TEXAS TECH BAND TO GIVE CONCERT IN WINTERS MAR. 19

MORE THAN SIXTY MEMBERS COMPOSE THE ORGANIZATION.

The band which recently played numbers from which the official Texas Centennial march was selected will be here Thursday, March 19, for a concert at the High School Auditorium at 8:15. Ellis Hall, prominent music publisher, selected the Matador band of Texas Technological college to play the numbers before the committee of judges which chose the Centennial march.

This is the most recent of the honors received by the Matador band during the past two years. D. O. Wiley, director, went to Texas Tech in 1934, and he has been building a name for the organization since that time.

At the local appearance more than 60 members of the organization will play a concert including marches, overtures, and novelties, some of which were included in the programs the band played on the West Coast during its most recent visit there last fall. The musical delegation from the Lubbock college was popular with California football and radio fans. During their stay in the Pacific state, they played concerts in Hollywood, Los Angeles, and at the California Pacific exposition in San Diego.

Winters is included on the itinerary of the band during its second spring tour. The collegians will arrive here on chartered busses. Advance notices promise an interesting and varied program for the local appearance.

The delegation has been favored by Governor and Mrs. James V. Allred and a number of Hollywood movie stars and California critics, and local audiences will be given a chance to witness one of the finest college bands of the Southwest, picturesque in their uniforms of scarlet and black corduroy.

LITTLE BOY BLUE

(Author Unknown)

Little boy blue, come blow your horn,
There's a government agent counting your corn,
Another one is lecturing the old red sow
On the number of pigs she can have and how.
Pa's gone to town to find out what
He can do next month with the old meadow lot.
Ma's at the radio hearing 'em tell
How, under the new deal, there ain't no hell.
Aunt Mamie's in Washington, drawing big pay,
From the PDQ and the AAA.
The hired man quit when the work didn't please,
And got a job trimming the government trees.
They'll be telling you soon, if you don't take care,
Where you can live and what you can wear;
What you can pay for your pants and your shoes,
So this is no time to be taking your snooze.
Little boy blue may be buried deep,
Under the red tape, but he's not asleep.

Proclamation By the Mayor

The week of March 29th to April 4th, inclusive, has been designated as Spring Fire Prevention Clean-Up Week.

"This is Centennial Year in Texas and a Spring Clean-up Campaign should receive the enthusiastic support of every man, woman and child. First, every citizen should have a wholesome pride in his home city, its streets, playgrounds, parks and buildings. Homes and surroundings freshly painted, with well kept lawns and gardens, increase property values and intensify community interest. Cleanliness creates cheer, courage and confidence. Secondly, because every dollar in property destroyed by fire, which frequently is the result of "careless" housekeeping in the home and in the average place of business, is a serious drain upon our present economic condition. Thirdly, and humanly most important, because in the past ten years entirely too many of our citizens have lost their lives due to carelessness in their daily use of fire, and the preservation of human life is an important matter.

"Now, therefore, I, J. W. Copeland, Mayor of the city of Winters, do hereby designate the week of March 29th to April 4th, inclusive, as Spring Fire Prevention Clean-up week and most respectfully call upon all departments of the city, the Chamber of Commerce, Civic Clubs, Patriotic Clubs and our people in general, to take an active part in this Clean-Up Campaign.

"In Testimony Whereof, I hereto sign my name and seal of office this, the 10th day of March, A. D. 1936.—J. W. Copeland, Mayor, Winters, Texas.

"Attest: Roxie Floyd, city secretary."

SLIGHT INCREASE IN COTTON ACREAGE IS PLAN OF FARMERS

MEETINGS TO DISCUSS PLANS ARE WELL ATTENDED.

One hundred and fifty farmers attended meetings at Winters, Crews and Franklin community the past week to discuss their intentions concerning the acreage planted to cotton this year. Results of the Winters meeting show that those present intend to increase their cotton acreage on an average of 9.7 per cent per farmer. Twenty two cast ballots for an increase in acreage, while twenty-four farmers indicated that they would plant about the same as last year. Four men will decrease their acreage.

Farmers of the Franklin community show that they intend increasing their cotton acreage only 2 per cent. Eleven men will maintain the same acreage figure while six indicated an increase.

Ralph Lloyd has stated positively that he will not serve another term in the council, while Messrs. Brown and Baldwin say they believe the offices should be passed around.

FIRST INSTALLMENT

A whistle sounded across the harbor, the signal for the Marzenia to slip from her moorings. Its booming note spread tumult through the midnight stillness and startled a flock of sea gulls into flight. Two snub-nosed tugs prodded the ship's sides and eased her slowly into midstream, where she paused for a throbbing second, a dark monster riddled with rings of gold.

Along her decks, passengers leaned at the rails. The band played and the music drifted faintly back to those who stood at the end of the pier, waving goodbye to their friends who were starting out on a cruise around the world.

Keith Macduff turned away from the rail and climbed to the boat deck, where he could breathe the ice night air without distraction. The Woolworth Tower, old and friendly, went shimmering past, as the Marzenia cleared the tip of Manhattan Island. Macduff breathed deeply and his chest swelled under his ulster. There was no one in New York that he would miss; that was one of the great advantages of going through life without ties.

He had boasted to Hamish Ingles that he would sail around the world and never speak to a soul.

Hamish had laughed him to scorn, telling him that there was nothing more difficult to do than the overtures to one's fellow travellers on a cruise. As a solace, he had made him a list of the best cocktails of every port.

A light breeze was ruffling the water's surface and Macduff looked back at the sparkling towers that were now no more than a trail of phosphorescence. New York was the place for work, he reflected, thinking of all the pleasant things that a man could do when he lived by himself.

He would miss his peaceful existence in New York, and his pleasant evenings with detective stories, under the battered lamp that Susannah wanted to remove in favor of something she called a bridge stand. His thoughts ran back over his years in New York. Each one was locked in a dark chamber in his mind, and it was only at rare intervals, when something unusual was happening to him, that he switched on the lights; then things sprang to life like pictures on a screen.

Macduff looked back towards New York. It was only a phantom of light on the water's edge now, but he knew that its tiers of stone and panes of glass aspired to the drifting clouds. For a brief flash he could see thru it all, as if the walls had collapsed before his eyes—bright rooms inhabited by people chattering about nothing; men and women quarrelling, making love, reading and dancing; bands playing; radios spreading din; children making a noise. Such a race for huddling! They did not know what it was to spend an evening alone, or to seek quiet with a book. Must have company, must make whoopee. Bah! He turned away. He saw a fur coat and a huge bunch of orchids curled against the rail.

Clare Langford, lost in thought—watched his receding back for a moment, then turned her attention to the sea. Dick Charlton, the chief officer, came stalking along the deck and leaned against the railing, several yards away. His cap was tilted

Kay Francis' Most Dramatic Film, "I Found Stella Parish," is Booked For Showing at the Queen Sunday-Monday

SONGS, COMEDY AND DANCING FEATURE PENNER-OAKIE FILM, "COLLEGIATE"; CHARLIE CHAN'S SECRET NOW SHOWING.

Kay Francis, supported by a talented cast, comes to the Queen Theatre Sunday for a two day run, in the First National production, "I Found Stella Parish." Shiver and gasp as you may have at the previous pictures of Charlie Chan series, you will find new and unexpected thrills in "Charlie Chan's Secret" as Warner Oland unravels a baffling murder mystery in the Fox picture showing today and tomorrow. Joe Penner is back on the screen again with Jack Oakie but minus his famous duck. The new Penner picture, "Collegiate" which also has Ned Sparks, Lynne Overman and lovely Frances Langford in the cast will be shown Tuesday and Wednesday. "Broadway Hostess," First National's rollicking new musical comedy drama, with thrilling high lights, catchy music and mammoth spectacles, will be shown Thursday night only.

"I Found Stella Parish"

The film is based on a powerful drama by John Monk Saunders. Kay Francis has the intensely emotional role of a woman who topples from the heights of success to the depths of despair. Fighting to hide a terrible page in her life in order to protect her six year old daughter from scandal, she is betrayed by the man she has come to love, and started her on the downward path in her profession. Separated from her child whom she has placed in hiding with a faithful retainer, her love turned to bitter hatred, she is torn by a terrific emotional stress that eats into her heart and makes her life a horrible nightmare. The battle of the young journalist, the man who had published the story of her life after having won her confidence, to bring back her success and make up for the injustice he had done her, leads to an astounding and intensely dramatic climax. Ina Hunter, the English stage and film star, has the role of the journalist. The clever child actress, Sybil Jason, is seen as Miss Francis's daughter.

"Charlie Chan's Secret"

Trapped in a house of death, Warner Oland weaves the wildest web ever set to catch a murderer in this new picture. With thirteen suspects to combat and each a threat of death to himself—Charlie Chan coolly and carefully traps the murderer of a young heir he has trailed half way round the world. The weird forces of the occult world, diabolic machines of modern science—high-powered rifles that kill from a distance—prove of no avail against the courage and wiles of the famous Chinese detective.

"Collegiate"

The story tells how Jack Oakie, Broadway playboy, inherits a girls' boarding school from his aunt. His handy-man, Lynne Overman and his anti-publicity agent, Ned Sparks, get Oakie out of jail for the reading of the will, then start out for the newly acquired school with him. On the way they meet Joe Penner who is a victim of amnesia. The four join forces and proceed to the school, which proves a major disappointment because of its mid-Victorian atmosphere. Oakie and his cohorts begin to make things hum from the beginning. They change the seminary into a "charm school," substitute the saxophone for the zither and shorts for bloomers and bring some lively music into the place. Frances Langford is the girl in the story who has her first important acting part in pictures and who sings as beautifully as she ever did.

"Broadway Hostess"

It is the story of a little country girl who goes to the big city to make good in the theatrical world. She finds it a tough job to crash Broadway, however, until she meets a big shot gambler who puts her over in a big way and makes her the toast of the bright light district. Comedy and thrills in quick succession until a smashing climax in which the gambler is slain by the brother of the woman he loves. Winifred Shaw, musical comedy star has the role of the little country girl. Phil Reagan is her assistant, while Lyle Talbot is the gambler and Genevieve Tobin the society girl who Talbot loves. Phil Reagan also sings throughout the picture.

LYRIC THEATRE

Harry Carey in his latest Western, "Rustler's Paradise," will be shown Saturday at the Lyric Theatre only. Carey, whose popularity as a star dates from the days of silent pictures, surpasses all his previous triumphs by what he has accomplished in this picture. He scores a tremendous hit as Kincaid, the man with a mission of vengeance, who invades the haunt of the border, finds his long-lost daughter and wrecks revenge with a bull-whip on his arch-enemy.

BRUCE BARTON Says:

THE RACE IS LONG

Just because we have made so much scientific progress and invented some useful gadgets, we like to think that human intelligence has made tremendous progress in the past few hundred years. But has it?

Plato, born 2365 years ago, said: "A good state of affairs with reference to laws is divided under three heads. First, the laws must be good; second, the citizens must obey them; third, when having no laws governing certain conditions, men are good citizens if they act in deference to what is just and reasonable."

Chilo, another of the wise men of Greece, laid down these principles of conduct: "To make good use of one's leisure; to rule the tongue, especially at a banquet; to refrain from speaking ill of one's neighbors; to be more prompt to go to one's friends in adversity than in prosperity."

Measured by the wisdom of the Greeks, or the Egyptians, or the prophets of the Old Testament, we would be bold indeed to claim any evidence of intellectual progress. If this seems like a discouraging statement, then consider the other side of it. The best scientific guess puts the age of the earth at somewhere between three billion and five billion years. The beginnings of the human race, according to similar guess, go back only about a hundred million years.

Of the hundred billion years which man has enjoyed more than nine hundred were used up before he had developed intelligence enough even to sharpen a stone and scratch a record of his existence. All real achievement has taken place in the last one hundred thousand years, most of it in the past ten thousand.

We speak of the race as old; it is actually absurdly young. Its course is not a spirit but a marathon, of which only the first few inches have been run.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN FIRST

Mighty Hector, the Trojan commander-in-chief, was slain in the war that brought the downfall of Troy. In the days of the Caesars the generals fought hand-to-hand; there was no sitting back in soft comfort, no waiting in marble halls for bulletins from the front.

While the Battle of Hastings was in progress a report went around that Duke Williams, the Norman invader, had been killed. His soldiers began to fall back in disorder and terror. But William, taking off his helmet so that all might recognize him, called upon his men to return to the fray. He didn't say, "Go back;" it was, "Come back."

Harold, the English king, was killed in that battle. Even as late as our Civil War some of the generals died on the battlefields, and others lost arms or legs. Stars upon shoulder-straps were no guarantee of safety.

We have come a long way from that. The declarers of war and the commanders of armies are no longer exposed to danger. Their headquarters are far removed from the scene of action.

The next forward step toward logical warfare should be affected through an arrangement whereby majors, captains, and lieutenants may be kept out of danger zones. Also, non-commissioned officers and common soldiers should not take dangerous chances.

Let civilians, especially women and children, bear the brunt of battle. Drop bombs on them, and thus confound the enemy by cutting off his supplies of bandages, knitted socks and other necessities.

When this procedure becomes general, mothers, wives, and children, instead of suffering the horrors of war indirectly and for long periods, will have them over quickly and permanently. Events are moving in this direction. War is no longer a valorous business wherein men battle hand-to-hand. The killing continues; those killed first are women and children. The valor and the glory are gone.

Mr. and Mrs. Neil Scott of San Angelo were visitors Sunday in the home of Mrs. Ella Ritch and Mrs. Lora Hinds. They were accompanied home by Mrs. Hinds who is spending the week in San Angelo and attending the Fat Stock Show.

John D. Lambert, vice president of the Anderson Furniture Company in Dallas, and Mrs. Lambert, were week-end guests in the home of his brother, E. J. Lambert.

William Cryer, student of McMurry College, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Cryer. He was accompanied by Truett Gardner, also of McMurry, who was his guest while here.

When you throw yourself away don't expect others to pick you up.

PROMENADE DECK

over a profile as sharp as the blade of a knife.

"Are we near Quarantine?" she asked, aware of his presence.

"Just about there." He moved responsively in her direction.

Clare turned her face towards him. It was pale and oval in the half-light, marked only by the full curve of her lips.

"I'm so glad to be leaving New York!" Her admission was as swift as the blaze of her eyes. Then she remembered herself and was quenched. She turned to the rail again and forgot that there was anyone else on the top deck. Dick moved quietly on his way. A shiver ran thru her frame. She was glad to be leaving New York, and to be going around the world. It was an excellent thing to be getting away from Hugh. Four months were too many to have devoted to him.

She looked back at the trail of light that marked New York and could see him returning alone to his apartment. How had she ever come to throw in her lot with his? It was so unlikely—a dusty scientist who had turned to writing and worldly living, after a lifetime in his laboratory. Her friends were continually telling her that his mind was gay and enterprising; they had discovered that from his books.

"Poor Hugh!" she thought as she leaned over the rail. "He looked so mournful as the boat moved out. What will he do with himself now?" But Hugh was less at a loss than she imagined. Soon after meeting Clare, one of his oldest friends had warned him that she was the wrong woman for him, and that he must not neglect his work for her.

Clare was suddenly weary. Yes, she was glad to be getting away. There was no excitement for her in the ethereal beauty. "I think I shall turn in," she thought, looking around to see if anyone were in sight. "I wonder if I couldn't have my deck chair up here. It would be quiet and more romantic under the stars."

The passengers were disappearing for the night until only a faint light remained on deck. The Marenia was heading for the sea and her four jeweled strings of light were showing blanks above the water line, as one porthole after another went dark.

In a minimum rate cabin on D deck Miss Alice Mudge bent with fluttering fingers over a straw suitcase lying open on her narrow bed. Her black eyes gleamed from a nest of anxious folds, for she was near-sighted and had decided to avoid her glasses as much as possible. Somewhere she had read that glasses were a hindrance to romance, and nothing must interfere with the full enjoyment of her trip around the world.

In a spasm of anxiety her hand moved to her waist. She took off her belt, undid her skirt, and fumbled for the small chamois bag that Hortense, the seamstress of Ohonto, Wisconsin, had made for her along with her travel wardrobe.

At last she had dug her way through tapes and buttons and had reached the chamois bag. Twittering, she turned it upside down on the bed, having first made sure that the cabin door was locked. Before her lay five hundred dollars in crackling bills which Mr. Brown, the banker, had given her with a flourish, remarking that it was not every day that Ohonto had a citizen leaving for a trip around the world.

Her ticket, which had cost two thousand was safe in her handbag, ready to be turned over to the purser tomorrow. It had taken her twenty years of saving and scrimping to accumulate twenty-five hundred dollars, though now it seemed like a day. By being very careful, Miss Mudge would see the world sumptuously on her surplus of $500.

The boat was beginning to heave and Miss Mudge wondered if she should take her Seaoxyl now, or wait until she felt ill. No, the directions said to take it before feeling ill. Had she been wise to have her hair bobbed before sailing, or was it frivolous and out of keeping with her years and occupation? It was too late to worry about it now. Besides she rather liked it, and, whatever happened, she was going to be utterly frivolous for the next five months. No one could stop her.

Her cabin was comfortable enough although her bunk seemed perched at a great height. She lay on her back and at last she turned out her lights and murmured a little prayer. She was so thankful to Providence for letting her go round the world at last. With the words slipping over her lips, she fell asleep, lulled by the pounding of the engines.

The Marenia began to creak and roll in answer to the sea. Sandy Hook was left behind and the pilot had taken off. Captain Mark Baring, standing on the bridge, and straining his eyes into the darkness that lay ahead, was the least cheerful person on board. He saw five hard months ahead of him, care and responsibility, strange harbours and the monotony that drove crew and passengers to erratic behavior.

A panorama of faces swept before him—middle-aged women starved for romance, travellers who had been everywhere and who made him a target for their ill-assorted knowledge, women who talked too much, women who laughed too much, and, above all, women who drank too much.

He lived in a world of his own and escaped when he could from the ship's festivities, but the cocktail parties, the teas and dinners, were a necessary part of ship routine that he could not avoid.

Only his intimates knew that he played a muted violin in his own quarters, and that there were times when he wrote verse. None of the crew suspected that the quiet, hard man who skippered the ship was an artist at heart. They thought he was made of ice—hard to chip, slow to melt, but a capital seaman.

The Marenia creaked a slow refrain from bow to stern. His heart rose suddenly to the tune of the sea. Here, at least, was something that fitted his mood—master of his boat, sailing the seven seas!

The Marenia was three days out and her passengers were settling down to the routine life at sea. The unwary were rushing heedlessly into friendships which they were soon to regret.

Clare had scarcely left the top deck since sailing. She sunned herself till her skin had the warmth of a pomegranate. The flame of the dying day flickered in her half-veiled eyes as Dick studied her attentively. "It's an odd thing about sunsets," he was saying, "one can never remember them. They're marvellous for fifteen minutes, and you think that all your life you will hold their beauty, but try to summon up the picture the next day! It's gone."

He was staring at the sky, and she thought with impatience that he was lost to her—a missionary like Hugh, the most tiresome kind of man. They were always floating off in their mental airships when one most wanted their companionship.

"How often have you been around the world?" she pursued. Dick looked at her suddenly and his thoughts receded like fading pictures, in the presence of this dazzling creature with skin like honey.

"This is my seventh cruise with the Marenia, and before that I knocked about the world a bit on other boats."

She measured him with her eyes. "What a wise young man you must be—knowing all about love!"

"What rot! I scarcely believe in love."

Clare laughed. Dick looked down at her. "Women are constantly building up the fiction of enduring love," he said, "but it really doesn't endure, unless one's life is so dead-level dull that there's no chance for romance. Usually women destroy their own images by holding on for too long. They should always be first in knowing when things are over. However, it's an instinct in which they are totally lacking."

"You haven't told me half enough," she observed. "Tell me some more about women. Tell me what you think of American women."

Dick threw back his head and laughed. "I wonder if you were wise to ask me that," he said. "Shall you be offended if I tell you I think them a little over-bearing—too intent on their looks, their clothes, their careers, their ambitions? And I haven't words to describe the way they treat their men, nibbling at their self-respect, leading them by the noses, making them wait for hours for the merest whim."

"You're rather extreme, aren't you?" said Clare, lazily, amused by Dick's tirade, "and you're not very polite. Take my word for it," she added, defensively, "American women are beloved by the gods. Show me any women on earth who are more clever and chic, more free and independent, or having so good a time."

"That's it," said Dick, equably. "They're self-sufficient, self-contained and frozen over with ambition." He was watching her with a glimmer of amusement. Clare's mood flashed to annoyance.

Laxative combination folks know is trustworthy

The confidence thousands of parents have in good, old reliable, powdered Theford's Black-Draught has prompted them to get the new Syrup of Black-Draught for their children. The grown folks stick to the powdered Black-Draught; the youngsters probably will prefer it when they outgrow their childish love of sweets. Mrs. C. W. Adams, of Murray, Ky., writes: "I have used Theford's Black-Draught (powder) about thirteen years, taking it for biliousness. Black-Draught acts well and I am always pleased with the results. I wanted a good, reliable laxative for my children. I have found Syrup of Black-Draught to be just that."

Centennial is Theme For Party at Dixon Home

Texas Centennial gave the theme for dinner party Tuesday evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Dixon to favor members of the Triple Four club and a few invited guests. Hostesses were Mesdames Dixon, A. Boone, L. E. Low, and E. D. Stringer.

The three-course menu was served at quartet tables decorated with cactus in gold pots on reflector. Place cards were art decorated in blue bonnets.

Patriotic decorations about the rooms formed an attractive setting with a large Texas flag prominently displayed. In the dining room the six flags of Texas were used in the center of the table with red tapers in candelabras on either end. Sprigs of cedar in pots with Texas flags were placed about the rooms adding much to the beauty of the setting.

The after dinner program was in keeping with the theme, the group singing "Texas, Our Texas." "How Big is Texas" was discussed by Lyle Deffebach and Miss Marie Hill sang "Rounded Up in Glory" and "Have You Ever Been to Tex. in the Spring." Miss Mayme Gregory read "Texas Mocking Bird" and "Going Back to Texas."

In the games of progressive forty-two the head table was the Centennial City, Dallas and table markers were T-E-X-A-S. Partners were matched by questions and answers on important events on Texas history.

FREE LIBRARY TO RETURN BORROWED BOOKS TO STATE

A recent addition to the library, "The Overall Boys," by Grover, is just the type of book that the children of grades 1 to 3 need for reading. The type and paper are good and not too fine for the youngest readers. And we find this book listed in a number of lists approved by the best colleges and teachers to be especially adapted for child reading.

This title (as well as several others) was accepted by the library in lieu of fees for books kept over-time. As only 1c per day is charged for keeping books over the usual time, a book must be kept quite a long time for the fees to mount to the price of a book. In this case one of the youngest readers, J. G. Emmert happened to keep out a book for two months which made the amount of the fees so much that the little boy offered one of his books in payment. This settlement was gladly accepted for young people need encouragement sometimes to do right. Too often because of their youth, children are not required to properly meet their obligations. Such an attitude might react on the child's nature to make him careless and even dishonest. In a free public library one has the opportunity to observe the reactions of people to benefits. There are a few who show little appreciation, but by far the most, of even the children, not only return books promptly so others may read them, but even show a real interest in building up the library. And whenever a child shows a desire to do the fair thing in promoting something for the public welfare he should be encouraged.

The state books are being gathered together this week for return to the state library. Will those who have these state borrowed books please return them? The time of the loan is up, and other books cannot be obtained until these are returned.—Mrs. R. H. MacFarland.

Earl Chapmond returned last week from a fishing trip on the Rio Grande, bringing home with him several large catfish.

W. E. Hickman went to Waco Wednesday to accompany his niece, Miss Anna Lee Cobb, student of Baylor University, home for the spring holidays.

Don't expect appreciation for all the good you do.

Made This Nation What it is Today.

We don't want to go back to the old days, with their trials and hardships and sufferings, but we need very much to get back to first principles in the matter of providing a living at home.

Providing first for the needs of the family, through ample food, feed and live stock, is an old-fashioned principle for an up-to-date need.

Let's get back to first principles by making a Living at Home on the farm our watchword for the coming year.

EVIDENCES OF RECOVERY

The best index of the state of business confidence at any time is the values which are placed upon stocks and bonds by the buyers and sellers on the New York Stock Exchange. That is not to say that the prices at which stocks sell always reflect the actual values behind them. What they do reflect definitely, however, is the belief of the business community as to whether business is improving, so that the stocks which they buy will have a higher value, or whether it is falling off in which case they sell their stocks, fearing that they will diminish in value.

Up to the end of February in this year there had been 11 consecutive calendar months of advancing prices of securities on the nation's Stock Exchanges. Since the rise began, in March last year, the average price of 50 representative stocks moved upward from $77.92 to $119.21 a share. Three years ago every bank in the United States was closed. Since that time the average increase in the price of stocks has been 136 per cent.

Last year on all of the registered national security exchanges 661 million shares of stocks changed hands. It is foolish to regard these stock transactions as pure gambling. A fair percentage of stock trading is done by speculators, but the vast majority of these transactions are purchases by investors of dividend-paying securities, which enables them to earn more than bank interest on their surplus funds. They buy stocks and bonds rather than real estate because of the existence of the stock exchanges, providing an open market in which any listed security can always be sold immediately at a price.

The very best evidence of a genuine business recovery, and that the world of business be-

THOSE AMAZING JAPANESE

To the American mind nothing that has occurred in recent years has been so amazing as the story from Japan of the assassination of several of the nation's high officials by hot-headed young army officers. The workings of the Oriental mind are beyond the power of most of us to follow. Apparently the soldiers who slew their statesmen were merely trying to protest against the anti-militaristic policy of the government, which has attempted to restrain the army's activities in Manchuria and Mongolia. It was a demonstration against the growing control of Japan by industry and finance, instead of by the military caste. The leaders of the movement regard themselves as patriots bent on restoring the ancient system.

One authentic tale of true heroism comes over the cables. The assassins were reported to have killed the premier of Japan, Keisuke Okada. Three days later Premier Okada turned up, alive and unharmed. The man whom the rebels had killed at his house was his brother-in-law and secretary, Col. Denzo Matsuo, who looked so much like the premier that, when he offered himself for sacrifice, there was no doubt about his identity. That incident reveals another phase of the Oriental mind, its indifference to human life, even its own.

Altogether, the Japanese episode suggests that the nation is far from being a unit in its aggressive policy of conquest on the Asiatic mainland.

Rev. J. H. Baldrige, Methodist Presiding Elder at Gatesville and Mrs. Baldrige, were looking after business interests here the first of the week.

Heaven in it, is the evidence provided by the record of the stock exchanges during the past 11 months.

BOYS WILL BE BOYS — by A. B. Chapin

THIS WEEK IN WASHINGTON

Washington, March 11.—The boys on Capitol Hill are unhappy they have got to figure out some new taxes—and no fooling. The word came from the White House, that they must provide additional revenues of $786,000,000 a year for the next 3 years and $620,000,000 a year for the next six years thereafter. They knew it had to come some time, but they were hoping it might be postponed until after election.

The President has not told them where to get the money. They passed the legislation so they must figure out for themselves where the money is coming from. The biggest job that confronts them is working out new tax measures that will really raise the revenue required without letting too many voters realize that they have got to pay.

New Tax Outlook

It is regarded as practically settled that processing taxes similar to those under the defunct three A's will be utilized to provide a major part of the additional revenues.

The likelihood is that these taxes will be spread farther, over a wider range of commodities, taking in practically every agricultural product that has to go through any manufacturing process between the farm and the consumer. The hope of the boys is that the consumer won't notice.

A strong movement is under way to revise the income tax laws so as to draw directly upon incomes down to $800 a year. Politically this is not well liked, especially in view of the fact that an income tax on all wages and salaries is already on the statute books under the Social Security Act, to take effect at the beginning of 1937. Some heavier inheritance taxes will doubtless be included in the new set up.

The inflationists are taking advantage of the situation by trying to enlist more support for their plan of doing away with additional taxes by simply printing more money. That probably will not get very far but they may make a lot of noise.

A push is on also for legislation to restore the NRA standards of wages and hours of labor on Government contracts, but the chance is rather slim of any such action at this session.

Other Aches

A good deal of interest is being shown in proposals to change the present method of subsidizing American shipping. It is now on the basis of mail carrying contracts given to ships built by aid of Shipping Board loans, at the rate of $2.50 a mile, whether they carry any mail or not. That some other method will be substituted for this is reasonably certain, but the matter is now a political tangle, with the Postmaster General on one side and some of the Senators and Representatives on the other side.

The most unpleasant news to reach some of the boys on Capitol Hill was the announcement the other day that Columbia University had granted Rex Tugwell another year's leave of absence from his professional duties. There are those in Congress who lack confidence, either in Mr. Tugwell or in his rural rehabilitation program, which is to cost $350,000,000.

$350,000,000 is a lot of money and there are a good many members of either House who can put up a good argument to demonstrate that he should have something to say about having some of that money spent in his own district.

With the fund in Tugwell's hands, the boys know it is hopeless to try to get it distributed in accordance with the long-established political customs.

In other words, Mr. Tugwell doesn't play ball with politicians, and that is the real reason why the politicians don't like him.

The Political Situation

Politically, Washington seems to have its mind pretty well made up that Governor Landon of Kansas is going to be the Republican nominee. A great deal however, depends upon Mr. Landon's acceptability to former President Hoover and his following, and to Senator Borah and his following. Very little evidence is at hand either way as to where these two figures stand in regard to Mr. Landon.

The Democratic strategy is beginning to develop. Nobody questions seriously Mr. Roosevelt's renomination. It would be silly to imagine anybody else heading the Democratic ticket this year. So far as there are any doubts they concern only his reelection.

On the point of re-election, the President himself has not

The slightest doubt. Numerous recent visitors to the White House, some of them friendly to him and some of them opposed to him, have reported unanimously his extremely cheerful confidence that he will be reelected in November.

The Democratic strategy seems to be to cultivate the confidence and good will of the conservative elements in business and finance. There has been quite a steady stream of business men in and out of the President's office recently, at his invitation. Many of these visitors have commented upon the reassuring tone in which he has told them that he was not trying to destroy the capitalistic system but to preserve it by attempting to cure its defects.

It is on that point (the charge that he has been trying to substitute Socialism or Fascism for the existing capitalistic system) that the Republicans are expected to make their major fight on the President.

THE COTTON SITUATION

The cotton situation is somewhat improved, is the verdict of Dr. A. B. Cox, director of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research, and noted cotton marketing authority.

"Improvement began last fall when the Government shifted from its policy of lending above market price to raise prices, to that of opening the channels of trade as a means of increasing consumption to raise price," Dr. Cox explained.

"The effectiveness of the latter policy, as contrasted with the holding policy, is best illustrated by what has happened in the last two years. When the 12-cent loan went into effect in August, 1934, the price of middling 7-8 inch spot cotton in New Orleans was 13.35 cents; and we were faced with one of the shortest crops in over 40 years.

"The indicated supply in the United States, counting carry-over and new crop, was only 16,941,000 bales. The price of cotton declined from that date to March, when the price broke to less than 11 cents in spite of the 12-cent Government loans. As a result, the Government took nearly half of that small crop.

"In the summer and fall of 1935, when the change of policy took place, the pressure of production both in the United States and abroad had increased. On August 1 the indicated supply of cotton in the United States, counting carry-over and new crop, was 18,946,000 bales. The price of cotton was less than 11 cents. From September 1 to November 20 the price rose from 10.55 cents to 12.40 cents.

"Why did the price of cotton advance? There were two principal reasons: Estimated production declined about a million bales, and, much more important, consumption in the United States and exports or disappearance were about a million and a half bales more than those for the same period of the preceding year.

"What has been the situation since the latter part of November? The rapid disappearance of cotton during the first four months of the year, plus a decline in estimates of production, resulted in a very tight spot cotton situation, which created premiums in near month futures by the latter part of November. These near month premiums tend to restrict both consumption and exports. This development gave the Government an excellent opportunity to market a considerable part of its cotton, and during the last two weeks the Producers Pool has begun to take advantage of it.

"The development of a sound sales policy for the Government cotton would be very constructive in the market at this time. The invalidation of the AAA and statements of high Government officials have created uneasiness about the size of the prospective crop. Moreover, uncertainties relative to farm legislation and taxation are bearish on the market at present."

Operations of the Texas cotton textile industry during January made favorable comparisons with the corresponding month last year, but were still far below normal, Dr. Cox said.

Reports from 13 establishments show total consumption of 2,684 bales during the month, an increase of 14 per cent over January last year; production of cloth, 3,397,937, an increase of 17 per cent; sales of cloth, 3,469,612 yards, an increase of 6 per cent.

Unfilled orders on January 31 totalled 6,084,657 yards, an increase of 8 per cent over those on the corresponding date a year ago.

HELPFUL HINTS ON LANDSCAPING HOME

Dressing Up For Centennial Year

"How to Prune Shrubs" is discussed to day in the third of a series of articles by Fred W. Westcourt, landscape gardener, which will be of valuable interest to many of our readers. Great care should be taken in landscaping small yards to eliminate the butchering process which is necessary when shrubs are not properly planted, is pointed out in today's article as an aid to those who plan to dress up for the Centennial.

Many people have the idea that all shrubs should be pruned into formal shapes or rounded up to form a globe shape top. This is entirely wrong. Sometimes closely trimmed hedges or regularly sheared specimens are needed to formal situations but usually ornamental shrubs are allowed to take their natural form and habit without any special pruning save that necessary to maintain good vigor and appearance such as the removal of weak, broken or diseased wood, unsightly flower or fruit clusters and other unnecessary or offending parts.

Again many people think that ornamental shrubs need to be cut back heavily each year like some garden roses or bush fruits. This is a wrong point of view. In such garden roses and bush fruits the emphasis is laid only on the development of individual flowers and fruits. In hardy shrub roses and in ornamental shrubs in general the greatest value is placed upon the effect of the plant as a whole. The plant is looked upon more as an individual with definite characteristics of form and foliage as well as flower and fruit. With this larger point of view we can say that if shrubs are maintained normal in health and natural in form they will be satisfactory in flower and in fruit.

We have said that ornamental shrubs require very little pruning save that necessary for good vigor and appearance. The best way to maintain this healthy and natural condition is to practice a method of gradual renewal in addition to the usual removal of weak, injured or unsightly parts. This is done by pruning back a few of the old stems each season and gradually cutting out one or two entirely every year or two, at the same time keeping the rest of the plant thinned out a little to let in light and to encourage new growth either from the base or from low down on the old stems. This treatment affords a natural method of keeping the plant within bounds and maintaining it at a certain size. Shrubs differ in their habit of growth but fundamentally their pruning is the same process. It should be more a process of thinning out than trimming back and it should be performed regularly every year with the realization that "a stitch in time saves time" and that it is easier to prevent an injury or mistake than it is to remedy it afterward.

Some shrubs are more satisfactory than others and herein lies the opportunity for the planter to select the best plants for the place. Of course, it is understood that there should be a reason for the planting of any tree or shrub just the same as there should be a reason for other things that we do. Our planting should be reasonable and serve a purpose and then they will fit into the surroundings and contribute to the attractiveness of the whole place. Much annual butchering of shrubs would be unnecessary, if small planting spaces were planted sensibly with small growing shrubs instead of large ones. In the same way we thoughtlessly plant too near to sidewalks and roads and then the plants grow and become a nuisance and must be continually cut back and trimmed off. Even if this butchering process is neatly done it is much better for a person to exercise judgment and skill in selecting a suitable plant and in placing it in a proper position than to make the mistake of choosing a coarse plant for a small planting space and then have the perennial job of trimming the plant to fit the space.

COCHRAN

Messrs. Earl Chapmond and Joe Crockett who spent two or three days fishing on the Pecos last week, gave a fish fry Tuesday evening for the club members and their families.

We don't know exactly how much the "boys" brought back but we do know they really brought back a lot of fish. After feeding some forty-nine or fifty guests there was a lot of fish left.

He brought out a stick weighing twenty pounds.

Those to enjoy the occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Deike, Mr. and Mrs. Alton Stehle, Mr. and Mrs. Tony Queen and Doris, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Worthington and children, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. ### RAMBLING ROUND NEW YORK with HUGH KENNY

A Chicago visitor really introduced me to my native heath, San Francisco, so I suppose I have no right to be amused at native New Yorkers who don't know their own city. Still I am. Queried one the other day who told me he'd never been to Staten Island until he went with me. He didn't admit it at the time. Half an hour by ferry from the tip of Manhattan, it is the highest point on the suburban coast, and filled with farms and rustic scenery.

Fashion can't wait even five days across the Atlantic. Sketches are flown from Paris to London and radiophoned to Fifth Avenue, these days!

A lunch club famous in Wall Street as a rendezvous of the biggest executives in "the Street" is named, ironically enough, "The Rookery."

The Metropolitan Opera is wondering about money for another season. Wonder if they'll even get down to popular prices, or whether they might fill the house for the eight months each year it is usually empty? Taxes are high, but there is tradition, and the problem of how to fill that great old house.

Spring! How many of the poor in strange little New York river front shacks look forward to Spring. For spring means house cleanings and hundreds of odd jobs—more than at any other time of the year. And an odd job or two means the possibility of cleaning up and getting a regular job—and a landlord instead of a shack.

The wealthy Wendels! Administrators found $11,588.78 in cash in odd places in the old house on Fifth Avenue where they lived. And they found fifty dollars in the Irvington home. Now the Fifth Avenue place is torn down, and the little white poodle suffered so much from eczema that he finally had to be chloroformed. The last of the Wendels has gone.

Mrs. Dewey Marshall and daughter, June, attended the Sealy-Knowles wedding in Santa Anna Tuesday evening. Miss Sealy is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. T. Richard Sealy of Santa Anna.

MAYOR COPELAND ISSUES WARNING

Mayor J. W. Copeland issued a warning yesterday to those citizens who persist in attending all fires and getting in the way of members of the Fire Department while performing their work.

The mayor said the practice must stop, even if it took fines to accomplish it.
Those citizens who make it a practice of getting in the way of fire trucks on the way to fires and who crowd the scene of fires with their cars and on foot may save themselves a $14.50 fine by remaining at home or pursuing the even tenor of their regular occupations.

rights which modern women en-

a medal under pending legisla-

When Mrs. Catt was recently in Washington, as a leading fig-ference on the Cause and Cure of War, President Roosevelt remembered that it was also the fiftieth anniversary of her entrance into suffrage work. He received her in his office, presented her with a letter praising her career, and approved the idea of a medal being struck off for her golden jubilee.

Henrietta — Empty baking powder cans have been used to advantage by Mrs. C. E. Witte of the Cambridge home demonstration club in Clay county for baking quick breads inainty round loaves, according to Miss Margaret Stewart, home demonstration agent.

Mrs. Witte greases the can on the inside just as she would a loaf pan, fills the can three-fourths full and places it upright in the oven. The resulting loaves are dainty and round and suitable for making party or lunch sandwiches.

been invited to bring their young children to club meetings with them and leave them under the care of a specially trained young girl working under the Nation-demonstration agent.

A girl accompanies Miss Adams to each club meeting and while the club meeting is in progress for the mothers, she will entertain and instruct the children in another room.

As the girl has received train-child psychology, the children will thus receive worthwhile preschool training.
