CITIZENS-RADIO BOOM
AHEAD

Wellesley Hills, Mass.—Previous to 1947 the radio spectrum was not open to the public as a means of two-way communication. However, in that year the Federal Communications Commission decided to allocate frequencies to various types of businesses and local governments. Before, only radio amateurs ("ham" operators on the shortwave band), police, taxis, and other public services were allowed to own and operate two-way radio equipment.

It took another twelve years after the FCC allocated a group of frequencies for Citizens Band Radio Service to activate the system. It was limited to relatively short-range communication. A bandwidth, designated Class D, is the principal one on which some 900,000 to 1,000,000 licensed operators vie with one another to transmit and receive over the twenty-three channels reserved for them. However, because this bandwidth has become so crowded, there is a clamor from various groups, including the influential Electronics Industry Association, for a proposed new service to be called Class E. This would mean adding some eighty channels, affording a better range, less radio interference, and, above all, a far larger CB market.

CB EQUIPMENT AND APPLICATIONS
There is a wide range of equipment available—everything from complex walkie-talkies and do-it-yourself-kits to ready-to-use high-powered (5-watt power plus) fixed and mobile sets. The 5-watt hand-held (or back-pack) and vehicle-installed systems can transmit and receive up to twenty miles. All of these require FCC licenses. However, license-free hand-held models with a top range of a few miles and with power less than 5 watts are also used by children and adults.

Those sets requiring a license have station call numbers for identification. There are no FCC examinations (so far), and no background in radio or electronics is called for. The applicant must be at least eighteen years old. Besides personal and business use, CB can be utilized for emergency needs. Aid for motorists stranded on remote highways, ship-to-shore calls, crime prevention, are only a few of the unlimited applications. If Class E service is approved (an FCC ruling is still a year or more away), Babson's Reports believes it could eliminate the need to develop an emergency mobile radio service.

MARKET BONANZA POSSIBLE
In the two-way radio communications market, the industrial and commercial radio sector is the largest and is estimated at around $200 million annually. Citizens Band Radio (C.B.) is second with $70 million. Quite surprisingly, the amateur (ham) radio and walkie-talkie segments only garner $15-20 million apiece.

The proposed Class E band would, according to the Electronics Industry Association, create a new market in two or three years of $300-$500 million for C.B. If U. S. auto manufacturers installed a $200 (estimate) Class E radio in one out of ten cars sold each year, a ten-million car market would, alone, account for $200 million. Also forecast is a fast-developing market for small personal radio transceivers.

THE INVESTMENT MEDIA
There are several large and small firms producing the hardware for two-way radio communication. These include the Big Three: GE, Motorola, and RCA; and the other giants, Bendix, Northrop, Raytheon, General Telephone and Electronics, ITT, Schlumberger (Heath Co. kits), Martin-Marietta, General Dynamics, and Rockwell International. Small publicly held companies with expertise include Gladding Corp. (Pearce-Simpson), E. F. Johnson, Regency Electronics, Tandy (Allied Radio and Radio Shack), Communications Industries, and Lafayette Electronics.

Currently, the Research Department of Babson's Reports recommends GE and Rockwell International for their diversified business activities. Even though such equipment is a minor part of their operations, these companies are significant factors in the two-way radio field.

Fruit and Nut Spraying
For the Homeowner

Each year insects and diseases reduce both quality and quantity of fruits and nuts harvested by the homeowner. This can be prevented by a few carefully timed applications of fungicides and insecticides. These pesticide applications should be used in combination with certain cultural practices which will reduce insects and diseases.

Cultural Practices
Healthy plants are less susceptible to insect and disease attack. Homeowners should follow a well balanced fertility program, select well adapted varieties, practice proper pruning methods, and other cultural practices which are conducive to tree growth.

Proper clean-up around trees is extremely important in reduction of plum curculio, hickory shuckworm, brown rot of peach and pean scab.

Pesticide Safety
Before using any pesticide, carefully read the label in its entirety. Note any special precautions, such as the necessity of wearing special protective clothing when applying the chemical. Take necessary precautions in applying any pesticide so that unnecessary contact with the chemical is avoided.

When mixing pesticides, use a well ventilated area or mix out of doors. Avoid contact with skin and do not breathe vapors. Apply correct dosage of pesticide. Using less pesticide than recommended rates may result in poor control while using more than the recommended amount may result in excessive residue or damage to plants.

Pesticides should be stored in a secure area away from pets, children, un knowledgeable persons. Prepare only the amount needed for that application. Any unused dilute spray, or pesticide container should be disposed of properly. Never store pesticides in unmarked containers.

Spray Equipment
There are a number of sprayers on the market which will do a satisfactory job of applying insecticides and fungicides to plants.

The pressure type sprayer can be obtained in sizes ranging from 1 gallon to 10 gallons. Most homeowners prefer the 2 1-2-3 gallon size due to cost and ease of handling. Another type is the hose-on sprayer. These are by far the cheapest, however, they have the limitation of requiring a high volume of water, moderate pressure and a convenient water outlet. Once a sprayer has been used it becomes a used pesticide container and requires proper handling and storage. Proper cleaning after use will prolong the life of a sprayer. Do not apply insecticide and fungicide with a sprayer used to apply weed control material as plant damage may occur.

Garden Insect Control Outlined
Springtime signals the beginning of home gardening activity and good control of sucking and chewing insects means healthier, more productive gardens. "Sucking" insects damage plants by inserting their mouth-parts into plant tissue and removing plant juices. Heavily infested plants become yellowed, wilted, deformed or stunted and may eventually die. Some sucking insects inject toxic materials into the plant while feeding and some transmit disease organisms to plants.

Some examples of sucking insects are aphids, leafhoppers, stinkbugs, squash bugs, thrips and spider mites.

According to Parker, chewing insects cause more damage to the home garden than either soil insects or sucking insects. They feed on all parts of plants, destroying both foliage and fruit.

Chewing insects are numerous and include grasshoppers, leafminers, potato beetles, flea beetles, cucumber beetles, blister beetles, pepper weevils, vegetable weevils, corn earworms, cabbage loopers, armyworms, tomato hornworms, webworms, melonworms and pickleworms.

Parker suggests using dusts for controlling insects in home gardens. Several brands are available which will control both chewing and sucking insects. Apply dusts when the wind is calm and force the dust through the foliage so it will reach both sides of the leaves. The suggested rate is 1 1-2 ounces per 50 feet of row.

Postal Week
To Be Noted
April 29-May 5

Winters and Wingate Post Offices will join the more than 40,000 other U. S. Post Offices, stations and branches in observance of Postal Week, April 29-May 5.

As one part of the observance, the Post Offices will offer for sale ten eight-cent commemorative stamps on the same sheet, each depicting a service performed by postal people—from window clerks to workers on the workroom floor to letter carriers. Those stamps may be affixed to special envelopes which will be provided free of charge by the post office, and cancelled for collectors.

Other than the offering of the commemorative stamps, no special observances have been planned for either the Winters or the Wingate offices. H. M. (Jiggs) Nichols is Winters postmaster, while Mrs. Faye Allen heads the Wingate Post Office. For the first time in history, the commemorative stamps to go on sale for the first time next Monday, April 30, will bear printed matter on the reverse side under the adhesive. The first stamp, for example, shows a window clerk selling stamps and the text reads, "Nearly 2 billion stamps are sold yearly to carry your letters to every corner of the world. People Serving You." The ink on the reverse of the stamp has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration.

Winters and Wingate postmasters have announced they will have the stamps, in addition to other commemorative stamps, on sale.
