Dare to Live Without Limits

By Bryan Golden

Expanding Your Horizons

There are people who have lived in the same city, in the same apartment, for all of their adult lives. Some have never ventured beyond the city limits where they reside. Then there are those who stop learning once they leave school. They believe graduation marks the end of the educational process.

All of these people have one thing in common, they go through life without ever experiencing anything new. Each year is repeated over and over. They effectively put up boundaries beyond which they never venture. The world as they know it exists within their self imposed confines.

There is much more to be experienced in life than there is time for. It's a shame to limit your horizons to what you are used to or to your comfort level. Expanding your horizons is essential in order to enjoy all that life has to offer.

How do you do it? Your boundaries have formed over your lifetime. All of your experiences and beliefs have gone into the foundation of these borders. Yet anyone who is determined can expand their horizons.

Are you aware of your current horizons? Usually people are not even cognizant of how limited they have become. They are so accustomed to their routines that they lose sight of the vast world which lies beyond. What things have you never done that you really want to experience? Most people know of at least several items to put on such a list. Give it some thought and you will likely be surprised by how long a roster you can create.

In order to expand your horizons, you have to try some new things. It's common to feel uneasy about doing this since it entails leaving your known universe. As an intelligent, thinking person, there is no reason you have to be constrained by old habits.

Expanding your horizons really isn't hard. Fear of taking that all important first step is what holds many people back. It's easier if your first step is a small one with little or no risk. Look to do something that has minimal consequences but is still something new.

Here are some ideas to get you started. Use them to get your own thoughts flowing. Eat at a new restaurant. See a movie you wouldn't normally consider. Watch a different TV show or go to a sporting event you've never seen.

Take a different route to work or back home. Visit someplace you have never been. You don't have to go far to do this as there are probably many locations for you to discover close to where you live. You can read a book about a topic you know nothing about. Perhaps you might take a class on a subject that interests you.

Your objective is to get practice expanding your horizons. Don't make it a one time event. Once you start, don't stop. Your confidence will grow as you accumulate new experiences. Then you will be prepared to take bigger, bolder, more significant steps.

Here are just some of the accomplishments by others who have expanded their horizons. People have changed jobs, changed careers, gone back to school to get a degree, gone back to school to get a different degree, started their own business, moved to their ideal location, met their special significant other, lost weight, and got into better physical condition.

Expanding your horizons is

Portion Control 101

USDA statistics show that because of increased portion sizes, the average American's total daily calorie intake has risen from 1854 calories per day to 2002 calories per day over the past 20 years. This 148 calorie increase per day works out to about an extra 15 pounds of body weight per year. Plate size in restaurants has increased from "dinner size plates" and in some cases to a "serving platter" size.

Today it is hard to find cafés or restaurants that serve a meal based on standard serving sizes and not portion sizes. Now we look for "all you can eat food bars" "complete buffets" and "super size, king size, extra size" restaurants and fast food establishments. Some portions in this "super size" category often provide enough food to serve two or more people. A portion is how much food you choose to eat whether it is in your own home, from a package or in restaurant. A serving is a standard amount of food set by the U.S. Government and is the recommended amount of food you should eat from each food group.

The foods below are just for comparison and DO NOT represent a balanced day's meals!

Twenty years ago breakfast may have been: a 1.5 oz blueberry muffin and an 8oz. cup of coffee with whole milk and sugar. This meal contained 255 calories. Today's breakfast could very well consist of a 5oz. blueberry muffin and a 16oz. cup of a mocha or latte' style coffee. Total calories: 850.

Now for lunch! In 1985 a small cheeseburger had about 333 calories, 2.4oz of French fries-210 calories, and a 7 oz soda-85 calories this gave you a 628 calorie lunch. In today's fast food world a cheeseburger could now contain 590 calories, a large order of fries at 6.9ozs-610 calories and a 20oz. soda-250 calories. Total this lunch up for 1450 calories.

Suppose you want to see an afternoon movie? Twenty years ago you bought a bag or box of popcorn containing about 5 cups of popcorn at 270 calories and a 7oz. soda with 85 calories. Your snack cost you 355 calories. Today if you bought a tub of popcorn and a 20oz. soda your snack could add up to 880 calories.

Supper has arrived and you decide on a chicken Caesar salad. In 1985 this salad contained about 390 calories. This salad of today is offered in a portion size containing 700 calories. The 1985 total calorie intake for the day was 1628 calories while the 2005 total calorie intake for the day was 3880 calories! This calorie intake is 1080 calories above the very highest daily calorie level that is recommended only for teenage boys and VERY active men.

Most women and older adults need about 1600-1800 calories per day. Children, teenage girls, active women and most men need between 1800-2200 calories per day. If you are inactive stay within the 1800-1900 calorie range and if you are pretty active aim for 1900-2000 calories a day and remember only if you are VERY, VERY active should you consume between 2000-2200 calories per day. Remember the key to weight loss and management is not the types of food you eat but the amount of food you choose to eat.

Updated Property Tax Information Now Available for Texas Taxpayers

(Gail)—New and updated property tax information has just been compiled by Borden County Appraisal District and is available now to assist taxpayers. This property tax information is current and covers a wide range of topics, such as taxpayer remedies, exemptions and appraisals, and is of value to select groups, such as disabled veterans and persons who are age 65 or older.

"Whether you are a homeowner, business owner, disabled veteran or a taxpayer, it's important you know your rights concerning the property tax laws," said Tracy Cooley, Assistant Chief Appraiser of the Borden County Appraisal District. "You can contact us about any property tax issues with full confidence that we will provide you the most complete, accurate and up-to-date available information to assist you."

This includes information about the following programs:

• Property Tax Exemptions for Disabled Veterans – The law provides partial exemptions for any property owned by veterans who are disabled, spouses and survivors of deceased disabled veterans. This includes homesteads donated to disabled veterans by charitable organizations at no cost to the disabled veterans. The amount of exemption is determined according to percentage of service-connected disability. The law also provides a 100 percent exemption for 100 percent disabled veterans and their surviving spouse, beginning in 2009, and for surviving spouses of U.S. armed service members killed in action.

• Property Tax Exemptions – Non-profit organizations that meet statutory requirements may seek property tax exemptions and must apply to their county appraisal district by a specific date. Businesses that receive tax abatements granted by taxing units; ship inventory out of Texas that may be eligible for the "Freeport" exemption; store certain goods in transit in warehouses that are moved within 175 days; construct, install or acquire pollution control; own and operate energy storage systems; or store offshore drilling equipment while not in use may also be eligible for statutory exemptions.

• Rendering Taxable Property – If a business owns tangible personal property that is used to produce income, the business must file a rendition with its local county appraisal district by a specified date. Personal property includes inventory and equipment used by a business. Owners do not have to render exempt property such as church property or an agriculture producer's equipment used for farming.

• Appraisal Notices – If a taxpayer's property value increased in the last year, the Texas taxpayer will receive a notice of appraised value from the appropriate local county appraisal district. The city, county, school districts and other local taxing units will use the appraisal district's value to set property taxes for the coming year.

• Property Taxpayer Remedies – This comptroller publication explains in detail how to protest a property appraisal, what issues the county appraisal review board (ARB) can consider and what to expect during a protest hearing. The publication also discusses the option of taking a taxpayer's case to district court, the State Office of Administrative Hearings or binding arbitration if the taxpayer is dissatisfied with the outcome of the ARB hearing.

• Homestead Exemptions – A homestead is generally defined as the home and land used as the owner's principal residence on Jan. 1 of the tax year. A homestead exemption reduces the appraised value of the home, and as a result, lowers property taxes. Applications are submitted to the appropriate local county appraisal district.

• Productivity Appraisal – Property owners who use land for timber land production, agricultural purposes or wildlife management can be granted property tax relief on their land. They may apply to their local county appraisal district for an agricultural appraisal which may result in a lower appraisal of the land based on how much the taxpayer produces, versus what the land would sell for in the open market.

• Residence Homestead Tax Deferral – Texas homeowners may postpone paying the currently delinquent property taxes due on the appreciating value of their homes by filing a tax deferral affidavit at their local county appraisal district. This tax relief allows homeowners to pay the property taxes on 105% of the preceding year's appraised value of their homestead, plus the taxes on any new improvements to the homestead. The remaining taxes are postponed but not cancelled, with interest accruing at 8% per year.

• Property Tax Deferral for Persons Age 65 or Older or Disabled Homeowners – Texans who are age 65 or older or disabled, as defined by law, may postpone paying current and delinquent property taxes on their homes by signing a tax deferral affidavit. Once the affidavit is on file, taxes are deferred, but not cancelled, as long as the owner continues to own and live in the home. Interest continues to accrue on unpaid taxes. You may obtain a deferral affidavit at the appraisal district.

• Notice of Availability of Electronic Communication – In appraisal districts located in counties with more than 200,000 populations or that have authorized electronic communications, and that have implemented a system that allows such communications, chief appraisers and ARBs may communicate electronically through email or other media with property owners or their designated representatives. Written agreements are required for notices and other documents to be delivered electronically in place of mailing.

• Protesting Property Appraisal Values – Property owners who disagree with the appraisal district's appraisal of their property for local taxes or for any other action that adversely affects them may protest their property value to the appraisal district's ARB.
