Talk

Thousands of words have been said and thousands more written on the advantages of buying everything possible from local merchants. But it takes more than just words to convince people of the advantages.

One Plains businessman told this week that he had done some figuring and had come up with the shocking realization that he had gotten only 2 per cent of a particular type of business since the first of the year.

The other 98 per cent, he said, went out of town. And most of this business could have been done here. "I can't blame anyone for going elsewhere to buy their goods if they can save money, but a lot of people just take for granted that things can be bought for less elsewhere. In many cases, we can meet or beat out-of-town prices, but we don't even get the chance to compete."

Every citizen of this community owes it to himself and to the local merchants to check local prices first. If merchandise can be bought somewhere else for less than it can here, no one will have a right to holler.

How many businesses do you think there are in Plains? I asked this question to Mollie Courtney, the C-C secretary, the other day while preparing information for the brochure which will be published soon. Together, we figured there must be around 80, but Mollie said she'd do a little checking and try to get a more exact figure. Monday morning she brought me a list of every business in town. There were more than 100!

A coffee conversation the other day got around to socks—you know those things you're always losing one of. To a man we agreed that we all had several socks which were worthless because we had lost the mates.

But one man said this didn't bother him. "I wear boots so my socks don't have to be mates."

There's probably not a day on the calendar which hasn't been designated as a period to honor or promote some product. The average person usually isn't aware of it until the week is already here and it's too late to join in any type of observance.

Who knows but what National Pickle Week might go over real big if the instigators of the event would spend a little time publicizing it beforehand.

Just in case any readers are interested in advance notice on upcoming events, here are a few for consideration:

- Aug. 1-31 -- National Sandwich Month.
- Aug. 1-7 -- National Clown Week.
- Aug. 6 -- Friendship Day.
- Aug. 8 -- International Character Day.
- Aug. 14 -- V.J. Day.
- Aug. 15-Oct. 31 -- National Cherry Pie Time.
- Aug. 17-26 -- Spanish Green Olive Week.

These are just the more popular ones which will be coming up next month. There are a lot more scheduled for September, such as Lamb Time USA, Child Foot Health Month, Protein Bread Sales Month, National Make It Yourself With Wool Week, National Dog Week and Anti-Freeze Week, to name just a few.

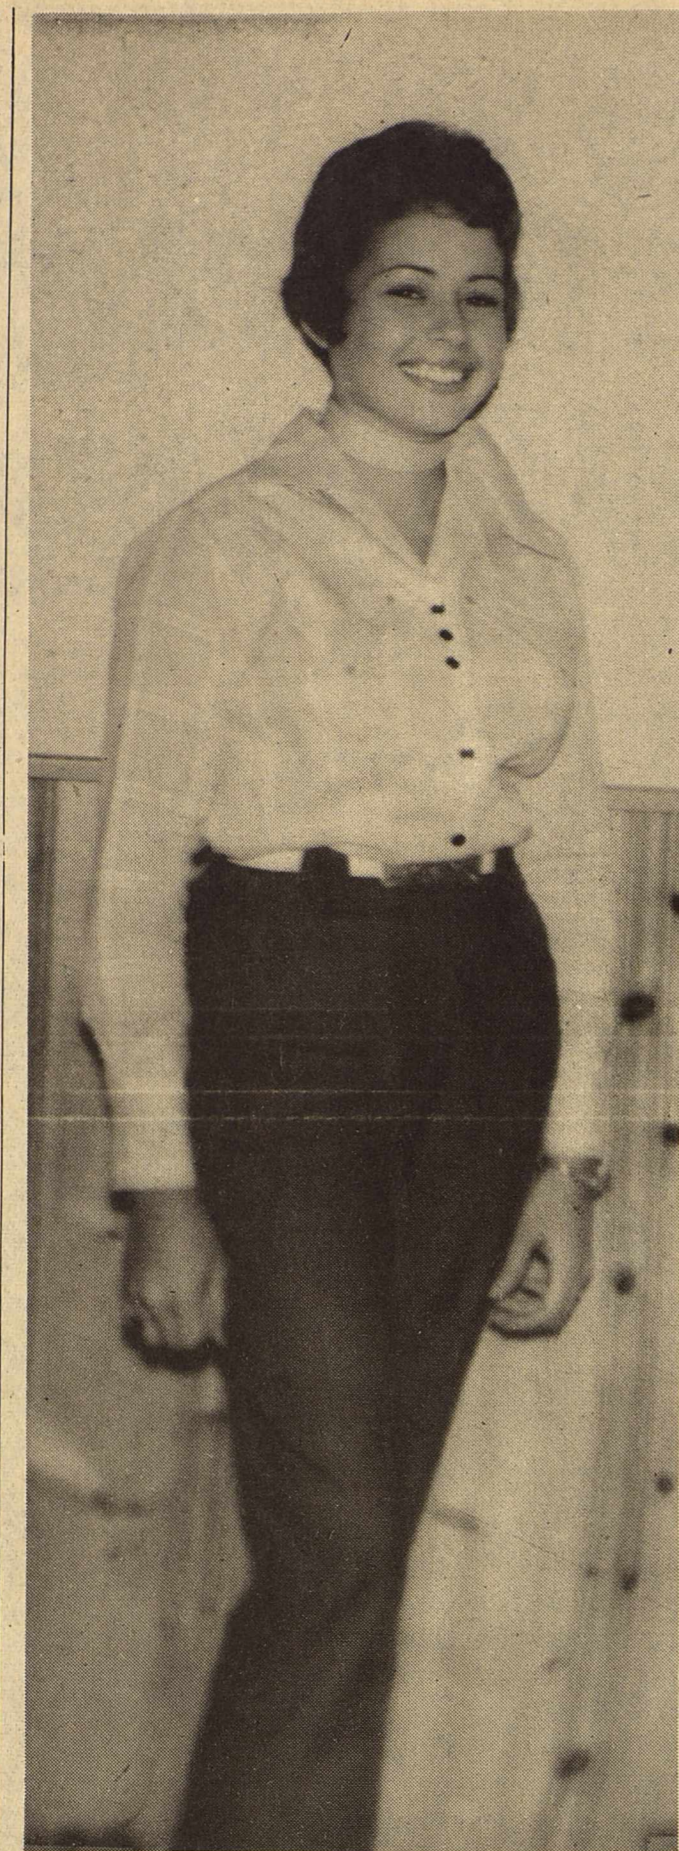

In New Buildings

Drug Store, Dortha's Set Openings

Two Plains business firms hold their formal openings Monday and Tuesday to show off new buildings, new fixtures and new merchandise.

Curry-Edwards Pharmacy and Dortha's Style Shop, next-door neighbors in the new Ty Field Building, invite the public to their big grand openings. Both firms plan open house parties which the public is sure to enjoy.

The drug store is opening its second new building since the business was established July 20, 1957. On that date, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Curry opened the business in their new building on the east side of the court house square. Growth of the community and constantly expanding services of the store

QUEEN CANDIDATE--Representing the Roping Club in the Rodeo Queen Contest is Betty Hamm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Hamm. A sophomore in Plains High School, Betty's hobbies are band, twirling and horseback riding.

Rodeo Entrance Fees Announced

Entrance fees for the various events in the eighth annual Plains Rodeo will be the same as last year, it has been announced by officials of the Roping Club, Lions Club and Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the event.

Bulldogging, bareback riding, saddle bronc riding, bull riding and ladies' barrrel racing all have entrance fees of $15. Team roping will be $30 and calf roping $25.

Books will be closed at 12 noon Aug. 10, first day of the three-day rodeo. All entry fees must be in by that time.

Several other plans for the upcoming event have been revealed. The parade will be held Thursday, Aug. 10, beginning at 2 p. m. The Roping Club will sponsor a dance after each night's performance. Music will be by Jimmy Mackey. Site of the dances has not yet been announced.

The Old Settlers Reunion and Barbeque will be held in the park at noon Saturday, Aug. 12. A $1 rodeo ticket for that night's performance will entitle anyone to attend the feast. Children's prices are 50 cents.

Belt buckles to be presented to winning rodeo participants have been secured. These are furnished by a number of Plains business firms.

Meanwhile, the four candidates for rodeo queen are working hard in efforts to win the coveted title. Each is selling tickets for votes. Each ticket entitles the purchaser to one chance on a new saddle to be given away during the rodeo.

New Cotton Prices Give Big Boost To Farm Outlook

Farmers To Average $6 Bale More

Yoakum County farmers this week welcomed the new government support prices for 1961 cotton which are considerably above those of a year ago. Price of Midling one-inch has been set at 32.91, compared to 32.29 in 1960. Midling Light Spot will bring 30.61 while the 1960 figure was 29.44. And Strict Low Midling Light Spot is priced at 29.11, compared to 27.04 last year. Most Yoakum County cotton falls in these three classes. Encouraging is the fact that greater price increases are noted in the lower grades. Therefore, the penalty for West Texas cotton will not be so great this year.

D.C. Newsom, Plains ginner, said that increases should average about $6 a bale. Based on a 30,000-bale crop, county farmers would realize an extra $180,000 by this calculation.

Cottonseed prices also are expected to be up. Present price is $50 a ton, $5 more than a year ago. Indications are that cottonseed will go up more, possibly to $60.

Bagging price for 1961 cotton will be increased $1.15 a bale and this extra expense will be passed on to the farmer, according to Newsom. However, ginners are expecting a three per cent reduction in insurance rates. If it comes about, it too will be passed on to the farmer and will partially offset the extra bagging expense.

Newsom expressed the possibility that there would be a better cotton market this fall. FOB buyers already are making contacts to buy cotton for future delivery. Newsom says this is 40 to 45 days earlier than normal and is an indication that cotton will find a more encouraging market.

Last year Yoakum County produced about 27,000 bales of cotton, some 6,000 bales under the 1959 mark. Growing conditions at this time are at least as good and probably better than a year ago. The county has about 2,750 more acres than in 1960. According to history, this should provide another 2,000 bales.

Cotton has had virtually no insect damage and farmers have saved by not having had to poison. They also have cut irrigation expenses because weather conditions have not called for a great amount of watering.

Newsom also announced that there would be sufficient bracero labor this fall to serve the county's needs. Governments of the United States and Mexico have extended their agreement through this fall. It had been feared earlier that the labor program might not be renewed.

New Findings In Plains Area

Do Relics Have Historical Value ?

If and when someone from Plains stumbles onto an Indian burying ground or the ruins of an Indian village, a lot of people around here are going to say "I told you so."

Increasing evidence that this area was once a fertile hunting ground for the Redman is popping up almost daily.

Responsible for a number of recent historical discoveries which have put new light on this country's past are several local adventure-seekers who call themselves "arrowhead hunters."

Although arrowhead hunting has been going on since the country was first settled, popularity of the activity has increased greatly in the past year or so. Because more people are taking part in the sport, findings are becoming much more common. At the same time, discoveries of other Indian relics are being made.

Latest development came Sunday when A.C. Jones and Roy Edwards, two recent converts to the exciting new sport, finished recovering 50 large pieces of flint and the hatchet. Jones went back again later in the day and found one more piece. He and his wife returned to the area again Monday and found an Indian knife.

Several others in the Plains area have found flint caches, but Sunday's find was believed to be by far the largest ever recovered in this area.

The stones were located about three feet below the surface of the ground. The land had recently been deep broken. Jones had found one piece of flint which had been turned up by the plow. This led him to look farther.

Discoveries of flint, pottery and arrowheads are becoming quite common in the Plains area. None of the dozen or so hunters who look for such items claims to be an expert archaeologist, but most individuals have their own opinions as to the origin of the relics.

No one, for instance, knows how old these articles may be. Most hunters believe them to be a hundred years old, but admit they may be many hundreds.

The many varied types of arrowhead points make it impossible to identify them with any particular tribe. Hunters are sure that Apache points have been recovered, but most also feel many other tribes probably were represented.

Because of this area's hot, dry weather and absence of lakes and rivers, it has been assumed all along that Indians simply passed through this area enroute to hunting grounds elsewhere. But a few indications point to the possibility that the Plains area might once have been inhabited by buffalo and other animals.

Neighboring Gaines County, which claims to be the birthplace of the last great Comanche chief, Quanah Parker, also claims to have once been a great buffalo country. A fellow by the name of Jim Williams, believed to be the first settler in what is now Gaines County, was known to have boasted many times that he saw no white men other than an occasional buffalo hunter when he first came here. History failed to record the significance of this statement.

Local arrowhead hunters undoubtedly will someday uncover something to make them confirm or forget these theories. Meantime, they're going about their interesting hobbies, enjoying themselves very much while adding light to that part of the area's history which was never recorded in books.

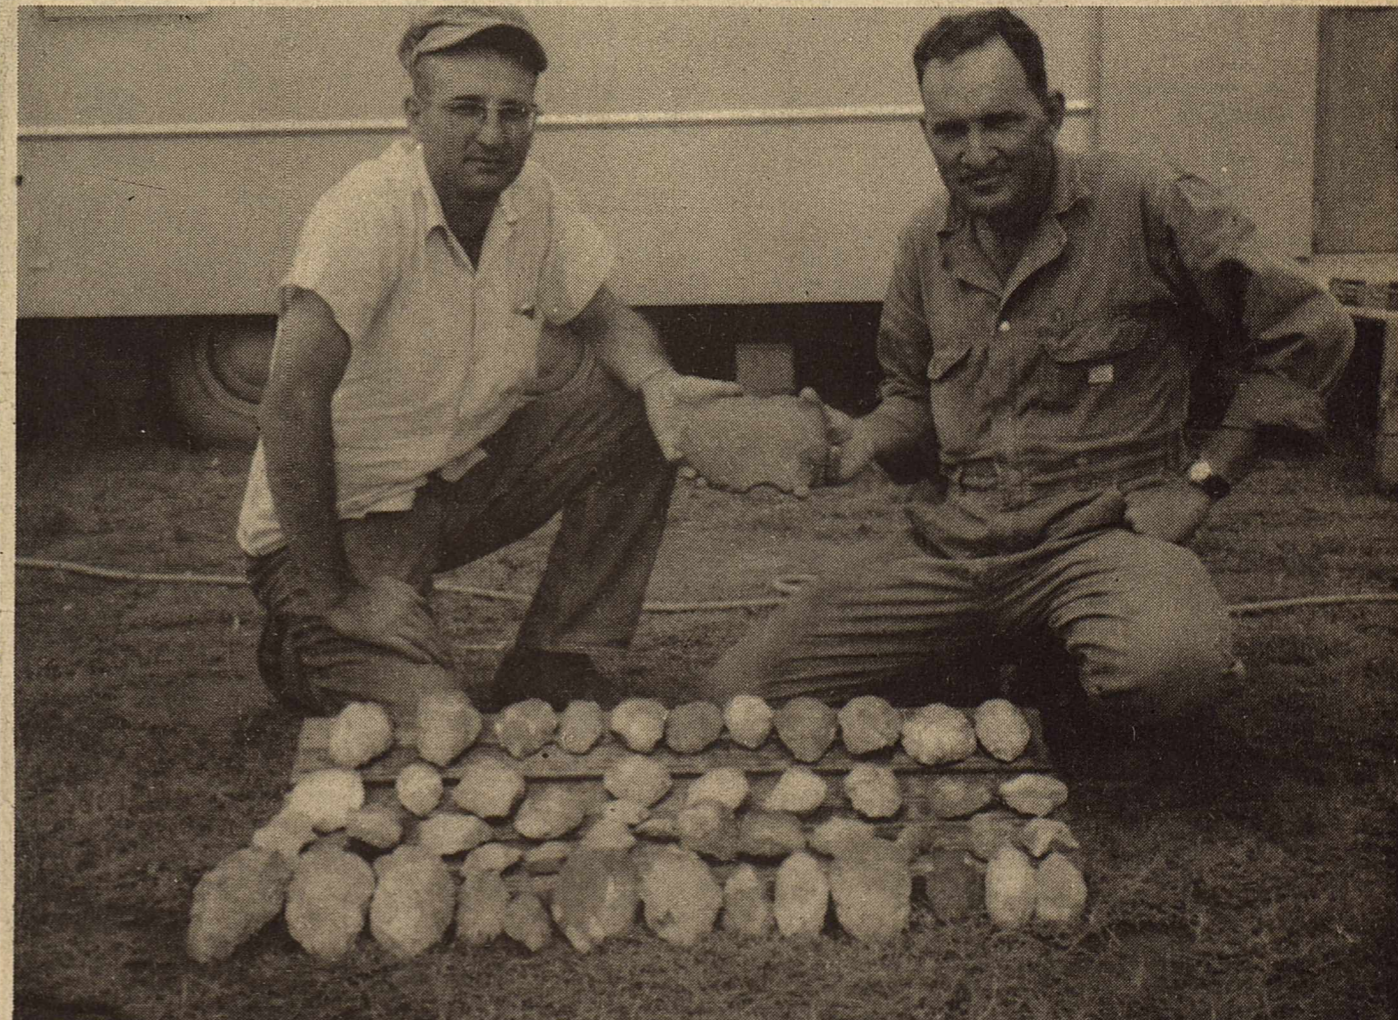

INDIAN KNIFE--Steve Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Jones, is shown with the large Indian knife his parents found northwest of Plains Monday.

Moore and Oden Sale Underway

Moore and Oden Dry Goods' annual July clearance sale began at 8:30 a. m. Thursday and will continue through Saturday. The store was closed Wednesday in preparation for the sale.

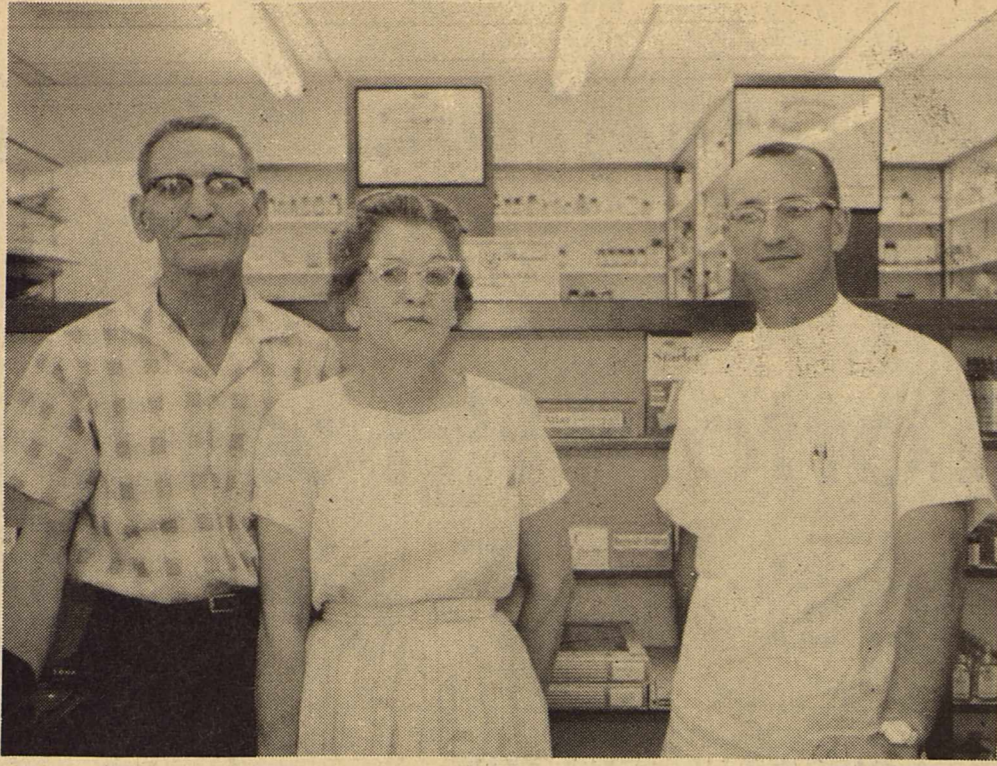

Shoppers will find savings up to one-half and more on numerous items of merchandise throughout the store.

DORTHA GRAY—Dortha Gray will hold formal opening of Dortha's Style Shop in the new Ty Field Building Monday and Tuesday. Everyone is invited to attend. Guests may register for valuable prizes.

DRUG PERSONNEL—Mr. and Mrs. Joe Curry and Roy Edwards, right, will show off the brand new Curry-Edwards Pharmacy during open house Monday and Tuesday. The public is invited to attend. Special opening day sale prices will be found on many items of merchandise during the two-day event.

Plains Area Showers Spatter

Weekend showers left 1.07 inch of moisture in Plains while other nearby areas reported up to 2.5 inches.

The rain covered the entire county, marking the first time this year that moisture has been of such a general nature.

Most farmers hailed the rain as a boon to the county's agricultural conditions. Dryland crops, most of which have stood up well, are expected to benefit greatly from the rains.

4-H Members Attend Workshop

Attending the first annual 4-H Leadership Workshop held June 19-21 were two Yoakum County 4-H Club members, Marsha White and Cote Trout.

Cote attended in the place of Tommy Elmore, who was not able to go at that time. Judy Pool, home demonstration agent, and County Agent Leo White attended the workshop as leaders.

The workshop, held at South Plains College at Levelland, was planned by District 4-H Council members from Gaines, Terry, Dawson and Yoakum counties. Four sessions, "Planning Council Meetings," "How a Council Functions," "How a Committee Functions," and "Parliamentary Procedure and Public Speaking," composed the educational portion of the workshop.

Swimming and various sports kept the 4-H'ers busy during the day, while there was folk dancing and games each night.

Miss Peggy Willsford, assistant state 4-H leader, worked with the agents who taught the group sessions.

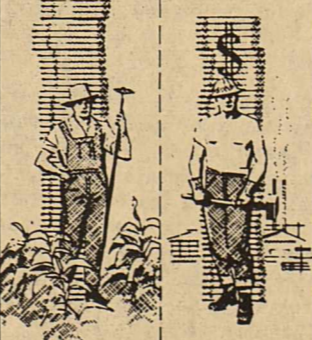

Those who attended the workshop were very pleased, especially with the college facilities offered for the workshop, and are thankful for a wonderful opportunity.

Next important District 2-4-H event is the Electric Camp to be held July 31-August 4 at Scott Able Camp, New Mexico.

The weatherman's wild predictions soon made him the laughing stock of the small Texas town, so he put in a request for a transfer. In the blank he was asked the reason for requesting a transfer, he wrote, "the climate doesn't agree with me."

SOIL Conservation NEWS

C. MURRELL THOMPSON

Grass planting for livestock grazing and erosion control is a very important job right now.

A. W. Williams of the Pleasant Hill community northeast of Denver City has planted 170 acres to grass. He planted 60 acres to Blue Panic grass and 110 acres to Weeping Love grass. He has used these grasses on dry land for a number of years and has very good results both in grazing and cover for erosion control.

Midland Bermuda, an irrigated grass, has gained in popularity and is being planted in ever increasing acres as a part of conservation farming. It will grow and make good cover and grazing on land that is too steep or rocky to cultivate.

Some of those planting Bermuda are J. C. Stegall, Garland Swann, Darwin Hobbs, Wilber Hayse and R. C. Trout. Rollin McCord is planting about 30 acres and furnishing sprigs for a lot of the local people. At present he has one hundred head of cattle on thirty acres.

Two new conservation plans are being typed in the area office. They are James Wasson, southeast of Plains, and W. M. Nelson of the Pleasant Hill community northeast of Denver City.

The Great Plains Program, July 1 report shows a great increase in both applications for assistance and in programs developed. In 1960 fiscal year 10 contracts were developed and 18 applications were received while in 1961, 16 applications were received and 24 contracts were developed with land owners and operators. To date 50 contracts have been developed on 85,815 acres.

SPORTS AFIELD

By Ted Kesting

A houseboat doesn't pretend to be a powerhouse but it's a cinch for a powerful lot of fun and easy living, says Willard Crandall, Boats Editor of Sports Afield Magazine.

Today's houseboats are by no means available to only the wealthy. Many a sportsman is making a houseboat his only home. Houseboats now come in all sizes, all styles and all degrees of luxury. Fuel costs for houseboats are never large.

Houseboats fall into two general classifications: those narrow enough to be trailered on the highway, and the wider ones. The highway models are generally about eight feet broad. Trailers to fit the highway-size models are readily available and may even be rented. Inside, the narrow houseboats are closely patterned after the modern compact design of house trailers. The hulls and cabins of houseboats are often built of steel, which is strong and inexpensive; wood, aluminum and fiber-glass plastic are also popular.

The average houseboat is not for use on big waters. As the waves increase in size, seaworthiness falls off rapidly, for the houseboat's shape makes it sluggish and unresponsive to its power. But the houseboat's great stability keeps smaller waves from bothering it in the least. To be sure, houseboats aren't fast. If this is a disadvantage, it's not too serious a one, for such a boat is designed for living aboard rather than moving about. And it keeps costs down still more: there's no use in using much power in a houseboat. Thus the most popular engine to push one is the nonbulky outboard motor. Inboards are often used with larger houseboats.

The real pleasures of houseboating will be experienced only if waterways are chosen with care. Although not suited for the biggest waters, a houseboat is not intended for very small waters either, in spite of its surprisingly small draft. Rivers are ideal. Because of its width a houseboat must have a wide, nontwisting channel, and small streams don't offer navigable waters. Sheltered mooring places must also be available with access to a nearby landing and not too far from a place where your houseboat can be hauled out for repair and maintenance.

It is chiefly through books that we enjoy intercourse with superior minds, and these invaluable means of communication are in the reach of all. In the best books, great men talk to us, give us their most precious thoughts, and pour their souls into ours.--Channing

Coast-To-Coast Cyclist Stops Here Sunday

Plains was a routine stop Sunday night for a young cyclist who is attempting to cover the 3,000-plus miles between Los Angeles and Virginia by bicycle.

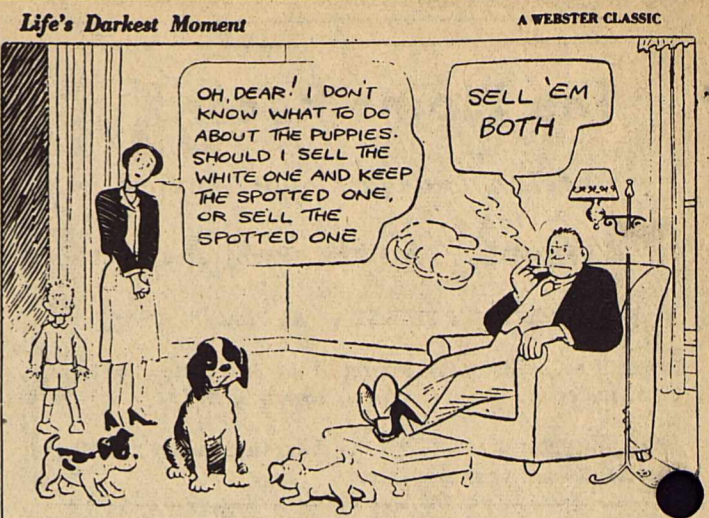

The young, well-dressed man pulled into Plains about 10:45 p. m. According to what he told bystanders at a local service station, he had left Roswell at 1 p. m.

No one thought to get the man's name, but those who talked to him described him as a nice, clean-cut man of about 23. He was neatly dressed, except for a several-day-old beard.

The visitor admitted that he had not pedaled all the way from California and hoped that he didn't have to pedal the rest of the way to Virginia. "Once in a while," he said, "a truck will offer me a ride."

The man carried no baggage, except for a handbag strapped neatly to his back. He said he spent nights in motels, just like any other traveler.

Toughness by itself is not a successful traffic safety policy, says the Allstate Safety Crusade. It has to be balanced by intelligently conceived laws, a system of just and sustained enforcement, and public understanding of the reasons for firm and impartial measures.
