BRACKETTVILLE TEXAS, FRIDAY MARCH 21 1952

Bascom Giles On Tidelands

Land Commissioner Bascom Giles, discussing the tidelands issue in an interview Friday, condemned the bill introduced by Representative Kennedy (D-Mass) which would turn over control and revenues of the tidelands to the Federal government for hospital and medical purposes among all states.

Said Commissioner Giles, "I consider the Kennedy proposal as another of those honey-worded menaces to Texas' sovereignty of its public domain.

Regardless of how humane the bill may seem at first appraisal, the fact remains that it's bare-faced intention is to appropriate what justly belongs to one state and to distribute it among the others.

"And, while the Congressman's interest in hospitals and the ailing is most commendable, the revenues from the tidelands have already been assigned to a cause just as humane and as vital—the education of the children of Texas."

It will be recalled that Senator Hill (D-Ala.) has also introduced a similar bill except that revenues would be divided among all the states for school purposes.

Commenting further, Giles said, "I would like to point out, also, a most singular inconsistency in the waves of propaganda issued by the Administration's spokesmen, both official and otherwise. In one breath it is chanted that Texans are making a great to-do about very little, that the tidelands are not a proven source of wealth. In the next it is proclaimed that the proceeds from such valuable properties should be widely distributed among the sick and needy.

"I regard the Kennedy proposals to disguise the vital issue—does any government have a right which arbitrarily and finally supersedes the right of ownership?"

Commissioner Giles, as Chairman of the School Land Board, is an honorary Member of the Statewide Tidelands Committee, which is now putting on a drive for funds to carry out a national campaign to enlist support in Congress for full state ownership of all submerged lands.

Used Car Price Reduction Told

OPS officials today reminded used car dealers that December ceiling prices of used cars must be reduced 2%.

Under provisions of the used car regulations, the ceiling prices of used cars must be reduced at the rate of 2% each three months. January 1 was the first date for this reduction.

OPS regulations require that used cars be tagged with ceiling prices and that new car ceiling prices be posted in showrooms of new car dealers.

Economy Begins At Home

WASHINGTON — Community minded chambers of commerce from their earliest days have ever sought to build their cities and towns.

If a new postoffice was needed, if a larger courthouse was necessary, if a park was required the chamber of commerce was found out in front working for the improvement desired.

As communities developed, many public projects were built solely from local funds, but in the years before federal budgets reached monumental proportions most communities also eagerly sought federal projects.

By Congressman O. C. Fisher
LAST WEEK the House debated UMT, passed a so-called wetback bill, while the Senate recommitted to a committee the matter of admitting Alaska to Statehood.

Rarely has an issue generated so much interest and controversy as has the military training proposal. Last year by a vote of 10-to-1 the House adopted a UMT program, and the Senate followed suit. But the detailed plans for the training was left to a civilian-controlled commission, appointed by the President, and its report on the subject must be approved by Congress before it can go into effect—subject to any changes the Congress might want to make in it.

It is that Report that is now before the House, with some amendments adopted by the Armed Services Committee, to which the Report was referred.

In the course of hearings and the debate a number of points were made which help to clarify the real issues that are involved. Among these have been:

1. When we became involved in the Korean conflict and were being pushed back toward Pusan, new troops were recruited. But because of the pressing emergency and the immediate need, some 800,000 reservists, most of them veterans of the last war, were recalled. It was said there was no time to train young non-veterans in time to stop the Communist onslaught.

Under the UMT program, a pool of trained, ready reservists would be created who could be called in case of an emergency, and thus make it unnecessary for veterans of other wars to be pressed into service when non-veterans of military age are available.

2. After full implementation of UMT, the program will provide these trained Reserves, and will reduce our expenditures for national defense by an estimated $13 billion annually, without weakening our security. That will be done by a planned substantial reduction in the number in the standing forces.

3. On the question of the program militarizing the youth of the Nation, the plan would hardly have that effect. It would be under civilian control, and under constant control and scrutiny of the Congress. There were more than 14 million men and women in service during World War II, many for from two to four years, but none of them are considered "militarized" as a result. Moreover, thousands attend military colleges each year—such as A & M College. But because they get some military training has never caused them to be militarized.

4. On the question of the program leading to a military dictatorship, these facts have been developed. After training, the trainees would go into a ready reserve pool and would thereafter be ordinary civilians, under civilian control. They would not be subject to call into service without the approval of the Congress, and the Congress would determine the number subject to recall.

5. Another question raised is that of the moral environment at the camps where they would be trained. The Commission Report, and the legislation, places great stress on that phase of the program. No liquors could be sold at or near the camps; no bawdy house, brothel, etc. anywhere would be allowed to admit a trainee during his six months of training. If they did they would be subject to a very heavy penalty. There would be twice as many chaplains per thousand men than are now provided for the standing forces. Every possible precaution against evil influences would be provided.

6. Both Thomas Jefferson and George Washington urged a universal training program for all young men as a part of their obligation to defend and preserve the Republic.

Veterans Questions And Their Answers

Q—I plan to get a GI home loan, and I'd like to find out what would happen in case I fail to make my loan payments. I don't expect to default, of course, but I do want to learn all the aspects.

A—Failure to make your loan payments may lead to foreclosure and loss of your home. Also, if the Government is required to pay a claim because of your failure to meet payments, you will become indebted to the Government for the amount of any such claim.

Q—I'm a married veteran, training under the GI Bill, and I've just been rated as 60 percent disabled by VA. Will VA pay me both the extra amount of disability compensation that goes to those with dependents, plus the higher rate of GI subsistence for veterans with families?

A—No. In VA will pay you either one of the extra amounts for veterans with dependents, but not both. You have the right to choose whichever extra payment you wish to receive.

Q—If the next-of-kin of a deceased veteran qualifies for both VA compensation and pension, may that person receive both awards?

A—No. Such a person may elect to receive whichever benefit is most advantageous. The benefit not chosen is placed in suspense, and the suspense may be lifted at any time by the person making another election.

Q—I expect to enter a VA hospital in the near future. Will I have a choice as to which hospital I will go to?

A—Generally, a veteran is assigned to the hospital nearest his home, crowded conditions in certain hospitals, or the type of disability suffered by the veteran might result in his being assigned to a special hospital in another section of the country.

OPS Offers Special Service

Office of Price Stabilization Clinics at which businessmen can obtain information about pricing regulations affecting their businesses is a part of the OPS public service program.

San Antonio district OPS officials stressed this point recently, simultaneously explaining that the clinics are NOT connected with OPS enforcement actions.

"OPS Price Clinics are conducted by OPS price branch personnel and usually in cooperation with local chambers of commerce," district officials said. "Our price specialists' major objective is to render assistance to businessmen in their understanding of their rights and responsibilities under the price stabilization program."

MENTAL

MEANDERINGS

It now appears that despite all predictions for a continued sort of prosperity, there is a recession or whatever else it may be called, going on. There are several ways in which this is determined. For one, the taking off control on the steel output, and permitting a large share of it to be turned over to motor and large appliance manufacturers shows that the government thinks that business really needs this shot in the arm. It seems also to show that the steel industry itself is having more steel on its hands than is needed for defense work. Business activity appears also to be on the wane, and because of high taxes, cautious public buying, and other causes, money is not being available for many items that were formerly being bought in good numbers.

Whatever might have happened before in this matter of cleaning and ferreting out communists in high places and in places of trust and of educating the young, the indignation of the public toward those with red leanings is reaping some rewards. The Supreme Court has held that that teachers with communistic or red leanings may be fired from their teaching staffs. Its getting hard for any red nowdays to make as much moola as they could have made until recently. In fact, we hope it will be a soon day when anyone who has been a red or has shown leanings in that direction will be unable to show himself anywhere in this nation which he seeks to turn over to a foreign master.

Corruption in government is another thing which is rapidly getting the undivided attention of the general public. It has been known, but no one apparently ever thought or took it seriously, that such corrupt practices were in existence, but many took it for granted as part of our political system. When it hurt, and even those who extracted taxes from us were found to be engaged in such corruption, the pot boiled over.

Now they tell us that the cost of living, such as it is, will remain the same for the remainder of the year. At least that is the prediction of a government economic statistician. Well, Well. We were wondering how much higher it was going to get. Being already so well out of reach, and no prospects anywhere for income increases (unless we found some uranium), we were wondering how far in the red we would be by the end of the year.

Looking over some old albums, I ran across a picture of an old-time Stanley Steamer. You know, the old car which was popular way back in 1909, and ran by steam. We never rode in anything like that, but we have often wondered what one had to go through to travel a few miles, to get the car warmed up and ready to go, etc. Especially with no garages, no mechanics, available. We do recall an oldtimer, "The Jackson", about which was written "No hill too steep, no sand too deep", and the famous Olds about which the famous song, "In my Merry Oldsmobile." But, when we come right down to it, we don't even miss old Henry any more. Now with the new road burner any more.

Saw that new system of artificial respiration in use, practice that is. It is called the back pressure, arm-lift method of artificial respiration, and has been recently adopted by the American Red Cross, Public Health Service and U. S. Armed Forces and many other agencies. This method, said to give the lungs twice and much air as the older Schafer method, is called the Neilsen method, after the developer of the system, Holger Neilsen of Denmark. It is not new, having been used in parts of Europe for a number of years, but it has proved such a success that it has been adopted in the U.S.

Huge doses of most of the Vitamins needed daily to persons who had previously strong cravings for drink seemed to cut down that longing for liquor, and made the patients feel better.

Although we were nearly every spring mildly affected by garden projects, we never got much out of it, because we usually planted well to start with and then failed to follow up the advantages thus gained. Another thing, we always liked flowers a good deal and never got around to trying to just plant a few—we never could make up our minds as to what to plant. Cosmos and zinnias and verbenas we liked. Also lily-of-the-valley, galliarda, hollyhocks, bluebells, Queen Anne's lace, and practically everything else, so guess if we get going we will just close our eyes and point and pick. And then plant.

Digging some fishing worms for preparation of a next day saunter into a cool nook for some pole fishing. We found also some husky "cut worms", which should give us an idea as to what we might expect if the weather should start getting moister. Personally, it is too bad we couldn't use these latter for bait. We tried getting the worms out by electric rods, by sticking a pitchfork in the ground and vibrating same, by rying out a "worm" farm, and such, but a seems nature grows hem better and "digging" is the best bet yet.

It has always seems to us that one of the hardest "jobs" there is, is being a bartender. What with handling drunks, etc. But it appears, the legal profession regard them as men of sympathy, forgiving to a fault. It is said that many lawyers, if possible, will accept a bartender on a jury because, being in such a position, he is familiar with human weaknesses and is tolerant to most all faults.

It is said you can buy an eight-cylinder armored sedan for only $10,000 FOB Detroit. Fine to take the week's purchase of groceries home.

A few more Americans, both men and women, have taken up the highly skilled and specialized art of bullfighting, down below the border. This is a dangerous work, and it seems that those who take it up feel an inner need to flirt with danger on the hoof. There is little need for this, it might be pointed out, as we who flirt with danger on wheels and tires on the highways, might qualify for courage as well as he or she who dares to fight the bull.

DAIRY DIARY

SO YOU can't drink milk? Who said so? Why should you deny yourself what is as nearly the perfect food as can be found? Your own well-being, as well as that of your whole family, demands a liberal supply of this all-around food. From infancy to old age, milk in some form or other, is a must for health.

A MAIN STREET FEATURE

Look how that baby of yours thrives on it, and it alone. The older children, too, love it, and it loves them, building strong muscles, nourishing brain and body tissues. It gives them that boundless energy you both deplore and envy. It gives them the essential vitamins A and C, and riboflavin so necessary to growth and health. You'd do well to go in for milk as they do—and match their pep and radiant health.

As a matter of fact, people generally, since the war, are consuming 20 per cent more dairy products than before the war, with a corresponding decline in consumption of the carbohydrates. And we're a far healthier nation for that reason.

MILK VARIATIONS

Most modern farmers no longer separate their own milk, but turn it over to the creamery. That alone has brought many changes in the ways we use milk. In the past, when farmers did their own separating, the skim milk went to the hogs, but nowadays it is made available on the market for human food, liquid, or dry or skim. More of it thus finds its way to your store refrigerators and shelves. In 1950, for instance, the production of nonfat milk solids took 9 billion pounds of skim milk, as against 3½ billion pounds ten years ago.

With the production of butter dropping, last year's spare milk was proportioned something like this: 45½ per cent in fluid milk and cream; 28 per cent into butter; 7 per cent evaporated and condensed milk; 6 per cent for ice cream; and the balance for manufactured products such as dry milk, malted milk powder, and cottage cheese.

DRY MILK BUY

And right there you have it, lady—you can have your milk and eat it, too. Evaporated milk is the fourth largest selling product in your store, or any store all over the country. And why? It's cheaper than the same amount of fluid milk—in a typical year on record, 21 per cent cheaper! It can be stored and kept indefinitely. It is adaptable to an infinite variety of uses. And it not only contains all the essential proteins and vitamins of that bottled milk, but those same things enriched. So evaporated milk is a buy from any angle. To transform dry to liquid, use ¼ cup of powder and one cup of water to make a cup of milk, either shaking or beating to mix.

International Date Line Does Not Circle the Globe

The international date-line does not go all the way around the world. It only goes from the North Pole to the South Pole, following, approximately, the meridian of 180 degrees longitude. Our ordinary time measurement is based on the Sun, and Noon occurs approximately when that body is in the south. However, when it is directly south here it is not yet in that position for a place farther west, so when you have noon, it is only 11:00 a.m. at a point 15 degrees of longitude to the west. Hence, for each 15 degrees you travel westward, you set your watch back an hour. Going completely around the Earth, from east to west, you would have done this 24 times, and would be a whole day behind the people who had stayed home.

Ancient Fire Engine Is Prepared for Centennial

SAN JOSE, Ill. — The village of San Jose will display a fire engine that is as old as the town at its centennial celebration in 1957. It is the oldest fire engine outside a museum and was put in use in Boston. San Jose got it in 1903 and used it until the '20's before retiring the antique. It has four pumping levers and a priming reservoir. It also carries a long hose for quick dipping into cisterns and wells.

RESIDENT A SERIAL STORY NURSE

BY LUCY AGNES HANCOCK

THE STORY SO FAR:

Gay Gaynor, orphan and nurse trainee, and Thad Borden discuss, rather constrainedly, the fatigue and ill-health of Dr. Borden, Thad's father and Gay's friend. Gay dislikes Thad because of past insolence but is fond of Dr. Borden who helped her gain a position on the Bessemer hospital staff. Later Dr. Borden reveals to Gay that the Bethesda orphanage board disapproves of employing a resident nurse. Gay has been preparing herself to nurse ill-children at Bethesda. Dr. Borden pleads with Gay to forgive Thad for the young man's past misdeeds. Gay plans to open a convalescent home for children at her home.

CHAPTER XVI

"He's going to stop in on his rounds this morning. Let's have coffee and a sandwich ready for him, Myra. This is like old times, isn't it?" Gay reached for the bread and cut two generous slices. She remembered the doctor's preference for a thick sandwich—"a man's sandwich," he called it. Well-buttered bread, a slice of cold veal, than a slice of savory stuffing for which Myra was famous, salt and two stalks of crisp celery on the side. The tray was ready when the doctor's car stopped at the curb in front of Number Seventeen Belmont Street. Gay opened the door and greeted him cordially. He followed her into the well-loved room and sat down in the old familiar chair. For a moment he gazed around, his eyes reminiscent of those other visits, then he turned and said, "Now for the big news, Gay. I'll eat and listen at the same time, if I may. It's a busy morning and much as I'd like to, I must not linger. M'm, this is good! You certainly know how to make a sandwich, my dear. Myra!" he called, "your coffee is, as usual, out of this world, as Thad would say. Now begin, Gay."

Gay Considers Home For Convalescents

"Don't eat so fast," the girl warned. "You'll have indigestion. I'm getting restless, Doctor," she went on as the man put down his half-eaten sandwich and reached for his cup. "What do you think of the idea of turning this place into a convalescent home for children, Doctor? I could manage five or six—that is, Myra and I could. Do you think it could be arranged?" The doctor looked at her strangely. "Are you by any chance psychic, Gay?"

"W-why?" the girl asked. "Thad and I were talking of that very thing only this morning," he told her. "Oh, not this place—not your home, my dear. It isn't altogether suitable—too close to your neighbors for one thing and then it isn't large enough or exactly convenient. You would have no privacy—"

"I don't need privacy—from children, Doctor Borden," Gay interrupted. "Just where did you decide was the proper place?" She spoke somewhat stiffly. She had felt such enthusiasm over her plans that she didn't relinquish them easily.

"Why, the Borden place, of course. There's more than five acres of land—a small stand of trees, mostly birch, the apple orchard, a running stream, a big garden, the huge house with its dozen unused rooms, besides the cottage over beyond the orchard that could quite easily be made into a place suitable for me—when I retire." He grinned at her. "Imagine me retiring, Gay. But I could putter around and help amuse the children while you and Thad run the place—with help, of course," he finished hastily, eyeing her warily.

At first Gay's eyes had darkened with something like resentment. They had stolen her plans—had gone ahead and robbed her of her dream. Then as the doctor went on talking she began to feel something of his own enthusiasm.

"But—but you're not thinking of retiring, are you? Oh, you can't. What would your patients do? You're not really ill, are you?" "Not ill, exactly," the doctor told her finishing his sandwich and swallowing the last of the coffee, "but the old ticker isn't what it used to be, my dear. Your old doctor has got to slow up a bit. I'm well past fifty, Gay, and have worked hard all my life. I'm beginning to get a little tired—at times. It's a relief, however, to know that Thad will carry on."

"I—I think they're wonderful, Doctor Borden," she said huskily. "But how could you swing it? Wouldn't it cost a lot to equip a place like yours? I mean—anything as huge as that?"

"Oh, it will cost plenty, of course, but I have ways of raising the money. Some of our civic-minded Bessemerians will no doubt be glad to help. I thought of asking them to take care of certain parts—say, one furnish and equip the nursery in memory of a mother or wife or child. Another might like to furnish a bedroom or two or perhaps a small ward. Someone might enjoy equipping the playground. Oh, we have lots of plans, my dear. But I must run now. We will get together on this. We need your help. Where's Tommy?"

"Weeding Myra's garden, Doctor. It's amazing how that boy gets around."

"Weeding? But—"

"Oh, he uses a weeder one of the neighbors brought over. He's become friends with everyone in the block," she laughed, "and has lived here less than a month."

"He's a great lad," the doctor said and made a dash for the door. "Look at the clock, Frances Gaynor," he cried. "I'm a busy man."

"And you talk of retiring," Gay jeered. "You'll never retire"—as she watched him enter his car and waved her hand in answer to his uplifted arm—"until you die," she finished, the thought sending a shiver of dread through her heart. She wondered if Thad knew of his father's condition. She hadn't seen Thad in more than a week. She hadn't encouraged his friendship.

"Seems to me you ain't none too polite to that boy, Gay," Myra had protested. "Tain't like you to be rude to folks."

She was cool when he called to see Tommy and not too cordial as he ate Myra's cookies and drank her iced ginger ale. In fact, she always found many duties that needed her undivided attention when he came, and Myra would shake her head and mutter to herself as she saw Thad watching the door hungrily for a sight of Gay's return. And just the other day Myra had taken her to task about her treatment of the doctor's son.

Myra Is Enthusiastic About Doctor's Plans

"How you do go on," Myra said unperturbed. "You feed his father, don't you? Always have ever since you come here—years ago. What's the difference? I can't see none—cept Thad's young and like most boys has got a bottomless stomach. Don't that Mis' Potter feed 'em? I'd like to give her a good piece of my mind. Why, that boy eats 'sif he ain't at a square meal in a month of Sundays."

And Gay, making no reply, had walked away. Now as she entered the kitchen with the empty dishes, Myra asked, "What does Doc think of your idea, Gay?"

"Oh, he and that precious son of his have a better one," the girl replied. "They want to turn the old Borden estate into a convalescent home for children—so I guess that knocks my dream into a cocked hat."

"Now that's something like," Myra cried with enthusiasm. "Think of the big yard—the orchard and the little woods and that stream for wading, Gay. Why, it's just the place fer kids to get well and strong in. Do you s'pose they'll let me help—cook fer 'em, Gay? Do you? And are you goin' into it with 'em?"

Gay shook her head. "I don't think so," she said drearily.

Myra stared for a moment then turned to the salad she was concocting. "You prob'ly know what you're a-doin'," she muttered and sighed deeply as Gay left the room.

All the rest of the morning the girl was unaccountably depressed. Perhaps it was due to the squelching of her plans or the doctor's disclosure of his physical condition. She didn't know. But she felt out of sorts, restless and unhappy. A feeling of dread—of foreboding—possessed her and she jumped nervously whenever the telephone shrilled. It was early afternoon that Mrs. Potter phoned to ask if Thad was there. Her voice sounded thick. Gay told her he wasn't. Suddenly the housekeeper was weeping convulsively.

"Can you come at once, Gay?" she asked and Gay, the feeling of dread growing more pronounced, cried, "What is it—what has happened, Mrs. Potter? The doctor?" "Yes. Oh, hurry—hurry and try to find Thad."

Gay called Myra. "Call everyone you can think of, Myra. Find Thad Borden and send him home—at once. His father is ill," she said as she sped down the front walk. She didn't wait to get the car out but hurried—almost ran along the street to the old Borden house. It wasn't far and when she reached it a big, shiny car was parked before the front porch in the place where the doctor's shabby coupe usually stood. She went inside. Mrs. Potter came hurrying toward her. Pointing to the study back of the offices she said shakily. "They're in there. Did you find Thad?"

Gay shook her head and went directly to the closed door, turned the handle and looked inside. Memorial's Chief of Staff stood beside the wide couch on which Doctor Borden, white and very ill, lay. He turned as the door opened and motioned her to enter.

"Glad you came, Gaynor," he said softly. "You've got a job on your hands. I warned him—Now, now, Doctor, don't move—just relax. The best nurse in the city—the world, for that matter—is going to see that you obey orders, old man."

"Hello, Gay!" the sick man murmured weakly, trying hard to smile.

Gay Retains Fear Of Iron Gates

"Dad, Dad!" he whispered. "I'm here. Don't you worry—we'll have you okay before you know it." He patted his father's hand and drew back.

"Better let him stay as he is for an hour or two—maybe three," Doctor Cushing advised. "Then he can be undressed and made comfortable for the night. Have you a bedroom downstairs, Thad? He should not climb stairs—not right away," he qualified as the patient frowned. "When this passes he will undoubtedly be about as usual, but maybe now he'll listen to me and take things easier."

"He will," Thad promised firmly, then went on, "There are a couple of bedrooms in the back—what used to be the servants' quarters," he explained, "but we can put up a bed right here. Why not? I'll attend to it at once." He hadn't noticed Gay, or at least he hadn't spoken to her and the girl hesitated to say anything.

"Can you stay on, Gaynor?" the Chief of Staff asked.

"Of course," Gay answered and heard a sigh from the couch. She turned to meet the look of satisfaction on her patient's face. "I haven't my uniforms, Doctor, but Myra—my housekeeper—will get them to me at once."

During Doctor Borden's convalescence, there were many conferences regarding the plans for the Marcia Borden Convalescent Home for Children.

"That's what it's going to be called, Gay," the doctor said. "I know exactly where the sign will be placed. Crescent-wise—a r c h e d above the wide entrance gates of wrought iron."

Gay shuddered and Thad said quickly, "You don't like that idea?"

"An iron gate takes me back to Bethesda," the girl said. "For years it haunted me day and night—the clanging of that heavy iron gate shutting me in. I hate gates, Doctor Borden."

"But with little children—"

"Oh, I realize it's silly of me," Gay acknowledged "and probably the gate you have in mind would have no least resemblance to the one protecting Bethesda's sacred lawn from the populace."

"So that gate was another of your annoyances—hurdles, if you like," the doctor smiled. "Well, I think, perhaps, you owe something to that iron gate, my dear. Anyway, it didn't deter you from wanting to return to Bethesda as resident nurse, did it?"

"No," the girl answered. "I think I wanted to be convinced—to prove that it had no power to keep me in—that I was free to go and come as I pleased. I wanted, childishly, perhaps, to shake my fist at it—taunt it with the declaration that it couldn't scare me."

"Poor kid!" Thad murmured and Gay flushed with embarrassment. "Of course," she went on hastily, "all that was long ago—before I went into training. Nurses are supposed not to have neuroses—to shrink at nothing—fear nothing—balk at nothing—"

"Rubbish!" Thad said emphatically. "Nurses are human—"

"Are they? There have been times when some of us have wondered," Gay said whimsically. "But go on with your plans, Doctor Borden. There is to be a wrought iron gate or gates. What else?"

"We'll have Forrester, the architect, come out some evening when I'm at leisure, and we'll go into the situation quite thoroughly. He'll be able to give us an idea of the extent and the subsequent expense of reconstructing. When we know just what we're up against, we can go ahead and start raising the money." (TO BE CONCLUDED)

Ira Gallaway Announces For Congressman

Coleman, February, 20—Judge Ira Gallaway, County Judge of Coleman, County, this week announced his candidacy for U. S. Congressman to represent the 21st, Texas Congressional District.

The 29 year public official pledged himself to serve in Washington as a "practical, hard working, positive Congressman" who will "tend to business and get things done for the people of this district".

Judge Gallaway said: "In these critical times we must have vigorous, alert energetic leadership. We cannot follow the leadership of the men who are merely against a few things and say nothing, do nothing, and accomplish nothing 'Can do' Government won't do any longer. It is time now to change."

The widely-known civic leader

JUDGE IRA GALLAWAY

added that "those men who have been in Washington can not escape blame for the condition we are in now with taxes at an all-time high, spending going on unchecked, waste and corruption rampant everywhere, all while our finest young men die in a war which seems to have no end."

"Those who been supposed to represent us have been either grossly negligent or hopelessly ineffective," Judge Gallaway declared. "It is time to charge now, while there is still time to set our country on the Christian course of honesty, integrity and courage."

Judge Gallaway announces that he will undertake a vigorous campaign in all 27 counties of the 21st, congressional district. He promised to "hit hard" on the issues.

In announcing his candidacy, Judge Gallaway pointed to the accomplishments of his administration in Coleman county, emphasizing that during his tenure the county government has been put "in the black."

"We have balanced our budget paid off our debts, cut down on unnecessary expenses, and we are now operating on sound financial basis," Gallaway reported. "What we have done on the county level can be done too, on the national level, if the people's representatives are willing to work hard enough, long enough."

Gallaway was elected County Judge in Coleman County in 1950. In that election he received 9 out of 10 votes cast by voters in his community—the men and women who know him best.

Gallaway was born at Glen Cove. He finished high school at Falpa. In 1941, 8 months before Pearl Harbor, he enlisted in the Air Corps and served five years. He married Sally Baxter of Briena in 1942 and they have three children; Jerry 8, Cindy 5 and Craig, 2.

A busy civic leader in West Texas, Judge Gallaway was selected as one of Texas' "Five Most Outstanding Young Men" in 1951. This award was presented to him in January by Governor Allen Shivers.

Among his many activities, Judge Gallaway is president of his Sunday School Class and a member of the board of stewards of the Methodist church of Coleman. He is past president of the Coleman Junior Chamber of Commerce, member of the executive board and the board of directors of the West Texas Boys' ranch at Tankersley a trustee of the Overall Memorial hospital in Coleman, and he is active in Boy Scout, Red Cross and similar working organizations.

His leadership as a county official has been recognized by his fellow County Judges of West Texas who chose him at the age of 28, to be secretary treasurer of the West Texas association of county judges. This position is a stepping stone to the presidency of the group. He also serves as an executive committeeman to the state county judges and commissioner's association. The cost of "insuring the buying power of the U. S. dollar" by means of the price stabilization operations of OPS came to $1.50 per family in 1951, the Office of Price Stabilization reports.

During the first 12 months of controls, the agency reports, raw material costs went down about 18 percent, and the cost of living was held to an increase, despite inflating food costs, of 2.9 percent.

The eight months before Korea saw raw materials up 47 percent, wholesale prices up close to 15 percent, and the cost of living inflated 8 percent.

CPL Won First Award

Central Power and Light Company won first place in the 1951 motor vehicle accident contest sponsored by the bureau of safety, Inc., of Chicago, it was announced by J. L. Bates, CPL vice president and general manager.

A bronze plaque signifying the award was presented to Bates by Paul Windsor, safety director of the bureau of safety in ceremonies at the Nueces Hotel in Corpus Christi March 14. CIL executives, district managers and department heads attended the presentation dinner.

Central Power Light and Co. had the fewest motor vehicle accidents per 100,000 miles of any of the ten competing utility companies. CPL vehicles were driven 5,027,629 miles in 1951 and were involved in 70 accidents. The average was 87 accidents per 100,000 miles of operation. The average for all companies entered in the contest was 1.12 accidents per 100,000 miles.

The national average for public utility fleets in 1951, according to the national safety council was 2.46 accidents per 100,000 miles. Had this rate prevailed for Central Power and Light Company, the bureau safety pointed out, the company's vehicles would have involved in 197 accidents.

Careful courteous driving has been strongly emphasized in our safety program. Bates commented: "For that reason we are particularly proud of this award, which shows how well our employees are doing their part to hold down the accident rate on our streets and highways."

Judge Roger Thurmond has called the grand jury to meet Monday April 7 in Brackettville. We will publish the names of those selected in our next issue.

May Re-Enlist Marine Corps

The Marine Corps today modified its rules to permit enlisted regulars and reserves who have separated themselves from the Corps to reenlist within one year of their separation without loss of rank.

Marine Corps headquarters believes this action will induce more combat-experienced men to reenlist. Previously, separation resulted in loss of rank.

Reading a detective magazine the other night, having run out of the better reading material, we went over several "cases" as reported, and then we got to wondering how low could anyone get. For instance, a woman stole some several thousands of dollars from her blind veteran husband and also his car and left him. Of a man who stole an eye-seeing dog and "pawned" it.

Of one who robbed the poor boxes, so he could take his girl to night spots???

Why AC Electric Iron
Not Used with DC

Q: I have an electric iron marked "For AC only." Why won't such an iron heat up just as well on direct current?

A: The iron would heat up on DC, but the thermostat which regulates its temperature would not work properly. The thermostat includes a pair of contacts which open when the desired temperature is reached and close, to turn the current on again, as more heat is needed. With alternating current, these contacts do not open more than about one five-hundredth of an inch. On direct current, however, the current would arc across the contacts. Unless they were opened at least 3/8ths of an inch, the arcing would not be shut off. With AC the direction of the current alternates 60 times a second, so it is actually at zero 120 times each second.

DOAN'S PILLS

Give Fish Dinners Tantalizing Taste With Zesty Seasoning

IF FISH DINNERS in your house are not received with wholehearted good spirit and eaten with relish, check on your fish cookery. Improvement is simple, the rewards are great.

Fish served frequently can ease the budget and add zest to an otherwise humdrum string of menus. In addition to these reasons, homemakers appreciate the fact that fish is tender and requires but short cooking time. Meal preparation time can be cut considerably when fish appears frequently on the table.

Many fish varieties are available because they come fresh, canned and fresh-frozen. When you investigate the cookery methods as well as the many seasonings that can enhance their flavors, you enter a fascinating realm of cookery.

You've stuffed chops and roasts. Have you ever thought of stuffing a fish? Here's an excellent way to prepare fish with stuffing that's quick to make and wonderfully popular:

Baked Stuffed Fish (Serves 6)
Select a fish weighing 3 to 4 pounds. Clean and rub salt inside and out. Fill cavity 2/3 full with mushroom stuffing. Lace fish with string to hold stuffing in place and to hold fish together. Brush fish with melted butter or substitute and place upright in a greased baking pan. Place paper brushed with butter over fish. Pour 1/2 to 3/4 cup water or fish stock into pan. Bake in a moderate (350°F.) oven for 40 to 60 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Baste frequently with drippings in pan. Remove string and serve immediately on a hot platter with liquid from pan, thickened with a mixture of 1 tablespoon butter and 1 teaspoon flour.

Mushroom Stuffing
3 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon onion, chopped
1/2 cup chopped mushrooms
2 cups fresh bread crumbs
1/2 cup cream
2 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
Salt and pepper

Melt butter in saucepan. Add onion and saute until onion is golden. Add chopped mushrooms and cook until water from mushrooms cooks away. Add bread crumbs, cream, eggs and parsley. Stir until well mixed. Cook over low heat until mixture is thickened. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Broiling is an excellent method for cooking fish because it's so tender. Here are two ways to try:

Broiled Mackerel, Onion Slices (Serves 4)
4 1-pound mackerel or other small fish
3 onions, sliced
2 tablespoons butter

Small, whole fish like this mackerel, can be treated by cutting slits in the fish and inserting onion slices. The broiling method prepares the fish quickly and gives interesting variety to fish dinners.

LYNN SAYS: Try Something Different For Flavorful Surprises

Corn meal sticks help out a meal in the doldrums, but they'll be a surprise too if you add some steamed raisins to the batter. Don't skip onions as a vegetable if you seek variety. Nothing goes more nicely with a steak or roast than you can try parboiling them, then baking with cream sauce and mushrooms; or, simply bake with diluted canned mushroom soup if you're in a hurry.

Fish fillets cooked and flaked go into this ring mold to give an easily prepared main dish which the family will appreciate. Cooked vegetables, like the carrots used here, can be served in the center of the ring.

LYNN CHAMBERS' MENU
*Baked Stuffed Fish

Baked Potatoes Crusty Rolls
Cabbage, Apple and Nut Slaw
Lemon Tarts Beverage
*Recipe Given

Rub inside of fish with salt. Make several slits on each side of the fish. Slip a slice of onion and a dot of butter in each slit on the top side, pushing the slice of onion well into the slit.

Place fish under broiler, about 6 inches from the source of heat. Broil for 3 minutes, turn fish and insert onions and dots of butter on the other side. Broil 6 minutes longer, or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork.

Broiled Fish Steaks

Either fresh or frozen steaks may be used for this. With frozen steaks, let fish thaw on refrigerator shelf or at room temperature, just long enough to separate the steaks. Dip steaks in flour, season both sides with salt and pepper and brush both sides with salad oil. Place on a pre-heated, greased broiler pan about two or 3 inches from heat. Broil 5 to 8 minutes, turn carefully and broil 5 to 8 minutes longer or until fish flakes easily when tested with fork. If fish is very frozen, a slightly longer time for broiling may be required. Remove steaks to hot platter and serve with the following:

Mustard Sauce
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup hot milk
1 slice onion
Salt and pepper
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
Few drops lemon juice

Melt butter, add flour and cook until it turns golden. Add milk, onion, salt and pepper and cook, stirring constantly until mixture thickens, then continue cooking until reduced to about two-thirds of the original quantity. Add mustard and lemon juice. Strain sauce or just remove onion, and serve.

An easy way to serve fish that may be different to you, is by baking a nicely seasoned fish mixture in a ring mold:

Flaked Fish Ring (Serves 6)
2 pounds cooked fish fillets
2 eggs
1/2 cup tomato juice
1 1/2 cups soft bread crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/4 cup parsley, minced
2 tablespoons chopped celery

Flake fish. Mix in remaining ingredients. Place mixture in buttered ring mold and bake in a hot (400°F.) oven for 30 minutes. Run a knife around the edges and turn out on platter. Fill center with sliced, cooked carrots. Garnish with chichory or other greens.

Broiled Whole Fish

Use any small fish such as trout, croakers, butterfish, porgies or smelt. Have fish drawn and heads and tails removed, if desired. Season with salt and pepper, then brush with butter or oil. Broil, 3 inches from heat about 8 to 10 minutes. (If fish are boned, broil 5 to 8 minutes.) Remove to hot platter and spread with a mixture of 3 tablespoons sweet butter creamed with 1 teaspoon anchovy paste.

Soak a few herbs in milk and then add to your meat ball mixture. This puts real, old-fashioned goodness in them.

Slices of bread with the meal can get monotonous. Now, how would you like some thick slices of crusty Vienna bread heated slightly in the oven just before serving? Takes but a few minutes!

Baked pears are fine for dessert, but try dusting them with sugar and spice before the baking. Team with coconut macaroons for a simple dessert.

About Light Tackle

This is the report we promised some weeks ago here to pass on to all angler-readers who are interested in light bait-casting tackle. We have refrained from discussing the subject until we could give it a fair trial. We have given it that trial and are now ready to pass along our findings. Here they are:

Will Take More Bass

Over the long haul, this type gear will take more bass—and for these reasons:

1. The smaller lures practical with this gear strike the water with less disturbance and thus will not frighten away prospective strikes.

2. The little lures more closely simulate the fish life on which bass feed and foraging fish are more likely to strike them without too much examination and thus give the angler a greater percentage of "fish-on" experiences.

3. The light line and the compact lures make for easier coverage of wider, further waters and give the angler just that much more opportunity to get at distant bass. Too, the new, spinning-type lures which have gained most popularity resemble in great degree many fly-rod lures and thus afford the angler an almost double-weapon: fly rod lure and distance-casting impossible except with light-tackle casting, or spinning, gear.

Here Are The Facts

Anglers interested in light-tackle gear should know these facts: You don't have to be rich to get a light-tackle casting rod that will really handle light lures. The Phillipsen people, at Denver, are producing the lightest and we think the best, bamboo "light-tackle" casting rod obtainable. This rod, weighing only 3 and 3/4 ounces is in the fly-rod field in weight and one can almost cast a fly with it. Yet, it has the backbone and the guarantee to do the job the plug-caster demands of it. This rod will actually handle small fly-rod lures, which we proved to our own satisfaction, if used with one of the light, tournament-type casting reels, and a 4 to 6-pound test line. In the matter of line, silk is undoubtedly the best. Of course, it is more expensive because it won't wear as long, but the ease of casting it and the added distance it gives, makes up for that disadvantage. The rod we mention comes in lengths from 5 to 6 feet, is in two sections and the price is in the range of any angler who is really desirous of owning the right gear for the right job.

Need Level Winder

As for the reel recommended, we don't mean that you have to get a real tournament reel without the level-wind attachment. Unless you are really an old-timer and grew up without a level-wind reel, you'd have the devil of a time laying the line levelly enough on the spool without a level-winder. Instead, the light-weight, narrow spool reels, will all do the job if you have one of the long rods light enough successfully to handle the light lures you will want to use.

The two most poisonous snakes in the world are said to be the tiger snake of Australia and the island viper which is found on a small island off the coast of Brazil.

Wolf's Last Stand

The wolf has left an impressive record with mankind. He has come to symbolize courage, sagacity, power, ferocity, and ruthlessness. He is pictured as a demon, a villain, a scourge—or as a benefactor, a ruler, and a hero. Many knights of olden days and even rulers of men added his name to their own as a symbol of strength and power. The stories about the Anglo-Saxon hero Beowulf (the War Wolf), and the Timber Wolf Division of the present American Army attest to the respect mankind has for this wild dog's fighting ability.

Today, the wolf is making a last stand in the United States. He formerly ranged over most of the country and posed quite a problem for the early settlers. The battle between men and wolves is marked with stories of famous wolves that evaded capture and raided cattle herds for many years. The fight was a losing one for the wolf, and as formidable as wolves often appeared, only a few remain today.

In a sense, those states which still contain a few wolves are fortunate in that the presence of a wild wolf testifies that some unspoiled wilderness does remain.

River Bass

When fishing a river do not be deceived in thinking that the small-mouthed black bass is in the center of the pools. He is more generally found in the bubbly, foaming waters at the edges of the pool or eddy. Only suckers and chubs are found in the middle of the pool on most occasions. Neither do the river bass lay close to the surface as many believe. The fish are invariably at or near the bottom, darting up to take the bait.

Why Does the Mantis Pray Is Old Question

Why does the "praying" mantid "pray"?

The prayerlike pose of this near relative of the cockroach is its normal position both for seizing prey and for defending itself. For their size, mantids are among the most predatory animals in existence, and they are also among the least known of the insects, according to Dr. Ashley B. Gurney, entomologist of the U. S. department of agriculture. There are more than 1,500 species of mantids in the world, mostly tropical, he says. Only 19 are known in the United States, which is the northern fringe of the habitat of these strange little creatures.

One of the most notable features of mantids is their front legs, which bear sharp spines and fold in a remarkable hinged manner enabling the mantid to reach forward, seize a fly or some other insect, and bring it to its mouth. This is the true explanation for the seeming attitude of prayer. Mantids feed entirely on other animals, chiefly insects caught alive. Instances of small birds, lizards, or mice being eaten—after being enticed into the "arms raised in prayer"—have been reported, but some of these probably represent mistaken observation. There is no question, however, that a mature individual of many mantid species can handle any caterpillar, grasshopper, cockroach, or other large insect that comes within its range. Their appetites are enormous. An adult mantis has been known to eat ten cockroaches in less than three hours. Bees and wasps usually have no terrors for the insect, though occasionally a mantid is stung while trying to catch a wasp, and gives evidence of the injury.

Allies in Accord on United Army; Drug May Wipe Out Tuberculosis

EUROPEAN ARMY—The members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization have reached agreement on four important points for the defense of Western Europe and the strengthening of the united army which may mean the salvation of the democratic form of government. Each of the points will involve great sacrifice on the part of every government, by soldiers, and by the taxpayers of the participating nations.

Most important, perhaps, was the agreement to provide about 50 combat-ready land divisions and 4,000 operations aircraft for European defense this year in addition to forces Greece and Turkey can make available.

Second, and possibly the most controversial, to approve the general outlines of a plan partially drafted by France, West Germany, Italy, and the Benelux nations to merge their armies into a European defense force. Under this plan the Allies of World War II propose to rearm Western Germany. The arming of West Germany, however, must be approved by the governing bodies of the countries involved in the treaty. Whether the French will ratify the proposal is still in doubt. If turned down by the French National Assembly it could mean the collapse of the unified army.

Third, the N.A.T.O. nations agreed to create a board to make a detailed study of the western world's needs for airfields, barracks, communications lines, and other army-supporting facilities, and recommend how to share the cost of building them.

And fourth, to streamline the N.A.T.O. itself and make it more efficient, on a pattern roughly like that of the United Nations secretariat, instead of the present overlapping boards and committees.

The plan for a 50-division army this year means that 20 more divisions will have to be recruited and armed in the next 10 months. One authority interpreted the plan in these words: "Right now the Reds could walk to France's westernmost Atlantic shore, but by the end of this year they would have to fight their way. By the end of 1954 we would be able to throw them back."

This picture of the big three foreign ministers and West Germany's Konrad Adenauer was made at conclusion of talks at which agreement was reached on outstanding issues for a united European army. Left to right: Dr. Konrad Adenauer of West Germany; Secretary of State Dean Acheson; Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary; and M. Robert Schumann, French foreign minister.

TAXES—The Public Affairs Institute, which describes itself as a nonpolitical organization, has issued a study of U.S. tax laws which points out six loopholes that are costing the Federal government $4,500,000,000 a year and benefits almost entirely those with annual incomes of more than $10,000.

They are outlined as: (1) Percentage depletion—$750,000,000; (2) Income splitting—$2,500,000,000; (3) Failure to include a provision for withholding of taxes on dividend and corporate-bond interest payments—$30,000,000; (4) Failure to increase estate and gift tax rate sharply and tighten up on this levy—$400,000,000; (5) Failure to increase the capital gains tax rate sharply and tighten up on this levy—$400,000,000; (6) Approval of a broadened family partnership provision in the 1951 law—$100,000,000.

More will be heard about this study in the next few weeks as congress gets into full debate over the proposed new tax bill.

RUSSIAN A-BOMBS—On the 34th anniversary of the Soviet army, Russian military leaders and newspapers warned the western world that Russia possessed "atom bombs of all calibers" and said that any aggressor would be met with "crushing, deadly blows." In addition, the same sources charged that "Anglo-American imperialists" are planning to unleash a third World War.

Most observers agreed that the speeches and articles were the usual line of Soviet propaganda that is necessary on an important occasion. But it was noted that the claim clearly implied that Russia has in her arsenal tactical atomic weapons to match those recently developed and tested in the United States.

COST OF LIVING—The Bureau of Labor Statistics reports the cost of living stood still in its latest 30 day survey as measured by the government's new consumers' new index.

Food prices rose about a tenth of a per cent, but clothing and house furnishings were down a little.

The new index stood at 189.1 per cent of the 1935-39 average in mid-January. This was 4.2 per cent above a year earlier and 11.1 per cent above the pre-Korean average. Wholesale prices were reported 5 per cent below a year ago.

ATOMIC SPY TEAM—Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, convicted last spring of stealing atomic secrets for Russia and sentenced to die for treason, heard their sentences upheld by a Federal Appeals Court. Three appeal judges said in their decision: "It cannot be held that these sentences are unconstitutional." Only the United States Supreme Court can now save the Rosenbergs from the electric chair.

The Rosenbergs are the first Americans ever sentenced to death for treason outside a military court. At the time of their conviction, Judge Irving R. Kaufman called Rosenberg worse than a murderer. In his opinion, Judge Kaufman said, the Rosenbergs' treason led to the war in Korea, with its tens of thousands of American casualties.

TUBERCULOSIS—Dreaded Tuberculosis, once the great scourge of mankind, may within a few years be completely wiped out. This hope is centered on a new wonder drug which was used in recent months in treatment of nearly 200 persons in the advanced stages of the disease at Sea View hospital in Staten Island.

Slightly smaller than aspirin (see picture), it is expected to be on the market by summer under various trade names. The pills will cost a TB patient a fantastically low 25 to 50 cents a day.

In the tests at Sea View hospital doctors were amazed at results obtained by the drug. Within a few weeks, high temperatures went down to normal, lung cavities began to heal, patients recovered energy and appetite. Science, at last, may have found the answer in the battle against tuberculosis.

MEAT PRODUCTION

Nation's Packers Store Meat Surplus

The U.S. Department of Agriculture reports the nation's meat production continues to grow faster than the consumer can take it off the markets. Production in late February was estimated at 22 per cent higher than at the same time a year ago.

Heavy marketing of lambs, sheep and hogs is reported in many marketing centers. During one week in late February 1,464,000 hogs were slaughtered by packers, compared with only 1,044,000 during the same week a year before. There has been a sharp slaughter increase also in sheep and lambs with storage at a record high.

Beef stocks in storage were up 17,000,000 pounds in January of this year, compared with the previous month.

How a Town Attracted a New Industry And Improved Itself as a Community

Here's a word of cheer from the people of Chenoa, Illinois, to their counterparts in other small towns who wistfully chant the fascinating refrain: "I wonder if we couldn't get some kind of small factory or new industry to establish here."

The good word answering that refrain in this case is "yes." The achievement is possible when cooperative planning and hard work are brought to bear on the problem, and when a suitable business or industry happens to be looking for a place in your general area where it can locate.

It's a two-part formula, and there is no hedging on either ingredient. There must be a nucleus of energetic citizens to make the new industry idea boom, and the prospective industry must be a logical, realistic target for all the practical and hard-headed arguments you can marshal to persuade it to locate in your town.

Chenoa, population 1,500, was able to combine the two elements of the formula to get its new industry—Seibert and Sons, Inc., manufacturers of a multiple spindle drill, who expect to open a plant there in the near future. Current planning calls for the employment of more than 100 men in the enterprise, most of whom will be recruited locally and trained on the spot.

The company had been searching for a small town location for some time, and in the course of its investigation had made inquiries in Chenoa. The immediate result was a profitable head-on collision with a Rotary club committee of local businessmen who, in the meantime, had been trying to unearh just such a deal.

One of Chenoa's persuasive arguments for attracting new industry was supposed to be a likely looking area just north of town, convenient to the railroad tracks. As it turned out, however, the company wanted no part of the tracks. Its operation was concerned mainly with precision tools, and was too delicate to stand vibrations that might be caused by passing trains.

By this time, though, local businessmen were sufficiently interested in the proposal to obtain another location at the eastern edge of Chenoa. A tract of five acres was purchased by a group of 61 businessmen and offered to the company. It was accepted, and Chenoa's show was on the road.

The five-acre parcel of land was part of a 33-acre area which since has been annexed by the community. Water, sewers, and lights have been carried out, and the city is now laying out streets. The addition was subdivided into building lots and a number of houses since have been brought under construction.

Thus, Chenoa obtained a new addition to its own community body, as well as a new industry. The factory building is just about completed and is expected to be in full production within two months.

The new factory and addition have stimulated enthusiasm for boosting the town in other ways. A committee for community progress has been formed, taking as its first major project a concerted effort to expand and improve the town's present recreation facilities.

Although the committee has no further plans for the time being, one of the members has said that the group feels the best way to get started on a long-range program of community development is to take one major problem and start solving it.

With that attitude, Chenoa has passed a milestone in community progress. The attack upon and solution of one major problem inevitably will lead to more problems and thus to more solutions. It is the old challenge-and-response concept, which makes towns, as well as individuals, move ahead.

Chenoa started out trying to attract a new industry. Very probably the people of the town will wake up some morning in the future and discover that somewhere along the line they also have built themselves a better community.

Pork Chop Vegetable Casserole With Rice

This is it! Those words will escape the lips to describe the goodness of this casserole if the eater finds a chance to talk. His next utterance will be, "I'll have a second helping, please!"

Only a salad, perhaps a bread, and a dessert are necessary to complete the meal when this "baked dinner" is served.

Leave it in the oven until all are seated at the table. Then bring in the baking dish and place it before the man of the house. Treat the family to the sight of seeing the liquid goodness bubbling around the sides and spilling over the tender rice, the green peas, and the pork chops.

INGREDIENTS
 6 or 8 pork chops
 1 cup chopped onion
 1 cup chopped green pepper
 1 10-oz. can—
 cream of mushroom soup
 1 cup water
 2 cups cooked rice
 2 cups cooked peas
 1 teaspoon salt
 1/2 teaspoon pepper

PREPARING THE FLUFFY WHITE RICE: To make 3 liberal cups of fluffy rice: put 1 cup of uncooked rice, 2 cups of cold water and 1 teaspoon of salt in a two-quart saucepan and cover with a tight-fitting lid. Bring to a vigorous boil and then turn the heat as low as possible—leave over this low heat for 14 minutes. Turn off the heat. This cooking time results in firm grains of cooked rice. (For extra tender grains, allow the rice to steam (with heat off) for an additional 5 minutes before removing lid).

Never remove the lid nor stir rice while it is cooking. After rice is cooked, remove lid, lift rice gently with fork to allow rice to steam dry to the desired consistency. It is then ready—perfectly cooked and the grains will be separate and fluffy. This method allows all the water to be absorbed and the full nutritional value of the rice to be retained.

METHOD: Place pork chops in a skillet and brown on both sides. Enough fat should cook out of the pork chops so that it is not necessary to add any to the skillet. Lift chops out of skillet. Place the onion and the green pepper in the skillet and cook until tender. It may be necessary to add a small amount of fat to prevent onions and peppers from sticking. Add mushroom soup, water, rice, peas, salt, and pepper. Mix well. Pour half the rice and pea mixture into a greased baking dish. Arrange half the chops over the rice and peas. Add the rest of the rice and peas. Top with the remaining chops and bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) about 30 minutes.

This recipe will make six or eight servings depending upon the number of pork chops used.

Veterans Questions And Their Answers

Q—I drive 30 miles into the city every day to go to work. Twice a week, before work, I stop in at a VA clinic for outpatient treatment for my service-connected disability. Could VA pay for my transportation on these days that I take my treatment?

A—No. The only time VA could authorize transportation would be if the travel were performed primarily for the purpose of getting treatment, at VA's request. Travel pay could not be granted in your case, since your job takes you to the city every day, as it is.

Q—I am a disabled Korean veteran, soon to be discharged from service. Must I wait until after VA finds my disability to be service-connected, before I may apply for the special GI life insurance for disabled veterans?

A—You need not wait until VA rules on service-connection. Instead, you may apply as soon as you are separated from service, and thus set the machinery in motion for a ruling on whether your disability is service-connected.

Q—I was disabled a couple of months ago, while training in an Army camp in the United States. Would I be eligible for vocational training since I was disabled during the Korean hostilities, even though I didn't get my disability in the Korean fighting?

A—Yes, you may be eligible if you meet all the other requirements of the law—such as a compensable service-connected disability, a need for training to overcome your handicap, and an other-than-dishonorable discharge. The disability may have occurred anywhere in the world.

Reading around and about—bad habit to get into, as one might read something worthwhile and useful—ran across an old-timer, a small poem about the two "chances". Remember. If you get around germs, you either get the germs or not; If you get the germs you either get sick or not, and so on down to the final two chances. Somehow it didn't seem as humorous now as it did then, but the truth in it was mighty apparent.
