CLAIM WAR LOAN WILL BRING 12-CENT COTTON.

Washington Bankers Opposed to Plan Proposed With No Security Basis.

Washington, Sept. 14.—People from the cotton-producing states predict great strides for the staple since the market has advanced to 10c a pound. An authority said tonight that the price would reach 12c within a short time, particularly if the Anglo-French loan is consummated. Reports also came here of a large number of vessels along the Gulf Coast loading cotton for European destinations.

The European loan negotiations have attracted widespread interest in financial circles, although in some quarters the latest scheme to borrow without pledging securities has given the general plan a setback. Bankers that have heavy German deposits are not taking kindly to the proposition. Washington bankers were found generally against making the loan on the no security basis, believing that it would mean more financing on the same terms later, while both England and France are known to possess American securities in large amounts. Government officials are not commenting on the transaction, since the Government has given no voice to financing the countries at war.

MITCHELL COUNTY WILL HAVE A DAY.

Friday, October 15th, will be Mitchell County Day at Abilene fair. The directors have voted this honor to your splendid county and hope to greet a large number of your citizens here on that day, including yourself. It will also be Press Day, so you must be here.

Is Mitchell county doing anything to a share of the $200 special prize money to be distributed to the counties of this section with the largest and best farm products displays?

Yours truly,
Frank Grimes, Publicity Dir.

THE PLACE OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOL IN THE AFFAIRS OF LIFE.

In all ages and among all nations and tribes, there have been sundry systems of education, prompted by various motives from the most barbaric to the most sublime, yet each system corresponded to the conditions and the demands of the age in which it existed.

The prehistoric, simple child of the forest was educated and trained in accordance with his needs and his relation to his environment. His needs being scanty and his environment being simple, his training was devoid of a conception of social rights or duties. His chief idea was that might made right, that the strong should terrorize and conquer the weak. With the rude club from the forest and the arm God had given him, he sallied forth into the world to fight out as best he might the battles of life. Yet, can we say that he was not educated?

Education is a relative term and has no significance separate and apart from the social life in which the individual lives. The ancient Egyptian was trained to reverence the forces of nature upon which he relied for daily subsistence. With a vivid idea of future rewards and punishments, with a veneration for the traditions of his fathers, he yet was not forgetful of the practical requirements of the life about him. He discovered Geometry in order to measure the land lines effaced by the overflow of the Nile. He carved statuary, built tombs or pyramids, learned the art of coloring and dying, and many other things demanded by the conditions of the times. The schools of Sparta trained the youth for war, teaching him to swim, to steal, to shoot, to kill, to die for his home and country. He was of value only in so far as he could serve the state. He was only a small integral part of the vast system of warfare so essential at that time to the perpetuation of national existence. The Athenian was educated to suit his environment also. He was trained in the arts, sciences, and literature of the times. In addition to this, he was taught all that was necessary to qualify him for citizenship and to hold office in the state. In like manner, all nations of the past have educated their citizenship to suit the demands of the times in which they lived. The Phoenicians were traders, the Hebrews promulgators of the virtues of home, the Romans were warriors and lawgivers. Each of these nations was educated in accordance with the occupations of her people.

The ideal I am trying to develop is, that any system of education should have for its primary purpose and ultimate aim the establishment of a closer and more vital relation between the life of the child in the schoolroom and the great busy life of the world about him. In other words, our schools should not only be a preparation for life, but should be life itself. The time a child is in school is truly a part of his life, and it should be made the most practical, the most intense, the happiest period of his existence.

Time and space will not here permit me to go into a dissertation upon the struggles, the wallings, the dark floods through which our own public school system has come, but suffice it to say that the public school of today and the progressive teacher have for their prime aim not merely that the child may master a set curriculum of text books, but that he may be trained for a larger, more congenial life and a higher respect for the rights of his fellows. Our schools are of value today only as they distinctly correlate the life of the child with the great, busy, jamming, competitive world in which he must strive for existence. Every subject now taught in our schools should bear a relation to the life around us. Our geographies should be taught so as to give the child a knowledge of the relation of our country to other countries politically, commercially and socially. Our arithmetics should be so written that they treat of the commercial transactions of the present, not those of a hundred years ago. Our sciences should emphasize those principles applied in the modern and every-day routine of life. Latin should reflect light upon our own tongue and enable the student to compare the manners, customs, and literature of the present with those of 2,000 years ago. Our histories should teach the causes and effects of all political and social changes and how the present life may benefit therefrom. They should show that governments and constitutions grow, are not made.

The place of the public school in society is similar to that of the home or the church. There are three predominant forces that shape the destiny of the child, hence the destiny of the nation, viz: The home, the church, the school. These are so intimately related, that it would be difficult to extol the virtues of the one at the expense or detriment of the other. As a public institution, it is not extravagant to say that the school is not only necessary, but essential to the well-being of nations as well as individuals. The efficiency of our public schools, will largely measure the quality of the character of our future men and women. The place of the public school is not to give the child technical training for certain trades and professions, but to give him that general training that will capacitate him for choosing his vocation and making that special preparation necessary for success. The purpose of the public school is not to select a chosen few and train them, but to place the blessings of efficiency schools within reach of all classes, from the lowest to the lordliest. Nor is it our purpose to train children in groups, but rather to train them individually. The one superiority of our schools over those of the Kaisers boasted system is, that we do not crush out the individuality of our children in order to implicitly observe a certain arbitrary system. The underlying cause of the European war is that the hardy elements of manhood in the Germans have been brushed aside in the headlong desire for military power.

The questions for your consideration are: "Are our schools filling the place and performing the function intended for them in the most efficient way? If not, wherein do they fail? Is the present condition of our school-houses and grounds conducive to the health and comfort of the children? In what ways may we, as parents, contribute to the betterment of our schools?"

We earnestly invite your co-operation for the year and shall at all times endeavor to do that which we believe to be best for your children.

Most sincerely,
C. D. Judd, Supt. Schools.

I deem it nothing less than proper and right for me to give to the general public a bit of experience I had last Saturday evening while en route from my home to Colorado. Myself and another man were traveling in a buggy when we were overtaken by a crowd traveling in an automobile. The driver, of course, tooted and the man driving the buggy immediately gave the road, more than was necessary, for there was no scarcity of road, yet, for some reason I suppose best known to the driver, he ran into the buggy, tearing up one wheel and otherwise damaging it. He lost no time getting away, but we got the number of the car, which was No. 259, and I had to trace up same when I reached town. Now I realize the fact that we are living in a fast age and the automobile owner has greatly the advantage of the owner of a common vehicle in the way of speed, yet I believe that the automobile ought to have respect enough for the buggy to slow down while passing a common vehicle and if they dont the time will come when the common vehicle man will be obliged to adopt some plan for his protection. I write the above for the benefit of all classes for such collisions are very dangerous. Now in conclusion I say that all good citizens will respect the rights of his fellow citizen. E. M. McCreeless.

The innocence of those forty-one defendants on trial at Corpus Christi for corrupting the election of 1914, is as apparent and ingenious as the average Arkansas moonshiner when hailed before a federal court for the simple pastime of converting his sorghum skimmings and chinaberries into mountain dew.

BLACKLEG.

Dangerous Disease Peculiar to Young Cattle—Germs Live in the Soil of the Pasture.

Blackleg, also known as black quarter or ill quarter, is a disease of young cattle characterized by bloody swelling under the skin of the fleshy parts of the body. It is not a contagious disease; that is, animals do not contract it by contact with affected animals. It is an infectious disease; that is, animals get it from soils of pastures in which the spores or seed of the disease exist. The disease is confined almost entirely to young cattle, and other species of animals are rarely affected.

It is seen most frequently in animals ranging in age from six months to 2 1-2 half years, and well bred, well conditioned animals seem more susceptible than scrub stock. Blackleg is caused by a bacillus called popularly "blackleg" bacillus. This organism produces spores which carry the disease much as the spores or seeding element of ferns spread ferns. The blackleg when once established in the soil remains ready to cause trouble for long periods, sometimes several years, until they gain entrance into animal body, whereupon they grow and produce disease. When this fact is understood, the persistence of the disease in a locality is readily comprehended. Blackleg is a pasture disease, the infective agent being found in the soil, and the germs are taken through food and water or with slight wounds such as briar scratches, barbed wire fence cuts. The disease manifests itself by swellings under the skin of the fleshy parts of the body, usually the quarters, hence the name "quarter ill." The animal becomes lame and lags behind the herd.

In experimentally inoculated animals, they frequently continue to eat as long as they can stand. The swelling, at first hard, hot, and painful, later becomes cold and intensive,
while the skin becomes discolored and leathery. Gas accumulates underneath the skin so that when pressed with the fingers a crackling sound is heard similar to that produced by placing a piece of paper under the coat and rubbing with the hand.

The animal finally goes down, and lies struggling on the ground, catching its breath in gasps, and expelling it with groans, grunting sounds, the head is frequently thrown to one side.
After death the animal is found lying in distorted positions, and is usually bloated as tightly as the skin will hold, which causes the legs to stick straight out horizontally in a characteristic attitude. Bloody fluid oozes from natural openings, is forced in drops from the skin, and collects in large blisters under the outer layers.
On cutting into swollen parts a sweet-ish, foul-smelling gas rushes out, and a bloody, frothy fluid runs from the opening, sometimes accompanied by the black, mushy, disintegrated muscle, which is forcibly blown out by the pressure of the gas. The loose tissue underneath the skin is filled with bloody fluids, bubbles of gas, which appears as a quaking, gelatine-like mass. The divisions between the muscles contain the same fluid and have a greenish metallic color, while the muscles are soft and black. This condition is not general throughout the body, but is confined to certain affected portions. The organs seldom show extensive changes. Treatment is ineffective after the disease is once fully developed, and death almost invariably results. Some have advocated cutting into swelling, roweling, and dragging the animals about. Such measures can not be to severely condemned.

The fluids which are liberated contain the germs of the disease and as a result more infection is distributed over the soil. Prevention consists of vaccination of the susceptible animals and proper disposal of dead carcasses.
Vaccine is manufactured by several firms. It is also manufactured and distributed free of charge by the Bureau of Animal Industry of Agriculture.
Vaccine and directions are sent direct to stock men and to proper State officials upon application by letter to the chief of the bureau. Blackleg tends to occur in seasons, usually in spring and fall, and vaccination should be performed at least one month before the outbreak. The best results have followed semi-annual vaccinations, beginning at six months and continuing until the animal is 2 1-2 years of age.
Too strong emphasis cannot be placed upon the proper disposal of the carcasses. They should not be left for predacious animals and buzzards to tear apart and distribute over the country, but should be buried deeply, without opening, where they die, using quicklime or strong antiseptics to disinfect the carcasses and the place where the body has lain. During the fiscal year 1915, 3,454,628 doses of blackleg vaccine were distributed to stock raisers and farmers of this country. This amount is approximately 45 per cent more than that distributed the fiscal year 1914. While the percentage of increase of this years output over that of 1914 is nearly half as great, it does not necessarily follow that blackleg in the United States is greatly on the increase. The difference is due in large measure to the fact that the stockmen in blackleg districts who heretofore did not vaccinate begin now to recognize the practicability of vaccination.

I will be glad to order for the stockmen and farmers of Mitchell county, any amount of vaccine that they may need, without any cost to them.

Respectfully,
W. A. Dulin,
County Agent U. S. Dept. Agriculture.

BAILEY PROMISES SHEPPARD CONTEST IN 1918 ELECTION.

Former Senator From Texas Declares No Man Holding to Senator Shep- pard's Opinion Will Es- cape Opposition.

Karnes City, Sept. 9.—Former Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey turned his attention here tonight to Senator Morris Sheppard. According to Mr.
Bailey's friends the junior senator has been carrying a chip around on his shoulder with a dare that the Gainesville statesman knock it off. Mr.
Bailey may take the dare and be in the race the summer of 1918 as an opponent of the Texarkana senator. The former senator made this clear here tonight before a crowd of more than 1,000 persons. He told them he resented an interview given out by Senator Sheppard in Fort Worth Tuesday.
Mr. Bailey once more indicated that he is not to be considered as a possible senatorial candidate in next summer's election, but he did not declare for the first time since his return to Texas that he may once more offer himself as a candidate. The differences between former Senator Bailey and Senator Sheppard are long standing. Mr.
Bailey resents the attitude of his successor on the proposition of woman's suzrage and other questions. He said as much at the El Paso convention last summer and in conversation with friends since then has been calling attention to his objections to Senator Sheppard.

Taking up Senator Sheppard's challenge to a series of joint debates Mr.
Bailey declared:

"It is almost three years before the Democratic primary of 1918 will be held and Sheppard and myself may be gathered to our fathers before that time comes, or if we both are spared political issue and conditions may change so vastly between this and that as to wholly frustrate any plans that he and I might now form. I would not wish to make so definite an announcement as that attributed to Senator Sheppard, but I will venture to say that no man holding to Senator Sheppard's opinion will ever be elected to the senate from this state without a contest and if some other Democrat worthy of our unbounded confidence decides to offer himself as a candidate against Sheppard."

Monday visited B. C. Murphy, Colorado, Route 3. Mr. Murphy has a fine crop; Mrs. Murphy has a fine bunch of chickens and turkeys and a fine garden. Mr. Murphy believes in deep preparation, and intensive cultivation, and raising something to live on at home. Visited the Phenix farm. Everything on this farm is in fine shape—fine feed crop, fine cotton and fine alfalfa. On this farm I find 75 head of hogs and Bruce Phenix is busy caring for them. Bruce is making a close study of scientific agriculture and animal husbandry.

The crop on the Coon farm is also fine. C. C. Lowe believes in deep preparation and intensive cultivation. The crop is fine and well worked, has plenty of hogs for meat, and Mrs. Lowe has about 75 turkeys. Forest Lowe has a fine crop; in fact the Lowe settlement is in excellent condition.

Tuesday I visited H. A. Browne who has followed government methods; has fine crop, hogs for meat; Mrs. Browne has 35 turkeys.

J. N. Burk is one of the best farmers in the county, has a fine crop, has a fine bunch of hogs, has some as good registered Poland China as there are to be found in any country; hogs are being grazed on Sudan grass and cane, and from this will be put on cow peas and peanuts. The crops on the Ruddick farms are fine. Mr. W. E. Lester on the Ruddick farm has a fine bunch of hogs and has one of the best registered Duroc-Jersey boars to be found in West Texas.

Wednesday Colorado, Route 4, visited J. L. Ross and sons. Crops on the Ross farm are fine. C. Ross has a fine feed crop. Cotton is late, having been damaged by hail. W. A. Oliver has a fine crop. G. W. Webb has an extra fine crop. Mr. Webb has early corn planted in the alternate rows, also milo maize in the alternate row, this is as fine a piece of maize as I have seen in the country.

Thursday visited the home of W. T. Rogers who is one of our best farmers; has a fine farm well managed, a fine orchard and made an enormous fruit crop. He has one of the best herds of registered Duroc hogs to be found in West Texas and some of the best Rhode Island Red chickens to be found in the county.

Friday visited W. L. Lindsay. He is one of our best farmers, believes in deep preparation, intensive cultivation.

Mr. Lindsay has one of the best all-around crops growing in the county. W. H. Bodine is one of our good farmers. Mr. Bodine made last year on his demonstration plot of cotton 1,400 pounds of seed cotton per acre and only made 900 pounds right beside it under ordinary methods. His cotton this year bids fair to make three-quarters of a bale to the acre. Mr. Bodine has a fine modern home, fine orchard, and one of the best June corns and feed crops that I have seen in the county. The Buford community is in prosperous condition.

CALOMEL SALVATES AND MAKES YOU SICK.

Acts Like dynamite on a sluggish liver and you Lose a Day's Work.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel with 50 cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY ENACTED TUESDAY.

The people of Snyder were shocked last Tuesday evening by the announcement that little Charles Alexander, the eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Alexander, had been shot and killed by his little playfellow, J. J. Hunter, Jr., the nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hunter. It is learned that several boys were on the croquet ground and that these two little boys had a childish scramble of some sort and it is supposed that little J. J. Jr., in a fit of childish anger fired the shot through the window with the fatal result.

The families are neighbors and friends and Mr. and Mrs. Hunter are terribly cast down in grief over the sad affair and the people deeply sympathize with them and with Mr. and Mrs. Alexander in their deep sorrow.

Little Charles was buried Wednesday evening, the funeral services being conducted at the Methodist church by Rev. J. W. Hunt, of Abilene.

The court authorities have taken the necessary cognizance of the case and have placed the little Hunter child under bond to await the action of the grand jury—Snyder Signal.

AROUND THE EVENING LAMP.

The cheerful gathering of the family around the evening lamp in our farm homes is a great factor for family unity, and it creates strong ties and deep sentiment among young people.

After the labors of the day are over, the evening meal eaten, the gathering in the circle means rest, conversation and reading, which entertain and instruct the young people and knit the fibers of the family ties in solidarity. In after years when the children, now happy and contented, have homes of their own, the evening lamp will be installed and thus the influence of this sentiment lives and enlarges as the years swiftly pass.

Reading in the house is responsible for ambition that stirs many boys and girls for education and useful service in rural society. The farm paper, current literature, magazines books, with useful information must be read, if at all, around the circle of the country home during the early evening hours. The busy daylight hours will be used, for the most part, for earning a living and meeting the exacting duties of farm life. The schools, as useful as they are in giving information to children, would fall very far short of their opportunity without home study. In fact, it is the reading and thinking done out of school that counts in an education, after all.

Fortunate is every child that likes to read and cultivates regular habits of reading. Such children have themselves solved the problem of education. Regardless of the country schools and the time such children have for attending school, they will train the mind and gather information that will make them useful and efficient in life.

Parents who wish to give their children educational opportunities should install the evening lamp, encourage their children to read and study and set the example themselves in regular hours of reading. This is where one can help himself in helping others.—Farm and Ranch.

WHY WOMEN SUFFER.

Many Colorado Women are Learning the Cause.

Women often suffer, not knowing the cause. Backache, headache, dizziness, nervousness.

Irregular urinary passages, weakness, languor—

Each a torture of itself.

Together hint at weakened kidneys. Strike at the root—get to the cause. Quick help the kidneys if they need it. No other remedy more highly endorsed than Doan's Kidney Pills.

Here's convincing testimony from this locality.

Mrs. J. V. West, Merkel, Texas, says: "An attack of grip several years ago left my kidneys disordered, causing severe pain. As Doan's Kidney Pills had been taken with good results in my family, I used one box. They reached the seat of the trouble, completely curing me and I have had no return attacks."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. West had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

An error of one minute and thirty seconds was made last week in giving the time of the Studebaker car in the Sweetwater race. It should have read—1 hour 32 minutes and 20 seconds as against the time of the Maxwell, the winning car, with a record of 1 hour, 31 minutes and 50 seconds. This in justice to the Maxwell people.

Seeing that the Prince of Peace scoured those who sold doves in the Temple, it is interesting to conjecture what He will do to those now slaughtering them.—Austin American.

The Record needs a dependable and regular correspondent at Westbrook, and will make it to the financial interest of the one who can qualify for that duty. We feel that the interests of the good people of that prosperous community as well as those of the Record would be the better served by a regular and live budget of news every week from that place.

Dr. R. C. Pender, field secretary for Buckner Orphans Home, was here Saturday and paid this office a friendly call. He was en route to Snyder and Ira, where he was to address the people in the interest of this most worthy and deserving institution. It requires the sum of $125 per day to feed the children of this home, say nothing of their other needs, and the institution depends solely upon voluntary contributions from the people who love their kind, irrespective of denomination, for its support. A nobler work than that assumed by the venerable Dr. Buckner, was never undertaken by man, and since its founding, its only but greatest asset has been faith in God and confidence in human kindness.

One year ago today cotton was selling for three cents less per pound than it is bringing now. There was complaints deep and loud from all quarters. It was argued, with some show of reason, that if the farmers could get ten cents the pound for their staple, they, the merchants and the banks would be perfectly satisfied, but this tur-ri-bul war was playing the devil with the whole country in general and the cotton farmer in particular. It was a measly, dirty shame, etc., etc., ad libitum. The war still clings to the throat of Europe; the belligerent nations have declared our cotton contraband of war; they still consume the products of our fields; the summer is past; the harvest is upon us, and still we are bellyaching about the low price of things we have to sell and the exorbitant price of things we have to buy. All in all, us human beings are a queer yarb.

Which brings to the fore again that ever vexing question of state sovereignty. Federal Judge Russell of the Eastern District of Texas says it is unlawful under the federal statutes to kill doves before October 15th, while the attorney general and the general attorneys of the state of Texas hold that doves may be killed under the state statute on and after September 1st. The advice from Washington is that in case of conflict between dates of the federal and state statutes the federal law will be observed and executed. Many papers have assured their readers that they might kill doves on and after September 1st with impunity. But in view of the conflict of the two statutes, it might be well to stay the useless and senseless execution of the useful dove until October 15th. In fact, the Record would spill but scant sympathy for the sports who might be plucked between the state and federal mill stones.

COTTON FARMER IS TO BE AIDED.

Washington, Sept. 4.—Orders were signed here today making the Federal reserve banks at Richmond, Atlanta and Dallas Government depositories. Each bank will receive $5,000,000 in gold to aid the cotton producer. The gold will probably be shipped tonight.

WAREHOUSE READY FOR BUSINESS.

The organization of the Colorado Warehouse Company is now completed in compliance with the laws of Texas governing such institutions, and is ready for business. Mr. M. H. Roddy has received the appointment of bonded superintendent and will be in immediate charge of the business. The organization of this warehouse is in response to a general demand by the farmers of Mitchell county, and is primarily in their interests. Its success as an investment now devolves upon them. Upon the loyalty of the farmers the promoters depend for returns on their investment. Patronize the warehouse as far as you can. If you do not wish to store your cotton in it, at least have your cotton weighed on its scales. Signed, Board of Directors.

QUADRUPLETS GIVEN 2 AUTOS AND $1,000 CASH BY ADMIRERS.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 8.—Two automobiles and about $1,000 in cash are presents that have been given the famous Hollis quadruplets of Mr. and Mrs. Flake Keys, born about eleven weeks ago.

The babies are all girls and at the age of 11 weeks are hearty and robust. Recently the father and mother with their family went to Paducah, Texas, for a visit with Mrs. Keys' parents. They stopped at a hotel in Quah. Very soon it was learned they were there with their babies and the hotel soon became crowded with visitors to see the children. This is said to be the only case on record of quadruplets where they are all girls and living.

SOUTH CAROLINA IN RANKS OF DRYS.

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 14.—South Carolina today adopted statewide prohibition, to take effect January 1st, next, in place of the present local option system, according to unofficial returns here late tonight from throughout the state. The vote, with almost complete returns from a majority of the forty-four counties, stood 23,104 for prohibition to 14,157 against. It was declared by those who have followed the referendum election that the total vote would not exceed 60,000. Of the thirty counties which were dry under the local option system all were declared to have voted for prohibition. Only one of the dispensary operating counties was known tonight to have cast the majority of its votes for prohibition.

ENGLAND CONSIDERING PLAN OF CONSCRIPTION.

London, Sept. 14.—Official admission that the Cabinet is seriously debating the subject of conscription was made public for the first time in the House of Commons this afternoon. The subject was raised when the motion for adjournment was made. It was brought up by both the opponents and advocates of conscription. Premier Asquith finally arose and announced: "This is not a matter which has escaped the attention of the Government, which, without undue delay and with the due deliberation which the gravity of the subject demands have arrived at their conclusions. They will be presented to the House and will then become the subject of Parliament discussion."

SOIL-BUILDING—A JOB YOU CAN NOT AFFORD TO SHIRK.

For the farmer of the South we hold that there are but few greater responsibilities than that of caring for the land; not only caring for it, but making it better and better as the years go by. Indeed so great is this responsibility that we affirm that the farmer who is not a soil-builder, rather than a soil robber, is not, however splendid his other qualities may be, a good citizen.

No country has ever been or ever will be greater than its common people—the people whose feet daily press the bosom of Mother Earth; and no farming people can ever be great unless the lands they live upon are fat and fruitful. Where poor, barren lands are, there you will find a poor, barren people—poor in the common comforts that make life better and more wholesome, barren of all aspirations and hope for better things. Where the rich and fruitful lands are, there are found good homes, good schools, vigorous hopeful men and women with "faces turned toward the rising sun."

It is given to but few men to be great as greatness is commonly reckoned; but if true greatness lies in service, in doing well our share of the world's work, and when we go, leaving behind us a world a little better for our having lived in it, in contributing our bit to the welfare and happiness of the present generation and all the generations yet to be—if this be the sort of service that makes for greatness, then, no less than poets and painters, no less than warriors and statesmen, is the soil-building farmer a greater man, worthy to be ranked with the greatest benefactors of mankind.

Hitherto, particularly in the South, where a heavy rainfall and mild winters are factors in depleting soil fertility, soil building has not been easy; on the other hand, it has been both difficult and expensive. But the coming of the winter growing clovers and vetches, with the absolute certainty that they will thrive practically everywhere in the South, has brought soil-building possibilities hardly dreamed of twenty years ago. No longer is it necessary to buy nitrogen, the most expensive of all plant foods; no longer need we be without humus, the magic key that unlocks nature's great plant food storehouses.

What boundless possibilities there are in these great crops! What splendid hopes and visions of better soils, better crops, better people and better living! Through them the Southern farmer, as no other farmer in all America, has a truly wonderful opportunity. Would you double your corn and cotton yields? Would you cut your fertilizer bills in half? Would you ward off drought and flood, and insure your crops? Would you build better homes, good roads, good schools? Would you have a part in making your community and the South greater and and better? Would you leave, as a monument to your life's work, a bit of God's earth better than you found it? Would you do all these? Then grow clovers.—Progressive Farmer.

FINANCIAL SUNSHINE ON BOTH EXPOSITIONS.

On July 1, the management of the San Diego Exposition had in bank a surplus of more than $100,000 cash plus a sum almost as large outstanding in accounts and bills. This surplus was the profit derived from the first six months' operation. Five months out of the six were exceptionally rainy—and the greatest catastrophe of modern times was devastating Europe.

On Saturday, July 23, the Santa Fe brought 22,000 visitors to San Diego. On Sunday, July 4, the attendance at the exposition exceeded 20,000; on Monday it went above 30,000. Since a daily average attendance of 3,000 pays normal operating expenses, San Diego's surplus is increasing rapidly. San Francisco likewise suffered from abnormally wet weather. It actually rained at the Golden Gate on the glorious Fourth; it drizzled on the morning of July 5th. Yet the attendance at the latter date, with Bryan as the principal attraction, reached 187,000, with cash receipts of more than 100,000. For the first five days of July the average attendance exceeded 85,000 in twenty-four hours. It rose far above 100,000 a day for the three holidays. On July 12th, almost at the meridian of the exposition period, the total attendance reached 8,000,000. Since the heavy summer and fall business with the best weather and the biggest special events have just begun, a total attendance of 19,000,000 five millions more than St. Louis, and barely a million behind the Chicago record is possible. According to official statistics the exposition will show a net profit of $150,000 from July operations.

With economy and efficient management both expositions should be able to close their gates with every bill paid. The world war at a distance of 2,000 miles from the centers of population notwithstanding, they will succeed financially as well as artistically, even though neither received a penny in government aid. The West has good reason to be proud of the remarkable achievement.

Happy hours at the Shadowland.

THE REAL WEALTH PRODUCER.

The Memphis News-Scimitar says that while much is being said about rural credits, Government aid to finance the cotton crop, and other methods to assist the farmer, the real farmer is seldom seen. It takes note of the well known fact that farmers' meetings are attended mostly by storekeepers of little towns and cross-roads, and by great land owners who farm mostly by proxy, but that the real farmer is the man who goes into the fields and tills the soil with his own hands. It is regrettable that in all provisions intended for the benefit of the farmer in National and State legislation, the real farmer and wealth producer rarely has opportunity to profit by what is intended solely for his relief and the advancement of his material interest. In nearly all instances the farmer by proxy, the prosperous land owner and the theoretical rather than

All in the hopes of somehow getting into line with the requirements of the motoring public. Meanwhile Chandler goes right along with one model — one right model — that the public continues to demand in quantities beyond the factory capacity. Chandler is selling ten thousand cars this year, because Chandler was right in the first place when it pioneered the light-six field. And because being right, the Chandler Company has continued to devote all its mechanical genius, all its business ability, to this one model — improving it here and there, from time to time, beautifying its body lines, and driving its price down and down just as far as the Company's lower-car-profit policy would permit. Meanwhile others have been marketing two models, three models, and new models every six months; all of which must of necessity mean decreased factory efficiency, costly experimentation and uncertain service to purchasers. So what is the result of the Chandler one-model policy so far as you are concerned? The best value, known value, obtainable at a price so low! GOSSIP PARTY.

On Friday afternoon Mrs. Gustine invited a number of her young lady friends for, as she told them, a gossip party. Immediately their interest was enlisted for they knew that only the nicest, brightest gossip would be indulged where Mrs. Gustine was hostess. At the beginning only a few dear friends were to be present for the announcement of the latest gossip but when she thought of the many who would be interested at the good news about fifty were invited before there could be any stopping, all friends of the hostess and in sympathy with what interested this good woman whose heart is ever young. After all had arrived and had been refreshed with delicious punch, asked each other what could be the latest news and waiting for some other event they were rewarded by a gay costumed gypsy girl entering the room prepared to tell any one's fortune who might have a desire to know it. After several had been told their fate she spied Miss Exie Campbell and announced the all important event which is to be September the 29th to Mr. Bruce Phenix, at the Baptist church. All their friends had had a suspicion of this but so shy have they been that none knew till the bright-eyed gypsy at the bidding of the mother of the fortunate young man made the news public.

Miss Exie is a typical Southern young lady, cultured and refined and well may Bruce be congratulated on winning her. The house was tastefully decorated with greens and black-eyed Susans. Miss Hazel McKenzie sang very sweetly "The Gypsy Trail" and Miss Lela Whipkey gave a piano selection. Sandwiches and tea were served at the close of the happy event. Mrs. Gustine was also assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Phenix and Mrs. A. L. Whipkey.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Friday afternoon little Miss Nell Harper, aged 5, and Master James William Green, aged 3, whose birthdays are nearly together, entertained a number of their little friends on their grandmother's lawn. Their Sunday school teachers were guests. Games were played and the swings were kept in use nearly all the time. Two cakes, one with five bright candles and the other with three were admired and the candles blown out. Then ice cream and cake were served.

AN EVENING OF FUN.

We-Us And Company Entertain Large Number of Guests With Side-Splitting "Stunts."

The young people of Colorado were invited to the hospitable home of Judge and Mrs. William Robert Smith for last Thursday evening. In the corner of the invitations was the little word "Pi," and was the source of much curiosity—just what it was intended for. Some thought it was Greek, some German and some this and that, and it was the printer man that knew more of this pi than any other, having it so much more. Not many were able to solve this little puzzle till they arrived and were handed cards and found it was the program that was p'd and they were requested to help straighten things out, which they did in a little while. After all were at ease a program was rendered by Colorado's talented young people. There was almost every conceivable thing on this program. Bible scenes, scenes from Shakespeare, modern scenes, patriotic scenes, detective scenes, clown scenes, dancing scenes and scenes that never were seen before. It would be a difficult matter to give any special praise to any one actor for they were all artists in their special line and Colorado may hear of some of her young folks becoming famous on the stage.

Mrs. Smith, who is always ready for fun and especially with the young people and knowing the ability of the young folks in her home town, spared neither time nor work to see that all who were invited had a good time, and by the help of her loyal friends this was accomplished much to the delight of all present. The south porch was converted into a stage and the scenery artist showed his ability by the way in which he decorated the curtain. The future business and professional young men's aids were appropriately displayed.

KING'S DAUGHTERS.

The King's Daughters held their regular monthly meeting with Mrs. J. W. Shepperd last Thursday. A large number was in attendance. This class has decided to put in a memorial window in the church and already have a part of the funds. After the regular business officers were elected for the year as follows: Mrs. J. T. Davis, President; Mrs. McCall, Vice President; Mrs. R. H. Hester, Secretary; Mrs. Annis, Treasurer; Mrs. D. N. Arnett, Teacher and Mrs. Van King, Assistant Teacher.

Mrs. Shepperd had as guests Mrs. Wescott, Mrs. S. D. Vaughan, Mrs. Mason, of Georgetown, and Mrs. Chatfield, of Dallas. Ice cream with black and white cake were served at the social hour.

"I have used Chamberlain's Tablets and found them to be just as represented, a quick relief for rheumatics, dizzy spells and other symptoms denoting a torpid liver and a disordered condition of the digestive organs. They are worth their weight in gold," writes Miss Clara A. Driggs, Elba, N. Y. Obtainable everywhere.

U. D. C. MEETING.

After the summer vacation the U. D. C. began their work with Mrs. Phenix Monday afternoon. The program was on Tennessee, her heroes and the part they had in the war. In the absence of the president the vice president, Mrs. Gustine, presided. Mrs. G. W. Smith told of the life of General Forrest. Mrs. Merritt made a talk on the place that the Southern women held. Mrs. Annis gave an interesting negro dialect reading. Mrs. Park, wife of the teacher of the principal of the high school, was a guest. Four dollars were received as dues. The hostess served delicious sandwiches and tea after the program. The next meeting is with Mrs. G. W. Smith.

CENTRAL CIRCLE MEETS.

The Central Circle of the Methodist ladies met with Mrs. J. A. Buchanan on Monday afternoon with the vice-president, Mrs. L. E. Lasseter, presiding. Besides the regular business the ladies decided to entertain the other members of the church at the home of Mrs. Sam Wulfford, September the 25th, from 4 to 7. Fifteen dollars were received as dues. Mrs. J. M. Green, Mrs. Mason, of Georgetown, and Mrs. Chatfield, of Dallas, were visitors. Ice cream and cake were served at the social hour. The next meeting is with Mrs. Webster.

SUNBEAM PROGRAM.

The Sunbeam Band will celebrate their first anniversary Sunday evening by having a program at the Baptist church. Mrs. Robert Terrell, who is the leader, has made many sacrifices for these little folks and she and they deserve the attendance and offering from every member of the church. All friends are cordially invited.

METHODIST TEA.

On Tuesday from 4 to 6 o'clock the ladies of the Methodist church served tea at the home of Mrs. W. L. Doss for a memorial window for their new church in memory of Mrs. T. Q. Mullin. She was one of the earliest and most faithful members, in fact, almost every one who has lived in Colorado any length of time knows of the sweet Christian spirit of Mrs. Mullin in all walks of life and none knew her but to love her.

In spite of the rain a large number was present. A musical program was rendered by Misses Whipkey, Henthorne, Root, Van Tuyl, Roe, Adams, Little Mary Jackson, Ruth Chatfield, Mrs. Guitar and Mrs. M. K. Jackson. A most delicious salad course was served by the ladies. The offering was large enough to assure the window being put in right away.

FOLLOW THE CROWD

PEOPLE ARE TALKING LIKE SMOKE ABOUT THE WAY FOLKS ARE FLOCKING TO OUR STORE

You know there is nothing like getting up and hustling when you want the business, and we want it—want it bad, and we are proud to say we are getting it. Had you ever thought of comparing our business to a bank? Had you ever thought, when you entered our store and made a purchase of a dollar's worth, you made a deposit with us of a dollar and how well satisfied our trade is knowing they take a dollar's worth out with them? Our store could also be compared to a bee-hive from the way people flock to and fro. We try to keep each department cultivated as a park, considering each department as a tree and each piece of merchandise as a twig. We could conscientiously say that our store is in bud because our fall goods are daily coming in. We want to impress upon you now to think of your future needs. It won't be but a few days until our immense stocks will be complete. One of the important efforts and features of our stores is to do everything and anything just a little bit better than any other store does. We believe that we are doing it because our friends tell us so. We have added to our immense line of merchandise a line of trucks and wagons, that is a necessity to every farmer. We are glad to say to the consumer that we are in a position to make prices on wagons in a like manner of 15 years ago. The high grade, low wheel wood wagon, steel hounds, made up in a complete way like a wagon for only $50. Two and three-quarters or three-inch wagons complete, bed, gear, brake and seat for only $75. Two and three-quarters or three-inch iron wagons, no tires to get loose, bed, gear, brake and spring seat all for only $80. Three-inch bolt's arc wagon, bed, gear, brake and spring seat for only $85—usual price $105.00 to $110.00. The above prices are evidence to the consumer that there is no jobber's profit connected with this offer and we assure you and are ready to show you that this is a direct shipment from the factory. We profess to be a farmer's friend and have proven to them that we strive to help them on every line we carry. This as well as other things we carry is an opportunity to any that are interested in the lines we have in stock. What we want is a chance to show you these wagons, how reasonable our prices are, how absolutely we carry out our guarantee of satisfaction. Furthermore, our idea of satisfaction is yours. Our standard is just what you expect. You are the one to be satisfied and we insist, for our own good and yours, that you be satisfied to the point where you will recommend us to your friends. We know that you like to buy goods that you can depend upon; the kind that you know is right in style, right in quality, right in price. Our predictions have come true. We predicted early this season that this would be the bumper crop year of our lives. Not a spot on earth that we know of that is more bountifully blessed than we. This being the case we feel assured that you will want to buy for yourself and family all the necessities and comforts. We intend to pride ourselves in supplying our stores in everything to supply your wants at prices that will be attractive to you, in styles that will exactly suit the eye, and in quality that will equal any line. We don't ask for anything more than for a trade to equal our trade last fall. We will name you prices when our stock is complete. Don't buy elsewhere before you see our prices.

SYNOPSIS.

Professor Stilliter, psychologist, and Gordon Barclay, millionaire, plan to preach to the world the gospel of efficiency through a young and beautiful woman who shall believe that she is a heaven-sent messenger. They kidnap the orphaned little Amesbury girl, playmate of Tommy Steele, and conceal her in a cavern, in care of a woman, to be molded to their plan as she grows up. Fifteen years elapse, Tommy is adopted by Barclay, but loses his heirship and in a hunting trip discovers Celestia. Stilliter takes Celestia to New York. Tommy follows, she gets away from both of them, and her real work begins. At Barclay's invitation she meets a dozen of the business barons who are converted to her new gospel. She attends a ball and makes an impression on the society world. Tommy joins the labor ranks. Tommy plays Joseph to the wife of a modern Fothergill and is rescued from a lynching party by Celestia, who under Stilliter's influence, refuses to speak to him.

TENTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER XIV.

Although Kehr had been instructed to give Celestia every chance to settle the strike, and to hinder her in nothing, he was still determined to bring about his own kind of a settlement if possible. Close-fisted and narrow, he was nevertheless a man with beliefs and principles for which he was not only willing to sacrifice his fortune, but his life if necessary. To Kehr a man who agreed to work certain hours for certain wages and then went back on his agreement was no more to be considered or treated with than a mad dog.

Conditions at Bitumen had come to such a pass that Kehr could see no possibility of compromise. The country was suffering from what amounted to a coal famine, and the fault lay, so Kehr honestly felt, with a group of two-legged animals who didn't know enough to come in out of the rain.

He had goaded the strike leaders until they were ready to order an attack on his stockade, and he was grimly ready and even eager for that attack to begin. Tommy had thwarted him once. Now they had sent Celestia to thwart him again.

Still he received her with politeness, and told her that he was glad she had come.

"I'm glad you've come, young lady, because I know your theories, and I'm glad to have the chance of showing you how impractical they are in the face of an actual condition. You want labor and capital to be friends and to work hand in hand. Can a gunman be friends with a bishop?"

"Why yes," said Celestia, "when they get so they understand each other. But a day will come when there won't be any gunmen."

"Nor any walking delegates, nor any fools who spend more than they can earn and then begin to holler murder and set off dynamite. Now you just sit down in that chair, and I'll tell you in a nutshell the history of the last few years that has led up to the present situation. To begin with I was a day laborer myself in these coal fields."

Celestia raised her hand in protest. "Don't tell me your side of the quarrel," she said; "tell me theirs. When your heart is very hard against a man, the best way to soften it is to say all the favorable things you can think of about him. I'd like you to tell me all the good things you can think of about Gunsdorf and then I shall go to him and ask him to tell me all the good things he can think of about you."

"From neither of us," said Kehr grimly, "will you hear any good of the other."

"Then," said Celestia, smiling gently; "I shall have to do the talking for you both."

"You can change me into a breakfast food as easily as you can change Gunsdorf into a human being."

"Some day you and Gunsdorf will shake hands and you'll both admit that you were both wrong."

"You admit that he's wrong?" "Yes, Mr. Kehr, and you too."

She rose and smiled upon him. "I am to come and go as I please?" "If you go among those devils over there in the town I won't be responsible for the consequences."

CHAPTER XV.

Kehr must have had a military ancestor from whom he had inherited a talent for making defensive warfare as nasty as possible. From the outside his stockade surrounding several acres of ground presented no great obstacle to an attack in force. It was not as high as it might have been, nor as thick or strong. The tops of the logs of which it had been built were not even pointed. It did not seem to have been pierced with a sufficiency of holes for rifles. Indeed Mr. Kehr's stockade was not so much a defense as a temptation. His real defenses began just inside. For twenty feet the ground was pitted like a sieve, in each pit a pointed stake had been planted, upright. Within this ring of mischief were vicious entanglements of barbed wire.

In Mr. Kehr's plan of defense the stockade would be surrendered after a mere show of resistance, the strikers swarming over the top would become entangled among the staked pits and the barbed wire like flies in a spider's web, and then Kehr could make them sorry that they had ever been born. He had two machine guns placed on an eminence from which they could sweep the whole inner ring of the stockade. He had plenty of rifles, plenty of ammunition, and what was more important he had plenty of men who could be relied on to shoot down their fellow men.

If by any chance the stockade and the entanglements were carried, the assailants would be confronted by an inner stockade, higher and stronger, built around a spring and well stocked with provisions. But the attack, Kehr felt, if it ever did come to a head would end bloodily and ingloriously in the barbed wire.

Four feet from the top of the main stockade on the inner side was a shelf-like walk of heavy planks from which sentries could look out upon the world beyond.

Celestia's first act of exploration was to climb a ladder which gave access to this narrow way and start along it. Almost instantly the white apparition was challenged by a sentry.

Celestia gave the password and made the man tell her what his hours and duties were.

"Do you really mean," she said, "that if you saw a man out there, and asked him his business, and got no answer, that you would try to shoot him?"

"If I saw him in this light," said the sentry, "he'd be so near that I wouldn't have to try. I couldn't miss him."

"And he might be a deaf man who didn't hear your challenge. I don't think you'd shoot him, would you? Wouldn't you just shoot somewhere near him to frighten him?"

She looked the man steadily in the face. "Wouldn't you?" "I got no business talking to anyone when I'm on duty."

"Wouldn't you?" The man made a snuffing noise. "If I hear you fire," said Celestia, "I shall know that you didn't shoot to kill, shan't I?"

The sentry, an alert young fellow to begin with, seemed now to have fallen into a kind of trance. "I guess," he said, "I'd do anything you said if you looked at me while you said it."

Celestia smiled and passed on. She made the whole tour of the stockade, fascinating merciful feelings into the heart of each sentry she met. At last, just as the moon was rising and flooding the world with light, she came back to the first sentry. It was easy to see that he was glad she had come back. He drew a long breath and his eyes brightened.

"Why," she asked, "have almost all the trees been cut down?" "So's we can see the strikers a long way before they get to us."

"Then why have they left that one big grove so near the stockade? They could take shelter in that, and if they had a small cannon—"

"But they haven't."

for. What it would be for, if I was old man Kehr." "How would he make it all blow up?" asked Celestia.

"By electricity. He'd have a switch somewhere that connected up all the detonators in the grove."

"What is a switch?" The sentry explained as well as he could, and after wishing him good-night, Celestia went slowly away, deeply pondering.

While she pondered on this, she heard herself sharply challenged, and found herself face to face with a black-bearded man who stood with his back to a sheet-iron door in the side of a small sheet-iron house, that had no windows.

Celestia gave the word for the night and asked the man what he was guarding.

He shook his head. "But I want to go in and see for myself," said Celestia. "Mr. Kehr told me that I could go wherever I liked."

"Door locked," said the man simply, "and Mr. Kehr don't want any fooling round this building."

"Haven't you got the key?" His eyes were beginning to feel the magic of her eyes, and his ears of her voice.

"I have not." "But you know where it is?" "What if I do?"

"Why, you'd tell me, and I could get it and open this door?" The man tried to laugh roughly and failed.

"Where is it?" she asked. There was a short battle of eyes, and Celestia as usual conquered.

"Mr. Kehr said you could go where you liked?" Celestia simply nodded and continued to look the man in the eyes. He hesitated a moment, and then leaned over and lifted a large, flat stone. Under the stone a bright nickel-plated key shone in the moonlight.

"Thank you," said Celestia. And she took the key and opened the iron door of the iron house and went in.

"For God's sake," said the man, all trembling now at what he had done; "don't touch anything. Only look!"

"Then," said Celestia, "come and show me what there is to see. It's all dark in here."

The man followed her hastily into the building and struck a match. "That there!" he said in a whisper; "that there switch. That's all there is to see. Now come out. Please do."

The match had gone out. Celestia followed the sentry into the open air, and while he relocked the door, and rehid the key, she thanked him very graciously, as if he had done her some small gracious favor. Well, she had seen the switch and just before the match went out, she had read these words painted on a rectangle of white cardboard:

"Don't touch. Dynamite!" "And what," she said sweetly, "are your orders about that switch? What will be the occasion of setting off the dynamite?"

The sentry affected not to hear. "You have to tell me," said Celestia. After a moment's silence, he said: "I'm only to close the circuit on a direct order from Mr. Kehr. I don't never slept in times of danger, went on a midnight tour of inspection, and made certain discoveries which filled him with anger and anxiety. The very first sentry whom he talked to made a damaging confession.

"Seen nothing tonight?" Kehr asked. "Only the lady, sir."

"What lady?" "The lady in white."

"Oh!" "Yes, sir."

The sentry gave the appearance of one who wishes to speak, but is afraid. "Well, what is it?"

"After talking with her, sir, I think I ought to be relieved. My orders is to shoot to kill. After talking with her, sir, I couldn't do it."

"You wouldn't obey my orders?" "I couldn't, sir."

"When you have been relieved, you will report at the guard house. You are a prisoner."

"Yes, sir."

Kehr returned to his headquarters and gave orders that all the men then on sentry duty should be relieved, and sent to him. From all he obtained similar confessions to that made by the first sentry. One by one he interviewed every man in his command, and found, to his great relief, that only those on duty at the time when Celestia had made her tour of inspection had been tampered with. These he had locked up.

Early the next morning Gunsdorf, Carson, Cracowitz and Tommy Barclay arrived before the gate of the stockade under the protection of a white flag, and were admitted presently, after being blindfolded, to a parley with Kehr.

"Barclay," Gunsdorf explained, "comes on a private matter. He wants to thank the lady who saved his life yesterday. If that isn't possible he wishes permission to go back to his friends in town."

"You others have come on business. Well, I'll listen to you once more—I can. Barclay may see the lady."

Tommy was blindfolded once more, and escorted to Celestia's house. He was pushed in, told to take off the bandage over his eyes, and heard the door lock behind him.

He found himself in a plain little sitting room about twelve feet square. Two doors opened from it, but both at the moment were closed. Of Celestia there was neither sight nor sound. Tommy seated himself in a plain deal chair, and waited. Half an hour passed. Then he began to call to her, at first softly and then more loudly:

"Celestia—oh Celestia—where are you? It's Tommy."

Presently he heard himself answered in a sleepy voice. "What is it? I've just waked up."

"Don't trouble then—later will do. I came to thank you for yesterday, and to ask why you wouldn't speak to me. I couldn't sleep. I had to come."

"I'll come in a little while," said Celestia. "Do you mind waiting?" After what seemed an eternity to Tommy she came.

"Oh, Celestia," he said, "you hurt me so. Why wouldn't you speak to me?"

"I don't quite know," she said hesitatingly, "but I will now. Only I

When they return to the town the attack will begin. And if they don't return to the town by eleven o'clock, the attack will begin."

Celestia pondered this for a few minutes. Then she said: "We'll need all our strength. Have you had breakfast?"

"I couldn't eat till I'd seen you and you'd spoken to me."

Celestia laughed and once more approached the door. "How about breakfast?" she called.

"Orders are to supply breakfast on demand."

"Can you make it breakfast for two?"

"Certainly."

Ten minutes later the door was opened, a steaming tray was slid along the floor through the opening, and the door was once more closed and locked.

Almost in silence for they were both very hungry, Celestia and Tommy ate a hearty breakfast.

CHAPTER XVII.

Once again as at the Octagon fire, Celestia and Tommy found themselves in agreement. Each was bent upon saving life. Tommy told Celestia of the fighting temper the strikers were in, and Celestia told Tommy of Kehr's preparations for making the defense of the stockade a shambles of those who should attack it. She told him, too, how she had made a beginning of softened hearts, but seeing that she had been locked up she feared that the softened hearts had opened up to Kehr and been put where they could do no mercy.

"But Tommy," she said, "they wouldn't be such fools as to attack in broad day, would they?"

"They are very strong numerically, and very weak in the head. Their cause is just enough, but they always present it to notice in unjust ways. Their every passion seems to them an argument. Labor is its own worst enemy. Labor needs is friends, friends of education and experience, dispassionate men and women with no axe to grind. If they succeed in rushing this stockade and massacring everybody in it, what earthly good will it do them? None. And they don't see it. They think capital will be so frightened that it will simply curl up its toes and yield to their every demand. Why, Celestia, there are men in that town so ignorant—you wouldn't believe it! There are grown men over there who think that all the forces of American capital are impounded in this stockade, and that if these forces are scotched capital will no longer have anyone to take up the glove for it. Gunsdorf's a wise old fellow. But he's not in this game because he loves labor, but because he loves Gunsdorf. Carson is a fanatic—an honest fanatic. Cracowitz is an out-and-out anarchist. It's a pity, because fundamentally theirs is the side of justice. I wish I could hear what they are saying to old man Kehr. I'm afraid it won't be a soothing interview for anyone."

"They came with you?" Tommy nodded.

"I begged them not to come, but Gunsdorf would do it. I think—"

"What?" "I think that if there is an attack on the stockade Gunsdorf doesn't want to be mixed up in it—technically. I think he intends to make Kehr so angry that Kehr will throw him and his companions into the lockup, white flag and all. Gunsdorf's not returning at the given time, eleven o'clock will be the signal for the attack; and good Lord how the poor fools will be slaughtered."

"If you could get to them, and tell them about Gunsdorf?"

"They might not believe me, but if I could get to them I'd certainly try it."

body being dragged away from the door. The sentry didn't hesitate a moment. He unlocked the door, flung it open and leaped into the hallway. He was in time to see Celestia's heels bump over the threshold of the parlor door as Tommy, half laughing and half ashamed, dragged her in from the hall.

The sentry leaped to the rescue of those heels and their beautiful owner. The situation with which he found himself confronted in the parlor was not, however, in the least what he expected.

Against the opposite wall stood the female prisoner—laughing. The male prisoner was nowhere to be seen. The gallant sentry's lower jaw dropped and hung loosely.

Celestia stopped laughing and came a step forward, looking the sentry squarely in the eyes. He had been warned not to look at her, but he couldn't help himself. "I hope you are not going to shoot anybody with that gun."

"No, ma'am."

"Then put it down." He did so.

"Come here!" He approached close to her. "Will you do me a favor?" "Yes, ma'am." He had to say it. "Promise?"

"I want you to wait in this room in the most comfortable chair and not leave it for an hour. Will you do that?"

The man was completely hypnotized.

"Come, Tommy," said Celestia. They closed the parlor door after them and slipped cautiously out of the house.

But there was no need of caution. The platform along the stockade was lined with Kehr's men, and the attention of these was engaged with matters outside the stockade and beyond.

"By George!" exclaimed Tommy. "They must be expecting an attack."

They ran across the open space to the main gate of the stockade, and were halted by a sentry. Fortunately the pass word of the night before had not been changed. Celestia gave it, and asked the man to open the gate. He had orders to let no one leave the stockade.

He found himself looking into a pair of profound eyes, that somehow or other seemed to muddle his brain. "You must open it—for me."

He hesitated, then turned slowly, and began to fumble with the somewhat complicated fastenings of the gate. A few moments later Tommy and Celestia were in the open.

About two hundred yards distant was the grove, surrounded by a stone wall, which Kehr had not razed with the rest of the timber. It was swarming with men.

Celestia turned the color of ashes. And without a word she darted toward the grove as fast as she could run, followed by Tommy.

Cries to stop reached them from the top of the stockade, but they ran on. "Shall I bring them down, sir?"

"No," said Kehr. "Damn them!"

His face was convulsed with rage and disappointment. He saw Celestia spring to the top of the stone wall and begin to speak to the men who swarmed in the grove. And his fury knew no bounds. But mingled with it was a cold streak of caution. He had but to make a certain signal with his arm, and the men in that grove and Celestia and Tommy and the stone wall and the grove itself would fly heavenward in one awful discharge of dynamite; but that signal he dared not give.

"Listen to me," Celestia was crying, "and believe me. You've got to believe me. You think you are sheltered here. The whole grove is mined. One spark of electricity and you will all be blown to pieces."

The men hesitated, and looked at her in wonder. Tommy came to her aid.

"Do you think Kehr would leave this cover for your benefit? It's a trap. If you've got any sense at all, you'll get out before you are blown out."

Kehr, watching from the stockade, saw his victims beginning to escape. They left the grove in twos and threes, sullenly but not slowly. Celestia still standing on the top of the wall had turned and faced the stockade, her hands on her hips.

So standing the sun shone full upon her, and she gleamed with a brightness and glory that seemed hardly to belong to this earth.

Even Kehr was moved. True courage always moved him. And in his flinty heart there was a certain sense of relief. It would have been horrible to blow so many men to pieces—dogs and fools though he honestly thought them.

NEW YORK LETTER

One of the curious developments of the week was the rising anger of the pro-Allies press over Germany's agreement to the contentions of America as to the rights of her citizens to travel safely on the high seas. After all that they have said in support of this country's demands one would have expected these newspapers to have chortled with glee at the diplomatic victory of the Nation, but instead they were surprised and chagrined. Rather than welcome the resumption of friendly relations with Germany they straightway sought to stir up fresh trouble by questioning the purpose and sincerity of the agreement of Germany to American contentions.

Nevertheless, overnight the whole aspect of foreign relations has changed. Germany has come back to her former friendship and the only trouble that remains for this country is the question of America's freedom to trade with all nations. Her position has been strengthened by the passing of the cloud that threatened America's relations with Germany, and this country can now take advantage of the changed situation to compel Great Britain to cease from troubling American commerce. It will be difficult for Great Britain to stand much longer against America, if the Administration is firm in dealing with the situation that it has too long tolerated.

The newspapers are filled with reports of British concessions to America. It is asserted with much particularity that England will permit the delivery of German goods bought by American importers prior to March 1st. But the sentiment here is that America wants no concessions, but only her rights, particularly her right to trade everywhere, not by England's leave, but because America is entitled to trade with all nations and to send her cargoes anywhere on the high seas and into every port not actually blockaded.

The jewelers in session here have laid down a fashion code for the wearing of jewelry. In the morning nothing but "quiet" adornments are to be permitted. In the afternoon the jewels are to be suited to lady's occupation. She is to wear sapphires when boating, emeralds for golf and rubies for motoring. In the evening nothing but diamonds will do.

But one thing the National Jeweler's Association could not settle. The wrist watch for men had many advocates and bitter opponents, and the jewelers adjourned without deciding the momentous issue.

The end of the fire horse in this city was emphasized this week by the auctioning off of thirty fine horses that are no longer needed, owing to the substitution of motor driven apparatus for horse drawn fire engines.

New York University has found a way to combine business education with practice, fifteen students from its School of Commerce having been placed in prominent business houses to learn by practice what they have been taught by lectures.

Sterling exchange continues to be the sensation of the day, with the value of a British sovereign falling without sign of slackening its speed down the financial toboggan. The most important coin in the world today is not the sovereign but the dollar, and the real significance of the monetary situation is that the seat of financial power has shifted from London to New York, with every prospect of its staying here. This means loss of prestige for England as the central monetary power of the world, in addition to the diminishing of her influence through decrease of the nation's wealth.

It is a serious question for England how to relieve this situation, at least for the moment. Is it possible for her to refrain from buying war materials here? Surely not, and if America stands squarely on the President's declaration of real neutrality in his opposition nearly a year ago to the negotiation here of foreign war loans, it will be found that America now more than ever holds the key to the European situation and can exert a more powerful influence for peace than has yet been dreamed of. The magnitude of this opportunity is not yet fully understood.

There is not much satisfaction in the figures showing an increase of 363 ships aggregating 737,623 tons in the American merchant marine. That being the total to about 6,000,000 tons, but Great Britain, in the same year, in spite of the war, added 225,000 tons to her fleet, making her total in spite of war losses, 21,275,000 tons. And as if it were not enough to have America's chief fleet in the Pacific bought up by a British company for the trans-Atlantic service, now China is going to hoist its flag over a fleet of merchantmen to carry America's commerce across the Pacific.

Now New Jersey wants to take the strongest man out of the President's cabinet by running Secretary Garrison for Governor. It would be too bad to weaken the Administration just to help out the Democratic party in a local fight.

William Bayard Hale has cut to the marrow of the question of the President's power in an article in the American in which he recalls the protests of Wilson the historian against the irresponsibility of government, reciting that in his former role of professor Woodrow Wilson had pointed out that the President was responsible to nobody and had advocated that the cabinet be made responsible to the Congress, but in his present role as President he had not urged such measures.

For more than a year, Dr. Hale points out, the President has been acting practically alone, the people forbidden to criticize him and being powerless to restrain him. He asks whether any man is wise enough to solve alone problems affecting the well being of 100,000,000 people while lacking the benefit of their advice and criticism. This condition is really more extreme than any in Europe where no ruler, not even the Kaiser or the Czar, is so absolute.

Hardened machine politicians were brushing away tears the other day at the Constitutional Convention when Elihu Root ended an hour-long attack on "invisible government" and an appeal for the short ballot. All of which is interesting chiefly as a tribute to the personal power and mighty eloquence of Mr. Root, and by no means indicative of conversion on the part of the men who run the machine. But one will not go far astray in seeing in this incident that the former Senator at 73 years is a factor to be reckoned with in Republican plans for 1916.

New York City began paying its municipal debts the other day and by nightfall the Comptroller had handed $57,000,000 over the counter in exchange for municipal notes to that amount.

Col. Roosevelt certainly did not make a record for political marksmanship at Plattsburg by his outburst which so nearly involved the professional future of his protégé, Gen. Wood. He did not strengthen himself by his "sissy" attack on the President. It is so long since the Colonel was in a position of responsibility that the public does not recollect that in those days he never was so talkative as he is now, and it is easy to see that if he were at the head of the nation he would by no means go hurtling into trouble as he now seems to want the President to do. The Colonel's attitude to the Kaiser causes wonderment on the part of those who recognize his likeness to the German Emperor, but they fail to take count of the psychological facts that it is extremes that meet, while those of like mold often are antagonistic because of that very likeness.

Regulation of public utilities scored one when it compelled the subway managers to discard the wooden cars—478 of them—that added the danger of fire to other perils of rapid transit. But the said managers having bought steel cars to take the place of the wooden ones, just shift the latter over to their elevated lines and go right on using them.

After a while the courts will have it all figured out just what acts indicate sanity or the lack of it. Surrogate Nicolai has contributed to the stock of decisions by ruling that it is not irrational for a woman to take a bath on the back stoop of her house, or to chase her neighbor's chickens out of the front yard wearing only a determined look.

Rumors of Germany making offers to buy large quantities of cotton at good prices would be interesting if true, but probably all these reports have no more substantial basis than the hope of the cotton market that Great Britain's declaration of cotton as contraband will be suspended. So long as England is not forced to lift its embargo against America's cotton trade, it will be impossible to relieve the market and all sincere observers admit that the outlook is dark for the growers who are now harvesting a new crop of 11,800,000 bales.

There is no small satisfaction here over the semi-official statement that the President has agreed to support the legislation necessary to increase the standing army of the United States to 300,000 men. The opposition to national defense is not much in evidence here.

A surfeit of peaches threatens the metropolis. It is estimated that 4,000 car loads of the luscious fruit will reach here in the course of the present month. This is so much beyond the consuming capacity of 6,000,000 people as to make the price outlook serious for the growers.

The question of supplies of dyes for American industries has become so acute that the Department of Commerce has sent Mr. Norton here to inquire what can be done to help the situation that has been created by the cutting off of German supplies. It is not a question of money or power, but of science, and one newspaper sums up the situation by crying out for "an Edison of chemistry."

Policemen of Berkeley will be required to attend the University of California, it was announced today. This is the first time any city in the world has made preparations to have a "college for police department." The course of study is on the relation of mental diseases to criminology. This is on the theory that the policeman will be enabled to "size up" a man arrested for a crime and ascertain just what other crimes he might have committed.

Washington, Dec. 8.—Prospects of a billion-bushel wheat crop this year were increased by today's government report, which forecast 981,000,000 bushels, based on its September 1 canvass. Spring wheat indicates a crop of 322,000,000 bushels, an increase of 15,000,000 since the August prediction was made.

The rain Monday night, Tuesday night and the downpour on Wednesday morning and intermittently during that day, was a great success in wetting things, filling tanks and promoting aquatic sports, but as a refreshment to the crops, it rather overdid the needs of the occasion. HAZEL DAWN RETURNS TO SCREEN IN FIVE PART SCREEN COMEDY, "NIOBE."

Hazel Dawn, who recently completed a successful starring tour in "The Debutante," in which she won a great personal triumph, and who made her debut in motion pictures in "One of Our Girls," a former Famous Players production in which she sprang into immediate popularity as an international film favorite, returns to the screen in an elaborate film version of the famous stage success, "Niobe," by Harry and Edward A. Paulton. "Niobe" is the comedy of a Greek statue that comes to life and has a great deal of amusement at the expense of contemporary mortals. This mirth-provoking subject is the current attraction at Opera House Movies, Friday, September 24th, on the Paramount program.

The humor of the play is derived from the fact that Peter Amos Dunn, the president of the insurance company, brings to his own house, for safe-keeping, the precious statue of Niobe, which his company has heavily insured. Electricians wiring the house at the time, wrap the electric coils about the feet of the statue. Dunn falls asleep and dreams that the current passing through the wires brings the statue to life. The perfectly moral president finds himself in a delicate and amusing position in trying to explain to his shocked wife and other members of his household the presence of the scantily clad maid, running wild through his home. At the crucial moment of his misery, however, he awakens, and finds the statue in its ancient and peaceful condition.

As the incarnated and animated statue, Miss Dawn has numerous and unequalled opportunities for the display of the captivating powers that made "One of Our Girls" such a bewitching characterization.

THE CAPTIVE.

"The Captive," the second drama in which Blanche Sweet has starred under the direction of the Lasky Feature Play Co., is based on the play of the same name by Cecil B. De Mille and Jeanie MacPherson. It deals with events during the days of the Balkan Wars, and is primarily concerned with the romance of a Montenegrin peasant girl and a Turkish nobleman.

Sonya Martinovitch (played by Miss Sweet), her older brother, and her little crippled brother dwell on a small farm in Montenegro. In the first battle of the war with Turkey the elder brother is slain, and Sonya is left helpless. In order to relieve the situation, one of the Turks, captured in the same combat, as assigned to Sonya as a captive who must take the place of the dead brother on the farm. At first Sonya hates the captive, both for his race and rank, and seeks to humiliate him in every manner possible, but he is so truly patient and noble that she begins to feel affection for him. The Turk (played by House Peters) finally shows his mastery when Sonya lashes him with a whip.

The main events of the story concern the manner in which Sonya and the Turk come to love one another, and the manner in which the Turk saves her from a marauding party of his own countrymen. In the end the material disasters which have overtaken them both, reduce them to a level of common poverty, and the distinctions of class, which prevented their union, are thus obliterated.

The drama is of intense romantic spirit, and most thrilling.

Opera House Movies, Tuesday, September 21. Matinee Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

SWAT MAIL ORDER HOUSES.

National Movement to Force Them to Aid Local Communities; Agent Here

A petition is being signed by the principal business houses and firms of El Paso, representative of the entire retail business of this section, which will be presented to Congressman W. R. Smith, as part of a national campaign being waged by practically every city in the United States, through the National Association of Business men, to compel concerns selling goods direct to consumers entirely by mail, to contribute their portion of funds in the development of the local community, the county and the state. The petition is in support of a bill which was introduced in the Sixty-fifth Congress by W. H. Hinebaugh, of the Twenty-ninth Illinois district.

G. G. Gustafson, representing the association in the Southwest, arrived in El Paso from Roswell on Tuesday evening. Already he has secured a large number of signatures from representative retail firms in El Paso and a number of the principal banks. He will remain in El Paso for several days and then go to Deming, Silver City and other cities in New Mexico, not yet signed up. The merchants of Pecos, Carlsbad, Roswell, Albuquerque, Santa Fe, Las Vegas, Clovis and many other cities have strongly supported the nationwide petition with their signatures.

Department in Washington

Mr. Gustafson stated that the National Association of Business Men maintains a department at Washington, D. C., under the direction of J. C. Atchison, and the Merchants' Trade Journal of Des Moines. This department attends committee meetings and follows all legislation affecting retail merchants throughout the United States, and is the only one of its kind at the national capital. "The association has received unusual support everywhere," said Mr. Gustafson. "As it is now, every business concern in our town and county must bear a part of the expense in the building and keeping up of our schools, farmers' institutes, agricultural colleges, etc., that all living in the state may be benefited."

"As the local business men in the past have borne this expense they have now decided that the concerns selling direct by mail must be made to contribute towards community betterment if they wish equal profits and prosperity. The advertising matter sent out by the mail order houses, in many cases, contains misrepresentations which can not be remedied by interstate commerce laws. This has now crystallized in the National Association campaign for better legislation."

$500,000 a Year in Texas

"Authorities in Colorado stated to me that, with the proposed laws, and with a tax of one per cent on total annual sales of such mail order houses, the income to the state there would be about $200,000; about $100,000 in New Mexico, and about $500,000 a year in Texas."

"We expect to co-operate with the chamber of commerce and other local organizations, as elsewhere, as we have been promised hearty support in El Paso already."—El Paso Herald.

If you want the best come to our store where high quality in all of our lines is found. H. L. Hutchinson & Co.

OPERA HOUSE IMPROVEMENT.

Quite extensive improvements are now going forward at the Opera House in this city. Manager Ralph said this week that when all the improvements now contemplated and under way, were completed, no show house in West Texas would have a more attractive front or more convenient entrance. The stage will also be enlarged in anticipation of the coming of the large companies Mr. Ralph now has in view for the coming fall and winter season. His policy is that the people of Colorado will generously respond in patronage to his efforts to give them the best that comes this way, as his past experience in the show business justifies this faith. With completion of the improvements and enlargements now in progress, the Colorado opera house will stand in the best class of West Texas play houses.

WAR'S LESSON IN THRIFT.

Never was the necessity for saving so great, so imperative and relentless as in Europe at this time, being, in fact, no less important than valor; and never perhaps in a thousand years was thrift less fashionable in the world than in the years just preceding the war. Individuals, corporations, and governments were all extravagant. Private and public expenditures were limited only by the means, and as the means were enormously greater than ever before in the world's history, and multiplied faster, expenditures may be said to have been until now unlimited. There is almost no measure of what people can save, that is, do without when they begin to try. That is because they have never tried since the present standards of production were set. The British people may be able to double, even to treble, the difference between what they consume and what they produce. That is capital. It is perfectly feasible. Any prosperous people could do it under sufficient incentive, because, in normal times, the percentage of production saved is very small. An overwhelming majority of the people in this world still consume all they produce from year's end to year's end, and in Great Britain they had got into the habit of consuming more and looking to the government for the rest.—New York Times.

JULIUS STEGAR.

Among the most popular stage stars who have recently been induced to appear before the camera none is better known than Julius Stegar, who will soon make his debut in the World Film release, of "The Fifth Commandment," a story, replete with heart interest, based on his famous vaudeville offering of the same title, with which he has scored the most remarkable success ever known in that branch of stage entertainment.

Soon after he appeared in vaudeville as a serious actor presenting "The Fifth Commandment." This was a remarkable transition, but made so successfully that he has held a most conspicuous place among the headliners in high-class vaudeville for the past seven years. The verdict of vaudeville audiences has been approved by the discriminating critics from New York to San Francisco.

Among his several worthy contributions to the vaudeville stage "The Fifth Commandment" has been singled out by editorial writers of the country as the most striking example of what a fine offering and a fine artist has done toward the elevation of modern vaudeville. Mr. Stegar is gifted with the rare dramatic talent that reaches the heart, always perfectly natural and therefore the most impressive and he is also the possessor of a fine voice which has long ago made him famous.
