MOORE or Less

by Johnnie Moore

Here is a rather interesting bit that came to my attention this week, that has some real thought-provoking logic to it. "History seems to confirm the saying that people of past civilizations have passed thru nine steps to complete a cycle beginning and ending in bondage. "People in bondage have developed spiritual faith; spiritual faith has given them great courage; courage has brought them freedom; freedom has given them abundance; abundance has caused selfishness; selfishness produced complacency; complacency brought on apathy; apathy begot dependency; and dependency brought forth its natural result, BONDAGE. "Where is America in this cycle? Many feel we have reached the point of apathy. If this is true, what does the future hold?"

-----Submitted

"Today, more people are on relief than in the great depression. The cost of relief far exceeds $100 a year per taxpaying family. This has occurred despite Social Security, unemployment compensation and other welfare measures. The drop in crime that was to accompany liberalized relief hasn't shown as of yet. It's time to clean up the mess, but who will start the cleaning?"

DEPARTMENT OF WASTE

We hear that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare is spending millions in a research program to determine the cause of illegitimacy. How ridiculous can we get?

Hope each and everyone has a real fine time at the rodeo. We're mighty proud to have all the fine visitors in Plains. Come back to see us real soon.

SAVINGS BOND SALES REPORT

During the first half of 1963 the citizens of Yoakum County purchased $33,296 in Series E and H Savings Bonds according to a report received from D. P. Moorhead, Chairman of the Yoakum County Savings Bonds Committee. 47.6 per cent of county's 1963 goal has been achieved.

Savings Bond sales in Texas during the first half of 1963 goal of $150,600,000.

"It is encouraging to note that Savings Bonds sales nationally are setting a new peace-time high. Bonds sales during the first 6 months of 1963 were $2,517 million as compared to $2,277 million a year ago, reflecting a 10.5 per cent gain. As of June 30, 1963 the total amount of outstanding E Bonds stood at an all-time peak of $46,359 million, a gain of $860 million since January 1," Chairman Moorhead stated.

In addition to the regular performance on Saturday, two other features will be added. The saddle which is to be given to the holder of the Queen's ticket stub which is drawn that evening will be awarded.

Also, the 1963 Rodeo Queen will be named and crowned during that performance. Trophy belt buckles will be given to the Queen, who will also receive a gift certificate, to the runners-up and to the winner in each of the eight Rodeo events.

A concession stand will be provided at the rodeo grounds providing refreshments. The Rodeo is annually sponsored by the Yoakum County Rodeo Association which is made up by a combination of Yoakum County Roping Club, Plains Lions Club, and Plains Chamber of Commerce. A request has been made by this association for area women to bring either a salad or fruit cobbler to the barbeque on Saturday.

The proposed extension of U. S. Highway 82 was verified as being an official designation this week by Highway 82 Association officials. Proposal for extending the Federal Highway which begins on the eastern seaboard at Savannah, Georgia, and presently had terminated at Lubbock.

The present extension will begin at Lubbock and come through Brownfield, Plains, Lovington, Artesia, and Alamo, and connect with the Interstate portions of Highways 70 and 80, now designated as Interstate 10. A great increase in traffic through this area is expected, as all road maps published from now on, will show a coast-to-coast route on a federally designated all the way. Bill Loyd of Plains, who is a director in the Highway 82 Association, reports that billboard advertising is planned for the route near both the east and west coasts.

Local Church Gets New Minister

The Rev. Homer Tarkington, who recently resigned his pastorate of the Assembly of God Church in Mexia, has just moved to Plains to assume the pastorate of the Plains Assembly of God Church. He was in Mexia almost seven years, going there from a building program at Sweetwater.

A native of Fairfield, the Rev. Tarkington has been a minister for the past 29 years. The Rev. Tarkington has come to Plains to replace the Rev. C. L. Witt, who has now moved to Hobbs, New Mexico. He also has held pastorates in Houston, Corsicana, Pecos, and Seagraves, other than the one mentioned above.

Yoakum Dubbed Modified T.B. Area

Yoakum County has been reaccredited as a Modified Tuberculosis Area. The cattle were tested during December in connection with the Brucellosis testing. County Agent, Leo White, received a certificate last week from the Texas Animal Health Commission showing that 166 head of cattle had been tested in eight different heads and no reactors or suspects were found. The certificate is dated June 1, 1963 and is good for a period of six years. This means that cattle may be moved from Yoakum County other to parts of the state without being tested for tuberculosis. In some cases they may be allowed to cross state lines without being tested, depending upon the regulations in the state they are entering. Most states require a test on mature dairy cows but beef animals can cross the state lines with only a health certificate unless they are going to a show or sale of registered breeding animals. White states that it is more

that the veterinarian testing for tuberculosis was working along with the men testing

The next testing work will need to be done before June 1, 1969 in order to be accredited for another six year period.

Loan Guarantees Can Help College Students

By Sen. Vance Hartke (D. Ind.)

Probably the single most important investment an individual can make these days is the time, effort and money he spends in getting an education.

We have seen ample statistical proof of how an individual's lifetime earning power increases as his educational level increases. There are, of course, many other personal benefits beside earning power that may be enjoyed by the well-educated person.

But beyond the merits from the individual standpoint is the fact that every citizen's education is a national asset. Every day the world we live in puts a higher premium on brainpower. At the national level, the United States will find itself more and more relying on its greatest national resource—its people—in its continuing competition not only with its adversary, international communism, but also with its friends in the Free World as all mankind strives for a better life.

If we fail to give our people the opportunity to reach their educational potential we will sooner or later fail as a nation to lead the world.

Likewise, every American community needs educated citizens. This has long been accepted as a public responsibility. We all pay taxes to support our local schools. And many states, like my own state of Indiana, acknowledged their responsibilities for supporting higher education at virtually the same time they assumed statehood.

Congress also has taken increasing notice of the vital national interest in education, as for example in the National Defense Education Act, which gives special incentives to the study of science, mathematics and languages.

It is my own feeling that the American people, through their government, should encourage students in all lines of higher education. We should also encourage all students who can meet college requirements, regardless of their ability to earn special scholarships.

One of the handicaps facing such students, of course, is the cost of higher education, which now runs from $1500 to $2500 a year.

In an effort to overcome this problem, I introduced in the Dear Mr. Publisher: I reckon you're about ready for vacation. You know what the fella said, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." I wish I could meet the guy who said that so I could get him to talk to my Deacons. They think I oughta work 7 days a week. Why, Ellie Nicklesinger told me that the Devil works 7 days a week so I oughta do the same, but I pointed out to her that this was the reason he was the Devil—he didn't take no time off.

Most of my members think I just work on Sunday, and only a couple hours at that. Well, I reckon some folks don't call listening to peoples' problems all day work, but along about night I feel like being plowing in a newground. I don't mind going, long as I figger I'm going some good, but some of the meetings I go to--just about every night--are might high as useless as a peg-leg man in a swamp. All these ain't in Church either. The other night out club met to decide what color to paint our garbage cans.

I never thought when I was a goin thru the Seminary that garbage cans would be one o' my responsibilities. Fact is, sometimes I wondered why I ever studied the Good Book in school. My main job is raising money and getting crowds. I shoulda' taken a course in salesmanship instead of the Bible.

Course, one of the main things folks want now in a preacher is personality. He oughta bubble over like alkka seltzer, and chase away likk troubles. He's gotta be like ginger ale--a good mixer. (One woman was telling me about a preacher she liked cause he helped her husband unload a wagon full of manure one day while he was calling.) I reckon as long as a fella is handy with the fertilizer it don't make no difference how well he can handle theology.

Yep, I figger the preacher needs a little vacation once in awhile so he can kinda get back to normal. I hope I can go on a little trip to Africa this summer with a Missionary friend of mine. I'm gonna bring it up at our next Deacon's meeting. If they approve it I'll be mighty grateful. While I'm over there looking at them grinning savages I'll remember my folks back home--how they made it all possible.

Well, Mr. Publisher, I'm gonna have to go now. I just got a call from the hospital to come over right away. Hezekiah's going into surgery in about an hour. They're gonna fix his ingrown toe-nail. So long.

Yours truly, Parson Jones

Red River, New Mexico: For many years now by hook or crook we have found a time during the hot summer to spend a few days in our favorite nook up in Red River, New Mexico.

This year we almost missed but did wind up with three days to spare, and those proved very wonderful. I don't think we ever had so many new people and such interesting folks many of them turned out to be...

By a turn in the hand of fate we were guests this year at Riverside Lodge. All that was available to us was a room inside the lodge itself. In the past we had always stayed in cabins. Perhaps this caused us to meet many extra people.

A real treat of the stay came through the friendliness and sparkling personality of Terry and Letha Allen, husband and wife combination, who, along with Letha's younger sister, Clerice operated this rather large business. Theirs is a real true to life success story.

Just over three years ago they came to Red River on their honeymoon. Riverside was closed for the winter so they stayed across the street at El Western. Riverside Lodge was for sale at that time. Terry and Letha returned to San Marcos, Texas, where his father operates an automobile business. The young couple wanted to give it a whirl. Taking over at the beginning of the 1961 summer season the young couple had just passed their 21st birthday. This is the third season for the new owners and the place runs with efficiency that would equal any veteran operator.

Terry laughingly says: "There's nothing to it. We don't run the place, it runs us." Even though they are on the run a lot of the time, the true secret to their successful operation lies in the warm and friendly personality of this lovely young couple. Busy as they are they still find time to visit with the guests and make them feel at home. Theirs is truly a real American success story...

Always our highlight of the trip is the Sunday services at the community house. This year a layman brought the message. He was Robert Ashworth, superintendent of schools, Amarillo, Texas. We always like to remember just a few high points from every talk rather than trying to keep it all. From his message Citizen-ship to God and Man we quote: "There is no such thing as public character. There is only individual character multiplied many times."

"We can lick the problems of this day with the four B's: Bible, brains, backbone and ballots." This splendid talk by this good Christian school leader made one want to return home determined to be a better citizen...

We couldn't possibly mention all the interesting folks we met, but not the least of them were Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Clements of Los Angeles, Calif. In spite of the fact that someone had snatched his purse containing not only money, but about a dozen credit cards including telephone and airline in the busy part of Dallas, they had fallen madly in love with Texas and plan to transfer his enormous brokerage operation to this state in the near future... They were simply dumbfounded by the friendliness of Texas people...

Visiting in the home of the Wallace Randolphs' and guest of Karen's and Norma Ture who is a Texas Tech coed and her sister, Marsha of Abilene. They will attend the Rodeo.

PUZZLE NO. 769

A weekly public service feature from the Texas State Department of Health

Accent on Health

J.E. PEAVY, M.D., Commissioner of Health

People who suffer with hypertension, or high blood pressure, nowadays have more reason for optimism than they would have had a generation ago.

In itself hypertension is not a cold. The danger accrues because of the possibility of stroke or serious heart or kidney damage when blood pressure is consistently high.

But even mild elevations in the blood pressure considered normal for the person involved--if the increase persists--may cause the walls of blood vessels to thicken, exactly as callouses are formed on hands by regular use of an axe or hoe. Research has shown that temporary increases in pressure do not really make much difference.

In the most common type of high blood pressure, called "essential hypertension," the tiny branches of arteries which carry blood to all body tissues (called arterioles) begin to tighten up. Blood passage way become smaller and smaller, and the heart has to work harder to push the blood through. After a time the blood vessels lose their elasticity and the heart muscles thicken with the extra work load. Result: high blood pressure, and ultimately heart damage.

What causes the arterioles to tighten and constrict? No one knows.

High blood pressure sometimes goes up for a period of days or weeks--or even longer--and then drops back to normal. Sometimes it may jump from pure nervousness while your physician is examining you. Perhaps there is a connection between hypertension and the strain of modern life. People who work under constant stress, who worry too much, are often susceptible. Heredity is a probable factor, and the condition occurs most often in persons between 30 and 50.

The thing which will count most in adding years to the life of hypertension sufferers is the willingness to change their living habits, following the rules of moderation in everything. By securing a doctor's care and following a few simple rules for moderate living, they can probably work and enjoy life as long or longer than their next-door neighbors without high blood pressure.

Low blood pressure, on the other hand, seldom causes trouble. Afflicting relatively few people to a serious extent, the condition is usually a symptom of a specific disease which can frequently be treated successfully.

Most bass fishermen spend too much time changing baits. Drawbacks to the try-one-now, a different-one-later, system are many. But the primary objection is that the lure doesn't get a fair enough test to actually tell whether or not it will produce.

It is much better to stick with one or two lures, letting them have the time to make a true test.

But what lures? That's the perplexing problem. Today there are so many artificial baits in different sizes, shapes and types that it confuses the average fisherman.

Most of the better anglers have one thing in common. They concentrate their efforts either on the top, or at the opposite extreme, right on the bottom.

There's a good reason for this thinking. Much of the bass' food supply is concentrated in these regions.

Probably the one big exception is small bait fish like minnows and sunfish. But a hungry bass usually will come to the top to take a frog-looking popper or a worm crawled along the bottom, as readily as he will a perch-type lure.

A lure that operates either right on top or right on the bottom has an advantage over the other lures in that it can be worked at the ultra-slow speed needed to tempt big bass.

Most lures which show up in sporting goods stores have a definite place in fishing. But they are specialized tools and work only in certain situations. Knowing how to recognize these situations requires much experience.

Most weekend anglers simply haven't encountered enough situations to pinpoint clues which will tell them which lures to use. In this respect water depth is very important. Lures with metal lips are designed to run at certain depths. A lure built to run 10 feet beneath the surface will, for example, be half-way down in 20-foot water, near bottom in 12-foot water, but close to the surface in 40-foot water.

Unless the angler knows the depth of water he's fishing, this type lure will be practically useless.

But if he sticks with the top-water bait or the bottom-bumper, the water depth is not as important. He'll still have his bait in the vicinity where bass hang out.

Only within the past few years have fishermen been able to apply this formula successfully.

It used to be that the only baits which dug deep down, where the big bass are most apt to be found, were those with long metal lips. These baits require a fast retrieve to make them dig deep, too fast to make them really effective on a lazy old bass.

Also they are not too effective at depths exceeding 30 feet, and often the truly big bass are found at extreme depths of 40 to 50 feet.

Lifelike lures made of limp plastic can be worked very slowly, crawled right along the bottom, yet they have enough action to tempt bass.

Many anglers carry two good outfits in their boats, one equipped with a top-water lure, the other with a bottom-bumping bait. They try one for 25 to 30 casts, and if by then they haven't inveigled a strike, they switch to the other outfit.

Often it pays off to try the topwater baits for the first couple of hours after daybreak when bass migrate into the shallows to feed on things found along the surface; then use the bottom-bumping baits during the remainder of the day when the fish have drifted back into deeper water.

As to the color of a lure it has been proven that the color shading is more important than the actual color itself. If a person stays with two basic type lures--topwater and bottom-bumping--and two basic colors, light and dark, he'll be right 99 times out of 100.

And in the unpredictable sport of bass fishing, those are pretty good odds, indeed.

10,000 Daily Deaths Among World's Hungry

By Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy (DFL Minn.)

Many American citizens are disturbed, and rightly so, by the fact that we in the United States produce far more food than we need while millions of people elsewhere in the world need far more food than they produce.

Every week I receive letters asking what can be done to strike a better worldwide balance between surplus and shortage--a balance to assure enough food for everyone everywhere.

The problem is critical, for it appears the disparity between the "haves" and the "have-nots" is growing even greater. About one-fifth of the world's population, including the United States, has ample food supplies. Yet more than one-half of the world's 3 billion people who inhabit this planet are consistently hungry. Every day 10,000 people die of hunger.

Some 50 million children in India will die of malnutrition in the coming decade. In less than a generation, the world's population is expected to double.

In response to this formidable challenge, some 1,200 delegates from more than 100 countries are meeting in Washington, D. C., this month to take part in a World Food Congress under the auspices of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization.

The Congress is a milestone in a dedicated but little-publicized "Freedom from Hunger" campaign which has enlisted the worldwide interest and participation of government officials, agronomists, economists, nutritionists and others who realize the high stakes involved.

There are two basic approaches to combating world hunger. One involves increasing production in those countries where food is scarce. This means applying modern science and technology to farming that often still follows primitive methods. It also means providing capital for equipment and materials, education, adequate markets, farm credit and a sound system of land tenure and ownership.

The second approach involves improving the methods of distribution from the nations with ample supplies to those with food shortages. As one approach, the United States has supported since 1954 its highly successful "Food for Peace" program to distribute surplus food overseas. Distribution also means international trade. Trade agreements among nations offer hope of encouraging stable world commerce that can lead to more equitable distribution of food.

Certainly there is no one answer to eliminating hunger from the list of mankind's burdens. We must seek all possible answers in both the production and distribution of food. The World Food Congress is a significant and constructive step toward such answers.

This Trip Was Necessary Tall Tower Travels to Texas

Humble Oil & Refining Company moved this steel tower, tall as a 20-story building, from New England to Texas to take part in the company's continuing, $6 million-a-year campaign for clean air and water in the communities where it operates. A stack the same height also made the long trip. They were dismantled at Everett, Mass., near Boston, and transported more than 1,600 miles, to be reassembled near Houston, at the Baytown refinery of Humble, the nation's largest oil refiner and marketer. Replacing a shorter tower and stack, the new equipment will result in more efficient dispersal of vapors, high above the ground, if an emergency requires the venting of vapors through safety valves. The 250-foot tower is in the final stages of construction at a Baytown refinery processing unit. The slender stack, still to be erected within the tower, needs the support the tower will give it against high winds. Moved by rail, both pieces of equipment served a refining unit no longer in use at Humble's Everett plant.

LONE STAR AGRICULTURE

It has been often said in recent years that the family farm is disappearing as the dominant production source, for American food and fiber. If such were the case, as it is not, then let America beware. By any measure, the family farm is the strongest and most vital production unit in agriculture. It is the one consistent measure of success or failure in the nations of the world. Among the developed nations, the family farm is always present in a successful agriculture. It is always absent where agriculture has failed. Science, technology, education and capital are all essential to the achievement of abundance. But only when teamed with the family farm has the result been an outpouring of food and fiber such as we are blessed with in the United States. All too often the tendency is to equate "family farm" with a homestead of 160 acres and a tractor -- terms that would have been only true a generation ago. The family farm of today can be and is big or little in terms of acres, capital, or dollars of output. The distinguishing feature is the incentive that ownership and management of a farming operation bests in the farm family that provides most of the work. The family farm is the soul of American agriculture, and it will be preserved.

The contest will be sponsored by 3M's Duplicating and Microfilm Products Divisions for their "Thermo-Fax" dealers.

Farm And Ranch Products Valuable

The value of Texas' farm and ranch production is exceeded by only one other raw material, oil. The value of the state's total yearly agricultural production exceeds the payroll for manufacturing, or the total of construction awards or the payroll for retail trades, points out John McHaney, extension economist. Farm and ranch production each year has a total value of just under 2.5 billion dollars, explains McHaney, it adds much more to our total economy than just income from the sale of products. Business firms which assemble, process, distribute, transport, wholesale and retail the products of Texas' farms and ranches employ about 20 per cent of the labor force of the state and add about 3.9 billion dollars to the agricultural economy. Simple addition, says the spokesman, shows that the sale of agricultural products plus the costs of processing, and distributing them annually adds to the state's economy about $6.3 billion. And commenting upon the future of the Texas agricultural industry, McHaney emphasizes the future will belong to those people and states which work to keep their agricultural economy competitive with other areas of the nation and world.

Inside Insurance in Texas

(Editor's note: Insurance is now the second largest industry in Texas, second only to petroleum. This informative series of articles is written especially for The Plains Record by the author of their book, "The Story of Insurance in Texas.")

By HUGH WILLIAMSON

Texans are looking more at life insurance policies with "special" investment features. Actually, says Paul D. Connor, assistant to the commissioner of the state board of insurance, there is not much "special" about them. The word is used to describe any life insurance contract which emphasizes dividends, profit-sharing formulas, or other features which overshadow the death benefits. The State Board of Insurance does not prescribe these policy forms. The companies themselves work out their own contracts; they do it — they work out policies that they think will suit the needs and desires of the buying public. They are at liberty to make any kind of terms they wish. Competition — and there is plenty of it — will keep their rates at a reasonable level. The companies are required by law to submit their policy forms to the insurance board before they can be issued. These are reviewed primarily to prevent the use of obscure or misleading language. Connor says, "Approximately 10,000 variations of life, health, and accident insurance forms are presented for approval each year. The State Board of Insurance neither fixes nor approves the rates which companies charge for life insurance. Each company determines its own rates, the law simply requiring that these rates be applied in a non-discriminatory manner so that two persons insured under the same policy by the same company would be paid identical rates if their age and health conditions were identical." Imagine, under these regulations, the variety of life insurance policies available to the buying public. The comparison comes to mind of a woman going to a dress shop. She may have a short dress or a long one, one of this material or another, simple or fancy, colorful or quiet, with sleeves or without. "There is literally no limit" Connor says "to the number of variations in policy forms which can be designed and sold." Some forms are in such common use that they have received well-known labels, such as "whole life", "20-pay" "five-year term", and others. A guide for the policy buyer comes in two simple elements: 1. The policy provisions by which the policy holder promises to pay premiums to the insurance company, and 2. The policy provisions by which the insurance company promises to pay a beneficiary. Under "2" there are a couple of considerations: how the beneficiary is to be paid on the policy holder's death; also the payment of life benefits under the so-called "special" policies. All this may seem somewhat elementary. But you might be surprised to know how few policy holders really understand the terms of their policies. They don't read the fine print. Rather, they take the word of their insurance agent. It is not implied here that they are being cheated. But if the buyer wants to know exactly what is in the policy, and whether or not it precisely suits his need, he should read and understand it. Just as he would examine a suit of clothes and try it on before giving his money or using his credit at the clothing store. He is going to get what he pays for. No one but the buyer himself, however, can determine whether it is exactly what he wants.

The Lord's Word

"But the word of the Lord endureth forever."—Isaiah 28:16

All things on this earth were not meant to last forever. Trees may live for centuries, but eventually wither away. Many creatures, tho long-lived, fade from the earth in favor of a new generation or a new species.

But, one thing does not change. The word of God remains forever the same. So does the purpose of the life and death of Jesus Christ upon this earth.

In the centuries that have come and gone since the dawn of Christianity, the face of the earth has seen many changes. Rivers have run dry, or changed their course. Mountains have crumbled into the sea. Cities have crumbled into ruins; great population centers have sprouted from once wilderness land.

Did you ever stop to consider the fact that the word of the Lord and the teachings of His followers have remained essentially the same as when Peter and the Apostles went forth into the country to preach Christianity?

The word of the Lord endureth and the true Christian knows that the word of the Lord endureth forever.

A LOOK AT THE NATIONAL DEBT

Under a buy now, pay later philosophy, the present generation has run the national debt up to $305 billion. But, there is a catch. There is no practical way to pare the debt drastically. So most, if not all of it will be passed on to today's and tomorrow's children.

To help Congress check the growth of this debt, committees of the Chamber of Commerce of the U. S. have analyzed President Kennedy's 1964 budget and have itemized 117 spending requests that could be cut without hurting national defense or essential services. The cuts could save as much as $9.1 billion.

Spending is paid by taxes or by incurring debt. Debt, of course, must eventually be paid from taxes. Thus, taxpayers present and future would save this amount.

Texas taxpayers would save $397,670,000 to leave in the state to further progress and economic growth and lighten the debt load on its children.

Most of the spending cuts recommended by the Chamber are, it should be noted, in continuing programs. Curbing their size now would make it easier to curb them in the future. Savings, instead of spending, might snowball.

In the home of the Wilson Dukes and guest of Brenda's was Sherry Gray of Lubbock.

She came on Friday of last week and returned home Sunday afternoon.

SUNDAY'S SERMON

Rev. ROBERT H. HARPER
SKY HIGH

ALL Americans may well be proud of the feat of Gordon Cooper in his many orbits around the earth and his safe descent into the world's greatest ocean.

It now is known that Gordon Cooper is a devout believer in the Almighty God who "plants his footsteps in the sea and rides upon the storm." Following in the steps of his parents, he has been a member of a Christian church from childhood and now he and his own family are active members of that church.

About three thousand years ago the Psalmist declared that "the heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork." And from a vantage far above the mists and clouds of the earth the devout astronaut saw more clearly than could the Psalmist see the wonders of the universe that God has made.

We cannot know whether or not God approves of the efforts of men in this modern time to gain a point of vantage like the builders of the tower of Babel, where they might see how the wheels go round, we can well believe that He will care for those who put their trust in Him.

Plains Cowboy football captains for the coming season, Jimmy Kirby, Johnny Robertson, and Mike Field, hosted a swimming party at the local pool on Tuesday night given for the football boys and their dates.

What's in a sandwich? A famous designer called the sandwich the "perfectly designed container." A sandwich may take an infinite variety of flavors, shapes and forms. It makes a self-contained and appetizing main dish, and, when you have finished, even the container—the nourishing and satisfying bread outer layer which gives pleasing shape and form to the sandwich—is all gone.

There's lively flavor in this Salami-Coleslaw Sandwich. Allow three slices of rye bread per serving. Spread 1/3 of the bread slices with mustard. Top them with cotto salami slices, then with pickle slices. Spread next 1/3 of bread slices with mayonnaise or salad dressing and top with coleslaw, tomato slices and crisp-cooked bacon strips. Place coleslaw slices atop salami slices. Spread remaining bread with mustard, then close sandwiches.

Give sandwich meals a additional appeal by varying the kinds of bread you use. You'll be amazed at the different kinds of breads available at your grocery store or bakery. Here are a few to start: oatmeal, pumpernickel, Swedish limp, Kaiser rolls, sesame rolls and Vienna bread or rolls.

Make lunch box packing a breeze by preparing a week's supply of sandwiches at a time. Wrap the sandwiches individually in moisture-vapor proof material, then freeze. In the morning pack the sandwiches, still frozen, into sacks or lunch boxes. They'll thaw to delicious just-made freshness by lunch-time.

"I REMEMBER" BY The Old Timers

From Mrs. Stephen Lambertson, Hazlet, New Jersey: I remember when as a child the neighbors would gather at our house in the winter evenings. My mother would play her guitar and they would all sing. Dad would go down to the milk room in the cellar for homemade crullers and pears.

We children would go sleigh riding on the nearby hills, by the light of lanterns my father would place at the top and bottom of the hill.

In summer, and on the Fourth of July the family traditionally had a picnic. Dad would have the ice cream truck drop off five gallons. I remember how the driver would stop and roll the five gallon can across the front lawn.

In the evening, we children had bags of fireworks—and loads of fun.

From Mrs. Maude Davis, Persia, Tennessee: I remember when farmers raised everything they ate and there were no food sections in the grocery stores where one could buy everything ready for the table.

There were no food freezers, no cars to dash across the country. Travel was on foot, horseback, or in a buggy and folks had time to stop and exchange greetings with neighbors along the way.

It is not the same any more. Everyone is in a big rush and it doesn't seem like the good old days when everyone was so happy and contented.

IT'S A LIVING -- by Al Johns

"PETER! THE MAN DOESN'T WANT IT PLUGGED IN."

Let the kids create their own submarine sandwiches with French bread, sliced meats, vegetables, relishes and cheeses. The whole family will be surprised and delighted with the results.

A satisfying lunch built around a delicious sandwich is the dieter's stand-by. Here's a low-calorie favorite. Spread enriched white bread lightly with butter or margarine, then top with sliced cooked chicken and a sprinkling of grated orange rind. Top with a lettuce leaf and close with a second slice of bread. Complete the meal with milk, vegetable relishes and a fresh peach.

Tangy seafood sandwiches like this one seem to take degrees off a hot August day. Combine 1 cup cooked flaked crabmeat with 1/4 cup lemon juice, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, 1/4 cup chopped onion, 1/4 cup celery and dash pepper. Cover and refrigerate for about 2 hours. Drain well and stir in 1/2 cup dairy sour cream. Spread mixture on 6 slices cracked wheat bread, cover with fresh watercress sprigs and close sandwiches with 6 more bread slices.

 COMMENT: South had no problem with this hand. He set up the spade suit by trumping the fourth round of spades and therefore made an easy overtrick. North and South should have reached a contract of seven. Both were partially to blame, however South put North on the spot with the jump bid of four hearts. If South had merely overcalled with one spade, he could have shown the strength of his hand later and would have had a chance to find out something about North's hand.

The Searcher's Class of The First Christian Church met Wednesday evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Anderson.

TRIBAL LAW VIEWED

American Indians are the only 100 percent native Americans. Federal matters come under Federal law and the terms of some 3,900 Indian treaties which are also the law of the land.

Thus long ago Rev. Samuel Worcester, preaching to the Cherokees, refused to take out tribal law, and the tribe closed his case. Soon afterwards federal officers sought to try him for murder, but the Supreme Court said no: Such cases did come under tribal law and this one had been settled.

Shortly afterward Congress gave Federal courts jurisdiction over most criminal cases on Indian territories. Accordingly, just the other day, the U. S. Supreme Court invalidated the conviction of a California Indian for murder. He must face trial in a Federal court instead.

Indian tribal courts still try some criminal cases; and within the tribes, tribal law still holds. For example, the can tax and license traders on reservations. Recently, a tribal adoption ceremony was confirmed even though it took place off the reservation. In another case the Federal courts recognized a tribal divorce by mere voluntary separation.

What To Do About Boy Who Changes His Mind

THE WEEK'S LETTER: I have a problem. My boyfriend goes away to school. While he was at school someone wrote him a letter and told him I was dating other boys, (which he had told me to do earlier). Actually, I only dated one boy, two times. My boyfriend wrote and told me he wanted his ring back. A few weeks later he called and apologized for writing the letter. Then he came to see me. We acted as usual. A few minutes after he left to go home, he rang the doorbell and asked for his ring again. I gave it to him and haven't seen him since. What is your suggestion?
OUR REPLY: Consider yourself lucky. Would you like a lifetime with someone who changed his mind every ten minutes, or expect to be happy with someone who told you to do something and then became very angry at you for doing it?

 Is this boy dating other girls while he is away? If so, is it right for you to sit at home and wait for summer to come along during the four years he is in school?
 In the opinion of this writer, a boy and girl who are not seriously planning to be married are foolish to "go steady" if they are a hundred or more miles apart. Too often it happens that one party doesn't go by the rules—and becomes furious with the discovery that the other party is playing the game the same way.
 When two people are in love, they aren't really interested in going out with someone else. The girl who isn't real sure of her man shouldn't agree to a "no-dating" arrangement while he is away. If both parties are serious about the whole thing, it's a different story entirely.

1963 Crop reporters have now started measuring the crops necessary to be measured under the 1963 programs. The starting date had to be late this year due to hail and rains and many crops replanted. We hope that all reporters can contact each farm operator and the operator can go with the reporter when the reporter makes each field measurement. By doing this, measurements made by the reporter may be compared with any measurements, that have been made (too large or too small), he is urged to contact the county office so that any measurements he may have can be checked or compared with the measurements made by the reporter.

As in the past, farmers have fifteen days from date of official notice to make adjustments in acreage--cotton, feed grains, etc. However, since regulations require that farmers pay for the re-visit necessary to check destroyed crops etc., we hope that the crops will be shaped up on the first visit so that a second trip will not be necessary. Re-visits to farms could be expensive to farmers if many plots are destroyed.

Areas designated as diverted acres must be cropland intensively cultivated in 59, 60, 61 or 62. This acreage must be in a regular shaped plot with no more than four sides and contain five acres or more and not more than four plots per farm. The diverted land must not be grazed between May 1 and November 1, and no 1963 produced crops may be harvested from the diverted land at any time. Shredded grain sorghum is not an approved cover for diverted land. If a farmer has signed a feed grain application and is not complying due to having an interest in feed grain on a farm on which the base will be exceeded, which would make him ineligible for payments and price support on any farm, the local ASCS office should be notified so that the contract can be cancelled.

A GOOD START

When vacation time rolls around, most of us can hardly wait to get started. Soon as possible, we're off to the beach, to visit the folks downstate, or to some favorite camping spot.

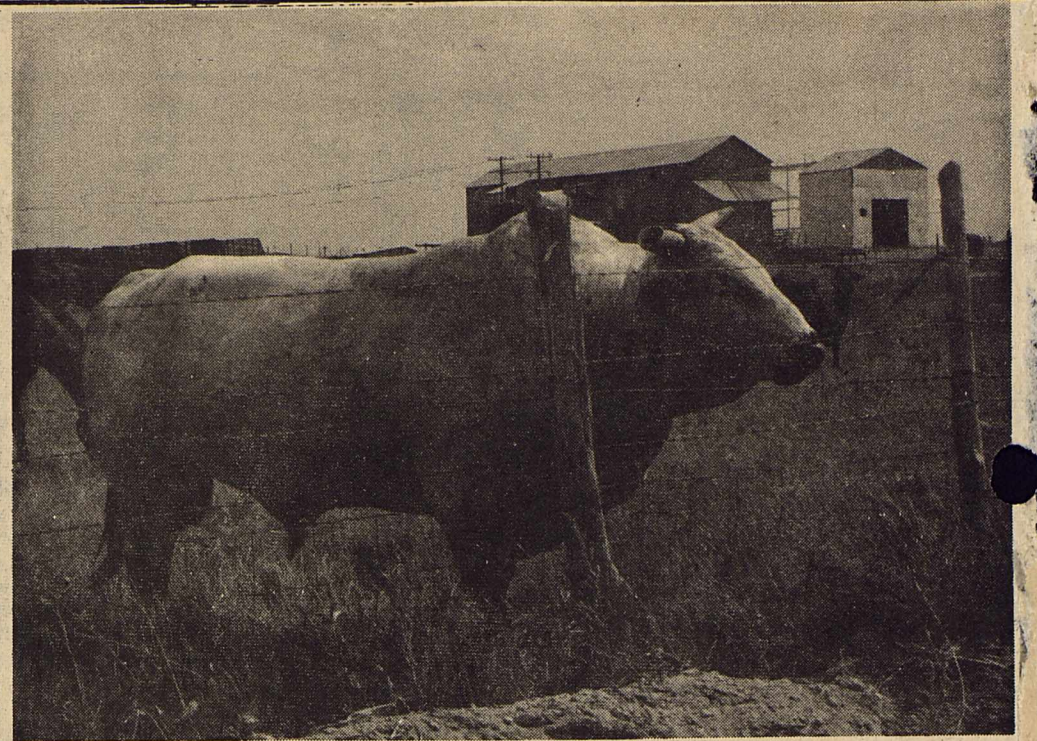

A good start is equally important when the average citizen finds himself in need of some particular product or service.

Experience has convinced many local citizens that the best place to start is right here at home. The merchants and business people in our community are dedicated to service. They know it is important.

When you buy locally, an appliance, an automobile, a new roof, new driveway, or whatever, the qualified local businessman guarantees satisfaction. And, his services, whenever you need them, are as near as your telephone.

Great Plains Programs

Three new regular Soil Conservation District plans are of which is a great Plains conservation program contract were completed this week.

W. H. Tudor, of Brownfield who farms 320 acres south of Plains, and D. W. Eubanks of Post, who owns a 320 acre farm southwest of Plains operated by Louis Eubanks, his brother have new conservation plans. Robert and Tom Box who farm west of Plains received assistance from Wilson Duke in working out a conservation program and a Great Plains contract to assist them in carrying it out.

Work continues with the local land owners and operators who have irrigated pasture in the form of watering, fertilization, and grazing of these planted pastures. If a good ground cover, economical returns, and long grazing programs are to be achieved and maintained there is much to learn about when, how, and what to do in pasture management.

For instance, do you know that to over graze for a long period is to cut down on the amount of grass that can be grown. The leaf surface of a plant and the root system both or shortened there by cutting down on the factory on the ability of the grass to grow more grass.

Visitors to the record this week were our good friends, Mr. and Mrs. Orlan Jones, of Denver City. Orlan is editor of the Denver City Press and his wife, Winnie, his is girl Friday. They came by to get all the scoop on the Yoakum County Rodeo and to help us out with a little publicity.

READING PROGRAM URGED NOW

Summer is a good time to deal with the problem of students who duck books so successfully that by the time they are completely out of reading practice and have difficulty doing regular school work, according to Changing Times, the Kiplinger Magazine.

An article in the current issue of the magazine advises the following for procedure parents:

"Take the child to the public library regularly; drop into the bookstore with him for the fun of browsing; and introduce him to the hundreds of good exciting paperbacks sold in drugstores and supermarkets. The reason many students don't read is simply that they rarely come in touch with interesting books."

The best way to help youngsters make a choice is to guide them towards books that coincide with their main interests -- the biography of a baseball hero, the story of a horse, a guide to coin collecting, and so on, the article continues. But most important, according to Changing Times, is to boost the prestige of books within the family. "Nearly half the houses in the country don't have any bookshelves."
