Prospects Bright And Conditions Better in Texas

Austin, July 8.—Current conditions and prospects for further improvement in trade and industry are brighter in the Gulf Southwest than in most sections of the country, it is pointed out by Dr. F. A. Buechel, assistant director of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research, in his review of business conditions for June. The breaking up of the drought in May and the opening up of the Centennial Exposition have contributed materially to this situation, he explained.

"Texas is enjoying its full share of this regional improvement, and with the favorable price tendencies of its principal crops and live stock products, together with larger prospective volume of marketings during coming months, farm income should continue definitely on the up grade," he said. "Another factor of great significance to Texas is the gradual improvement which is taking place in international trade. Imports into this country have now reached a rate almost equal to the 1925-1928 average and exports are only about 15 per cent below the 1929 peak. Since Texas exports about 90 per cent of its cotton to foreign countries, this accumulation of dollar exchange by foreign countries points to a still further increase in the shipment of Texas cotton abroad. For this improvement in international trade much credit is due to the trade agreement program by Secretary Hull."

Turning his attention to the national picture of business prospects, Dr. Buechel said: "Although industrial activity is slowly tapering off as a result of seasonal influences and is expected to continue to do so until August or September, the decline to date is considerably less than the average of preceding years. There has actually been an increase of operations in the steel industry causing an increase of nearly 4 per cent in the Iron Age Index of Steel Production during the week of June 18th.

"Part of this favorable current showing of the steel industry is attributed to forward buying by steel consumers in anticipation of the higher price scale for certain types of steel products which went into effect on July 1. Hence a sharp drop may occur in mid-summer, but the rate of activity is expected to remain well above last year. The capital goods index as a whole is still up to the level of a month ago, the improvement in steel having been offset by declines in construction, automobile, and Pittsburgh industrial production. The index is 32 per cent higher than at this time last year.

"Retail trade during May was quite favorable. For the country at large, department store sales were up 12 per cent from a year ago. For Texas, the increase was nearly 17 per cent. It is expected that the favorable year to year comparison will be fully maintained during June as a result of the bonus payments, farm subsidies, improved employment situation and favorable farm incomes in the leading agricultural areas. Automobile, mail order, and farm implement sales are reported to be far in excess of last year.

"Building in May was 8 per cent below that of the preceding month, but was still 70 per cent above the corresponding month last year. Since building began its rapid pick-up during June last year, gaining momentum during the last half of 1935, it is believed that year to year comparisons will become less and less favorable during the remainder of the year.

"The continued disparity between building costs and individual income appears to be an important deterrent to more active residential construction; and the cloudy political outlook, with its tendency to restrain forward planning, seems temporarily at least to be holding back private commercial and industrial construction. Meanwhile, the huge pent up demand for building which has already accumulated continues to grow. It is reasonable to expect that at some time this demand will be given

This is a basket picnic occasion where families and friends may get together and the largest crowd in the history of these meetings is anticipated. Come, bring your friends, meet your friends, in an old fashion way.

TUCKER TWINS ENTERTAIN AT BRECKENRIDGE ART MEET

Misses Annette and Jeanette Tucker have returned home from Breckenridge, where on last Tuesday evening they appeared on a program given by the Art Club of that city, honoring Tex Moore, cowboy artist.

The Tucker twins, as they are familiarly called locally, are making quite a reputation in the entertainment field, and they appear upon many programs throughout this section. They will feature the entertainment of Tuesday's Lions Club luncheon at Victory.

PRINCE OF INDIA INVITED TO TEXAS

Austin, July 8.—The Maharaja of Kaparthal, one of the most widely known of India's glamorous princes, has been invited to visit Texas during the Centennial year observance, according to Col. Paul L. Wakefield, military attaché to Governor Allred. The invitation was extended by the governor at the request of several Texans who have been guests of the potentate in Europe.

Owner of a number of the world's most famous jewels and a celebrated host in his land and on the European continent, the Maharaja is said to wear the largest known emerald, weighing several hundred carats, in his durbar turban.

Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Dixon and sons, Harold and Gerald, are spending the week visiting in Amarillo. They were accompanied by Miss Mayme Gregory who is visiting with her brother, Boyce Gregory and family in Plainview.

Mrs. Blanche Grimes and Miss Wilna Cooke were visitors in Abilene Tuesday.

full expressions. Since the influence of the building trades reaches every section of the country and every class of citizen, when this industry gets into full stride, unemployment may be expected rapidly to vanish."

Beauty And Charm Winners

The sweltering heat of a Texas sun had little effect on the enthusiasm of more than 1000 girls in their recent selection of most beautiful and most popular summer school students attending Texas State College for Women (CIA). Miss Olivia Bishop, a striking olive brunette from San Antonio, was declared most beautiful, and Miss Georgianna Pace of Fort Worth was named most popular.

Wilmeth Farmer Endorses Turning Under of Peas

F. H. Koenig, who lives about two miles South of Wilmeth said that last year he had an acre of peas and beans and that he turned it under. "The results are very plain now," stated Mr. Koenig, "in that my cotton planted on this acre is growing much faster and is at least a third taller than the other right along side of this acre. Not only is it making the cotton grow faster but it also loosened up the land and made it pulverize much more readily.

"When the Government program came along," said Mr. Koenig, "it seemed to fit right in with my intentions, in that I should plant more peas on my place and rebuild my land." Mr. Koenig said that he signed up a work sheet, and that this year has 37 acres of peas planted and they are at this time well advanced and are blooming and putting on small peas.

$7.25 Invested in Good Seed Returns 232 Extra Bushels of Nortex Oats:

C. D. Berry, near Crews, in a demonstration on the value of good oat seed as compared with ordinary oat seed on a 20-acre field with 4.5 acres planted to pure-bred Nortex Oats, made a return of 16 bushels more per acre on the purebred oats as compared to the ordinary oats.

Mr. Berry received on the 14.5 acres a yield of 51 bushels per acre as compared to 35 bushels on the 4.5 acres of ordinary oats. "This great difference," stated Mr. Berry, "was beyond a doubt, due to the seed, as the land was all prepared alike and planted at the same time." In a check of these two demonstration fields, the pure bred oats were all alike, even in size. All were ripe, and large and full grains and compact heads. The seed oats that were run out showed a great variety of different size oats, some over-ripe and others yet green, white oat mixture, black oats, some barley and wheat, straw falling over and heads not as large and filled out grain as the pure bred oats. Mr. Berry stated that his $7.25 investment for the good seed gave a gross return of around $69.60 in favor of the good seed. This demonstration, stated Mr. Berry, is proof to me that I must from now on get the better seed, not only of my small grain but all my other field seeds.

Mrs. J. R. Dry and children, Mrs. J. V. Davis and Miss Lillian Scarborough of Norton left today for El Paso where they will visit John Preston Dry at Fort Bliss. They plan to go thru Carlsbad Cavern on their return trip home.

Farmers Pleased By Size of Cotton Subsidy Checks

Runnels County subsidy checks received to date for a total of 1539 checks, amounting to $67,312.40 with an average per contract of around $43.00. In a close estimate some 3000 people will receive all or part of these checks in the final division.

Farmers say they had no idea the checks would be the size they are and that they came in at a time when they were needing extra money for the working of their 1936 crops.

In addition to these subsidy, a number of other checks were received in the last three months, a special 1934 cotton certificate pool was received amounting to $13,041.00 some $8,000.00 late checks had been received of 1934 and 1935; the late wheat checks for the last payment of 1935 was received to the amount of $1,050.00.

A total of the wheat, special cotton pool, late 1934-35 and Subsidy checks all amounting to a grand total of 76,367.00 that was received by the farmers and land owners of Runnels county in the last three months.

Under the old AAA set up farmers have yet to look forward to whatever payment will be received on the 1935 cotton pool of a 2,250,000 pounds certificates, around 600 more subsidy checks, 33 1936 wheat payments, 50 unpaid checks to Runnels county on old AAA program will run close to $100,000.

ALLRED TAKES LEAD IN RACE FOR OFFICE.

As predicted by seasoned political observers several months ago the Governor's race has assumed an expected tidal wave for the present incumbent, James V. Allred, since that young worthy has taken the stump for a whirlwind campaign in his fight for his deserved second term.

Jim Allred has never had an easy campaign. He has had some easy victories but the fighting has been hard and furious. Thus far he has never failed to outsmart and out sprint his opposition. This year is no exception. He permitted his announced opponents to get out on the well-known limb and he is now sawing it off. The job will be well done by July 25th.

His opponents have been trying to stir up a little dust for months while Allred has been attending to duties and selling the Texas Centennial to the world. In certain quarters the opposition has been able to disseminate misleading information and half-truths which may have raised questions in the minds of the gullible.

But the fog has been dispelled since the Governor's smashing and devastating opening speech at Waxahachie in which he disposes of his would-be destroyers to the satisfaction of everyone save the victims. The revealing light of truth has started the rout of the futile opposition and the further it goes the worse it will get.

The axe is swinging and the chips are flying. A champion has made a fast start, is out in front at the first turn and from all indications will finish "going away." And again a group of bewildered nags has been left at the post.

RAINS PUT THIS TERRITORY IN EX- CELLENT SHAPE

FROM 1 1/2 TO OVER TWO INCHES FALLS IN THIS AREA.

Rains, falling over a period of eighteen hours, which fell in this section last Sunday afternoon and night, totalled from 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 inches, and put farming operations in the best shape they have been in for a number of years.

In every section of this territory the rainfall was sufficient to make the moisture meet and it could not have fallen better nor come at a more opportune time.

Farmers from all parts of this territory agree that prospects were never better for a bumper crop this fall, and barring unforeseen conditions and pests, predictions of a half bale of cotton per acre production are frequently heard on the streets.

Prices of all farm commodities went up during the week, cotton, cottonseed, wheat, maize and cream registering the greatest gains. See the market report for yesterday's quotations.

Shirley Temple in "Captain January" Coming to the Queen For Mid-Night Matinee Saturday, Has Adorable Role

"ROAD GANG," SMASHING DRAMA OF STARK REALISM, SHOWING TODAY AND SATURDAY, CRAMMED WITH THRILLS.

The fascinating adventures of a little waif and her two grizzled old sea-salt friends furnishes the story basis for "Captain January," tinsel, colorful Shirley Temple picture which comes to the Queen Theatre Saturday night at the midnight prelude, also Sunday and Monday. "Road Gang," the first National production which opens today at the Queen is a picture that will linger long in the memory of everyone who sees it. "The Story of Louis Pasteur," Paul Muni's new starring vehicle for Cosmopolitan Productions has been booked as the feature attraction Tuesday and Wednesday. Comedy, romance and adventure go on a mad rampage in the new gay attraction, "Love on a Bet," showing Thursday night only with the feminine heart accelerator, Gene Raymond, and the comely British newcomer, Wendy Barrie, teamed.

"Captain January"

Somewhere on the rockbound coast of Maine the action of this most delightful of Shirley's pictures is set. She is a nimble-toed little lady of a lighthouse, adored and jealously guarded by old Guy Kibbee, the lighthouse keeper who has fished her from the sea years ago. Her other old salt friend, Slim Summerville, constantly bickers with Kibbee, but when authorities threaten to take the little girl away, the two sailors present a united front. Despite their strategy and an attempted flight to sea in the night, the inevitable happens, and vixenish old Sara Haden, the truant officer, takes Shirley away. But not for good, however, because unexpected friends turn up to bring Shirley and Kibbee together again, and the picture to a happy close. Shirley executes her toe-tickling new dances in company with Buddy Ebsen, who was a sensational Ziegfeld Follies dancer, while her old songwriter, Lew Pollack, composed the music for her.

"Road Gang"

Donald Woods and Carlisle Moore, Jr., have the two principal convict roles. Entirely innocent of any crime, they are framed by a crooked politician, whom Woods, a newspaper correspondent, threatens to expose. The romantic angle is furnished by Kay Linaker in the leading feminine role. As the fiancée of Woods, she carries on a battle for his freedom, although she nearly fails because of a strike at the mines led by Woods, in which the prisoners blast their way out and are gassed with bombs. Joseph King appears in the role of the big political boss who frames the two boys with the aid of one of his henchmen, a part played by Henry O'Neill. Addison Richards has the role of the cruel prison farm warden while Charles Middleton, an even more terrifying figure is in charge of the mines where men are so badly abused they either go insane or die.

"The Story of Louis Pasteur"

Paul Muni, now in a sensational screen drama, has a role that is heralded as the greatest work of his career. Again, as in the Chain Gang picture, he portrays a real person—this time a man recognized as one of the world's greatest benefactors, Louis Pasteur. Hated and scorned, a pariah and an outcast, branded as a quack, a charlatan and an enemy of man, Pasteur lived to see his work recognized and himself acclaimed as the greatest scientist of his age. It is this great character that Muni brings to life on the screen. Joseph Hutchinson, noted stage star, plays opposite Muni as Marie Pasteur, his wife, while charming Anita Louise is seen in the role of their daughter. Together with Donald Woods, Anita Louise carries the love angle of the picture. Woods has the role of a young doctor, one of the few who believed in Pasteur and his works.

"Love on a Bet"

Gene Raymond, a young man-about-town, seeks $15,000 with which to produce a play with a seemingly impossible plot; a penniless young man leaves New York City garbed only in his underwear, and arrives in Los Angeles ten days later, with a new suit, a hundred dollars and betrothed to a beautiful girl. In 1931 and '32 the farmer would have been better off had he not produced a stalk of cotton. Why do I say this? Because his cost of producing this cotton equalled, and in most cases exceeded what he received for it. Of course there is a point at which production costs can go no lower without affecting production, but this point must be adhered to if the greatest margin of profit is to be expected.

LYRIC THEATRE

Hoot Gibson will be starred in "Sunset Range" showing Friday and Saturday at the Lyric Theatre. He has swung away from the typical western in "Sunset Range" and the result is a story filled with comedy and dramatic During periods of economic depression such as the one the farmer has faced for the past six years, it is highly essential that improved farm practices be adopted that will increase production per acre, lower production costs, and furnish an abundance of food and feed for home consumption. In order that these things may be accomplished there are some very definite facts we must bear in mind. First: Our production is based on statistics furnished by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The reason for decreased production may be "two-fold; namely, "increased acreage brought about scant cultivation" and "decreased fertility of the soil brought about through erosion and improper crop rotations." Of these factors, erosion offers the greatest cause for alarm. That six or seven inches of top soil, which contain the necessary elements for plant growth, are gradually diminishing. Wind and water are playing havoc with our basic asset, the soil. Of the 1,906,000,000 acres of land in the United States, some 555,000,000 acres are crop and pasture land. In the past two centuries, 50,000,000 acres of this land have been ruined by erosion for farming purposes. Another like amount is in bad shape, lacking the fertility to provide its occupants with a decent living.

Increase Profits Through Improved Practices--Williams

This simply means that enough of our once fertile land is gone, or nearly gone, to provide homes for 1,250,000 farm families. Still, there is another 100,000,000 acres in cultivation that has some degree of erosion which leaves only one half of our cultivated lands untouched by this great soil destroyer. Science tells us that it takes 400 years to make an inch of top soil. Many of our extremely sloping farms have lost a like amount in one season. If we would but think, therefore, about the depth of our productive soil, the quantity of it that is washed on down to the creek each year, and the amount of time required by nature to replace it, we should begin to use every possible device in order to keep this fertile soil at the plant roots. This is its place of benefit to the farmer and not in the creeks and rivers of our land. Soil erosion can, and is being controlled in many sections throughout the country. Approved methods of control include terracing, contouring rows, strip cropping, crop rotation, cultivation, etc. Methods of control will depend, of course, upon the degree of erosion, slope of land, kind of soil, and amount of rainfall.

The second factor to "increase profits," that of lowering production costs, is important at all times but especially so when the price of farm products is low. In 1931 and '32 the farmer would have been better off had he not produced a stalk of cotton. Why do I say this? Because his cost of producing this cotton equalled, and in most cases exceeded what he received for it. Of course there is a point at which production costs can go no lower without affecting production, but this point must be adhered to if the greatest margin of profit is to be expected.

The factor of "food and feed for home use" cannot be overlooked if increased profits are to be expected. It is pleasing to note, however, that the old idea of putting it all in cotton and buying food and feed with the receipts is gradually becoming a thing of the past. The farmer has found it better to produce his own foods and be sure of a living than to depend on a single farm product to return him sufficient money above cost of production to buy these necessities. He has found it better to have something to market at all seasons of the year in that he has a steady cash income. Then if he happens to make a big cotton crop and receives a good price, he has something to put away for a rainy day or pay his back taxes, etc. Seriously, these factors greatly affect the farmers' margin of profit and any effort to improve these conditions, if present, will reap greater profits in return.

(A list of suggested farm practices that pay will appear in next week's edition.)

situations plus the thrilling action and rescues that make for action and excitement. From a performance standpoint this is one of Gibson's best. So much has been written about his horsemanship that it is needless to add that he is perfect in this respect. But the real surprise to audiences will be Hoot's handling of comedy and drama. In this he proves himself as excellent an actor as he is a rider.

Commodities Purchase Section Buys Onions From Texas Producers

College Station—The Commodities Purchase Section of the United States Department of Agriculture recently completed a purchase program of about 700 cars of onions bought from Texas producers for approximately $250,000, according to J. F. Rosborough, Extension horticulturist. Rosborough stated that the price paid was on a basis of U. S. number one onions ranging from 45 to 55 cents per bushel. The onions will be distributed to relief agencies throughout the Nation.

He went on to say, "there has been more onion planting this year than in previous time of onion production in the State. In mentioning some of the history of the onion crop, Rosborough said, "The growing of Bermuda onions in Texas started over 25 years ago in the southwestern part of the State near Laredo. Since that time, the growing of this crop has spread out until it involves about 33 Texas counties, usually shipping from six to eight million cars a year to eastern markets.

"Today the bulk of Bermuda onions used in the entire United States comes from Texas. With a normal crop, onions should bring $2,500,000 a year into

"Flying-Wing," Queer Airplane, Will Fly From Dallas to Paris, France

Dallas, July 8.—Approximately two tons of mail will move out of Dallas July 18 on the most unusual mail transport trip in history.

The mail, originating here, there, everywhere, will be dumped into compartments in the wings of the most unusual airplane to hit the airlines, then to be hauled at very high altitudes over the Atlantic Ocean and to Paris where it will go into a postoffice for stamp cancellation.

On July 4, just 14 days before its departure on the Dallas to Paris flight the Flying Wing—that is what Monty G. Mason and Clyde E. Pangborn called their red, long winged plane—was christened the Texas Sky Ranger. On this same day booths from which envelopes and stamps are sold were opened within the Texas Centennial Exposition grounds.

Thousands of specially designed envelopes, bearing the insignia of the Centennial Exposition, the sponsor of the Mason and Pangborn flight, plus stamps necessary for mailing, are on sale at the booths. Rates on such mail, which include regular postage and special delivery stamps in addition to the amount charged for transportation across the Atlantic, are as follows:

Dallas to Paris, or one way, $1.14; round trip, Dallas to Paris and return, $2.65; Paris to Dallas, or one way, $1.65. Difference in the one way rates was attributed to adverse flying conditions of the return flight. Round trip and Paris to Dallas mail will be limited to around 1,000 pounds for each class.

The GOOSE WOMAN

by REX BEACH

Copyright, by Rex Beach
FIFTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS: Amos Ethridge is found murdered in a country lane with a crude cross of twigs on his breast and a scented sheet of note paper in his pocket. He was the richest man in the state with power and influence enough to make himself candidate for Governor. With his death came hints of an unsavory private life, of wronged women and betrayed husbands and fathers who had reason to wish him dead. There was also a powerful secret political organization opposed to him. . . . Mary Holmes, called, "the goose woman," by newspaper reporters, lives nearest the scene of the crime on a small chicken farm where she eyes out a poor living and tries to find in drink the forgetfulness of past glories when she was Maria di Nardi, world-renowned opera singer. . . . Gerald Holmes, a talented young artist, is hated and loved by his mother who is embittered because his birth caused the loss of her voice and wrecked her operatic career. He has been befriended by the murdered Ethridge, and is engaged to another of Amos Ethridge's proteges. . . . Hazel Woods, lovely and brilliant young actress, has been helped to success by Ethridge. She lives in a small cottage owned by Ethridge. . . . Jacob Riggs, eccentric old-time actor, now a doorman at the theatre where Hazel Woods plays, has appointed himself her guardian and lives in a room over her garage.

Here, Gerald realized, was the Westland attitude of mind. He resented it, but at this moment he was in no mood to argue the matter, so he turned away. Argument, he knew, affected old Jacob disagreeably; it provoked him and excited more strongly his fanatical religious ideas and prejudices.

This Jacob Riggs, by the way, was a character. If a man may be said to smell of the theatre, he did, for he had been born and reared back stage, and it was his boast that the only crib he had ever known was the top till of a Taylor trunk. The traditions of the profession were real to him, its stars were actual stars—fruitless, effulgent creatures that soared through an atmosphere reserved exclusively for heavenly bodies. Their art and their persons were sacred; defects they had none. His world revolved about the West Theatre and its center was the stage door where he held sway—that is to say, his material world. He dwelt also in a spiritual world, a world of distorted biblical quotations. An unusual type of door man was Jacob. The stage crew, mindful of the fact that he had been a second-rate singing and dancing comedian in his prime,

Lady Took Cardui

When Weak, Nervous

"I can't say enough for Cardui if I talked all day," enthusiastically writes Mrs. L. H. Caldwell, of Statesville, N. C. "I have used Cardui at intervals for twenty-five years," she adds. "My trouble in the beginning was weakness and nervousness. I read of Cardui in a newspaper and decided right then to try it. It seemed before I had taken half a bottle of Cardui I was stronger and was soon up and around."

Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

irreverently referred to him as "the song-and-dance saint."

There were times, however, when Jacob proved himself to be anything except saintly, for he had a frayed and ragged temper and he took enormous, if sometimes ill-founded dislikes to people. On the other hand, his likes were equally decided and he had odd ways of showing them. He had taken a tremendous fancy to Hazel Woods, for instance, and as he put it, he had adopted himself as her "guardian." The first she had known about it was when he moved his belongings into the vacant room over her garage and without consulting her in the least announced his intention of establishing himself as a permanent addition to her household. Argument, protest, had failed to budge him. There he stayed. He dismissed the caretaker employed by the actual owner of the premises, and himself cut the grass, attended the flowers, and generally took charge of things for Hazel.

Gerald had not waited long when he heard the rustle of a figure approaching and Hazel came running towards him with her hands outstretched.

"Jerry!" she cried. "I'm so glad! You've been gone for ages! Let me look at you." She faced him towards the light. "Why, you look—dreadful! What is it?"

"Nothing! I—it has been a trying week." He tried to smile, but his face felt stiff. "I wasn't sure whether you'd want to see me—" He answered her started, inquiring glance by saying: "It's all so new! I'm not used to it yet. And then, too, those newspaper stories about my mother—"

"Silly!" Miss Woods slipped a gloved hand into the crook of his arm and snuggled her shoulder intimately against his. "Is that all? Well, I'm glad you're back. I've a thousand things to talk about. Come along. We're going home and we'll have a bite to eat there. Where's the little blue oil stove?"

"It's outside at the curb." "Want to ride home with us, Jacob?" Hazel inquired of the doorman. "Jerry's fireless cooker will carry four."

The old fellow grinned and shook his head. "I gotta lock up. I'll be along later."

"Think of you driving an actress home in your own car!" the girl ran on as she and Gerald left the theatre. "Don't you feel rich and wicked?"

"Not as rich as I did before I paid my garage bill. I'm afraid I'll have to call this car my 'blunderbus'."

"Nonsense! You're going to make lots of money." As Gerald helped the speaker into her seat he could not resist planting a hasty kiss upon her cheek. "Oh careful!" Hazel cast an apprehensive look over her shoulder, but at the same time she clutched his arm in a way that thrilled him. After a while she said: "You didn't write me, once! I'd like to know how you are going to explain that?"

Gerald answered, seriously: "That's what I had in mind back yonder. Our engagement doesn't seem real. It's like a dream. I wondered if you really meant it; if you actually cared for me. Then, too, those wretched newspaper papers! I told myself you might change your mind—" He heard an incoherent but eloquent and thoroughly satisfying exclamation from the girl at his side. She drew closer and the sensation of her body actually against his rendered him dizzy. It was quite a task to drive; it required stern determination to keep both hands on the steering wheel.

Even during these few moments Gerald had become aware of some subtle change in his fiancée. She had never welcomed him, even before old Jacob, with such unconcealed affection as tonight. He had courted her at little parties, over restaurant tables, on the street or in public places when other people were close by, and he had never actually had her to himself for more than a moment or two; but tonight he was taking her home. For supper! He knew that the one maid she kept "slept out," and hence for once he could anticipate a real lovers' tete-a-tete, free from interruption. The prospect was enough to render him careless of traffic rules.

It seemed to him that Hazel had never appeared so lovely as when she snapped on the lights in her hall, dropped her light wrap, and turned to him with shining eyes. Her lips were parted, her face was eager; she held out her bare arms. It was a joyous, impulsive gesture of surrender; her look, her attitude, was one of complete abandon. She melted into his embrace, warm, fragrant, throbbing; her lips clung to his and he could feel her tremble in response to his ardor.

After a while the girl withdrew herself, then, flushed and smiling mistily, she disappeared into the dining room. Gerald slowly filled his lungs. He came out of his ecstasy when he heard her in the pantry, and he followed, volunteering to lend her a helping hand. But she laughingly refused his aid.

"No, you must sit down and tell me all about your trip, and how the editors liked your drawings, and what they said, and what you thought about me, and that I'm an adorable actress and the most beautiful creature in the world and that you love me wildly, insanely."

This was an order filled to the very letter. While the girl came and went, Gerald talked, answered her breathless interruptions, interrupted her. He watched her with adoring eyes. When she passed his chair he detained her long enough for a caress, and when she finally succeeded, despite his interference, in setting the table, he drew two chairs up side by side.

Probably they ate something, but neither of them could have told what it was.

Hazel was indeed a different girl from what she had ever been before. During his absence her love, it appeared, had suddenly burst from the bud into full bloom. The miracle would have made Jerry completely happy except for that hideous thing in the back of his mind. He tried his best not to think of it, but it would not be ignored; the more openly in word and deed this girl confessed her love, the more his secret distressed him.

"What ails you, dear?" she asked him finally. "You're in trouble of some sort."

He hesitated, then he broke out: "Yes, I am—frightful trouble!" Instantly Hazel's hand closed over his, concern leaped into her eyes; her tone changed as she urged him to tell her what it was.

"I suppose I must tell you, but—it's like cutting my own throat."

"Why, Jerry?" "I swore I wouldn't, couldn't—and all the time I knew I'd have to. Tonight, of all nights!" He shook his head and groaned.

The girl eyed him in growing alarm. She had become quite pale when she inquired: "Is it something about—us? You don't want to—marry me?"

"Oh, nothing like that. I haven't done anything, either."

"Then it can't matter—"

"Wait! I drove out to see my mother this evening about the Ethridge case."

"Oh, please don't!" Hazel cried, sharply. "Please, don't let's talk about that. I can't bear to—to hear it mentioned."

"I've got to talk about it. You see, I knew how she must feel about the way those reporters had treated her, and I was afraid it would set her to drinking again—afraid she might say something or do something to make matters worse. You've been awfully sweet about her, Hazel. Not one girl in a million would have been so charitable."

"She isn't the only woman in the theatrical profession who has fallen on hard times and—gone back. You shouldn't feel so ashamed—"

"You don't know her. I never knew her until tonight. . . . I've had a pretty bitter, pretty unhappy experience for a young fellow. I was convinced that she had talked or would talk so much that they'd call her for a witness, put her on the stand—Well, that would mean the whole wretched story, understand? Publicity! Gossip! Scandal! Lord knows it's going to be hard enough for me to face what has already come out. If it weren't for you I think I'd run away from Westland. . . . I found that she had been drinking. We always quarrel when she's like that. She misconstrues everything I say, resents everything I do; something devilish and cruel comes out in her. I suppose she must have some maternal affection for me, somewhere, but she succeeds in concealing it mighty well. It was the same as usual tonight. We had a terrible row. She broke out finally and told me how she hated me and why: told me why she has always stood in my way and tried to strangle whatever talent I had. Oh, it was—hideous. . . . You're the only person to whom I shall ever reveal what she told me: I've got to tell you, no matter what the consequences."

Gerald repeated in a few short sentences the story he had heard from his mother's lips. It was not a pretty story; he made no effort to soften it. "Imagine hearing a thing like that from—your mother! I try to tell myself it's a nightmare; that she didn't say anything of the sort or that she was lying. But she wasn't lying. Worst of all, she confessed casually, without the slightest feeling, that she had been—bad! That's the hardest to bear. She was a bad, a guilty woman! I—don't feel as if I could ever look anybody in the eyes again." He dropped his head into his hands.

Hazel rose and crossed the room to a window. She stood there staring out into the blackness for some time. Jerry raised his eyes, bleak with suffering, dark with apprehension; after a while he got heavily to his feet.

"I can't blame you," he said huskily. "She said no nice girl would marry me. I dare say no nice girl could marry me. I feel like a criminal to hurt you, but—I was desperate, I snatched at an hour of happiness. I—" He choked, then he made blindly for the hall.

Hazel turned, ran after him, drew him back to the couch upon which they had been sitting. "You poor boy!" she exclaimed. When she tenderly put her arms about him a wave of relief swept over him; he completely lost control of himself and gave way to his grief. He hid his face upon her shoulder. Like a mother, she comforted him. "Nothing is going to make any difference with me, so long as you love me. She told you that no nice girl would have you and you believed her, did you? You foolish, sensitive Jerry! As if you were responsible for her sins! For that matter, I'm not a 'nice' girl; I'm a wicked actress." The speaker actually laughed, as if in relief.

"It's—it's more than a disgrace. I haven't any name to offer you, Jerry's words were tremulous.

"Sh-h! Is it your fault that you're a 'love child'? Why, my dear, that's where your genius come from and I adore your genius as much as I adore you. Nothing can shame that. You're going to be a great artist—oh, I know it!—and I can help you; I can make you become great. No man ever succeeded or failed very greatly, ever became very good or very bad, without a woman to help."

Jerry clutched the girl fiercely and she took delight in the pain of his embrace.

Crosby County Farmer Has Good Prospects For Bumper Turkey Crop

Crosbyton — "The prospects for a bumper crop of prime turkeys from the Joe E. McDuff farm in Fairview community in Crosby county are extremely good, when the turkey feeding practices of this farm are considered," stated Ralph Howe, county agricultural agent, in a recent report.

Mrs. Joe E. McDuff, who has charge of the turkeys on this farm, has 231 fine quality poults that are already well feathered and making rapid growth. "There are several reasons for this progress," the county agricultural agent commented, "namely, located in the brooder house are sanitary water fountains and hoppers for mash and cracked grain. In other hoppers there are oyster shell and grit. Also, the brooder house floor, which is well littered, is changed once a week."

Howe reports that around the brooder house, a green wheat pasture is being used and that Sudan grass is beginning to come up and will be ready before the wheat is gone.

POISON BARLEY MIXTURE FOR RABBITS

Two Runnels county farmers, Bert Fletcher of Maverick and A. W. Hoelscher, south of Ballinger, near Olfen, said that they were very successful in killing rabbits with the barley and arsenic mixture.

Bert Fletcher, who lives some 25 miles northwest of Ballinger, near Maverick, has this to say about this mixture. He had used it for a number of years and that he was a truck grower and at times rabbits were very numerous but that this formula had never failed him in getting rid of both the jack and cottontail on his place. Mr. Fletcher said that a jack rabbit just could not pass a bait of this barley-arsenic mixture.

Formula: 25 pounds of barley, ground or crushed, 1 1/2 pounds of white arsenic, 2 quarts of sorghum syrup, 6 lemons, water to wet.

Mr. Fletcher said that he placed this mixture in small piles along the rabbit trails and where they were eating his crops.

Another formula is a mixture of good table salt and strychnine. One part strychnine and 20 parts salt, thoroughly mixed. Method of application. Saw 6 inches long, 2x4 blocks (old timber best) then in the middle of block bore hole with 7-8 inch or 1 inch auger bit, about 1-4 inch deep. Then add strychnine and salt mixture with few drops of water on top to hold the mixture and place blocks in rabbit trails or where they are destroying the crop.

These blocks are safety measures for other stock being poisoned. This block can be left out for a number of days without refilling.

Epworth League Monthly Session Held Here Tues.

Tuesday evening the young people of the First Methodist church were hosts to one hundred and forty Epworth Leaguers for the regular monthly session. The Pumphrey division gave a very inspiring program on "prayer." A poem "Prayer" was read by Lanna Collinsworth and two talks were given on "To Whom a Prayer is Granted" by Lee Colburn and "Prayer and Forgiveness," by Melba Bridwell.

At the close of the business and devotional hour the group assembled on the lawn where games were directed by Misses Nell Stephen of Abilene and Vivian Cryer.

After refreshments were served the meeting was adjourned until the third Tuesday in August when the Leaguers will meet at Ballinger with the Winters division in charge of the program.

Entertaining at the American Legion Hall Thursday afternoon, Mesdames Walter Brian and James Huffhines were joint hostesses at a party to favor a large group of friends.

An orchid and green color scheme was given emphasis in decorations and refreshments with prize packages wrapped in orchid and tied with the two colors. Floor baskets and vases of summer flowers combined with potted ferns and hand-painted pictures on the walls about the large reception room made an attractive setting for the table which held appointments for games of contract bridge and forty-two. Tallies and score pads of floral design featured the chosen colors.

Hand-painted plaques were presented the two high score winners and companion pictures in hand-painted tile were given for high cut prize.

STARTING POINTS

A great river may start from a mountain stream. Your own business or financial success may start from some decision or action, the importance of which you do not appreciate at the time.

Many individuals and business concerns in Runnels and in surrounding counties mark the beginning of their success from the time when they decided to start an account at The Winters State Bank. It may be that you will profit by making a like decision.

THE PROGRESS OF RECOVERY

According to the Federal Labor Department, 88,000 persons were added to the payrolls of the nation's industries in the month of May, making the total of new jobs filled in the past year 650,000. In the past four months a quarter of the persons employed on Federal work relief projects have been dropped, reducing the number so supported by 700,000. Standard Statistics reports that corporation profits in the first five months of this year are nearly 50 percent greater than in the corresponding period last year.

All of these facts are distinctly encouraging. They indicate clearly that business in general is picking up.

There is no adequate information available, however, as to how much of this increase in private employment and business profits affects different classes of business. A large part of the reemployment and profit in the retail trade, which has benefited most from the widespread distribution of Federal funds to farmers, veterans, the unemployed and the indigent. Some of the newer industries are making greater strides than the older ones. Aviation in all of its aspects is experiencing something like a boom. The building and building supply industries, on the other hand, are little, if any, ahead of where they were three years ago.

We have been very busy this year in replacing worn-out automobiles, but widespread prosperity and re-employment are not likely to arrive until we start in earnest to replace the obsolete homes of the nation and build enough new ones to house everybody who needs a home.

Leaving loaded guns around the house, where small children can get them, is one way to cut the grocery bill.

TODAY and TOMORROW

BY FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE

REVIVAL a new kind
Several thousand happy, earnest men and women, mostly young, have just spent ten days in my home county of Berkshire, holding the most extraordinary series of religious meetings I have ever seen or heard of. They are members of the "Oxford Group" which is the newest and, it seems to me, perhaps the liveliest religious movement in the world. Its leaders had just come from a great gathering in Denmark and will go from America to hold another great international meeting in England.

I attended some of the public and semi-public meetings and got the distinct feeling that they have "something on the ball." One of the things that impressed me favorably was that there was no suggestion of anything approaching the cant phrases of the old-fashioned revivalists, with which I have been familiar from childhood.

PRINCIPLES broad

I talked with Frank Buchman, the Pennsylvania minister who started this new movement, at Oxford University, England, in 1921. "We are not starting a new religion, but striving to show people how to make the old religion work," Dr. Buchman told me. "Nobody is asked to join a church or a sect but is helped to live up to the fundamental principles of all sects."

Those principles are honesty, unselfishness, love and purity. As Dr. Buchman put it: "Everybody believes in those things for the other fellow, but we try to follow them ourselves." He added that one thing the Oxford Group did not desire to do was to induce anybody to leave his own church. "If you're a Catholic," he said on Saturday afternoon, "go to Mass tomorrow morning. If you are a Protestant, go to your own church. The only thing we expect of those whose lives have been changed is that they follow the teachings of their churches in their daily lives."

Two-thirds of the people who attend world's fairs go to have a good time. They would not go at all if shows and entertainments were not provided for them. The pill of learning always has to be sugar-coated. But even those who go to such events in the spirit of frolic, are bound to get something of solid value out of them.

METHODS simple

Members of the Oxford Group are encouraged to search their own souls and to discuss their own failings, privately, man to man or woman to woman. The soul-purging effect of confession is something I have long believed in.

They are asked to spend a part of each day in what they call a "quiet time." It is in this quiet time, those who have had experience say, they find guidance direct from God as to whatever problems are perplexing them. It is not a matter of choosing between right and wrong but seeing God's guidance as to which of half a dozen right courses should be followed.

And in their public meetings, those who have received and been helped by this God-guidance are encouraged to tell their experiences, much as John Wesley's followers used to speak in the Methodist "experience meetings."

Much about Dr. Buchman's leadership reminds me of John Wesley's work nearly 200 years ago, to bring church people back to elemental Christian principles.

YOUTH happiness

I have never seen anywhere such a gathering of clear-eyed, happy young people of both sexes. Youth is taking to this new movement with enthusiasm and gaiety.

"We believe in devotion with hilarity," one young woman, the daughter of an old friend, said to me. I saw and heard evidence of that through all the crowds that thronged the streets and parks of the little town of Stockbridge. The youngsters were taking their reborn religious faith seriously but not solemnly. There is nothing sad about religion, as they practice it.

I have never been able to understand the notion that so many folk have, that one cannot be a working Christian and at the same time be merry. Religion, if it means anything, ought to mean happiness.

PEACE an objective

It is the hope of these young use of state-owned highways. But the plan seems to border closely on the verge of Federal functions under the interstate commerce powers of Congress, especially as there are few, if any, important highways for which the Federal Government has not contributed a large part of the cost.

members of the Oxford Group that they can spread their message among the youth of all the world and so reestablish the ancient principles of genuine Christian brotherhood.

If they can do that, they believe, they can put an end to war.

That sounds reasonable to me. If the youth of all nations accept and live up to the principles of honesty, unselfishness and love, they are certainly not going out to fight each other, no matter who orders them to arms. I am convinced that a movement is under way which has power to change the world.

CALIFORNIA . . . its fairs

Out on the Pacific Coast I think people are more exhibition-minded than in any other part of the country. I don't know just how many fairs of national or international importance have been held out there, but they had a mighty good one at Portland, Oregon, in 1905. There have been three or four at San Diego. San Francisco had a splendid and genuinely international exposition in 1915, and now the announcement has been made that there will be another big fair on an island in San Francisco Bay in 1938.

That will be well worth going to see. No American's education is complete if he has not seen California. And by 1938 the two greatest bridges in the world will have been completed, the one across the Golden Gate connecting San Francisco with the Marin County Peninsula, to the North; and the great bridge across San Francisco Bay, tying Alameda County to the western metropolis.

VALUES . . . always there

I have seen quite a number of World's Fairs, and have never failed to learn something of real and permanent value from every one of them. I was a small boy when my father took me to the Philadelphia Centennial of 1876. I still remember vividly some of the exhibits which started my childish mind to try to figure out the whys and wherefores of various human activities.

I got a lot out of the Chicago-Columbian Exposition of 1893—the Pan-American at Buffalo in 1901, the St. Louis World's Fair of 1904 and various smaller expositions that I have visited.

Two-thirds of the people who attend world's fairs go to have a good time. They would not go at all if shows and entertainments were not provided for them. The pill of learning always has to be sugar-coated. But even those who go to such events in the spirit of frolic, are bound to get something of solid value out of them.

BRUCE BARTON Says:

AMERICA ALWAYS SMILES THROUGH

In a Boston newspaper during the days of the recent floods I saw a memorable photograph. A whole page was devoted to pictures of destruction and disaster. But in the center of the page, like a burst of sunlight through a threatening sky, was a picture of a woman and her four young children.

Seated on the edge of an iron cot, with the background of a flood-stained home, this mother smiled valiantly into the camera, while the four youngsters laughed their defiance at Fate and the elements.

That photograph ought to hang in the schoolrooms along with the traditional scene of Washington Crossing the Delaware, it is a portrait of the unquenchable Spirit of America.

It took me back in memory to the days of the Dayton flood of 1913.

I visited Dayton and Hamilton where the receding waters had left smears of mud twelve feet high on the buildings. In the window of a bank in Hamilton some one had stuck up this sign: "Noah was 120 years old before he had sense enough to build the Ark. Don't lose your nerve."

THYROID FOR GENIUS

The ancients attributed genius to some peculiar conjunction of the planets at the moment of birth, but it is now pretty well established that two boy babies can enter the world at the same second and be totally different. At a later date the phrenologists asserted that extraordinary talent could be detected by the size of the head and the peculiar bumps and valleys found thereon. Here, again, the facts seem to explode the theory. Daniel Webster, Bismark, and Oliver Cromwell had enormous heads, as did Napoleon. But George Washington's upper story was comparatively small; Shakespeare had a head of only average size. Statues of Julius Caesar show that he had neither a large head nor a high brow.

Now comes Dr. George W. Crile of Cleveland in his interesting book, The Phenomenon of Life, and tells us that genius is in fact nothing more or less than a disease caused by abnormal mal activity of the thyroid gland. When the gland puts in more than an eight-hour day, the brain gets extra stimulation and its owner is able to achieve without seeming effort things that are beyond the capacity of ordinary folk.

This is interesting. Some day, when we really know something about the glands, it may be possible, by shooting a little thyroid or pituitary into a man's arm, to change him from a mediocrity into a stem winder.

There is at least a million years of work ahead of the scientists, and even then they will be crying, as La Place did on his death-bed: "What we know is nothing; what we have to learn is immense."

Better a poor man's friendship than a rich man's benefactions.

A public enemy is one who favors old age pensions for the young.

TEXAS CENTENNIAL CELEBRATIONS

(July 8, through Sept. 13, Revised to June 27th)

The big Centennial Central Exposition at Dallas is drawing millions of visitors from out of the state and over the state.

This successful event and the many equally interesting Texas celebrations are focusing the eyes of the nation on Texas. Texas may well be proud of its Centennial events. Texas will profit by its enterprise for many years to come.

But, best of all, Texans are knowing Texas. East Texas is visiting West Texas! North Texans are going South! South Texans are traveling North, and West Texans are seeing the East! Centennial year has afforded us the opportunity to get acquainted with the resources and scenic attractions of our great state.

Whatever your ideas of a real vacation, you'll find them realized in Texas. Mountains, seashore, missions, foreign atmosphere, gay night life, fishing, golf, historic places. Most every attraction you can find anywhere—right here at home.

Make your plans to visit the Centennial Celebrations being held this month. Read the calendar at the right. If you want additional information, write the Chamber of Commerce at cities you are interested in. For a real vacation, SEE TEXAS!
