Proving the Value of Cooperation

The citizens of the Crews community are proving the value of cooperative effort: by working together they have developed a program that is worthy of special note.

There is always a fundamental reason for a community, city, or individual business advancing on a substantial basis. We do not know all about the Crews community, but we do know that it has some good leaders who are thoughtful of the higher ideals and best interests of that neighborhood. They have built one of the best rural schools and social centers to be found. During recent years they have built a modern brick school building and are now at work on a teacherage which will be completed by the first part of August. We are sorry that we do not know the names of each member of the school board of that excellent community. They have laid a foundation for a school that is equal to many of the town schools. There are at least three members of the school board who have worked thru a number of years in a wonderful way in the upbuilding of the schools interests. These progressive citizens are W. H. Pape, E. W. Rainwater, and L. Dietz who served nine, seven and four years respectively. They are to be complimented upon securing such an efficient leader as Professor Grounds, who is to superintend their school this year.

The school is carrying the full course of ten grades, with part of the eleventh, and is arranging to give their neighboring communities the advantages of a good high school. Their general enthusiasm is evidenced by the way their boys and girls take hold of things. That community has some of the strongest athletic teams in this district, and when they match their athletes against those of other schools, regardless of their size, the people always expect a combat that is extremely interesting.

With the fine school, church and social interests manifested in the Crews community, we may expect to see some of their boys and girls go out from them to make a record in college and the world that Crews will be proud of.

Former C. of C. Secretary Writes

Killeen, July 23.—To the people of Winters: It is with a great deal of pleasure and pride that I look back on the three years that I spent in Winters for I feel that they were profitable years for me, and I want to take this means of thanking all of our friends for their interest and support that we received both in the school work and in the work with the chamber of commerce.

In leaving Winters I feel that I have left a host of friends that are true and tried, and among them people who are outstanding men and women of West Texas. I would be an ingrate not to appreciate the many kindnesses that were tendered me during my stay in Winters, and although I cannot see each one and express that appreciation I want to use the columns of The Enterprise for that purpose.

First and foremost I would ask you to renew your pledge to the task of making Winters what it should be, both from a civic and commercial point of view, by lending every ounce of your cooperative interest to the chamber of commerce and its program. I feel that Winters is fortunate in securing a man as capable and efficient as S. W. Cooper as secretary-manager, and I know that with your support the work will go over in a great way.

In leaving Winters I hold malice toward none, but instead the best feeling toward all. I realize that my best efforts can be put into the great work of building young men and women and since most of my experience has been in that work I felt that I should return to the school work. Therefore, I set out to find a place that I felt I could work with an in-

Local Presbyterian Church Opening

One of the most impressive and beautiful services held in Winters in some time was that at the opening of the beautiful new edifice of the Presbyterian congregation on Church street, last Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock hour.

With the beautiful auditorium packed to capacity, the anthem "The Lord of Hosts is With Us," (Ogden) by the choir, and a vocal solo, "Always Singing of His Love" (Wilson) by Joe Vancil, preceded the message delivered by the pastor, Dr. Hal F. Smith, on the subject "Building a Wall." The subject for the message was taken from Neh. 4:6: "So build we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof; for the people had a mind to work."

At the evening hour special music was rendered by E. M. Shepperd's orchestra and Joe Vancil again favored the audience with a vocal number, "Jesus," by Ackley.

Sunday School Rally at Mann

The Runnels County Association Sunday school rally will be held at the Mann Baptist church Sunday July 31, at three o'clock, when the following program will be rendered:

Devotional—L. B. Smith, Wingate. The Pastor's Attitude Toward the Sunday School—Rev. H. H. Stephens of Winters.

How Does the Standard of Excellence Provide the Sunday School a Better Working Program?—Rev. Tierce.

Should We Have a Sunday School Convention in Runnels Association?—Rev. Rogers, Miles.

Business. Benediction.

Interest in the boys and girls of the high school age. I am pleased to say that, so far, I find everything very promising for some good work at Weatherford. I have said repeatedly that I found one of the highest types of high school students in Winters that I have ever seen. Their good work has been manifested in the last few years, and Superintendent Smith deserves much credit for the work that he and his efficient corps of teachers have accomplished.

We are enjoying our vacation, and after a few weeks in Central Texas and at Greenville, we will be at home at 908 South Waco street, Weatherford, Texas, where we cordially invite all Winters people to call when enroute to Dallas and Fort Worth. We will keep a roster of the best watermelon patches in season.

With best wishes to all and trusting that Winters will continue the splendid progress that it has begun, I am, sincerely yours.—C. R. Robertson.

Good Rains Reported Wednesday

Rains varying in intensity from a half inch to two inches fell over a greater part of the Winters country Wednesday.

The West Texas Telephone company reports good rains at Bradshaw, Wilmeth, Drasco, Hatchel and Balingler, and E. E. Smith, who was in the city on business yesterday, says Wingate received the best rain of the season when some two inches fell. Probably about one-quarter of an inch of rain fell in this city.

Winters Section Well Represented at Short Course

"On to College" is the cry of a bunch of enthusiastic 4-H Club boys and girls, farm men and farm women from the Winters trade territory.

About twenty-five club boys and girls, men and women, left Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning for the Farmers' Short Course in session at the A. & M. College, College Station, Texas, Friday, July 25 to 30. Some of the delegates went on the train, and some went in cars.

Through the efforts of County Agent C. W. Lehmborg a special chair car was secured which carried the delegates directly into College Station eliminating any change along the route. This, of course, makes the trip a great deal more pleasant. The large delegation going from the Winters trade territory was made possible through the efforts of our County and Home Demonstration Agents, Mr. Lehmborg and Mrs. Hollingsworth, by working up community socials at which cream, cake and soda pop was sold and the money thus derived was put into a fund to help defray the expenses of the delegates selected from each community.

The Winters chamber of commerce donated $80 to make up what money was lacking to pay the expenses of these delegates.

Speaking to a reporter Mr. Lehmborg said "We certainly appreciate more than words can tell the wonderful spirit of cooperation shown by the Winters chamber of commerce in making it possible to send so many delegates to the Farmers' Short Course. It shows that the business interests of Winters are interested in the rural people and that they are anxious to assist in any way to improve rural conditions."

In this delegation five communities in the Winters trade territory are represented with the following number of delegates: Wingate 4, Dale 5, Drasco 6, Crews 5, Herring 6.

In all there will be about 70 delegates from Runnels county, and Mr. Lehmborg said that he felt sure that this will be the largest delegation at the Short Course from any West Texas county.

ENTERPRISE WILL BE ISSUED ONE DAY EARLIER

In order to better serve the advertisers of Winters The Enterprise will be issued one day earlier. The paper will go to press Wednesday afternoon, and will reach all the subscribers not later than Friday afternoon—in all the communities adjacent to Winters.

Those having news items or article will please remember this change in the publication date.

District Secretary to Speak

The Winters zone meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist church will meet with the Drasco Methodist church, Friday, August 5th.

A good program has been arranged and every member of the missionary societies of this zone is expected to be present.

The district secretary, Mrs. J. D. Smoot, of Comanche, will be present and it is hoped that every member of the Methodist church will avail themselves of the opportunity to hear Mrs. Smoot.

Leaving Germany For Home on First

A post card from S. V. McCasland at Tuesbingen, Germany, says: "You may discontinue sending The Enterprise for the present as I am to leave Germany August 1st. After three weeks spent in France, Switzerland and Italy, I shall sail for New York from Naples August 24th. I regret that I shall not probably be able to come home when I get back to the States. I shall probably go at once to Chicago, though my future location is not yet certain. I have had what I consider the most valuable experiences of my educational life here during the year that is past. The Germans are a people of high ideals and moral and religious devotion and hospitality, but at the same time of national prejudices and short-sightedness, just like us Americans and all others human being as for that matter. Give my regards to the folks at home. The Enterprise has been a mighty good friend to me all the year. I have not missed a single copy of the paper all the year in Germany."

The stranger in our fair land is entitled to be told that "Rink Go" is the headline writer's shorthand for a hockey contest.

The happiest land is one in which the people aren't sore enough to justify the existence of "great leaders."

Ah, well; those who now fear for the young once hid in the barn to smoke and to read Deadwood Dick.

SAYS WINTERS IS BEST FARMING SECTION IN STATE

A certain gentleman visiting our city this week said he had been familiar with this vicinity for over 40 years, and that even if he did live at another place, he would have to admit that Winters had the best all-around farming section in West Texas, and probably the best in Texas. We believe that the gentleman referred to has good judgment.

Lions to Meet At Hotel Winters

With President Bacon presiding over the opening exercises, the Lions Club and guests enjoyed a good program and meal at the luncheon at the Methodist church last Tuesday at the noon hour.

Invocation was given by Lion H. H. Stephens, after which the following visitors were introduced: Commissioners D. W. Yeager, H. B. Poe, Monty Moore, secretary of the city board of development, and Mr. Shepperd of Sweetwater; Prof. Homann, new vocational agricultural instructor of Winters high school.

Two vocal numbers were rendered by Miss Marie Hill, with Mrs. A. H. Smith as accompanist.

The committee on place of meeting made a report and the club then voted on the question of whether to move the meeting place of the organization to the Hotel Winters or continue meeting at the church. The vote stood 12 to 15 in favor of moving to the hotel. The club also voted to suspend meetings during the month of August.

With Carl Davis acting as toastmaster, talks were made by S. W. Cooper, secretary-manager of the chamber of commerce; Monty Moore of the board of city development of Sweetwater, and Mr. Shepperd, also of Sweetwater. Also good talks were made by Jno. Q. McAdams, D. W. Yeager, and Prof. Homann.

The program committee for the next meeting which is to be held at the Hotel Winters on Tuesday, September 6th, is composed of Geo. C. Hill, J. H. Hodge, and J. A. Huffhines.

FORMER WINTERS BOY MARRIES

Friends of T. J. Dunn, formerly of this city, will be interested to know that he was married last Wednesday to Miss Lillie Burkes, of Wadley, Alabama, at the bride's home in that city. They will make their home in Jacksonville, Florida.

Anyway, the pessimist doesn't engage you by looking on the bright side when you are having a good time being a martyr.

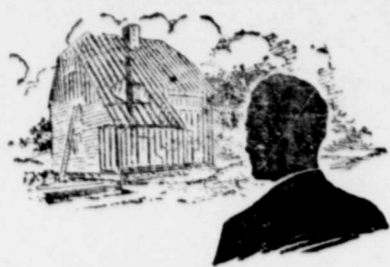

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Gaston had as guests in their home the first of the week Mrs. Will Antone and children of Paris, Mrs. Olin Sears of White-wright, and Mrs. M. B. Herring of Abilene. They returned to their homes last Wednesday.

Buys Fine Holstein Bull Calf

Earl Rodgers made a trip to San Angelo Monday and brought back with him a fine Holstein bull calf. More and better dairy stock should be the aim of Winters and vicinity. They say it is dangerous for a farmer to speculate on an individual crop, but we are of the opinion that the dairy business has more ways to offset a possible low price than does any other phase of farm life. Dairy products are not only good for human consumption, but the milk may be used for poultry, hogs, and even prize baby beeves may be profitably started on skimmed milk.

that they will put things over in a big way within the next two or three weeks. People, stand by these men and yourself in developing a real program such as never before has been developed in our city.

Winters is noted for her cooperative spirit and just at this time, an opportunity will be given everyone, whether in business or merely an employee, to render special service by attending the open forum meetings. Let us make these meetings one hundred per cent. There will be four groups and they will probably be arrayed in real battle formation. Their ammunition will be deadly—the kind that gets results in the community building "game." Just as well get to thinking, for it may be a single special suggestion of real constructive nature that will win the battle for your group.

HIGHWAY BUILDING

More than one-sixth of public revenue goes for road building. During the fiscal year 1924-25, highway construction and maintenance cost the nation nearly a billion and a half dollars. The rate of expenditure is mounting with every year, notwithstanding the large mileage of permanently improved roads previous outlays represent.

There has been a gradual conversion of the public to the wisdom of spending money for good roads. Ten or fifteen years ago, proposals for road bond issues were opposed in the rural districts on the ground that the usefulness of paved highways was confined principally to wealthy automobile owners from the cities. Now that nearly every farmer has an auto we seldom hear this argument, though a division still exists over the relative claims of main and lateral roads. In most cases, however, the only question really considered pertinent is how much the tax payers can afford to contribute.

CALENDAR REFORM

Thirteen hundred leading Americans, we are told, have ratified the plan for a year of 13 months, each consisting of four weeks. It would be a sensible change. It would stabilize business accounting and anchor a number of dates which now float about. But there are some who view the proposed reform with misgiving—tenants, for instance. They find 12 rent days trying enough without taking chances on the dubious number, 13.

ON WINGS OF LOVE

Two Connecticut girls served as bridesmaids at two different weddings in two cities 175 miles apart within three hours of one another. It was plane sailing. After the first knot they hopped into an airplane and were gayly on the way to the next engagement. Next thing we know some couple will be married over mid-ocean in a flight to Paris, with a divorce in waiting at the end of the jump.

A GREAT COMEDIAN

That Will Rogers should be able to keep up his funny remarks while suffering from gall stones and an anything-but-funny surgical operation shows that our heroes are not all flying over the seas in airplanes. Major operation is no laughing matter. We are all happy to know that he is recuperating nicely and that he will continue to spread the sunshine of smiles. There is probably no other individual in the world today who brings mirth to the hearts and smiles to the lips so easily and so generally as Will Rogers, who has a daily comment on the affairs of the world in several hundred of the best newspapers of the country.

It's sense, hard sense, that makes Mayor Will Rogers, cowboy comedian and grinning philosopher, a great comedian. Rogers is widely quoted because all his best comedy is based on common sense and keen observation, or both. He throws on high places the light of shrewd and deliberately homely philosophy. It's his own sensible nonsense and his own shrewd observation, too. His "gags" are far more than mere jokes.

Will Rogers has done many extraordinary things. He has been an ardent worker in the Red Cross relief fund. He put on a great many benefits, one of which netted $40,000 in itself.

There is certainly no more popular writer, actor, and humorist in all America than Mayor Will Rogers of Beverly Hills.

FEW STUDENTS DRINK

According to a recent survey made by the Anti-Saloon League, fewer than 5 per cent of this year's college and high school graduates drink and less than one-half of 1 per cent drink to excess. So another argument against prohibition fails to connect with the facts.

THE HOME RUNNERS

Pitchers have a license to embarrassment when the batting order of Ruth, Gehrig, Meusel and Lazzeri confronts them. This quartet of home-runners would break up any combination. With this stretch of run-getters on one team there is little hope in watching a man.

Aiding Merchants Advances Town

You should buy from Winters merchants because it pays you, as we have convinced you in the foregoing articles of the series. It means money in your pocket.

And it means money out of your pocket if you don't. If you made a practice of shopping at the city stores or if you order your goods shipped in by mail, you have only to figure up what these goods have cost you, and compare the total with what the same bill of goods would have cost at home.

For instance, the railroad fare or auto trip, your hotel bill, the time you waste, the goods you buy that you don't need, the higher prices you pay on account of the stupendous overhead at the city store—all these things must be paid out of your pocket in addition to the value of the goods themselves, plus a reasonable profit.

Every dollar that goes over the counter of the local merchant pays tribute to the entire community. It comes back to you in fullest measure. The merchant has the interests of the home town at heart. If from nothing more than a selfish standpoint, he is the best booster the home town has, because the greater the well being of its citizens, the better the pay they receive for their labor, the more comfortable their homes are and the better the streets are kept, the more efficient the schools, the better the fire and police protection, the more attractive does the community prove for others seeking homes. And therefore the greater is the number of its possible customers.

Buy of the home town merchant and you assure Winters of a permanent booster. He does not plan to stay here for a certain length of time, and then to move to some other place; he is here to stay for it is his home, and the home of his children.

To maintain this leadership our home town merchants must be supported. They set the pace and rally the forces of good citizenship. Go over a list of your merchants and convince yourself that this is so. The men in your general stores, in your dry goods and grocery stores, your hardware and implement dealers, your druggists, your harness shop and shoe store men, your tin smiths, your garage men, your elevator men and your produce dealers, your lumber merchants and dealers in building supplies, the men running your dairies and creameries, mills and factories, as well as other employers of labor, and others in the various affiliated lines.

Their leadership deserves the support of every good citizen in town. In fact, every man, woman and child in the community has a moral responsibility in the matter. These men work for the good of the home town, and everybody who has the welfare of the community at heart is in duty bound to work with them and help them in the things they are trying to accomplish.

If knighthood were yet in flower, certain young men would check their shoes before dancing.

Nothing is calculated to jar an eligible girl like a young man who talks about his money but says nothing about matrimony.

When a woman goes visiting nothing hurts her so much as her inability to impress upon her hostess the idea that she is used to something better at home.

The meanest trick a woman plays on her husband is to increase his stock of family connections.

Whatever became of the old-fashioned girl who used to spend Saturday evenings breathing into lamp chimneys and cleaning them with an old newspaper?

Writes Home About Carlsbad Cavern

Winona Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Moore, of this city, writes her mother from Alpine after a visit through Carlsbad Cavern. The letter is quite interesting and follows:

Alpine, July 19.—Dear Mama: We got home from Carlsbad Monday morning about 10 o'clock. We left Loving Sunday afternoon at sundown and drove to Pecos by 11. We were dead tired, so we drove up to the court house, drug our blankets out and stretched out on the lawn (or rather hard ground) and stayed until about 4:45. We beat the other cars home about two hours. We traveled mostly by ourselves, but didn't have one bit of trouble, not even a flat.

It is beyond my power to describe the cavern. We have all decided that the best we can say is that no one will ever realize the beauty and splendor of it until they see it. Words nor pictures can portray it as wonderful as it is. (You know the girls who were riding in the back seat of a Ford while it was being driven by another girl over rough and sandy roads naturally couldn't appreciate the ride so much. So Jewel described our trip like this: "Being in the cave was like heaven, but being on the road was like hell.") We spent Saturday night in Loving and went on out to the cave next morning, which is about twenty-eight miles from Loving. There were about a half dozen guides filling and lighting lanterns at the entrance of the cave when we got there. They only make one trip through a day, hence they quit selling tickets when they were ready to start, so that every one went in together.

It was fifteen minutes to eleven when we went in and four o'clock when we came out. As it happened our gang were among the first ones in and I had the pleasure of going through with the leader guide, who was a U. S. Ranger of Carlsbad. He was a middle aged man and the nicest, most courteous thing. Being with him I was the very first one along the trail practically all the way. Maybe you think I didn't feel uppish when I'd look up or down and see 350 people following me. Ha! Please don't think I'm boasting. I was just downright lucky and am proud of it. I feel sure we saw a lot more than any one else because he was right there to call our attention to so many details. The other guides were running around trying to keep people from breaking off the formation, cutting across the trails, or getting lost.

Twenty-six miles of the cave have been discovered but not thoroughly explored. Only three miles of it is fixed up conveniently for people to traverse. Three miles down and three miles back. People usually speak of going over six miles of the cave. Man-made stairsteps lead over most of the trail where it is steep and the rest of it is fixed with dirt and curbs. There isn't any strenuous climbing worse than going upstairs in it. It is divided up into rooms, so to speak. The largest one is three-quarters of a mile long, 350 feet from the floor to ceiling, 625 wide, and 750 feet below the ground. Of course, you can't see this all at once, there being partitions, etc., in it.

We reached what is called the dining room about 12:30. In there they have carried down benches, water and everything to make it convenient for a real picnic, even to rest rooms. We rested there thirty minutes while eating our lunch, which we had carried with us, and I want you to know we were plenty cold when we started on. The temperature is 58 degrees inside the cave.

The most remarkable thing, almost in it, is the number of animals and different things represented by the formations. You understand it is damp all inside, and water is very slowly dripping from these stalactites continually. Everything has been formed out this way. Among the different things were a camel drinking out of water (there are little pools of water all in it, and it is so clear you can't tell it is there by looking at it), one large owl, two small owls, a huge moose head, a little bird, a parrot, the statue of liberty, an identical similarity to a slab of streaked bacon, a stack of hot cakes, a turkey and nest of eggs, two sea lions, a baby's head, and even Ma Ferguson riding a donkey. These are just some of the ones I remember.

Perhaps you wouldn't notice these things in passing, but they have been picked out and signs placed to call your attention to them, and the likenesses are striking.

Practically all of the formations are snow-white, and either wet and shining or covered with what looks like the finest of frost or snow. You understand they have electric lights placed over all of it except one compartment, and you can't imagine the wondrous splendor that the reflection of the lights give. These stalactites are hanging continuously from the top and the stalagmites are almost all over the floor. Some of them have grown together and then the guide suggested: they are "mighty tites." These are shown well in one picture I am sending.

I want you to observe the folds of curtains in another picture. They are 10 or 12 feet long (I guess) and look like the most beautiful velvet or ribbon. They are snow-white, but by holding a lantern on one side, they turn a beautiful bronze color.

The other picture of the entrance is good, too. Do you think you would go into that dark hole, Mama? It isn't hardly as bad as it looks, but it does make you feel like you didn't know exactly whether you were coming back or not.

I'm crazy about the Kings and Queens palace. It is most gorgeous, but I won't go into details now. It is really the most beautiful part of it all, but I couldn't describe it if I wanted to.

There are numerous other things I am dying to tell you about, but guess I'll wait until I get home.—Winona Moore.

HARMONY

From the Bible we learn of a loving God who commands us to carry His message of love to His other children. The gospel came to us through others, and we must pass it on to others. Come with us and study, Sunday night, Christ's prayer for Christians in B. Y. P. U., at 7:30. Be there.

We sure are having a wonderful revival here. There have been thirty-two conversions up to Tuesday night. All of them have joined the Baptist church here, and will be baptized, except two.

Mrs. W. H. Seals of Winters spent the week-end here with her children and attended the revival.

Mrs. D. S. Moore of Winters visited Mr. and Mrs. Floy England last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Vernon of Dallas visited their brother, H. E. Vernon and family last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Hobbs are rejoicing over the arrival of a fine girl, born July 22nd.

Sympathy is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Dean in the loss of their dear little infant babe. We would say weep not as those that have no hope, for we know the dear little one has gone to be with our dear Savior in that beautiful home not made with hands.

Science gives us new facts every day. A chemist has found a solution to dissolve the scurf and scales of dandruff. His instructions are: Apply RID-O-DANDER each night and massage scalp well with finger tips. Apply RID-O-DANDER just before shampooing. Then apply RID-O-DANDER after shampooing to kill germs. The first application stops the itching, a few applications will stop your falling hair. This remedy never fails. Secure it at your druggist, or

Texas Delegation Has Successful Trip

Los Angeles, Calif., July 22.—The delegation of Farm Women of Texas, comprising the Texas Farm Women's special touring California in a study of handling, processing and merchandising of farm products handled cooperatively, will leave California today enroute home. Practically every section of the State of Texas is represented on the tour by outstanding farm women selected for this purpose, in order that the various communities may have the benefit of the information and facts so obtained. The party has made similar stops and studies in Colorado and Utah. Returning they will stop at El Paso and at College Station.

At College Station the delegation will present a cooperative marketing pageant during the annual farmers' short course program being held at the A. & M. College. The party left Dallas July 9th, and will disband at Dallas Tuesday night, July 27th.

Much valuable material has been obtained by the delegation throughout the trip. At the various stops made in Colorado, Utah, and California, they have been received, welcomed and entertained by chambers of commerce and business men who are cooperating in these states in the furtherance of agricultural prosperity through the advancement of cooperative marketing. Detailed studies have been made of the organization, operation, set-up and functions of the various organizations, as well as the manner followed in receiving and processing the different commodities. Plants, packing houses, fields, orchards, farms, farm homes and distributing points have been visited and a first-hand knowledge obtained of these factors in the advancement of agricultural and farm life. It is understood that the various representatives will return to their respective communities or counties in Texas and through meetings present the results of their findings, investigations and study.

"Improvement of quality and standardization of the commodity have been the outstanding features of the success of the various cooperatives visited," Mrs. Hollingsworth, Runnels county's home demonstration agent, said. She is representing her section of the State on the Farm Women's Special, which is being sponsored by the educational department of the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton Association. Among the commodities studied which are successfully handled cooperatively in the three states visited are: beans, beets, wheat, potatoes, poultry, dairy products, almonds, walnuts, pears, plums, raisins, oranges, lemons, apricots, flax and alfalfa. The tour, the first of its kind ever conducted, is considered highly successful and, according to those who have acted as hosts for the party through the trip in the various states "should result in the advancement of agricultural prosperity within the State of Texas and the raising of the standard of living upon the farm homes there." The interest of farm women in the problems of the farm is considered paramount to the success of farming operations by agricultural leaders here where prosperous farming is a reality and where cooperative marketing has been in operation over a period of years.

Mrs. W. E. Hickman and Anna Lee left Tuesday for a few days visit with her father, W. A. S. Cobb, at Coleman. They returned Wednesday accompanied by Mr. Cobb who will visit in the home of his daughter.

QUALITY OF FRIENDSHIP

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for July 31: The Obligations of Friendship.—1 Samuel 18:1-4; 19:1-7.

And it came to pass, when he had made an end of speaking unto Saul, that the soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David; and Jonathan loved him as his own soul.

And Saul took him that day, and would let him go no more home to his father's house.

Then Jonathan and David made a covenant, because he loved him as his own soul.

And Jonathan stripped himself of the robe that was upon him, and gave it to David, and his garments, even to his sword, and to his bow, and to his girdle.

And Saul spake to Jonathan his son, and to all his servants, that they should kill David.

But Jonathan, Saul's son, delighted much in David; and Jonathan told David, saying, Saul my father seeketh to kill thee. Now, therefore, I pray thee, take heed to thyself until the morning, and abide in a secret place, and hide thyself.

And I will go out and stand beside my father in the field where thou art, and I will commune with my father of thee; and what I see, that I will tell thee.

And Jonathan spake good of David unto Saul his father, and said unto him, Let not the king sin against his servant, against David; because he hath not sinned against thee, and because his works have been to thee-ward very good.

For he did put his life in his hand, and slew the Philistine, and the Lord wrought a great salvation for all Israel: thou sawest it, and didst rejoice; wherefore then wilt thou sin against innocent blood, to slay David without a cause?

And Saul hearkened unto the voice of Jonathan: and Saul sware, As the Lord liveth, he shall not be slain.

And Jonathan called David, and Jonathan shewed him all those things: and Jonathan brought David to Saul, and he was in his presence as in times past.

"THERE is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother." David and Jonathan typify the ideal friendship illustrating the Golden Text of this lesson, from Proverbs 18:24.

Such stories express an ideal to which something fine in human life responds. There is that about friendship which is spontaneously real and simply honest which makes friendship a holy and beautiful thing.

Family Ties

We have no choice in blood relationship. Wide divergencies of character exist within a family; tastes and ideals of brother and sister often are vastly different. The proverb that "blood is thicker than water" suggests the strength of the bond of kinship in spite of these differences. Responsibility toward our own kin is natural, even in cases where spontaneous and genuine affection is lacking.

We cannot choose our relatives but our selection of friends is a test of character. A force that is stronger than almost anything else in the universe results where the approaches of friendship are mutual. A true and thorough-going friendship cannot be destroyed.

David and Jonathan illustrate a characteristic of friendship that it is often manifest under strange circumstances and transient situations of difficulty. The fact that David's best friend was a son of Saul who pursued him with jealousy and kept his very life in danger for a long period adds interest to the story. When Jesus himself emphasized the privileges of discipleship and the richest honor he had to confer upon men, he said: "Henceforth I call you not servants but I have called you friends."

Chevrolet Touring Nation's Parks

Bound on a circle tour of all the National Parks of the West, a Chevrolet Imperial Landau recently left Los Angeles, under the direction of the Chevrolet Motor Company, to explore the scenic wonderlands, secure pictures of the countless spots of surpassing interest and report on the general conditions of the highways leading to them.

Recognized the country over as a region of unrivaled charm and beauty, the western national parks are drawing a record number of tourists this year. Although the South, East and Middle West, in fact all America, is represented by vacationists who are taking advantage of fine ribbons of concrete to explore the wonder theatre of nature, the average American motorist has yet to visit the section. And it is in the interests of those who have yet to enjoy this sustained treat as well as those who have made the trips that the Chevrolet National Parks car is on its way.

Authorities in charge of the National Parks system are in hearty accord with the action of the Chevrolet Motor Company. The car carries a letter from A. M. Demaray, acting director of the National Parks service, commending the automobile and its crew and introducing them to the superintendents in the West.

Educational authorities, too, have interested themselves in the move of the Chevrolet Motor Company, to give more publicity to the recreational features of our national parks. Harold Stonier, vice president of the University of Southern California, acting as official starter, congratulated the pilot, W. S. Wood, and waved success to the party as the Chevrolet swept across the campus of the famous California institution, headed for Zion National Park in Southwestern Utah.

The National Parks Chevrolet will then proceed to the north rim of the Grand Canyon, visiting enroute the newest national monument at Pipe Springs. From the north rim and the great Kaibab forest, where winter snowdrifts are still lying in the sheltered canyons, the Chevrolet will visit Bryce Canyon and from there double back to Cedar Breaks, and thence to Salt Lake City.

From Salt Lake City the car will head east for Rocky Mountain National Park, near Denver, and go from there to Mesa Verda, where the most remarkable cliff dwellings to be found in the West, are preserved under the supervision of the government.

From Mesa Verda the car will proceed to Yellowstone and thence to Glacier National Park, for upward toward the Canadian line. West from there the Chevrolet will head for Ranier National Park. Homeward bound once more down the Pacific Coast, Crater Lake, Lassen, Yosemite, General Grant and Sequoia will complete the list of parks on the long trail ahead of the Chevrolet.

The car carries nothing more in the way of equipment than a set of chains, which very likely will not be used once on the entire journey.

That is why Dunlop tubes are made casing shaped. It costs a little more than to build them on a straight pole, as cheap tubes are built.

But a casing-shaped Dunlop tube is strong everywhere. The outside edge is not weakened by excess stretch. The side next to the rim has no wrinkles to crack with age and blow out. A Dunlop tube protects your casing, because it fits. And your casing is worth ten times the cost of the tube.

A little later, when Dr. Horder came, he found Bertha Northwood installed beside the invalid's bedside.

She made herself known to him, recalling the fact that she had met him many times when she had been staying with Lady Evelyn Creswold-Withington.

"I used to stay at the Mulberry House," she said.

Dr. Horder remembered her perfectly.

"I am delighted to find you here, Mrs. Northwood," he said. "I was just going to try to get into communication with you. I was called to the Mulberry House this afternoon. Some friends of yours are there."

Mrs. Northwood got up quickly and pressed her hands together.

"Oh!" she said, "Lorna."

The doctor nodded his head.

"Yes. I understand Miss Mallingate's name is Lorna. She has been terribly anxious about her mother. I found Mrs. Emerson in rather a bad way, but fortunately I was called in time."

"Oh, I wonder! . . . I wonder," said Mrs. Northwood, "if I could go there tonight? I long to see Lorna and her mother."

"Of course you can go. As a matter of fact, there is nothing for you to do here. Mr. Craven is better left in complete quietness. You see he is practically asleep. I suppose he didn't recognize you?"

"Well, you can leave him in very sure hands. Mrs. Donald is a wonderful nurse. And now if you like we will go to the Mulberry House. I shall be thankful to have you there for they need you very badly."

"We will go in my car," Mrs. Northwood said eagerly, and after exchanging a few words with Mrs. Donald she and Dr. Horder got into her big car that was standing outside and drove rapidly away.

When they reached the Mulberry House the door was opened to them by a middle-aged woman who looked white-faced and frightened. There was a discoloration on her face as if she had knocked herself violently or been hurt.

She said nothing but stood aside to hold the door open for the doctor to walk through. But she looked with something like terror in her expression as Bertha Northwood followed him.

"This way," Dr. Horder said, "only one flight of stairs and you will find Mrs. Emerson in the first room on the passage facing us."

As they passed into the hall, they caught sight of a man sitting smoking in a chair, and at some little distance away from him was another man lying on the floor in an inert fashion.

Carter took no notice of the doctor or Mrs. Northwood, but sat on smoking, but his eyebrows twitched as he heard a voice cry out suddenly:

"Bertha . . . Bertha Northwood. . . Oh, thank God!"

Then he turned his attention to the woman who was pacing to and fro in uneasy fashion.

"Take it easy! Take it easy, Mrs.

"I think your sister is a very wise woman," he said.

Brown! It's all over now unless I'm much mistaken; you've come to the end of your trouble."

Mrs. Brown stood with her two hands clenched together.

"I pray God as it is not too late, sir," she said. "I don't care what Julian does to me now. I just couldn't stand by and see that child's distress and not come to her rescue. . . . so I took upon myself to call up the doctor's house . . . and now its out of my hands."

Then she pulled herself up sharply and looked at the figure lying huddled up on the floor. "What did you do to Gilbert? Why, you have no strength! How did you manage to stop him from knocking me about when he knew what I'd done?"

"Don't ask any questions, my good woman," Carter said in his curiously dreamy voice. "Take what the gods send and be satisfied. He'll lie where he is for some little while," he added, "I managed to put enough stuff in the syringe to knock him out for a considerable time! And I'll do the same to Kassan if he shows fight."

Mrs. Brown laughed drily.

"Ah, Kassan isn't like Gilbert. He's a coward—a yellow dog. I left him sitting all crouched up in the kitchen, too frightened to move. He's took off his fancy dress, and he's got on ordinary clothes now. Makes a difference in him, I will say."

Carter smoked on.

"Kassan may be a coward, but he's no fool. He knows the game is up and he'll slip away. I'll give him about half an hour and he'll be gone, taking all he can lay his hands on—anything that will turn into money."

"I wish I could make you out, sir," said Mrs. Brown.

Mrs. Brown mounted the stairs nervously, but at the top she was met by Lorna, who flung her arms round her and kissed her.

"Oh, I shall never, never be able to thank you," she said brokenly. "The doctor thinks my darling mother will be quite well very soon, and you did it! . . . But there's more trouble for me, Mrs. Brown. The man I love came here the night before last—he was with me when you came to find me, at the bottom of the garden, but as he was leaving—and he climbed over the wall—he was attacked. Kassan and that strong rough man met him and they knocked him down and kicked him and cut his head open, and now he is lying in the village very ill indeed."

Mrs. Brown pressed Lorna's head down on her shoulder.

"There, there, my dear," and she could not speak steadily. "Don't take on, you've been so wonderful, so brave. God will not let you suffer more. This young man you love will get better . . . I know it . . . I feel it."

Two days later Mary Emerson and her husband were re-united. Pauline came to the Mulberry House the day following, and she brought her husband with her.

Shattered wreck as he seemed to be, no one could have failed to read the happiness written in Pauline's eyes as she realized that he relied entirely on her, and seemed only to be content when in her presence.

"If I leave you now," said Bertha Northwood, as she took farewell of Lorna, "I go with the promise that you and Jerry will come to me as soon as Dr. Horder will let him travel. And Pauline, too, will come up to Yorkshire in a little while. I would not leave Jerry, only he has you now, and Mr. Shannon."

A week later Lorna and Gerald Craven traveled up to Yorkshire. They were accompanied by Leonard, to whom Mrs. Northwood had given an invitation. She had had a long chat with the young man before leaving the village, and then had told Leonard she was in need of a useful help—one who could do carpenting work and other odd jobs, and she offered him a situation with a very good salary.

Before they went north, Craven and Lorna paid a visit to the Mulberry House, and were received by Pauline, who looked at least ten years younger, with some color in her cheeks, and brightness in her eyes.

She was sitting as Lorna had sat, under some trees on the lawn, and Patrick, her husband, was lying on a couch near by.

The sisters embraced tenderly and Pauline stretched out both her hands to Lorna's lover.

"I am sure it must hurt both of you to come here, for you cannot have anything but unpleasant thoughts and memories about the old house. But I love it, and Pat loves it, too. Oh, Lorna, dear, I am so happy now. Pat is getting so much better—each day he makes so much improvement. Once today he told me that to be back here in this home where his mother lived, was like a glimpse of heaven to him. He says it is full of her presence. I wish I had known her; she must have been a sweet woman."

"I felt her presence, too," said Lorna softly. "I was convinced that whoever it was who had lived in this old house had left a beautiful influence. As she kissed her sister she said: 'Then you won't be coming up to Yorkshire, just yet, will you, Pauline?'"

The elder sister shook her head. "No, darling, not yet. But we shall be up there before very long. And I hope with all my heart that you two young people will not wait about, but that you will get married as soon as possible."

As they walked slowly back to Mrs. Donald's cottage, Gerald slipped his hand through Lorna's arm.

"I think your sister is a very wise woman," he said.

Vocational Agriculture in Hi School

The business of farming is demanding new abilities on the part of the oncoming generation. The economic aspects of agriculture must be better understood by the farmers of the future, if they hope to succeed in their new endeavors. Farming is tending to adopt business principles employed in the industrial and commercial world in so far as they are applicable: quantity production, quality standards, specialization, and efficiency in management are gradually being applied to the new business of farming.

The aim and purpose of vocational education in agriculture therefore is not to increase the ratio of those employed in agriculture, but to increase the managerial and productive abilities of those remaining on the farm.

whose parents are farming people and desire their boy to acquaint himself with a higher and more scientific knowledge of various farm enterprises are eligible for the work. It will be necessary for these boys to have a project in either cotton, poultry, hogs, grain sorghums or the like. During the course of the year the student shall care for his project and this will be counted as supervised practice work.

The controlling purpose of such an education or course shall be to fit the student for useful employment upon the work of the farm.

The content of the course shall be in accordance with those problems which most concern the community at large and in which the greater part of the class shall be interested.

Winters is ideally located, being in the heart of a cotton and grain sorghum country, and at present no better crops are to be found. If such conditions are to remain we must continue to be progressive. Agricultural educational and particularly vocational agriculture is the means and the road to prosperity.

Your hearty cooperation in any branch of the work that may be put on in the Winters community shall be greatly appreciated.—R. E. Homann, Vocational Agricultural Teacher, Winters High School.

There were forty-eight additions to the church, forty-one by baptism, and seven by letter and statement. Six others who were converted will join other churches.
