FAVORS PRIMARY VOTE.

Congressman Smith in Statement Commends Recent Suggestion by United States Senator Culberson.

In an interview with a newspaper correspondent Judge Smith said: "I want to second the suggestion of Senator Culberson that the people of Texas be given an opportunity next year to express in a primary election their choice for the President and for delegates to the national convention.

"As the Senator points out, there is ample authority for such a primary and the importance of it is suggested by the necessity which is becoming more apparent day by day for the people to exercise more immediate control over their political affairs.

"The beneficiaries of special privileges are skilled in the political game, and are ever alert in their efforts to control the selection of officers they believe will do their bidding. The people should be as diligent and watchful of their own interests.

"Therefore the democrats of Texas should not leave so important a matter as the selection of a candidate for the presidency to any haphazard method. They should insist upon having an opportunity to express their choice directly, so that no choice shall be left for the schemers and manipulations of the agents and hirelings of the special interests."

Visiting Towns in Sixteenth Congressional District—Hopes to Have Federal Building Enlarged.

Congressman W. R. Smith, of Colorado City, is en route home from a visit to San Angelo, Ballinger and other points in his district, and will be in the city until evening.

"I am not making a campaign trip," Mr. Smith said, "but merely looking over the district. I spent a portion of the morning with your postmaster, Mr. Rollins, discussing some planned enlargements in the postoffice building. I will take his matter up when Congress convenes in December. Mr. Rollins tells me that the building is inadequate in size, both for the holding of court and the conducting the business of his department.—Abilene Reporter.

The Circus.

(By a Visitor.)
Saturday was circus day, and everybody, young, old and middle-aged, was in town. The sidewalks and streets were filled with a good-natured, jostling crowd, who bought canes, balloons and whips, had their pictures made, drank soda water, ate ice cream and apples and rode on the merry-go-round while they waited for the parade to start.

Our own merry-go-round was in full swing and every body gathered early and stayed late enjoying the dizzy rides.
The Baptist ladies, believing it was a good time to combine business with pleasure, served lunch at the Colorado Mercantile Company's store. Their sandwiches, pie and coffee was mighty good, and it was a real help to the busy clerks to have so convenient a place to lunch. Their labors resulted in a nice sum for their missionary collection. Only one complaint was heard against them—some one wanted to know how much they gave the circus people to have the parade so late.

Finally the patience of the crowd was rewarded and the parade could be heard before it was seen, and amid the happy shout of the kids the band, horse-back riders, clowns, elephants, the caged animals, camels, buffalo and steam piano passed by with all the boys in town following.

The show grounds were on the south side and here the whole town gathered for the afternoon performance. Good natured and happy, everybody bought circus lemonade, ice cream, popcorn, peanuts and hamburgers, looked at the snakes in the side show, the animals in the cages, and enjoyed the marvelous feats inside the big tent. Now, honestly, did you enjoy them?

Plant More Shade Trees.

There is one thing that strikes a recent arrival from the older states when he lands in Texas, that never loses its notability, and that is the utter lack of effort to build a home and surround it with all the comforts, conveniences and attractions that should mark a home, and that most of the people can afford. There are places, not only in the rural districts, but in the towns, which have been settled five, ten, twenty years, without a shade tree, or even a well of water on them. What is more desirable in a home than an abundance of fine shade? What adds so much to the comfort, convenience and attractiveness and value of a home? Nothing, we can conceive. It will require but little trouble and time to set out an abundance of native shade trees around a place at odd times, and no improvement that can be made at any place can be properly done independent of shade-trees. They soon begin to attract attention, and before the owner realizes it, the trees on his place have become one of the unmistakable assets of his possession.

Of two vacant lots—one with and the other without a few shade trees—the place with trees, all else being equal, will sell for from 25 to 50 per cent more than the bare lot. As it requires time, attention, some labor and money to secure nice shade trees, it has a market value that the prospective purchaser is not slow to appreciate. It would be the best investment possible for those having vacant lots on their hands waiting for an advance in realty values to sell, to put out many nice shade trees and carefully tend them. They will find their lots not only more attractive to purchasers but greatly enhanced in value as well. We have seen homes in Mitchell county, which had been settled for twenty years, without a single shade tree on the premises, yet a number of the finest hackberries, umbrellas china and other native trees growing within a half mile of the farmer's home.

The people of many of the western states have long since learned the great value of trees, as an asset, as a commodity of commerce and as an added value to their farms in the way of comfort, convenience and attractiveness. In Oklahoma, the planting of trees has become an extensive and very profitable industry. The supply of fence posts, telephone poles and cross ties is growing less every year, and so far, nothing has been discovered to take their places, as cheap, durable and plentiful as wood. In Germany, where the forests are protected by law, no man has a right to cut a tree on his own land unless inspected by an officer of forestry and approved as suitable for the purpose for which intended, and so beneficial has this system of forestry protection proven, that today, after supplying the needs of the nation and a large export trade as well, for a period of more than 400 years, the forests of Germany are finer and more valuable than they have ever been.

In some states a bounty is given for the planting and maintaining of trees along the public highways, the states furnishing the trees. Texas has long needed some such law, not only to protect its present forests from indiscriminate cutting, but to encourage the planting. Some parts of Kansas have as fine artificial forests as can be found in nature the same age, and many scientific men hold the idea that the planting of trees induces a more regular and greater rainfall. At any case, every country home, and in the towns as well, would be greatly enhanced by putting out shade trees. The state should have a tree planting day of its own, when trees were planted along the public highways and maintained at public expense.

In Spain it is the habit with the inhabitants, having its beginning with an old feudal law requiring it, that every person eating fruit while passing along highways plant the seed. These trees and the fruit is the property of the public and can be gathered only at certain times. This is a beautiful and useful custom, nor would the planting of shade trees along our highways be one whit less useful and beneficial even to generations yet unborn.

Let us all make it a point next arbor day to plant out a number of trees around our homes; if some of us have no homes; then around some other bodies home; 'twill do just as much good. Nothing beautifies a town more than well shaded streets. The city of Savannah, Georgia, is famed around the world for the beauty of its shaded streets, and Colorado, with its abundant water supply, can become famous throughout Texas for its shaded streets. Nowhere do trees grow so perfectly as here with proper attention; and above every other consideration—it pays the property owner, for shade, like water, is an asset.

Six Centuries of the Turk.

It took Rome 600 years to build up an Empire of something less than 3,000,000 square miles. Rising up from the ruins of the old Balkan Empire, a group of 400 Turkish families moved out upon a tour of conquest which in less than 400 years brought under one dominion an empire more than half as large as Rome in its zenith.

When finally checked under the walls of Vienna in 1529 the Turk's dominion stretched from Persia far into the confines of Hungary, took in the whole Balkan Peninsula, made the Black Sea a Turkish Lake and swept in the whole African side of the old Roman Empire.

No imperial march in history is more wonderful than this. If Rome outlasted the Turk in genius for dominion after the sword had done its work, the Turk outlasted the Roman in genius for mere conquest. As a weapon for such purposes neither Alexander's Macedonian phalanx, nor Rome's Praetorian Guard, nor Cromwell's Ironsides, nor Napoleon's Imperial Guard is to be mentioned with the Sultan's Janizaries recruited from among Christian children, trained away from all ties of home and kindred and without hope or purpose save to fight and conquer.

Turkey at her height was in possession of every famous city in the world except Rome. She held by the sword Athens, Corinth, Sparta, Grecian Thebes, Constantinople, Antioch, Selucia, Ctesiphon, Babylon, Nineveh, Bagdad, Jerusalem, Damascus, Mecca, Medina, Alexandria, Cairo, Memphis, Egyptian Thebes and Carthage. Some were in ruins, but the Turk was master where they had been.

Turkish dominion since the sixteenth century has been receding with just about the rapidity of its rise, but it is less than a century since dismemberment fairly set in. Long held in check by British jealousy and interest, it now moves with accelerated pace.

Germany led the way with independence and showed how the Ottoman area could be carved up without a war of the powers over possession of the fragments. France next drove a wedge through the thin Moslem line along the African coast and appropriated Algeria and Tunis.

The powers at the Congress of Berlin in 1878 took little for themselves but they took a lot from Turkey—autonomy for Bulgaria, independence for Serbia and Roumania, Austrian tutelage for Bosnia and Herzegovina, Russian possession for Bessarabia and some of the Asiatic frontier and English possession for Cyprus. Great Britain has since taken Egypt also.

With not so much as "by your leave" did Austria gather in Bosnia and Herzegovina, and now with like audacity Italy reaches across the Mediterranean and takes the final remnant of the Ottoman Empire in Africa.

Practically all that now remains of this great Empire west of Asia is Macedonia, and the great Mohammedan powers of the world is no longer Turkey but Great Britain—New Turkey World.

Mail Order Versus Home Patronage

We announced last week that we could and would meet the mail order houses on their own ground and fight them with their own weapons, and only asked that you come in and let us demonstrate our claim. Bring your mail order house catalogues and let us compare quality, dimensions, etc., as well as prices.

Several parties did come; some bought and others had the goods put away until they had the cash to pay for them. They were convinced that we could do what we claimed. Notice the following prices on a few standard articles. Note the prices we are compelled to charge by the credit system and the prices at which we can sell for the spot cash.

You know what Hodges' Wool and Fibre Art Squares are. It is standard stuff. We make this offering:

9x12 Fibre Art Squares	16.50	12.90
9x12 Wool Art Squares	12.50	10.40
9x12 Fibre Art Squares	11.50	9.35

Compare these prices with those of the mail order houses and see if we do not meet them.

Note the following prices on Library Tables:

25x48 Solid Early English Oak Finish, with drawer, and book shelf underneath, credit price $11.50, our cash price is	$9.45
26x42 inch Solid Oak, early English finish, Library Table, same as above, credit price $9.50, our cash price is	$7.45

IMPROVEMENTS OF TEXAS PRESS

Hon. Will H. Mayes, of Brownwood, Talks of the Texas

"While Texas in the last twenty-five years has made remarkable progress, its development has hardly been in keeping with that of the press of the state," said Will H. Mayes, editor of the Brownwood Bulletin and former President of the National Editorial Association in addressing the Commercial Secretaries and Business men at Dallas.

"Not many years ago," he continued, "the average country paper was published in a dingy, dirty building around the corner in the rear of some abandoned shack. It was printed with an equipment that could readily be loaded into a one-horse wagon and moved on to the next county when the publishers credit was exhausted, and he could no longer get his 'patent insides' from the express office—because it took cash—nor fill his insides at the saloons.

"Now most of the papers of the state are published in their own buildings—as good buildings, too, as can be found in the town where they are published—the best presses are used, typesetting machines are common, and printing plants are worth thousands where they were formerly worth dollars—were mere junk heaps, in fact.

"In my town it used to take three banks to support three newspapers and keep them running, while now two newspapers support five banks, and appear to do it fairly well, too.

"A few years ago, when it looked as if the entire state would be planted continuously in cotton, the press began to talk diversification, until now nearly every farmer is a diversifier.

"The movement for good roads would have died in its infancy had it not been for the press of the state.

"Until the press took up the campaign for civic improvement but little had been done in Texas to improve conditions in cities.

"Do you realize, gentlemen, that in every section of this nation Texas papers, in their respective classes, are regarded as the highest type of American journalism? And when that is said it means the highest type of journalism in the world."

OVERTAXED.

Hundreds of Colorado Readers Know What it Means.

The kidneys are overtaxed; Have too much to do. They tell about it in many aches and pains—

Backache, hip pains, headaches. Early symptoms of kidney ills. Urinary troubles, dropsy, Bright's disease follow.

The statement below shows you how to avoid them.

Mrs. C. A. Millikin, of Merkel, Texas, says: "My opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills can be expressed in a few words. They are the best remedy that I ever used during the fifteen years I was greatly annoyed by a difficulty with the kidney secretions. My back ached constantly and if I sat for any length of time, I had difficulty in getting up. I finally procured Doan's Kidney Pills and since using them, I have felt better in every way. My rest is refreshing, my appetite has returned and my entire system has been toned up."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents of the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Cuthbert Briefs.

All the small boys of this vicinity and surrounding country, left their money with the showmen last week.

J. T. James lately returned with a small flock of sheep.

Saturday afternoon Grover Erwin's team became unruly while he was starting to load some cotton seed on his wagon from Cuthbert Gin Co's seed bin. The result was that the seed bin was torn down hauled about fifty feet and then dumped into a bale of cotton. Luckily, no one was hurt.

It is heard that F. M. Holley has taken California fever and is selling his household effects preparatory to making the journey.

We learn that Abit Williams was picking in his ninetieth bale of cotton last week.

SI SLOCUM.

FOR SALE—I have 160 acres of shinnery land three miles north of town to sell. Will sell in 40 or 80 acre tracts, or will sell altogether. Will give a bargain to someone for a truck farm. Good house and well of good water. See C. M. COSPER, on the place, or get particulars at this office.

The Hesperian Club met last week with Mrs. Robert Brennand. This was the first business meeting and there was a great deal to attend to. Two of the club's most loved members—Mrs. Elliott and Mrs. Stoneroad—resigned, and Mrs. Barcroft and Mrs. J. T. Johnson were elected to take their places. Mrs. V. N. Allen was made an associate member until another vacancy should occur. Miss J. Dry was elected first vice-president. The meeting was especially instructive. Mrs. Broadus gave a very fine original paper upon the Right and Wrong in Pride. Miss Doss had a splendid map study upon Rome while Mrs. Dos told of Rome's neighbors. Mrs. Brennand had a lovely paper, "Life in its Hour of Promise." Miss Dry told of the legal status of women in Texas. During the social hour the very best salad, pimento sandwiches, ice tea and olives was served. Mrs. Broadus is hostess this week.

Don't trifle with a cold is good advice for prudent men and women. It may be vital in case of a child. There is nothing better than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for coughs and colds in children. It is safe and sure. For sale by all dealers.

A hasty and cursory canvass of the business men of Colorado elicited the statement from them that Saturday was the best business day Colorado had enjoyed for many years, not excepting the Christmas holidays, several of them testified. There was certainly a crowd and then some. During six years we have not seen so many people on the streets of this town and they all had more money with them than the circus and its concomitants absorbed, although the regulation circus lemonade, which is commonly supposed to be concocted with five cents worth of citric acid, a few discarded lemon peels on a pound of sugar to the barrel, sold at the astonishing price of "two-for-five." It was indeed a red letter day in business circles. We heard one prominent merchant say that he would give ten dollars for another day just like it.

For Sale.

Three good mares and one colt and one two year old for sale. Will sell for $65 all 'round. Apply to T. C. HART, Westbrook, Texas.

A Chance for Visitors at the State Fair at Dallas, Texas.

Visitors at the state fair at Dallas will have one of the rarest opportunities they have ever had to visit the great master specialist of the south, Dr. J. H. Terrill, and his staff of specialists; also a wonderful anatomical museum, which in itself is worth the expense and time of a visit from an educational standpoint.

One hundred and twenty-eight figures of men and women in various stages of chronic and acute diseases. He especially invites those who are suffering from any chronic disease, men or women, to his office to have a free examination made. You will be under no obligation to take treatment, but you will be better satisfied after knowing what your troubles are by having a diagnosis of your case by a staff of specialists who are each expert in their specialty.

Visit Dr. Terrill at his offices 112 North Ervay Street, Dallas, Texas, where you can see one of the largest; a forty-eight plate State X-Ray machine—in the South, and one of the most thoroughly equipped institutes in the South. Call and register your name with him, and he will send you one of the most complete books published on diseases of men and women.

COLORADO MERCANTILE CO.

About four o'clock Sunday afternoon, the wind began to blow from the north and it was not long in freshening to a gale, which grew cooler all the while. By Monday light fairs were not uncomfortable and thick clothing in great demand. More than the newspaper fraternity were set to wondering where on top side of earth that old last winter's vest could possibly be at. And though its cut was not just up to the very last wrinkle on fashion's horn, it felt mighty comfortable. A few of the early risers—that class who always get up so soon that no one else can keep tab on them—declared there was just a smidgen of frost, but that's hard to credit on their unsupported authority.

Them Good Old Times.

During the war between the states flour sold for $4.40 per barrel and now it sells for $7.75. There is a difference between war and trust prices of $3.65 per barrel, besides the buyer always got a pretty good barrel that apples and potatoes could be stowed in. That was at a time when wheat was harvested by the cradle and sickle. Would it not be better to live in the good old way our mummies and daddies did, instead of buying a paper sack with forty-eight pounds of flour in it and calling it 50.—Blackwell Herald.

Yes, that was the time when wheat was plowed in with a yoke of steers and a scoter plow at the rate of an acre per day when the sign in the moon was right. The wheat was cut in "them good old days" with a cradie and bound by two men, with a boy thrown in to tote water in a gourd to the harvesters. By working twelve hours per day these three men, with the assistance of the boy, could easily harvest three acres of wheat per day. In them good old days our daddies built a rail pen and thrashed the wheat out with a hickory pole. Three men could clean at least twenty bushels per day. In this way a good harvest man could easily earn from four to six bits per day by working twelve hours.

While daddy and the boys were using up every minute of the struggle for bread and meat, mammy and the girls cooked the food in skillets and ovens in the open fire place, milked the cows and strained the milk away in gourds, carded and spun the wool and cotton into thread, warped, sized, harnessed and quilted it and wove it into cloth, cut it and, by hand, sewed it into garments for the family. Yep, and when the day's work was done and while all hands were resting, mother filled the eggshell lamp with tallow with a cotton string for a wick, did sister go to the piano and brother go to the phonograph? Did Sally go to the phone for a chat with a friend or to get a favorite book to read? Did daddy open the daily paper and settle down in his Morris chair to spend an hour in reading the news of the world? Not much.

Mother and sisters got their knitting while daddy filled his corn cob pipe with home made tobacco and lighted it with a coal and mended the shoes, while John, Bill and Jake shucked and shelled corn until they got too sleepy to "rest" any longer.

O, yes, we had school in them good old days, you bet we did—school that sometimes lasted as long as three months. These important events occurred between fodder pulling time and cotton picking time. Our school houses were built of logs with the bark on, the cracks chinked with sticks and daubed with mud. A big fire place was built at one end and we had the mother earth for floor. Our seats were made of split logs with pegs for legs. To make things nice for the teacher we shaved the splinters off his seat. A long wide plank set on pegs in the wall served as desk for the "writin" class. In them good old times we carried our dinner in a crooked necked gourd which we hung on a peg along with our wool hats and quilted bonnets. We studied "readin, 'ritin and 'rithmetic" in them good old times, and figured-on a slate with a soapstone pencil. We had "Blue Back Spellers" then, at the rate of two boys to one book.

In them good old days of our daddies and mummies we were taught that the world was either flat or round—just as the trustees believed—teachers could teach either system.

In them good old days we went to church in an ox wagon. We went to mill on a one-eyed mule that always had his two ears and one eye cocked on the fodderstack. This mule was always looking back—just like some people—no matter which way he went, he was looking back. It seemed that he never could get his mind off that fodder stack. No matter if he were turned into the first pea-patch in the land, his soul yearned for that old dry fodderstack. No, we didn't put corn in one end of the sack and a rock in the other end to balance it. No. Dad wasn't that green. He simply put the sack of corn on his shoulder and rode the mule, so as to carry part of the load himself.

If the Herald man wishes to go back to the 'good old ways our mummies and daddies did," he has the writer's entire permission to do so. But as for the writer he has tried it, and should the question be asked, "would it not be better to live in the good old way our mummies and daddies did," "you ain't talkin' to me."

Been all day along there, and while the people were encline to be honest and truthful in them good old days, and the writer managed to extract a little enjoyment then, but if it had been left to his own option of being a boy then and being a boy now, he would say now every time, for the man or boy of today enjoys more luxury in a week than his fathers did in ten years in them good old times—Sterling City Record.

TEXAS NEEDS GREAT MEN

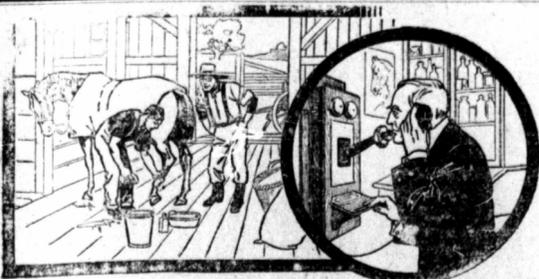

V. PROGRESS.

GREEK civilization gave us the arch and made it possible to build structures that support great weights. The Phoenicians made the first boat and the Harbor of Phoenicia became the birthplace of the marine of the world. Since the beginning of creation, we have depended upon men who can build for our progress. We need in State government builders who can construct an arch strong enough to support the ponderous machinery of Twentieth Century civilization and create conditions that will make Texas the birthplace of the world's progress.

THE BIRTHPLACE OF PROGRESS.

Nature has given Texas the framework of a magnificent civilization and poured the riches of the universe at her feet. Our rivers, lakes, valleys and hills are a triumph in creation, God has done everything He could for Texas and we now await the master hand of government to awaken to vigorous activity the wealth, talent and enterprise of the people and to raise our civilization to magnificent heights of progress and bring glory and renown to our citizenship. Texas needs great men.

Indispensable in Emergencies

THE sickness of a valuable animal on the farm demands prompt remedies.

It's a case for the veterinary—a case where minutes count. That's where the Bell Service shows its value to the farmer.

By means of the telephone the veterinary is reached, and he at once tells the farmer what to do until he arrives.

No far-sighted farmer gets along without the protection of the Bell Service.

He can never tell when it is going to save him from serious loss. Besides, he has daily proof of its usefulness.

Keep Him Where He Is.

The people of the northern and eastern states, where manufacturing is the dominant industry, show more business judgment in their political preference than the people of agricultural sections. When they get a good man in congress—one who looks after the interests of the section he represents in federal legislation—they keep him there. Many of the eastern congressmen have served terms of a quarter of a century, and were better able during their last term to appreciate the interests of their people than the first term of service. They learned what he all along knew; that a congressman is useful and influential in proportion to the length of his service. The longer he serves the better he understands the questions that affect his constituents and the more influence he has among his brother congressmen. Legislation is not unlike any other profession; it must be studied in all its many phases, and the most brilliant man in the state cannot do for the people he represents, or have the influence among the other members of the house, or even become as conversant with the rules and traditions of legislation as the man of only ordinary ability becomes after ten or more years of conscientious service. The safest course is, after we have proven a congressman to be able to hold his own on the floor of the house, after he has time and again demonstrated his personal integrity and the courage of his convictions, to keep him going back as long as he will.

No district of the state of Texas has been served more conscientiously, more ably, than the sixteenth. Judge Smith has proven himself a competent man in the right place, and while it is a matter of human impossibility for any man in any relation of life, to please every temperament, variety of view, Judge Smith has come as nearly meeting the views of a great majority of his constituents, as possible, for a man of convictions and the courage to contend for them. He deserves re-election as long as he makes good.

One reason for much of the abortive and freak legislation that has set one part of the country by the ears against the other, is the failure to apply to our law making the same principles, methods and merit system that we only apply in our business affairs; and the making of laws that effect the material condition of every person in the nation, is about the most important business that can engage the mind of man, and a business, too, in which the element of personal integrity, and clean hands and reliability, count for more than mere mentality.

He Will Not be a Candidate.

Desiring to know from himself whether or not he would be a candidate for congress from the 16th district, we wrote Mr. A. B. Robertson on the subject and received a reply, the substance of which is as follows:

"I am not a candidate for Congress; at no time have I expressed a desire to go to Congress. Even were I sure of the nomination, I should decline to make the race. It is too late in life for me to think of entering politics. I prefer to remain among my friends than to spend part of my time in Washington. Should I make the race and receive the nomination it would materially conflict with plans which I have formulated for years ahead. Therefore, notwithstanding the en-

NOT A CLOSED QUESTION.

The west half of Texas has been given away by the state administration at various times to encourage the building of railroads in the eastern half of the state. The railroad mileage of the state is mostly in the eastern sections, while the land grant subsidies are almost entirely in the western portion of the state.

There are no more lands to give away. The policy of the state, moreover, has radically changed in this respect, and yet the state administration for many years has done everything in its power to prevent the building of railroads in the western parts of Texas as a straight business proposition. Laws are put on the statute books that seem particularly designed to drive capital out of the state and keep it out. Laws are kept on the statute books that were long ago found to be greatly detrimental to the development of the state's resources, but arguments availeth nothing.

All that the western part of the state asks is fair play from this time on. There is no hope of the restoration of any of the wealth of which west Texas has been deprived for the benefit of east Texas, but there is still opportunity for the inauguration of a new policy that shall put west Texas in equality with east Texas: in opening the way for progress, development, and colonization from this time forward.

West Texas hardly knows the state administration, except for the occasional visits of the tax collector and the frequent enactment of unwise and oppressive laws, aside from the operation of the railroad commission, by the operation of which West Texas benefits at all times in a very tangible way, the administration of the school fund, which means a large, steady and permanent income to all the communities of west Texas, there are few functions of the state government that can be said to benefit west Texas in anything like the proportion that they serve the eastern parts of the state.

Talks of the future division of the state is constantly heard throughout the western portion of the state. There are few considerations other than sentimental ones standing in the way. The name, history and traditions of Texas are dear to all Texans, whether native or adopted, but even this sentiment might be satisfied upon a division of the state, if the new states were to retain the name of Texas; one being called East Texas and the other West Texas.

The conditions of the two halves of the state are as adverse as is the conditions of Rhode Island and Nevada. The friction in governmental matters will grow greater rather than less with the passing of the years. East Texas can never understand and will never try to understand, the needs of West Texas. The people, their needs, their way of living, the natural resources, and the program of development and colonization, are all different. If the state were divided into half each of the two states would be among the very largest and richest commonwealths in the union. The subject is worth earnest discussion.

—El Paso Herald.

Those who sneer at the bare suggestion of the division of the state of Texas have nothing in the way of argument on their side save a sentiment that will do more to retard the growth and development of the state than tend to give even-handed justice to all sections of it. There are scores of tenable reasons for the division of the state, but one is sufficient to indicate the growing danger.

Scarcely any candidate is ever elected governor the first race he makes. It requires two or more canvasses for him to become known in name only, to a majority of the voters of the state. If the time for getting before the people and the expense of making the race increase with the growth of the population, and the salary of the governor and term of office remain the same; no one except a millionaire can afford to make the race. The expenses of the successful candidate for the governorship last election was more than $15,000, while the expenses of the "also-rans" was nearly as much. With a term of only two years and a salary of only $4,000, together with all the chances of defeat for a second term, there is opened up a wide field of speculation as to ways and means for making buckle and tongue meet.

It is reasonable to suppose that the expenses of election to office will keep even pace with the increase of population and settlement of the state. What will be the condition when it will cost $50,000 to make the race for the governorship of Texas? How long will a man have to seek office before he becomes acquainted with the people of the state; and how much time to make a visit to the different portions of the state? This is not necessary now, but it will become necessary for the candidate to cover the greater part of the state when its population shall have increased twice its present number. The machinery of the state government will become so complex and loose that it will open up ten avenues for corruption where today only one exists. Its very bulk will weaken the executive branch of government.

The division of the state is inevitable if it keeps abreast of the procession. Aside from all the legislative injustice done the western part of the state, there are purely economic reasons that will compel a division. The west half of the state is plundered to subsidize any and every gold brick proposition the legislature buys. The land of west Texas is becoming too valuable to hang up in every hurdle race for boodle. Indeed no, the question is not closed, and never will be until division is effected.

IT HAS COME AND WENT

Of course, we refer to the circus, which was a greater event in the life of the average West Texas citizen, than had been the coming of the president of these United States, or even the great and only Joseph W. Bailey himself. The crowd did not begin to come in early and regularly, indeed, we heard several merchants who had looked forward to that day with visions of good business done and fat profits, say, they didn't look for it to be much of a day, anyhow. But about eleven o'clock the crowds simply fell into town by the wagon load; they arrived tumultuously and multitudinously from the four quarters of the earth, and settled down in the greatest points of visual vantage, with a determination to see the whole thing through.

After a weary time; not until the streets were lined with a solid wall of humanity, the cry was raised far down the street, "Here they come," which, in fact, they did. The leather-lunged, brass-throated herald, flanked by the city marshal in a yellow buggy, preceded by four buglers, served to clear the way for the more spectacular features of the parade.

This feature was no more and some less than similar features of all the circuses that have ever honored this section of the country by acting as guardian for whatever loose change the people might have trouble in getting rid of otherwise. After dragging its weary length up Front Street and down Second Street, the parade headed for the grounds over in South Colorado, and the grandest, most sublime and frenzied dream that ever disturbed the imagination of a Munchausen—the greatest aggregation of unbelievable wonders—the very summit of spectacular ambition, began to grind, with every barker talking out of the side of his mouth, as all this breed of peace disturbers do talk.

Passing up the side attractions usually dominated by snake eating women, card sharps, fake hypnotists, bearded women and living skeletons—none of which "the children" cared to see, the grand entrance inducted the ticket-holder into the "department of Zoology, where were congregated in one place the rarest specimens of forest, desert and jungle," secured at enormous expense and which challenges the combined show world to produce a collection like it—and one single ticket, ladies and gentlemen, entitles the holder to see both this museum and the big show, which is just beginning.

The animals, though not so numerous, were fine specimens of their kinds, particularly the herd of trained elephants.

The big show differed but little from the general run of latter day alleged circuses. To those of us who cut our circus teeth on the overland exhibitions of such shows as old John Robinson, Dan Pice and Barnum, the imitation of today, handicapped as they are by an almost prohibitive tax license, are but unsatisfying substitutes. In those good old days, there were genuine menageries, pretty horses, ridden by still prettier women, in still prettier dresses (?), bare-back riding of all kinds, sometimes one man riding four horses at one and the same time—and clowns! They had clowns that were clowns. They still have plenty of "horse-play," but its of the two-legged kind instead of the genuine article. There is something about the sawdust ring that appeals to the heart of every youngster and the memory of every oldster in the land. And the bands don't bray like they used to; there's no gorgeous drum-major, caparisoned like Solomon in all his glory and then some; no tight rope walking to the apex of the "big top" center pole; and many other features dear to the heart of every circus-going man, woman and child, have been cut out of the circus of today; and do you believe it, a still further blow is aimed at our priceless heritage. The circus trust is trying to cut out the street parade altogether. What do you think of the likes of that?

We'll bet—yes we'll bet, that the only steadfast and unchanging and unchangeable friend in the show business, west Texas ever had, will never cut out the street parade as long as she is in the business; and it is needless to say that we refer with pride to that High Priestess of the show business—Mollie Bailey. There's a show what is a show, our countrymen.

Those who are versed in the estimating business, figuring on cotton and guessing when its time to rain—placed the crowd in town Saturday at from 2000, 2500, 3000, 4000 and 5000; certain it is, the seating capacity of the big tent was overtaxed and several hundred sat on the ground. Although the circus carried much money out of the county, never to find its way back into the channels of local trade, these diversions are not wholly without good to the community. Entertainment is just as essential to the wellbeing and happiness of a humanity, as what we term the necessities of life; and if the wholesome, decent kind of amusements can not be had, the unwholesome and vicious kind will be hunted up and had. The money spent in attending the annual fair at Dallas, or in patronizing a good circus, is not thrown away. It affords needed relaxation for the old, and is educational to the young. The impressions received by a child attending its first fair, theatre or circus, is never obliterated, but is a reminiscence that fount from which he can at all times draw with pleasure to himself and instruction to others. And usually, the parent who refuses to allow his child a quarter to go to a circus, is more than apt to refuse him more for something more important. And so, the question is, was not the pleasure and information afforded the young people alone, by the circus, worth all the money it carried out of the country? We opine it was.

To Our Readers.

Usually I am about the first newspaper man in Texas to pick out my choice in candidates and tell who they are. I am not going to be so all-fired pronto this time. There are plenty of good men already out and more to come, so I am going to wait awhile longer before I get in the game. I want the Harpoon readers—and there are thousands of them in Texas—to join me, and let's all wait and take a good look at the horses before we place our bets. I'll keep you posted, and I'll tell you the truth about them if it takes the hair off. Just like thousands of other men in Texas, who never ran for office, and never will, I have for the last thirty years been tearing around like a lost dog at circus, and spitting my seersucker dress suit from Pelican's Island to Buttery Hill, spending time, money and hot air trying to elect some aspirant (with the accent on the first syllable) and when he landed he had to be introduced to me six times and asked if I lived in Texas. Did it ever occur to you? All we will ever get out of this is the fun we have in voting, so let's not be in a hurry to show our ticket. There is going to be a regular circus next year—so keep quiet and hear the clowns sing.—Harpoon.

The Record is like the Harpoon except we are different. We already have our ticket made up and will vote her straight this way:
Woodrow Wilson for President.
Tom Ball for United States Senator.
Bill Ramsey for Governor.
Will Mayes for Lieutenant Governor.
And Judge W. R. Smith for Congress against the field. The Record will not lose a single man of the above.

A Suggestion.

A reader of the Record and a generous tax payer of the county and city asks that this paper suggest, in view of the road work going forward in the county, and work in prospect, the county commissioners visit some other localities where similar work is being done, with a view of learning the methods employed by others in such work. Or in the absence of that, send one of their number to Dallas during the fair on Good Roads Day. A great deal of money may be spent in road work under old and obsolete methods, or no methods at all. Such work is worse than no work, as it is sheer waste of money. The world moves in road working methods, as in all other things. The Record is no expert in road building and we know not if the work is being done right and the money spent judiciously, but the suggestions offered by the reader are good ones and it will be money well spent to visit other road working committees or road day at the Dallas Fair.

It will soon be a good time to plant out shade trees. Don't allow the opportunity to pass unimproved again. Trees put out today will mean pleasure and profit to those who come after you.

The "best citizen" is not necessarily the man with the largest bank account or rent roll; with the handsomest home, eloquent voice or loud-est prostrations. The man, be he rich or poor, who meets the daily duties of life with steadfast courage and performs them with honest exactness, whose hand grasps in cherry friendliness that of his neighbor and whose acts point not only to personal advancement but to public welfare, who spares some measure of his time to the service of the place of residence, and stands ready to respect public obligations not less than private, may justly claim right to the highest type of citizenship. Public spirit is the only lever for public progress which vicissitude cannot break or impair.

The Record job department finished this week a law brief for Sweetwater attorneys, which comprised 148 pages of matter. The Record makes a specialty of this kind of work, and has received many compliments on the quality and accuracy of the work it turns out, as well as its expedition.

Wonderful Praise Accorded Peruna the Household Remedy

Mrs. Maria Goertz, Orienta, Oklahoma, writes:
"My husband, children and myself have used your medicines, and we always keep them in the house in case of necessity. I was restored to health by this medicine, and Dr. Hartman's invaluable advice and books. People ask about me from different places, and are surprised that I can do all of my household alone, and that I was cured by the doctor of chronic catarrh. My husband was cured of asthma, my daughter of catarrh of the stomach, and my son of catarrh of the throat. When I was sick I weighed 100 pounds; now I weigh 140.
"I have regained my health again, and I cannot thank you enough for your advice. May God give you a long life and bless your work."

That Indecent Exhibition.

Circuses are like armies; both have a following of scum that depredate upon the communities far more than either hostile army or bum circus. The camp followers that trail in the wake of invading armies spare nothing, as they are controlled by no discipline nor sense of honor. The scum that floats with the average circus ply no less lawless warfare. They fake advantage of the crowds attracted by the big show and trust to the confusion and distraction of legal vigilance to prey upon the basest of human passions and morbid curiosity. The circus of last Saturday was no exception to this general rule. But the panders to passion and curiosity reckoned without a knowledge of the stuff of which the officials of Colorado are made. Though they had foided their tents and stolen away in the night, like the proverbial Arab, the long arm of the law reached to Big Springs and brought them back to face a charge of obtaining money by misrepresentation, and fined accordingly.

Soon after the show had left town, it developed that one of the "side" attractions was illegal, indecent, and a warrant and officers sent to Big Springs to overhaul the responsible culprits. Upon investigation it was found that the culprits could not likely be convicted on the charge first made against them, but could on that of obtaining money under false pretenses. Like all offenses of this kind the very persons who can give testimony shrink from doing so, for it but confesses to aiding and encouraging the outlawed exhibitions; so that, unless the offenses come directly under the eyes of the officers themselves, it is difficult to secure evidence sufficient for conviction.

The press owes it to the people of every community this show will visit to warn them against such sinks of human depravity as many of the alleged "side shows" that accompany it are. Yet the very denouncing of such things serve only to advertise them and give them patronage by the class of people who revel in indecent exhibitions. The thanks of the community are due our Colorado officials for overhauling these vultures and bringing them to justice. 'Tis a pity they cannot be put at hard labor on a convict farm for ten years for each such offense.

We are prone to pat ourselves on the back and felicitate ourselves on great strides we have made in education. The fact is pointed out on every commencement occasion that the boy of ten and twelve years of age is better informed than men of forty were half a century ago; that they are more self-reliant and possess more technical knowledge on many scientific subjects than their grandfathers; and many like bouquets are tossed around promiscuously. While much of this is true, it is not a fact equally important that all these advantages have been secured at the expense of other qualities just as vital. Fifty years ago politeness was an important element in a boy's and girl's education; respectfulness to and consideration for age, and the cultivation of the graces and accomplishments that marked the deportment of a gentleman and a gentlewoman, were considered as important as proficiency in the use of the English language or technical knowledge of a chosen profession or trade. Not long ago the editor of a western paper commenting on the lack of this element in latter day education; offered a reward of ten dollars for the boy between the ages of 12 and 20 years who would of his own initiative and impulse say "yes sir" or "no sir," "if you please" or "thank you;" or, in other words, one who has genuine, innate politeness. Good manners are a more valuable asset to a boy than brains alone. Good breeding is a legal tender among all classes and a credential that will pass muster on any part of the field. We have lost much of the finer essence of life in neglecting its graces and accomplishments.

The Oklahoma boy of 14 years, who killed himself because he had to pick cotton when he wanted to go to school probably saved himself the same rash act when his lack of balance might have caused far more trouble than it has, occurring when it did. Brilliant men and women, yet lacking in that poise and self control which holds the human race to stern duty, however distasteful, are greater causes of trouble and disorganization than people of the most meagre talents but possessing that greatest of all business assets—Reliability. This is the only thing that counts in a man's worth in this day and generation—his dependability in the storms and stress of life. Brilliance is but an ornament, and if unattended by more durable elements, is often a curse than a blessing.

The Young Peoples Missionary Society met Tuesday afternoon with Miss Edna Majors, with a program upon Mexico. Roll call was the name of were the guests of Misses Omeria and gave a fine paper upon Mexico, its climate, products and people. Articles of interest were given by Zillah Williams, Edna Majors, Lillian Jenkins, Sarah Shaw and Eril King. At the close of the program a lively discussion of ways of making money, things to be studied by the girls and other important subjects were led by the leaders, Mrs. Collins and Mrs. Merritt. All this was cut short when the hostess came in with plate heaped up with delicious salad, deviled crabs, potato chips, cheese pickles, crackers and coffee, all most temptingly arrayed upon lettuce leaves. Everything was so good and all lingered so long to enjoy it that it was quite dark before goodnights were said. The next meeting is to be with Sarah Shaw.

Judge Harlan, of Kentucky, who in point of service is the primate of the United States Supreme Court Bench, died at Washington last Saturday in his 79th year. His last words were: "Goodbye; I'm sorry I kept you all waiting so long." He was buried in the national cemetery at Arlington.

Not since the court was formed by President Washington in 1779 has it fallen to any one president, except President Taft, to appoint a majority of the United States Supreme Court, including a chief justice. It is a singular honor, and carries with it a correspondingly grave responsibility—the impress his appointees will make on the jurisprudence of this nation.

The Colorado Branch of the Needlework Guild of America.

This society was organized in England in 1883 and the American branch was founded in 1885 and given a perpetual charter in 1896. The first society was started in Philadelphia, in which city are the headquarters for all the societies which are now in thirty-six states of the union.

The Colorado society was organized by Mrs. Theodore H. Roe in 1901, but she had been a member of the Philadelphia society for many years before becoming president of the Colorado branch. Mrs. Roe held that office for the remainder of her life, and succeeded in interesting many others in the good work, which her friends are trying to enlarge as a memorial to its first president.

Each year the society is trying to increase the number of members and garments. Last year there were 457 garments sent to seven different orphanages in Texas: Buckner Orphan Home, Juliette Fowler Home, Rescue Home, St. Matthews Home for Children, Methodist Orphan Home at Waco, Presbyterian Home atFILES Valley and the Union Benevolent Home at Fort Worth.

This year there are about two hundred and fifty members and the directors are anxious for more. All a member needs to do is to contribute two new garments or two new articles of bed linen once a year. Men, women and children can become members. The directors would be very glad if many others would send names and contributions before October 25th.

There will be an exhibition of garments that have been collected this year at Hutchison's Furniture store Wednesday, October 25, from ten in the morning until six in the evening. No admittance fee will be charged and no one asked to contribute on that day. Members who have not sent in their garments are earnestly requested to do so this week. It is important that we have the list completed before exhibition day.

Let each one interest some one else that the good work may go on. Already a society has been formed in Arkansas by a lady who was once a member of the Colorado branch.

New members will be gladly welcomed by any of the directors.

Birthday Party. Tuesday Mary K. Brown had a lovely birthday party, a number of her boy and girl friends having been invited to enjoy the afternoon with her. Games were played and each one had the very best kind of a time, and the little hostess the best of all, for each guest knew it was her birthday and brought her some kind of a gift. When everyone had played until they were tired the most delicious ice cream and cake was served, a lovely birthday cake with ten candles being the center of attraction. Mary is getting so old that she won't be willing tell her age much longer, but all hope she will continue to have just such parties, until she is sweet sixteen, at least.

Cottolene A Rational National Shortening

The woods are full of imitations of Cottolene—because Cottolene has made a pronounced success as "the perfect shortening." These imitations are of inferior quality, are packed in tins with ordinary removable covers, and depend largely upon substitution methods for their sale.

When you ask for Cottolene be sure you get Cottolene. There's only one Cottolene—packed in patent air-tight tin pails, with our trademark on the face of the pail.

It pays to pay a little more for Cottolene because of its superior quality and the fact that, being richer, it will go one-third farther than lard or any of its imitations. Its use means economy in the end.

The Geo. Bain Lecture.

The lecture of Col eGo. Bain at the tabernacle last Friday night was a success from every point of view. The crowd would have been a good one in a smaller building, enough to have filled the opera house. The subject of his lecture was "A Searchlight of the Twentieth Century," and for one hour and a half he held the individual attention of the audience. It was a review of the progress of the past one hundred years and a speculation on what would come to pass during the next hundred, if as great progress is made as has been made during the past century. His remarks were interspersed with sallies of wit and humorous stories by way of application, which frequently (in the figure) "brought down the house." All in all the lecture was all the brotherhood anticipated, and the success of this initial entertainment is a prophesy of those to come, and inasmuch as the whole series is now financed, the Brotherhood feels much encouraged over its efforts to give the people of Colorado a series of high-class entertainments. Besides the subscriptions collected, there were several dollars collected at the door. The money for the entire course of entertainments is all now in hand, and the question of financing the course is settled.

The Trials and Troubles of the Editor.

As I approached the Record office Saturday morning I thought I could smell smoke but I failed to see a fire, and the office was verysmoky at the time. The editor-in-chief was very "cussy," that is, he was too busy for business. I told him I had some freight aboard for him, so I unloaded part of my cargo and left the balance in the companionway for some future time; for I had noticed that it was head wind and the white caps were floating high. The Linotype man was grinding out profanity by the bushel. I tried to make goo goo eyes at him, but he never cracked a smile. I knew by this that the storm was on. I thought the editor had been in some "Bailey" issue that had cast him on the tempestuous sea of strife. I was trying to get my "Harem Skirt" aired that day for it had been worrying me for a week, but its time will come after awhile; for we all know that an editor can say more kind things of other people and get more cussings than any other living man. He has a devil part of the time and a devil of a time all the time. He can't kick as high or as fast as a mule, but he can kick a blame sight harder, and keep it up until the mule is ashamed of himself; for he never quits kicking until he dies, and it is doubtful if he does then. The smallest thing about an editor is his pocket book and the largest his delinquent list. He often takes the job of reforming the world; he thinks it can be finished in six months. But a cog slips and the dad gummed thing slides merrily down the road to destruction. Then the editor tears his hair and emits some cuss words, and the devil grins and throws the shooting stick at the office cat. Then some opposition paper trots out its rooster and the editor waits for the world to come to an end and the moon turn to blood. But it don't come—neither do his delinquent subscribers. He would quit the business but the devil says he can't, for when a man undertakes to reform the world he is never out of a job. It would have been money in his pocket if he had never been born.

He used to dream of the time when he could bathe his wearied feet in the rippling waters of success; when every man would do unto his brother as he would have his brother do unto him. He thought he could sit down amid the green fields of old Mitchell county along side the bubbling waters of the Colorado river and there end his days in peace and plenty. But now he knows that the devil has a cinch on the whole shooting match. All he can do now is to pull the devil's tail and make him howl. He hopes in this way to attract some attention and set the people thinking. As bad as he is we love him still. What would we do without him? Think for a moment—if every printer and publisher would stop work for one month. What kind of a world would it be? For it is from them that we get our education and knowledge. The world could not get along without them. The editor oftimes chooses a rough and tempestuous road, but lightning strokes of his gifted pen and the thunder tones of his voice will oftimes purify the moral and political atmosphere of a nation.

Do You Need One;

I have one Modestler and one Cary safe. Both good as new. One cost $225 and the other $150. I traded for these, and as I have all my money in circulation and no earthly use for them, I will sell or trade them for a great deal less than they are worth. Would trade for residence lots in Colorado, or for Jersey cattle. E. B. GAMEL, Iatan, Texas.

Germ's Spread in Skin

Even a Psoriasis and other skin troubles are caused by myriads of germs at work in the skin. Unless these germs are promptly destroyed they rapidly multiply, gnawing their way deep into the sensitive tissue. This is what causes that awful itching, and what seemed a mere skin rash may grow worse and develop into a loathsome and torturing skin disease with its years of misery.

Don't let a skin chance! Destroy the germs at the beginning of the trouble with that soothing and cleansing wash, the D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema. A 25c bottle will prove this to you.

We have had experience with many remedies for skin trouble but have never seen such remarkable cures as those from D. D. D. Prescription. Instant relief from the very first application.

We are so confident that D. D. D. will reach your case that it will cost you nothing if the first full size bottle fails to make good every claim.

If you have skin trouble of any kind we certainly advise you to try it and investigate the merits of D. D. D. anyway. We know that D. D. D. will help you.

Miss Grace Duncan of Roscoe is staying at the Thompson ranch while taking treatment from Dr. Germany.

W. R. Grice left Sunday night for Farmersville, Texas, on a business trip, returning Wednesday morning.

We left Mrs. Ye Editor to run things for a few days so, of course, if anything goes wrong we can easily shift the blame upon her. Father Adam worked that dodge over six thousand years ago and it is still in successful operation.

Mr. Archie Thompson attended the show at Colorado Saturday.

Miss Oma Terry and Miss Key were the guests of Opal Templeton and Cora Thompson at the Loraine picnic.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Thompson are at home in town this week.

The Buying Power of $1.75.

A little money sometimes buys a good deal. For instance, take the subscription price of the Youth's Companion for a year—$1.75. If all the good reading in the 52 weekly issues of that paper were published in book form, according to its kind, it would make about thirty volumes of fiction, science, essays by famous writers, household management and economics, sports and pastimes, for boys, natural history, anecdotes, humor, etc. The serial stories alone would fill several volumes. Among these is Ralph Payne's famous story of the Boxer rebellion in China, "The Cross and the Dragon." Another is by J. W. Schultz, who was adopted by the Blackfeet when a boy. It is called "The Quest for the Fish-Dog Skin." Another is a glorious girls' story by C. A. Stephens, called "Julia Sylvester." It is the story of a "Mercer" girl in the pioneer days of Oregon and Washington—and that is only part of the serials.

It will cost you nothing to send for the beautiful announcement of the Companion for 1912, and we will send with it sample copies of the paper.

Do not forget that the new subscriber for 1912 receives a gift of the Companion's calendar for 1912, lithographed in ten colors and gold, and all the issues of the remaining weeks of 1911 free from the time the subscription is received.

Only $1.75 now, but on January 1, 1912, the price will be advanced to $2.00.

The Cotton Picker.

This week the Price Cotton Picker is in operation on the Post Farms west of town, and is doing excellent work. We had the pleasure of seeing it work and the sight is worth some trouble. The machine picks one row at a time, the pickers being slender steel rods about seven inches long fluted slightly and having small teeth. These rods are set in a cylinder which rotates rapidly and at the same time the steel rods revolve, engaging all the cotton and picking it one seed at a time. The machine seems to be an entire success, getting all the cotton and damaging the stalk none at all. Its capacity is said to be from seven to ten acres per day, according to the nature of the ground. The advent of this machine is an era in the growing of cotton.

IN THE GREAT MICHIGAN LUMBER FORESTS.

Some Experiences and Observations by One Who Was There.

BY W. E. BERRY.

It was in the year of 1865 that this story about the lumber woods in the state of Michigan, begins. At this date in the fall I arrived at Chicago from the cold, barren coast of Labrador. I had my mind made up to try the Michigan lumber woods for awhile. I went up on Randolph street to an office where they found places for working men. I paid my two dollars for a chance to go across Lake Michigan to a place called Pere Marquette, but now known as Ludington. I soon got the chance to go there with 100 more men to work in the lumber woods. We went over on one of the company's vessels loaded with 500 bushels of oats. We were a mixed crew of many nations: French, German, Moldes, Finns and Poles. We had to sleep in the hold of the ship between decks; the foreigners at one end and the yankees and English speaking peopel at the other end. During the night some of the Finns and Poles, being drunk, had a terrible fight. We covered them with the loose oats until they were almost smothered. This put a stop to the fight and we had peace until morning. About 12:00 o'clock we made the harbor of Pere Marquette. As the entrance we pass in between those old slab piers to the small lake inside. We landed near the company's saw mill and were met by P. M. Danahoe, the lumberman who had paid our way over, but he only wanted 35 men instead of 100. He came aboard and looked us over like a cow man does when he buys cattle and selected the 35 men from the bunch. I was one of the lucky ones and we were told to follow him. He took us to the old Broadway house near the company store, then called "saw-dust avenue," where we were lodged for the night. Pere Marquette at this time was a very small village with one store, post-office, and one saw mill and about 50 people. Where Ludington Avenue stands today was a cedar swamp at that time and James Street was a wilderness, for no streets were there, and the fourth ward could have been homesteaded at that time, and where the "Parrell Hotel" used to stand the lot could have been purchased for $10 at that time. There were no buildings except on "saw-dust avenue." On the following morning the boss was on hand with a man to show us the way up to the lumber woods, 60 miles up the Pere Marquette River, and we were told we had to foot it all the way there. This trip on foot we did not take. Our grips and trunks were left behind to be brought up later on by the boat called the Doger, or else by the supply teams. Our guide started and we followed. We got our dinner at Mr. Shriner's, east of what is now called Amber. Our stopping place for the night was on Welden creek. There was no one living there at the time. We made some threats at our guide of what we would do if no supper was found. He told us there was some Indians down the river about a half mile and that we might be able to get something from them. As it was nearly dark he started out for the Indian camp, but soon came running back scared near to death. A panther had dropped from a tree and nearly caught him. He showed us his coat which was minus one tail, and we had to believe him. He told us that if we would volunteer four or five of us he would try it again. He soon got the people he asked for and we started out again, the boys taking their pistols with them. In about an hour they returned with about a half bushel of small Irish potatoes, a small piece of fat pork and a large cooking vessel. In about half an hour a fire was under way and everybody was looking happy. Some had knives and some did not, but they soon made some out of wood. The supper was now ready and we all gathered round the pot Chinese fashion, and the fat pork and potatoes soon disappeared—everyone knew where. That night was a long one with no bed clothes of any kind. We lay on the cold bank of the river with ten million mosquitoes trying their best to get their supper off of us. I am satisfied that several of them would weigh a pound. We started the next morning at day break, for there was no breakfast in sight. About ten o'clock we passed a logging camp run by a man named "Wabbielshank," but no grub there without the "spondulick," and this we did not have. This place had been named Branch. Now, our stomachs did not feel much like "branching" out on that day; it felt more like caving in. About three o'clock of the following day we arrived at Pot Butler's camp—our destination—tired and hungry was no name for it. The cook, Mrs. Ben Hall, soon relieved our hunger, and we again felt happy. We found the logging camp well under way with many shanties already built. The cook shanty was a building 85 x 40 feet, built of logs with two tables the length of the building, and four long benches of logs hewn on one side. The building was covered with scops. They are made out of sawed logs, cut the right length, then split in the center and gouged out like they make a canoe. The first one is laid face side up and the next one face side down, which makes a water tight roof, and a strong and warm one, too. The men's shanty was 45 x 20 feet long built the same way, two rows of bunks running the whole length, and in the center of the building a place 6 x 4 feet for a fire place. In the roof a large hole is left for the smoke to pass through, which sometimes made it very disagreeable when the wind would be in the wrong quarter. In this building there were 85 men. Our beds were made of the brush of the hemlock, our covering was two heavy blankets, and as for tobacco smoke and toe-lam, we always had plenty. Horse and ox barns and store houses were built on the same lines. The next morning we were awakened about three o'clock by a terrible noise. I thought it was the old fog horn aboard ship and we were on a lee shore, but on inquiry we found that it was the chore boy with a big tin horn about four feet long trying to blow his liver out to wake up the teamsters to feed teams. About five o'clock another blast was blown warning us to get ready for breakfast. We sat down to a good, substantial meal of fried pork, Irish potatoes, light bread, beans and tea. After breakfast each new man was told what he had to do. I was told to go with Ben Hall, the ox teamster, as helper, to cut new roads, trim logs and make skid-ways. The others that came with me were set to work some as choppers, sawyers, teamsters and swampers. This was my first experience in the woods and it was a curiosity to me to see the oxens pull the heavy logs and roll them up on the trucks built for that purpose; and then to look at those tall pine trees from 75 to 100 feet in length and clear of knots for 50 feet. The trees were cut down, sawed into different lengths and then drawn to the skid-ways, loaded on trucks, drawn to the river and rolled off into the river. In the winter time when there is plenty of snow trucks are not used, bob sleds, taking their place. A horse team can draw 1,000 feet on trucks, but on a bob sled they can draw from 5,000 to 7,000 feet. While at work in the woods we wore thick warm pants of woollens and a heavy jacket, the proper name of which is "mackinaw," which is generally a blue red or grey, but sometimes a combination of all the colors, and a crew of men clad in these shirts and jackets of colors presents a very handsome appearance, to the feminine sex. There was at this date over 1,000 men working on the Pere Marquette river on both the north and the south branch. The logs were floated down the river singly; no rafts being made on this river. The logging interests of this river are the chief industry of this state at this time, and the loggers and lumber jacks, as they are called, lead a life different from that of men in any other occupation in the state. There was supposed to be ten billion feet of standing pine on these branches of the river, and it would be a revelation to many to see how quickly a tree can be felled, stripped of its branches and cut into the lengths required. It is simply a marvel to those who witness it for the first time, but like every other vocation, it has its dangers. I have seen many a man killed at this work in different ways: by limbs dropping down on him, by trees falling on him, by chains breaking, by breaking roll-ways. The last is the most dangerous of all. Just picture to yourself a roll-way with ten million feet of logs in it. Then picture a bank 200 feet high on one side and no bank at all on the other, and all this space covered with saw logs piled there in every shape—end-ways, cross-ways, and every way imaginable; and then in the spring of the year when the river begins to thaw out and the flood is on and to know that the only way this ten million feet of logs can be moved would be for a crew of men to go down to the bottom of the roll-way on the river and commence to pry the logs to get them started down the river, and a man tells you to get a peavy and go to work down there, what would you say? Perhaps one log would be the key that holds this vast multitude of logs together. What would you do and where would you run. Friends, I have been there when I carried my life in my hands, so to say, and have seen many a man crushed to death under those logs or else drowned in the icy waters.

The Automobile Moving Picture Show at the Tabernacle Thursday Night

A practical demonstration of the building of automobiles was given at the tabernacle last Thursday night, by the Studebaker corporation, of which F. S. Keiper is the local agent. Ten thousand feet of motion pictures said to be the largest commercial film ever made, gave views of the various operations incidental to the manufacture of motor cars from the raw pig iron to the finished car. The experience is exactly the same as though you visited the factories. As the man aptly remarked, "you can almost smell the gasoline." About one hour and forty-five minutes is required to exhibit these pictures. If you actually walked through the immense plants of the Studebaker Corporation, stopping long enough in front of each machine to witness one complete operation, it would take four months to make the complete tour of inspection. Watching this wonderful set of pictures—all life size—you realize for the first time what a $7,000,000.00 investment in machinery means. A large number of automatic machines are utilized with the result that the automobile is assembled without the touch of hammer, reamer or file. Perhaps the most marvelous piece of machinery in the entire factory is the magazine automatic, which, without attention from a human being, feeds itself, performs eight distinct and separate operations and discharges the finished part. This machine was invented by Miss Kate Gleason. Verify the women of the present day are invading all fields. One film showed a battery of ten automatic machines, each performing seven different operations, and discharging the finished part, all controlled by one lone workman. In other words this man, by the aid of automatic machinery performs the exact amount of work that would require seventy men under less modern methods. It is almost impossible to give an adequate idea of the realistic panorama that the reels presented to the eye. At the outset one sees hundreds of thousands of tons of pig iron being wheeled into the receiving bins and then is presented the chemists at work. Next is seen the heat test and then is seen the foundry and drop forging departments in full operation. Then comes the machine shop and the automatic tool room and finally the complete car looms up, a monument to modern engineering and productive science. These pictures were of great educational value and were also intensely interesting. This method of demonstrating the working of the immensity of the Studebaker corporation plants, is the clever and unique idea of General Manager Walter E. Flanders. It is the first time that any automobile manufacturer has taken the "show me" method of convincing the public that its cars are manufactured by the most up-to-date methods and out of the best material obtainable and that the work is all done in its own plants. One marked impression which the pictures make on the public is the possibilities of quantity production through the use of automatic machinery. One then begins to appreciate the complete meaning of the phrase, "To err is human, to be perfect is automatic."

Mr. E. L. McNuffley, special representative from the foundry, delivered the lecture and explained the different pictures as they were thrown on the screen.

GOV. COLQUITT CALLS A COTTON CONFERENCE

Composed of Governors and Agricultural Commissioners--Hopes to Do Something to Check Slump In Price--Meeting to Be at New Orleans October 23.

Austin, Texas, Oct. 12—The conference of governors to discuss ways and means to prevent further reduction in the price of cotton has been called by Governor Colquitt for October 23 at New Orleans.
In his call, he requests the presence of the governors and commissioners of agriculture of cotton producing states and also representatives from the different farmers' organizations and the principal banking institutions and editors of the leading newspapers. His letter follows:

"Believing that the continued decline in the price of cotton was not justified by the supply and demand, I proposed by telegraph to the governors of the principal cotton producing states that a conference of the executives of said states, and the agricultural commissioners of the same, ought to be held for the purpose of devising a way to check the decline in price of this staple.

"Having received favorable replies from ten of the eleven governors communicated with, endorsing the suggestion, I hereby call a meeting of the governors of the cotton producing states for conference over this subject to be held in the city of New Orleans, Louisiana, October 23, 1911, beginning at 11 o'clock a. m.

"The commissioners of agriculture of each of the cotton producing states are also urged to be present, with such data relating to the condition and yield of the crops in their respective states as they may have which will aid the conference in forming a better idea as to the amount of cotton produced.

"The attendance of the heads of farmers' organizations interested in the growing and marketing of cotton in each of the cotton producing states is also desired and respectfully urged.

"I also take the liberty of suggesting that representatives of the leading or principle banks and financial institutions in all the cotton producing states and the editors of the principal newspapers be present, and I urge their attendance.

"The meeting would have been called earlier, except for the fact that it was deemed advisable to give at least this much time in order that substantial facts and data might be collected for consideration of the members."

The governor has also sent a telegram to each of the governors of the cotton producing states advising them of the call.

For over quarter of a century Dr. Wiley, the famous government expert, has conducted an active campaign for pure food in the interest of public health. His advocacy in a recent speech of the use of Cotton Oil as a food is, therefore, especially significant; it simply emphasizes the wholesomeness of Cotton Oil—the vegetable oil shortening—which is composed so essentially of Cotton Oil, the use of which he so strongly recommends. Cottolene is endorsed by physicians generally, because of its purity and wholesomeness. It has been the leader in Cotton Oil products for over twenty-five years.

A Correction.

In our report last week of the accident in which McDaniel got his arm caught in the gin, we stated that the gin had stopped and when started up again caught his arm. This was not the case. The gin had not stopped, but was running steadily on, when he in some way got his arm caught. No one at the gin knew anything about it or how it was done. We make this correction as it might otherwise do the gin people an injury.

The Mission Study Class of the Methodist Aid met Monday at the church with Mrs. Crockett leader. The lesson was the first of the new study, "The Light of the World," and was about the Hindu religion. Miss Jo Dry is leader next week.

Mr. Davis, chief propeller at the laundry, was afraid that if he left entire satisfaction would not be given in his absence and asked the public to overlook any irregularities, if any, while he was gone, that he needed the rest from a twelve-month steady siege of work almost day and night; but Pete Avery comes in and says that the laundry will not seriously miss him, but that everything will run as before. In this connection they desire to express their sincere appreciation of the efficient help they have. Last week when the power went down on them it necessarily put them twelve hours behind, but the girls and boys stayed with it, working overtime until all work was finished on time. Everything is now progressing nicely and the laundry is turning out their usual big baskets both east and west.

A Coloradan Complimented.

(From the Ballinger Leader.)

The musical medley under the auspices of the Womens Home Mission Society at the Library Hall on last Saturday night was a most pleasant performance and all who attended were loud in their praise of the program and expressed themselves as having been highly entertained.

The children were well trained and performed their part exceedingly well, and the older one showed fine training and acquitted themselves very creditably indeed.

Each and every performance deserves special mention, but perhaps the leading feature of the evening was Miss Ruth Nichols. Miss Nichols is always a favorite with a Ballinger audience. Her voice is sweet, she reaches her notes true, and there is plenty of class to it.

The program had enough of the classic to make it elevating, enough of the popular to make it catchy, and taken as a whole was one that showed good judgment in its selection and preparation. We trust that other entertainments of this character will be planned in the future, as we are sure that its educational and refining influence is of great value, and now that we have the new library hall, there is no excuse for not having more high class entertainments. The ladies cleared $88.00 over and above expenses.
