Agricultural Biotechnology To Make Impact On Economy

Agricultural biotechnology will be an important part of the Texas economy in the 1990s with county extension agents playing a critical role in transferring this technology to farmers.

That was the message Dr. Charles Aratzen, deputy chancellor for agriculture of the Texas A&M University System, delivered to more than 250 extension agents attending the annual meeting of the Texas County Agriculfural Agents Association (TCAAA) held recently in Corpus Christi.

Arntzen told the agents, "Biotechnology will contribute to agricultural profitability by making it more costeffective and productive while bringing environmental benefits."

Genetically engineered organisms that prevent frost from forming on plants, the development of drought and insect resistant plants and the creation of safer animal disease vaccines are some of the biotechnology advances coming on the market Arntzen told the agents.

He said, "Biotechnology is a highstakes economic game for the U.S. as a whole and for states like Texas that want to attract economic development. "The current $1.2 billion value of U.S. viotechnology products could rise to $15 to 40 billion by the year 2000. Rapid transfer of knowledge about the new technologies to farmers and ranchers will be critical to keep Texas agriculture competitive.'

Arntzen called for enhanced education of county agents in biotechnology and for more teamwork among county agents, researchers and Texas &M faculty in applying new technologies.

The deputy chancellor said that the addition of Laredo State, Corpus Christi State and Texas A&I universities to the A&M system will provide greater opportunities for cooperative efforts in biotechnology research, development and education in south Texas.

In a second address, Dr. Zerle Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, noted that the Extension Service has a 75-year history of providing research-based information and education on emerging technologies.

"The goal of the Extension Service and the county agents who carry out its work must be to continue that tradition by helping producers apply new technologies to improve agricultural productivity and profitability," Carpen-

'Home of the Cowboys & Cowgirls'

From The Superintendent's Desk

Dean Andrews

As we begin the new school year we are aware of the many hours spent in preparation in order to be ready for our students who arrive on Monday, August 28th. We are now ready and are excited that our students will return on Monday. We would like to take this opportunity to welcome all students, those that are new to our school system as well as those who are returning.

Being ready for the new school year does not necessarily mean that things will not change. As the school year progresses we continue to make changes in programs in order to best meet the needs of our students. One area which needs constant revision and change is the transportation of students to and from school. Bus routes have tentatively been set, but changes are necessary throughout the school year as students enroll and check out, or change address. Transportation of students is important not only to us but to students and parents so I would like to talk about out transportation program this week.

In the transportation of students, our first concern is the safety of students. Our bus drivers are all certified through the Texas Education Agency by successfully completing required bus driver courses. Each driver must have a valid bus driver card issued by the Education Service Center which states his ability to drive a bus. In addition a driver license check is run on each driver by T.E.A., and each driver must have a yearly physical examination. Buses are thoroughly checked and inspected on a daily basis to ensure that the bus is in excellent condition.

Bus routes require much attention and care to ensure that each student is transported safely and efficiently to and from school. Setting up a bus route may be compared to completing a jigsaw puzzle in that there are many pieces that must all fit together to make a complete picture. Routes are planned so that the amount of time and number of miles that each student rides is kept to minimum. Initially, routes are outlined on a large country map and changes are made as necessary - new stops are added and previous stops deleted as students move away from the area. Once the map is tentatively complete and routes outlined, school personnel drive the route. Information concerning students is often gained from along the route and the map is changed accordingly. Then on the first day of classes, bus drivers are issued a current map to follow. During the first two weeks of school changes are made constantly as students enroll and routes are modified to ensure efficient operation.

Our goal is to serve students with this program and to be sure that each student rides the minimum number of miles, and spends the least amount of time on a bus. Bus routes are a challenge throughout the school year but routes are altered as often as necessary in order to meet the needs of our students. Should you have questions concerning this program, please do not hesitate to call. Larry Devitt, Administrative Assistant, directs this program and you may reach him by calling 456-7401, or by stopping by Plains I.S.D. Business Office.

Young Farmers Program Given On Water District

L.J. Sanders presented a program on the new water district for Yoakum County Young Farmers Monday evening. Made possible by a bill passed by the Texas Legislature, the new district will be titled Sandy Land Water Conservation District.

Election of five board members will be Nov. 7, Sanders said. If approved, the district will need $250,000 to operate or about $0.01 per $100 of tax base. Sanders noted that $0.25 will be asked, however, to accomodate possible future financial obligations.

Those present agreed to the formation of the new district and discussed the Area Convention in Brownfield Sept. 15-16. A meeting was set for Sept. 9 to include a discussion of the 1989 disaster program. Gary Six will be program leader

Attending were members Don Parrish, Steve Crump, Tracy
