THE BOX SCORE

The cry of "atta, boy!" is again heard over the country. America's greatest national game is launched on another season. The box score now blooms in acres of white print spaces that have been given over during the winter to putts and punches.

Baseball is conceded to be the national game. It has a fascination for men, women and children. It will draw crowds where other forms of sport fail.

Baseball is a queer game, but its interest for the public is sustained on the fact that every man is his own baseball expert, and his judgment never agrees with that of anyone else. Boys who write pieces for the papers are indulging in the hazardous business of picking the winners. This pastime is one of the few things that costs nothing, unless you back your judgment with cash.

Last year the St. Louis Cardinal won the first National League championship in their history and clapped it with a world series victory. From now until October a merry battle for supremacy is to be waged.

MILLION FOR AN IDEA

The daily newspapers told us a few days ago a penniless immigrant only three years in this country, had received a million dollars for an idea. Prominent New York business men have handed him this sum for the rights to a slot-machine camera which he invented. No wonder they call ours the land of opportunity.

NATIONAL EGG WEEK

May 1 to 7 will be National Egg week in every state in the land. The exceptional success which attended the celebration of National Egg day on May 1 last year has encouraged the poultry producers and the allied industries in uniting in a great national program to pay homage to the American hen.

More people are directly interested in the production of eggs than any other single food commodity. The poultry industry of the United States has reached a position of great magnitude. The value of the products produced by the American hen for the current year is estimated to be a billion and a quarter dollars.

Every poultry raiser can boost National Egg week by producing a better product, and sending only high quality eggs to market. That will encourage more folks to make 365 egg days a health year.

THE REPEATER

Another man who fired the last shot in the Civil War has just been laid at rest. There have been quite a number of him and it is possible that some are still left. The man who fired the last shot in the World War will be dying for the next 60 years.

WOOLING

A business man told us last week that the people who know his line and location do not need to be told to trade with him, because they will or will not anyway. Bless, you wooling is wooling, is it not? How many times was it necessary for you to tell a certain girl you loved her before she consented to marry you? Dozens, perhaps hundreds, yet she knew it all the time.

We are so constituted, it seems, that we must be told a thing many times before it becomes a habit with us.

WANTING RESULTS

Men who are appointed to enforce the prohibition laws ought to be men who are in sympathy with law enforcement in general, and these laws in particular. Perfunctory duty is never done as effectively as is duty performed under the impelling force of a conviction. Wanting results is always a help to getting them.

One Dead; One Hurt in Liquor Raid Near Snyder

The following report from Colorado, is reproduced because of the fact that Geo. Lackey, who was killed near that city Tuesday, is known by many of our people and has many relatives who reside in or near this city:

Colorado, Texas, April 27—George Lackey, Sweetwater, is dead and Jack Wright, local rooming house proprietor, has a bullet wound in the right hip as a result of an encounter at a booze cache in a canyon 20 miles north of here Tuesday afternoon with Sheriff Brownfield of Scurry county and Deputies Newman and Leath.

On being ordered by the officers who had been hidden nearby since Monday afternoon, to throw up their hands Lackey and Wright made a break for their guns which they had laid aside while loading liquor in a wagon. When one of the men got his gun the officers fired, according to Sheriff Brownfield, who immediately called an ambulance from Snyder, 20 miles north, in which the wounded men were brought to a local hospital.

Lackey died at 6:17 o'clock this evening without making a statement. One bullet entered his back, piercing a kidney and passing out through the abdomen. He will be buried Thursday afternoon at Hilton, south of Sweetwater. He is survived by his wife and parents.

Information by Farmer
According to Sheriff Brownfield's version he was notified Monday morning that liquor was being hidden under the bank of a creek near the Colorado river in the edge of Scurry county, about midway between Snyder and Colorado. He and his deputies went to the scene Monday afternoon inspected the liquor and secreted themselves in brush nearby.

"Two men came to the cache Tuesday morning, armed with Winchester and pistols. When they had surveyed the immediate vicinity they departed, returning at about 1 p. m. in a motor truck, which they stopped nearby. They then hired a wagon and team from a farmer and drove to the cache and laying their arms aside began loading the wagon and hauling the booze to the truck, which could not be driven down to the creek bank," Sheriff Brownfield said.

Watch Procedure
After watching this procedure for a short time the officers rose from their hiding places and ordered the men to throw up their hands, telling them that they had the advantage of them and admonished them not to resist. Instead, they are reported by officers to have attempted to get their guns and were fired upon.

Sheriff Brownfield said here this evening that as far as he knows no charges had been filed in connection with the affair. The liquor was taken to Snyder.

Wright, who is expected to recover from his wound, refused to make a statement when approached at the hospital late today.

Woman Along
Snyder, Texas, April 27—Sheriff F. M. Brownfield stated here tonight that a woman accompanied George Lackey and Jack Wright to the scene of yesterday afternoon's clash at a liquor cache south of here in the Colorado river brakes, in which Lackey received mortal wounds and Wright was badly injured by a bullet that shattered the right hip bone.

Contrary to a report heard in some quarters yesterday, the sheriff stated that the woman did not fire upon him and his deputies. She was sitting in a Chrysler car near the truck, parked some distance from the cache, he said. On hearing the shooting she climbed onto the truck and when one of the deputies went to get the truck she drew a gun upon him. When the deputy drew his gun she ran, Mr. Brownfield reported.

Winters high proved to be very successful in San Angelo at the district meet which was held there last Friday and Saturday.

It was announced Tuesday that the annual May Day program would be given soon. It will be remembered that Marie of the House of Hill and J. D. of the House of Robertson will be crowned Queen and King of the Blizzards and the Blue and White on this event. May Dukes and Duchesses will be present on this occasion.

Pictures were taken of the track team and the volley ball girls last Monday for the Glacier.

Don't forget to attend the senior play next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

The whole town's talking about the senior play, "The Whole Town's Talking."

Seniors to Present Play

"The Whole Town's Talking," by John Emerson and Anita Loos, is the play which is to be presented by the senior class next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The cast represents the best talent in the senior class, and the play promises to be one of the best which has been presented in the new high school auditorium. Following is the cast:

Mr. Henry Simmons—Auburn Neely.
 Mrs. Henry Simmons—Brooksje Justice.
 Ethel Simmons—Marie Hill.
 Chester Binney—Parham Witt.
 Roger Shields—George Newby.
 Donald Swift—Alton Roberts.
 Letty Lythe—Marie Griffis.
 Lila Wilson—Christine Barnett.
 Sally Otis—Lucille Hartzog.
 Annie, a maid—Gladys Geistman.
 Sady Bloom—Sally Lou Newby.
 Taxi driver—Bennie McAdams.

As can be seen from the above cast you will be kept laughing all through the play. Miss Wells is the coach and she should be complimented upon her continual efforts. The seniors are putting forth every effort to make this play the best of the season. Watch for further announcements.

The Lunch Room

Among the many improvements of the new high school building is a lunch room, which was opened Monday of last week. It is under the supervision of Miss Monroe and the home economics department. Lunches are served each day at a minimum cost, consisting of plate lunches at 15c, sandwiches at 5c, pie at 5c per slice, and ice cream and candy at 5c each. Many students are patronizing this modern improvement.

See Parham Witt in the senior play, "The Whole Town's Talking."

The District Meet

Last Thursday afternoon quite a number of Winters' citizens and contestants arrived in San Angelo to make ready to take the first day of the district meet by storm. Friday was quite victorious for Winters and when the track team arrived Saturday morning they were quickly informed that it was up to them to win the whole meet because Winters was leading San Angelo by only one point and Midland was a close third, and the track meet would pile up the necessary points.

The track meet started at 8 o'clock and the Winters track men held the lead nearly all of the way until San Angelo won the last event thus edging out on Winters by a score of 45 to 43.

When the final count was made, San Angelo was the winner of the district meet with a total of 55 points and Winters was a close second with 50 points. Midland was third.

Winters sent more contestants this year and won more points than they have ever won, but competition was much stronger, especially San Angelo. Winters high has eight students to go to Austin this year, the two debating teams, composed of Auburn Neely and Perry Barber and Marie Hill and Marie Griffis; four trackmen, Alton Roberts, John G. Key, George Newby, Mac Dedmon and Auburn Neely.

Although we did not get to keep the beautiful loving cup we have determined to start right now toward winning it next year. The principal of San Angelo high school was kindly informed Saturday afternoon by one of the Winters representatives that he and his school had better celebrate loud and long because they would keep it only one year.

On to Austin

Winters high is now looking forward to more winning this time at the state meet.

The debates (as usual) will go to Austin and it is hoped to victory. They deserve considerable honor for their work and all Winters feels exceedingly proud of them. They are Messrs. Perry Barber and Auburn Neely and Misses Marie Hill and Marie Griffis.

Winters will also be fairly represented in several of the track events. The following track men will also see the state capitol: Alton Roberts, John G. Key, George Newby, Mac Dedmon and Auburn Neely.

JOHN GARRETT MAYHEW

John Garrett Mayhew was one of two sons of Uncle Alfred M. Mayhew, so well known and revered by all who knew him in middle Tennessee, North Mississippi and Central Texas, at which place he died the triumphant Christian death at a very ripe old age. He was an exhorter in the Methodist church for years and years.

With such forebearers we are not surprised to find J. G. Mayhew loyal to the church, "walking worthy of the vocation wherewith he was called." He also had an uncle, C. C. Mayhew, who was a great preacher and revivalist and had much to do in early Methodism in Illinois, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee in the early times of the church.

J. G. Mayhew was born in Lawrence county, Tennessee, near Lawrenceburg, December 19, 1843. He was a Confederate soldier and was with the 41st Mississippi Regiment during the war between the states.

From Mississippi in 1874 he moved to Coryell county and helped organize one of the early Methodist churches of that time at Sardis. A membership of four viz. J. G. Mayhew and wife, Mrs. Mary Russell, and a cousin, was organized.

After several years of pioneering and stewardship he moved with his family to Taylor county in 1889 and located near what is now Bradshaw.

He was a member of the Methodist church for 60 years or more, and was a steward in the church for 30 years. It is stated that he only missed one quarterly conference session in those years. He seldom ever missed district or annual conference and was a tither. He practiced what he preached.

His home was the home of the Methodist ministry from circuit rider to presiding elder. He always accepted the appointment of the annual conferences as his preacher a weak one or strong.

J. G. Mayhew had a son, Rev. J. C. Mayhew of Central Texas conference who died January 25, 1925, "In the Triumph of the Living Faith." "Uncle John," as I called him, wondered why Jim was taken so soon in life and so early in his ministry. Uncle John was a Master Mason and only a Mason knows how much that implies.

He moved again in April 1920 from Taylor county to near Lamesa in Dawson county, where he and his wife resided with their daughter, Mrs. Tune, until they were called Home to Jesus.

Had Uncle John lived three more days he would have been 83 years of age. How clearly has he proven God's Word: "Honor thy father and thy mother that thy days shall be long upon the land which the Lord, thy God, giveth thee." What a heritage. Such an admonition!

He was first married to Jane H. Johnson, September 28, 1865 and to this union were born six children. This wife died December 6, 1878, and he was married a second time to Nancy M. Stewart, who lived only about one year. He married for the third time to Phoebe Elizabeth Adams, April 27, 1882, who was his devoted companion until August 6, 1926, when she was called home to Glory.

This faithful soldier of the Cross was laid to rest December 16, 1926 in Lamesa cemetery by the side of his companion who went away only a few months before. Rev. W. B. Hicks conducted the services and the Masonic lodge had charge of services at the grave. Those surviving are:

T. M. Mayhew, Bradshaw; W. W. Mayhew, Cleburne; J. H. Mayhew, California; daughters, Mrs. Mattie Horn and Mrs. Terrye Tune, Lamesa.

To know him was to love him. To live, walk, and talk to him was to love him more; in this life our sights are dim, we shall know him better on the other shore.

Phoebe Elizabeth Mayhew

Phoebe Elizabeth (Adams) Mayhew was born in Izzard county, Arkansas, March 28, 1847. With her parents she came to Texas in 1867 and located in Bell county. After a few years they moved to Coryell county and located near Purlama.

On April 27, 1882 she was married to John G. Mayhew, to this union were born four children, the oldest a daughter who died in infancy. She was a true mother and her life was so sweet and unselfish that her stepchildren even called her blessed. A stranger would never have known any difference in her parental love in the family circle.

About 30 years ago her eyesight began to fail and everything medical skill could do was called upon but to no avail, and the last 20 years of her life was spent in almost total darkness.

How well do I remember being in their home, and she would call me to her chair and place her hands on my head and face to see if I was changing much since I was there the last time. Little did she think of the sweet benedictions that came to my heart and life as she would talk to me on these occasions.

She was well educated, cheerful, thoughtful, patient, tender and a sweet Christian woman. One would never know of her afflictions by her actions. On every visit to her you would go away a better man. Even in her last years her hearing became greatly impaired. She often remarked that God was good in taking her senses one by one so she could more easily come to death.

She was converted when about grown and joined the Christian church, but after her marriage to J. G. Mayhew she joined the Methodist church and remained a faithful member until death. She moved with her husband from Taylor county to Dawson county in April 1920 and located near Lamesa and was in the house of her daughter, Mrs. Tune until she went to her Heavenly Home on August 6, 1926.

She was laid to rest in Lamesa cemetery August 7, 1927. Rev. Aubrey Ashley, a friend of the family, conducted the services.

To the loved ones:
She's free from toil and care,
There'll be no blind ones there.
How sweet and full of comfort are the following lines:

"Where We Never Grow Old"
I have read of a Land,
On the far away strand
In the beautiful home of the soul;
Filled by Jesus on High,
There we never shall die.
In the Land Where We Never Grow Old.

In that beautiful home,
Where we'll never more roam,
We shall be in the sweet bye and bye:

Happy praise to The King,
Through Eternity sing,
In the Land Where We Never Grow Old.

And our Work here is done,
And the Life Crown is won,
And the troubles and trials are o'er;

All our sorrows will end,
And our voices will blend,
With the loved ones who've gone on before.

Never grow old, where we'll never grow old,
In the Land Where We'll Never Grow Old.
—E. B. Mayhew, a nephew.

Double Birthday Celebration Here

In celebration of the birthdays of Messrs. Kit Hargrove and Ellis Bridwell a meeting was planned whereby the members of the two families met in the new building on West Dale street last Wednesday bringing well filled baskets and a feast was spread at the noon hour.

The birthday of both gentlemen comes on the same day, April 27, and they were 50 years of age.

After many hungry appetites were satisfied an enjoyable afternoon was spent socially. Those present were Ellis Bridwell and family, Bill Moore and family, Jeff Hargrove and family, J. W. Mitchell and family, Messrs and Mesdames Kit Hargrove, Will Hudson, W. P. Lloyd, W. M. Pumphrey, Jeff Flynt, Ralph Lloyd, Mrs. George Lloyd and baby, Raymond Lloyd, Buford Fisher, Howard Baldwin and Joe Pumphrey.

Earl Carroll is due to find out that all large and well regulated prisons use shower baths.

Even the Enterprise want ads, as well as they pull, can't restore that lost sleep for you.

Going to have a vacant lot garden?

What is prettier than a pretty girl? A prettier one of course.

Don't fail to see the senior play which is to be given Tuesday.

How Aesop's Fables are Made

"Isn't it marvelous how they make those wonderful animated cartoons? I wonder how they do it?"

How many times have you asked that question of yourself or your companion when the funny Aesop's fables are shown on the screen at the Queen Theatre.

A visit to the studios of this enterprising movie concern is a most novel and educational trip behind the scenes. At least 20 artists leaning over drawing boards and busily sketching, as their nimble fingers make the needle-pointed pencils fly, is the first thing that meets the spectators eye. So as not to get ahead of our outline, let us start with the birth of the idea that forms the scenario for our Aesop's film fables.

A conference is held and each artist has the chance to express his views and suggestions as to the theme and characters in the proposed picture. All suggestions are taken down by the stenographer and typed, and a scenario is thus formed by the head of the department who practically boils down the score or more of suggestions, into a short story that is filled with humorous situations and screamingly funny gags. With the characters decided upon, the scenario is developed in detail. Scenes, actions and titles are put into proper continuity in the same manner as a scenario for an eight reel extravaganza.

Backgrounds are the first pictures to be drawn. These are sometimes exterior scenes showing woodland country or mountains, or if it is a picture of the Far North, the background is of the icy hills of the Arctic regions. Interiors of rooms are drawn or closeups of windows or doors, as the case may be. After the backgrounds have been made the artist's immediately set to work animating the various scenes. This means that thousands of drawings must be made for each release so that a life-like effect is the optical illusion when the various drawings are shown on the screen consecutively and in rapid succession.

Each animator is assigned a series of scenes and his drawings are made on translucent tissue paper. Thus, the animator may see the lines of the preceding drawing as he places a new paper over each completed sketch. On the new paper he traces the previous drawing, but moves the arm or leg or head, as the case may be, up to give the started or completed means that each drawing of the character motion of the character. This acter is made in an entirely different position and the mere action of Farmer Al Falfa taking his pipe out of his mouth may mean a series of 40 to 50 separate drawings. After the picture has been completed by the total number of drawings being made on the tissue paper, these pictures are handed to the tracers who transfer the drawings from the tissue to celluloid sheets, which are of the same size as the paper. Both the papers and the celluloids, or "cells" as they are commonly known, have been perforated at the top with two holes. The holes on all papers and cells are of the exact distance apart and fit snugly on two pegs that are at the top of the animator's as well as the tracers' drawing boards.

Tracers then fill in the "blacks," or bodies. As we know, Henry Cat is a black cat and Milton Mouse is also of a very dark hue. Water colors, black and white, are always used so that after the cells have been photographed, they may be washed and used again. The completed drawings are numbered by the supervising artist and the number of photographic exposures necessary to the ordinary motion picture camera takes 16 pictures or "frames" per second, but the cameras used in photographing the fables are so arranged that only one frame or picture is taken with each turn of the camera handle, which is so arranged that the photographer merely pushes a foot pedal to make the exposure. The entire cartoon release is handed over to the photographers. It is usually between 10,000 and 20,000 sheets of celluloid. Then the photographer sets to work. He first places the background under the camera eye and fits the celluloid over two pegs that protrude from the camera table. These pegs are, of course, the exact distance apart as are the pegs on the animators' and tracers' drawing boards. The first action picture is placed over the background and as all pictures of action are made on "cells," the background shows through to give the necessary effect.

Upon the completion of the photographing process, the exposed negative is sent to the laboratory for developing. The negative is then developed and a master print made, and after the cutter rearranges this into its proper continuity, the picture is ready for projection.

To present an idea how the photographer or cameraman does his part in the making of the animated cartoons, let us suppose the scene is to show Henry Cat emulating Robin Hood sending an arrow into the air. Sherwood Forest is pictured on the "setting sheet," or painted background. This drawing is placed under a frame directly underneath the camera which is focused from overhead. A celluloid sheet bearing a drawing of Henry's body in standing position is superimposed over the Sherwood Forest background. This shows Henry in a natural position for archery—with these exceptions, his arms, bow and arrow are missing. These members are on a second or third sheet of celluloid, which when superimposed over the first, second or a third sheet of celluloid, which when superimposed over the first, complete the cat, Robin Hood, or if you prefer, William Tell. Then the superimposed sheets and background are photographed. To show the cat shooting the arrow the arms are made to draw the arrow on the string by substituting various sheets with drawings of the arms and bow and arrow in progressive stages of movement. Just the required number of exposures of each combination of drawings and background are photographed to make the action natural and life-like.

The next time you see an Aesop's fable at the Queen theatre try to estimate the number of drawings for each action and see if visualizing the technicalities of the process of production will add enjoyment to the already laugh-producing entertainment.

HOW THE BANK

Takes Orders FROM Its Depositors

Every check written by our depositors is an order on the bank to pay money to someone.

When you write a few words and figures on a slip of paper and sign your name, the bank does the rest. It does all the work, goes to all the expense, and never sends you a bill for the service rendered.

The bank is supposed to "get its pay" from the use of part of your money during the time when you are not using it yourself and have left it on deposit in the bank for safekeeping.

But if you and other depositors keep drawing nearly all of this money out, then the bank is going to be "out." It will have been forced to work for no pay. And no bank, no business, or no man can afford to do that.

"A fair checking balance repays fair banking service."

BEGIN HERE TODAY

PAULINE MALLINGATE has been strangely absent from her home in London for 18 months. Her mother and sister, Lorna, have communicated with her through a forwarding address in Paris.

HENRY EMERSON, wealthy stepfather of the two girls, has now vanished mysteriously from a summer resort where he was staying with Lorna and her mother.

DR. JULIAN EMERSON, claiming to be related to the missing man, persuades Lorna and her mother to leave the resort with him, after telling Lorna that her stepfather had no right to marry her mother. Lorna, however, has told her mother that her husband was taken to London because of a sudden illness. Dr. Emerson has broken faith with the two women by taking them to a strange house in the country instead of to London as agreed. They are being held virtually prisoners in a strange country house near the metropolis.

GERALD CRAVEN, Lorna's lover, has joined forces with Mrs. Bertha Northwood, a mutual friend, in attempting to find some trace of the missing family.

Through revelations made to her by ELLEN STOREY, a maid at "The Moat". Through her gossiping they have found a telegram sent by Mrs. Creswold. Gerald starts for London to hunt up an address in the telegram.

He meets Noel Shannon former buddy and aviator, and tells him the story of all that has happened. Shannon agrees that it is all a queer mess and expresses the opinion that the absence of Pauline, the disappearance of her stepfather and then Lorna and her mother is the work of the same band of crooks.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Something more than queer," Gerald answered. "It has just been anguish to me. You use the word 'crook'. That makes my heart stand still. Do you think they are ill-using Lorna?"

"No," the other man answered. "If I am any judge, I should say this conspiracy is in very clever hands and that ill treatment or violence in any form is not part of the program. Pressure and gambling on a woman's nerves and fears have a big part in the scheme, whatever it is, but no ill-usage in a bodily sense. Don't put gruesome ideas into your mind, old son!"

Shannon broke off as he lit a cigarette.

"You must let me think it all out a bit," he said slowly. "Don't make any move without me, Jerry. The evidence of this maid is very important. You tell me she imagines that there is somebody ill in that funny old house in the country? Well, I should say she is on sure ground there, and the fact that Mrs. Greswold dismissed that man, declaring that she was through and would not go on with 'it' any more, whatever 'it' may be, points in my mind to the fact that I was wrong when I said just now there was no recourse to violence. I meant that I am pretty sure that Miss Mallingate nor her mother are being mistreated but I am not so sure about Henry Emerson, and I wouldn't mind betting that the invalid of whom this servant, Ellen Storey, spoke to Mrs. Northwood is none than your lady love's stepfather himself."

"Now it seems to me that we have a lot to do Jerry, and just because it is possible that you may be known as being closely associated with the Emersons, I don't want you to go to this place in the Old Kent road. I'll go! Now as to 'Paxton'. Well you see, dear fellow, we are not absolutely sure the word is Paxton."

"I have the paper here and you may study it for yourself," Craven said and as he spoke he held out the telegram they had carried away from the Wyebourne postoffice.

"Well, I think its pretty sure an 'a' is meant to be there," Shannon remarked as he studied it carefully.

"There's no doubt Paxton is the word, but what we have to find out is whether it is the name of a person or the name of a place."

Shannon frowned and concentrated his attention on the paper, then he said:

There is a stretch of land called Paxton common about 20 miles out from London. It is not very far from an airdrome which I have stopped at more than once. I'll fly you down there this afternoon. We can do some scouting and make inquiries. Now I'll drive to find this Carter person."

"I must do my share," said Craven, as the other man rose from the breakfast table. "Can't I come with you? I'll lie low somewhere while you are making inquiries."

"Righto!" Noel Shannon agreed. "I've my car near by but I don't think we'll use it. We will go there by taxi. First of all we don't know where these so-called mansions are—they cannot be so very grand, despite their names, if they are on the old Kent road. Come on, let's make a start."

When they had reached the old Kent road they pulled up at a motor garage.

"There is a chap I know," said Shannon. "He's knocked out of his business and has started in business for himself. Trent is his name. He's a real good sort, and as clever as paint. You can sit here with him while I go and see how the land lies."

As they got out of the taxi Shannon explained "Trent is a one-armed chap, but what he can do with that one sound arm of his is simply amazing. You being a bit of an engineer, will enjoy yourself talking to him."

Trent welcomed them both heartily, and expressed very real pleasure at meeting Craven about whom he had heard Shannon speak so often.

But he confessed ignorance as to the whereabouts of Bureligh Mansions.

When Shannon returned he indicated that his quest has been successful but he said nothing until they had taken leave of Trent.

"I saw him lying full length on the bed and his eyes were closed."

"Well," said Shannon as they drove away after his return, "for the first time in my life, I have been acting a part and acting it with success. There wasn't a commissionaire or anyone in the house to give me information though I rang the bell a good long time. But I saw on the board the name Carter, and I went to the flat No. 2F, and there I rang the bell again. It was some time before the door was opened to me and then I found myself face to face with the most pitiable looking man one could hope to meet in the day's walk. He was a young man, must have been good looking once, but now an evident dope fiend. He had on pyjamas that were soiled and crumpled; I don't think his hair had been brushed for days, he looked unwashed, unshaven, and he was trembling like a leaf. As I asked for Mr. Carter, he shook his head and then with an effort he said 'Gone out'. Well, I asked him a few questions you know such as when Carter might be back, and how I could get in touch with him and so on. And then I asked him if I might come in and write a note to Mr. Carter, as it was very important. By an inspiration I added, 'It's a message from someone living in Yorkshire.'

"Well, Jerry, my boy, just for a minute he seemed to be galvanized into life."

"Did she send you?" he asked, and there was eagerness in his voice.

"I answered him rather roughly, and I said my business was with Carter, and that sort of squashed him. He shrugged his shoulders. And then he made me a gesture, and I walked in and shut the door. I had to find my way into the small sitting room by myself. It is really like a tenement flat—dirty and stuffy; a hole of a place. I couldn't see any pen, or ink or paper, or indeed anything on which to write, so I took out my notebook and scribbled these words:

"You are wanted Paxton."

"And I put this on the mantelpiece. The creature who had let me in had disappeared, but as I passed to go to the entrance, I saw him lying full length on the bed and his eyes were closed. Awful object as he is, Jerry, I firmly believe he's not the down and outer than one would take him to be—I mean that he belongs to a decent lot. But if he goes on much longer, he won't encumber the earth very long. Now I don't think I have done very much except to establish the fact that this doper has a connection with the woman at the Moat. I don't think there is very much to be got by hanging about that place. Somehow or other I have the hunch that the best thing we can do is to try our luck at Paxton Common. Of course, the idea may be the name of a person and not a place but we might have a try at the Common. What do you say?"

Craven assented eagerly to all his friend said and they went to have some lunch.

"Do you happen to know how the Emersons left the hotel? I mean did they drive or go by train?" was Shannon's next question.

Craven answered at once: "Oh, yes. They motored away. The manager told me that Mrs. Emerson had been carried to a car and then put on a kind of bed made of pillows. Apparently she had been so prostrated by the news of her husband's sudden illness that she was not able to sit up."

"Would it be their own car?" was Shannon's query.

At which Craven shrugged his shoulders.

Your Best Friend

Have you written to your mother, The truest friend you ever knew? It will fill her heart with gladness, Just to get a line from you. Every day her heart is longing For a voice she cannot hear. If you knew how much she missed you, You would write to Mother, dear.

If you knew how she loved you, How she longs for you each day, You would sit down and write a letter, And without an hours delay. If all others should forsake you, She will always take your part— Don't forget to write that letter, You're the idol of her heart.

No, don't forget to write a letter, She is anxious every day. Her heart grows sad with longing And she wonders at the delay. Her sweet face is sad and wistful Her hair is turning white. Don't forget to write that letter— Sit right down this very night! —Erline Brown.

Cannot Paint House With 'Sauce'

When someone pays you a compliment that is obviously exaggerated and too good to be true you call it "applesauce" in the slang of the day. You might just as well call it taffy or soft soap. They mean the same thing.

But "applesauce" isn't restricted to pretty speeches and compliments. There's a whole lot of it in "cheap" paint.

For instance when someone tells you that a paint which sells at a very attractive low price is just as good as Sherwin-Williams SWP— for example—which is one of the highest priced paints—that it will give you a beautiful job—a durable job—and last for a long, long time, that's applesauce of the purest kind. Try to paint your house with that kind of applesauce—and what a sad awakening there will be.

You can lay this down as a hard fact: "The lower the price per gallon of house paint the more gallons you will need and the poorer paint job you will get."

House paint must be pure—made of finest materials in the most skillful manner—to stand up under the exposure of the weather.

Cheap paint is naturally made of cheap materials or reduced materials. No one can cut the price without cutting the quality or there wouldn't be any profit.

Even if you bought direct from the manufacturer the saving in middleman's profits would not nearly make up for the difference in price. A good paint would still cost much more per gallon.

When you reduce the quality you reduce the covering and hiding quality. The paint becomes "wishywashy" You need more gallons. You get a poor finish—cheap, insipid colors—that fade quickly—and the actual

"MOST MILES PER DOLLAR"

Nance Brown Motor Company

There's a joker in the "cheap" paint can!

"Cheap" paint looks like paint and smells like paint—and the low price seems to be attractive. But here is the two-sided "joker."

A gallon covers only about half the area covered by SWP House Paint — a strictly quality paint. Nearly twice as many gallons are needed. Figure that out and the low price isn't low at all.

Then it lasts only about half as long on the house—needs to be renewed oftener—costs over twice as much per year as SWP.

Come in. Let us tell you the whole story about real paint economy. We will save you money.

GUARANTEED!

SWP House Paint is guaranteed to look better, last longer, cost less per job and less per year than any house paint on the market.
