothing, that's immoral."

Well, Bush could end the waffling with two dramatic moves this week: Call for a total ban on CFCs, the chemicals in refrigerators and air conditioners that eat away the ozone layer, and

WE MUST USE EARTH WISELY AND WELL

Earth Day 1990 will be observed on Sunday. Somehow it seems very fitting that Earth Day should fall on a Sunday, since the solution to the many problems threatening our Earth lies in better stewardship of God's creation.

Did you know that by recycling one aluminum can, you save as much electricity as it takes to run your television for our hours?

Or consider this: By recycling one yearly subscription to The San Antonio Light, you produce as much reusable paper pulp as an acre of forest land.

By saving and turning in our paper products, we and our neighbors can make a big difference, as each ton saves as much as is produced by cutting 17 trees.

In the field of energy, the experts tell us that enough leaks through American windows each year to equal the flow through the Alaskan pipeline.

Those of us who are concerned over the cost, safety and final disposition of nuclear plants when they can no longer be operated could make their construction unnecessary by making the switch.

Styrofoam cups have long been recognized as a hazard to our Earth. They form a good part of the more than one ton of hazardous waste that each person generates each year.

Unfortunately, our attitude toward preserving our Earth usually includes what others ought to be doing. We point to drive-in and fast-food places and the unbelievable amount of styrofoam packaging which they do and excuse ourselves from doing something. We point to a lawn sprinkler that is running full force in the heat of the day or during a shower that blows in, and ignore ways in which we could conserve water in our own home.

Someone points out that Americans could save 250 million gallons of water each year by simply installing faucet aerators. This is not to suggest that we ought not pressure fast-food chains to find new safe packaging or that careless watering ought not be reported.

When we purchase a new appliance, we need to read the labels and ask questions to ensure that we choose energy-savers. We can request a free energy audit from the utility company and seek their guidance in saving both money and energy.

With just a little effort, we can separate our cans, bottles, plastic containers and newspapers, and recycle them. Recently I went through our trash and removed seven large glass bottles and two gallon jugs which I carried to the recycling center nearby.

The Judeo-Christian traditions have always taught that God placed mankind on Earth with a sacred responsibility to care for it and use it wisely and well. Perhaps now that the existence of Earth is threatened, we will take the responsibility more seriously.

The Javelina who live in the southwest are really listed as a peccary. In Spanish he is listed as; "Boar, Jebali, F. Jobalina." In the early southwest they were called the "Jabali." It is not clear why the "a" was added to the word "Jabali" instead of the masculine "O."

Most Javelina weigh around forty pounds and rarely as heavy as fifty pounds. They are about three feet long, the largest boars are about three feet tall at the shoulder. When his bristles stand he looks much larger than he really is.

If a javalina is backed into a corner he will come out fighting and he has a lot of power. When they travel in packs they can pose a powerful threat. Both male and female have two pair of tusches in their jaws kept sharp by gnashing.

All a baby javalina has to learn is to keep up with his mother. The ones made into pets think their master is their mother and patter along behind.

Javelinas eat prickly pear, biting off bits and pieces, ignoring the spines. He eats the seed pods of mesquite and other grasses and weed,s but the javalina could hardly get along without the nopal commonly called the prickly pear. He needs very little water because he gets so much moisture from the cactus.

The Javelina has a musk gland that gives off an odor but it is not overpowering. Their eyesight is poor but they have a highly developed sense of smell. In the 1800's they were killed by the thousands and sold for brushes, gloves and leather.

The javalina are still a part of the southwest. There were some on the fort when I first came they used to come into the plaza in Unit One and snuffle and root at night. But I haven't seen any lately.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

After reading the letter from Jessie Herndon in last week's paper reviewing all that has transpired on the controversial radioactive waste dump proposal over the past 22 months, one can only deplore what continues to be an attempt by big business to profit by any means possible even at the expense of hard-working citizens fighting to preserve what they have from potential dangers. Apparently this includes indifference by officials in control over water supply when a dependent community does not cooperate but resists what an outside bully is trying to impose on all of us.

Several weeks ago, national news informed us that Browning-Ferris Industries, Inc. had been fined another large sum for violations of government rules on the operation of a radioactive waste dump in New York state. Also, that they company had been denied permission to expand that facility. This is just one of many public disclosures of the persistent disregard this company has shown for safe and proper operation of hazardous waste installations which threaten the lives of people and the environment they live in.

More recently, evening news told us that BFI had decided to get out of the radioactive waste business because it was unprofitable. Undoubtedly, the millions they have paid in fines for violations is part of the problem. A spokesman for the company confirmed this adding that they proposed to sell off their active waste facilities or dismantle those which were not in a condition to market to someone else. Clearly, the facility TEXCOR proposes is in this category, and if BFI is a company of its word, we should soon see an end to this painful experience.

Despite this, we read that the President of TEXCOR claims that he has already spent to much time and money on the project to cancel it. But then the big dollar continues to be the dominant factor in his unwelcome presence. This also adds to the obvious truth that BFI and its subsidiaries are not to be trusted under any circumstances.

A public referendum would clearly reveal that a predominant majority are opposed to this project. why aren't our county commissioners court officials taking stronger steps to bring an end to this false promise of prosperity that the people don't want? Why can't we have an opportunity to vote our objection? Is it because someone is afraid of the truth? Is someone's financial interest in the way of justice for the people, by the people, etc.

We sincerely hope that 1990 will be the year of decision, when integrity and justice will prevail in Kinney County, for our common best interests.

S/S R. C. Hirsch

BRACKETT SCHOOL PLAN TO REMAIN OPEN IF LEGISLATURE FAILS TO ACT BY THE MAY 1 DEADLINE

In the regular monthly meeting of the Brackett Independent School District Board of Trustees, Bob McCall, school district superintendent, recommended that Brackett schools remain open, if state funding is cut off May 1, 1990 by court order. Mr. McCall told the trustees that the district had the cash reserves necessary to meet the payroll and that in his opinion, it would be prudent to continue "business as usual." The Board agreed with the administrative recommendation.

BRACKETT ISD TRUSTEES UPHOLD STUDENT SUSPENSION

In a called emergency meeting on Tuesday, April 17, 1990, the Brackett Independent School District Board of Trustees met to hear an appeal of a suspension of a student from the track team by track coach Jesse Rodriguez. The appeal was heard in executive session. Both Mr. Rodriguez and the parents of the student were given a chance to express their views of the incident.

After hearing both sides, the Board asked the parties to leave the board room so that the Board could deliberate the issues. The Board reconvened in open session. Mr. James Bader, Board President, told the audience that the Board recognized there were some inconsistencies in the past with the administration of athletic rules. However, Mr. Bader stated that the Board would not lift the suspension assessed by Mr. Rodriguez on the grounds of insubordination. The meeting was then adjourned.

OVER 30 YEARS OF DEPENDABLE SERVICE

Texas Agricultural Extension Service

BY ALAN L. MCWILLIAMS

TEXAS AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION SERVICE

I think it's safe to say that spring is here and with that in mind, the time is right to spray newly budded pecan trees.

Spraying will combat scab, the most prevalent disease among pecan trees. The disease is hard to see, but if you have had a problem in the past, you probably can expect it in the future. Pecan scab usually produces lesions on the leaf and black or dead shucks.

Some varieties such as Burkett, Wichita, and Western are susceptible to pecan scab and should be treated with a fungicide. Varieties resistant to pecan scab are Choctaw, Cheyenne, Pawnee, and Soix, but homeowners should still be alert for problems with the fungus.

You should spray immediately after the buds break and then two of three more times until June. While spraying a fungicide, also spray the pecan trees with zinc. Zinc sprayed on foliage helps produce larger leaves and promotes overall tree growth and nut production.

The prime time to fertilizer pecan trees is immediately after the buds break. The old rule of thumb is to apply one pound of ammonium sulfate, 21-0-0, per inch of trunk diameter.

Fertilizer should be broadcast on the surface under the pecan tree and should extend out to the canopy. A common misconception for fertilizing is to dig a hole near the trunk and pour liquid fertilizer into the hole. Since most feeder roots are in the top 18 inches, there is absolutely no need for fertilizer to be placed beneath the depth of the soil.

Newly planted pecan trees should be cut back to one-half their height. When pecan trees are dug at nurseries, the roots are damaged. Cutting the tree back gives it a better chance of regenerating a new root system.

Mulching is also important in helping young trees get established. Some of the best mulch is leaves, hay, pine needles, and straw.

Unlike most trees, young pecan trees can with stand roundup applications that are used to kill surrounding grasses. Young trees need plenty of water and should be kept relatively free of competition with grasses especially bermuda grass which competes highly with young pecan trees for water and nutrients.

SUPERVISION REQUIRES LICENSING

Persons who will use or supervise the use of restricted-use pesticides for the purpose of producing an agricultural commodity are required to obtain a license as of Jan. 1, 1990, said Robert De Anda III, Extension agent-pesticide safety with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Those who are currently Certified Private Applicators are still able to use restricted-use or state-limited-use pesticides, but are not allowed to supervise the use of these products, De Anda said.

The Texas Department of Agriculture (TDA) has basically divided the private applicator category into three groups. The first group are Certified Private Applicators who received their certification prior to January 10, 1989. This certification does not expire except under special ruling, and those holding such certification require continued education units (CEU'S) by October 1995 to recertify.

The second group are certified private applicators who received their certification after January 10, 1989. This certification expires in five years, therefore, this group must attend an Extension Service training, be tested and apply for a license by 1994.

The third group is licensed private applicators who must attend an Extension Service training, be tested and apply for a license with a $50 licensing fee. This license expires in five years and 15 CEU's are required for renewal.

"Currently, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service is offering trainings for private applicator licensing. The applicator has two options. First, he or she may go to the local Extension office to view the slide program, receive a signed form from the County Extension Agent, and travel to the TDA District office for testing. The second option is for the applicator to attend a formal training where, if possible, a TDA representative is available for testing on-site after the training," said De Anda.

De Anda added that the applicator should contact the local County Extension Agent for more information.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic levels, race, color, sex, religion, handicap, or national origin.

REFLECTIONS BY PRESTON TAYLOR

George died on his twenty-first birthday. He had lived a full, productive life. I knew George well because he was one of my dad's two mules.

One word may be used to describe the entire life of George. That word is faithful.

One day when I was about 10 years of age; my dad placed me on the mule. The he balanced a 50 pound sack of shelled corn in front of me on the mule.

George and I took the corn two miles down a dirt road to the little grist mill owned by Mr. Joe Kinnard. After the corn was ground into meal, Mr. Kinnard put the boy and the meal on the mule and soon Mom had fresh meal for corn bread.

George would pull a Georgia stock with a straight shovel and a 20 or 24 inch sweep for 12 hours a day. We could hitch the mule to a wagon with our other mule and they would pull a 1400 pound load of cotton to the gin or pull a heavy load of stove wood or firewood.

George would pull "round and round" the pole that turned the rollers at the syrup mill at Mr. Will Fautheree's place not far from our little farm in south Arkansas.

George taught me the importance of being faithful. All of us need to learn this lesson, don't we?

Children and young people may be faithful in school. They can feel the excitement and thrill of studying and learning.

Teachers, parents, and workers in every area of life should recognize that faithfulness is one of the important qualities in life.

In Matthew 25:21 Jesus said, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." What do you think the Lord will say to each of us when we stand before him?

TEXAS TRAVEL FAIR IS A SUCCESS

The Texas Travel Fair held in Lubbock April 18 and 19 proved to be a success for travel sites such as Fort Clark Springs and Alamo Village. Each year, a City is chosen for Texas Travel Counselors (the individuals that provide information about Texas at the port of entries) to meet and learn more about our great state of Texas' travel sites. These Counselors allow the Texas tourism industry to grow more and more each year.

Sea World in San Antonio, Aquarena Springs in San Moras, Odessa, Waco, Fredricksburg and many others attended the fair. Virginia Shahan, owner of Alamo Village said, "It was great seeing all of our friends in the tourism business again. They are all fantastic people.

For a different twist and to add a little personality, Lashawn Wardlaw, Public Relations Director at Fort Clark Springs wore the cavalry uniform of Don Swanson, curator of the Old Guardhouse Museum. Wardlaw said, "A lot of people remarked that they hadn't seen a cavalry-women before!"

Representing Fort Clark Springs and its history and representing the ol' west through Alamo Village gives a person a great deal of pride. Tourism is a large industry. Kinney County tourism could be a larger industry. More people to our county benefits everyone. Remember: Positively promote our tourism industry. It is a winning industry.
