Guest Columnist

J.B. WILSON, High School Principal

I am very proud of the curriculum at Plains High School. This semester the following are offered:

- three Home Economics courses
- four Agricultural Science courses
- three Wood Production and Manufacturing courses
- Economics
- two History courses
- three Business courses
- Computer Programming
- eight Math courses
- Art
- Girls and Boys Athletics
- Driver's Education
- six Science courses
- nine English and Language Arts courses
- Annual
- three Foreign Language courses
- Radio
- Speech

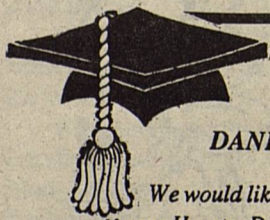

There is a total of fifty-three courses taught locally, some of which are Honors courses. We also have students taking Honors Calculus and Sociology over the TI-IN network.

One thing that we teach at all levels is character. Character Education takes place every hour of the school day. It takes place when five-year-olds learn to take turns with a new toy rather than to fight for it and in the morning exercise of the elementary school when the children are asked to say the pledge of allegiance... "with liberty and justice for all" as well as on the playground when the children learn to play by the rules.

Character Education takes place in the Jr. High history class as students study the Declaration of Independence... "all men are created equal — endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights — life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

Character Education takes place in the English class that studies Shakespeare and Emily Dickinson, when a disturbed student shares their troubles with a trusted counselor, in the rehearsal of the One Act Play, and on the athletic field and courts.

Character Education occurs when students develop insights into the nature of truth and learning and when youth observe exemplary character in their teachers.
