Bush sweeps Buchanan; Tsongas, Clinton split

Paul Tsongas won Maryland's presidential primary Tuesday night and Bill Clinton countered in Georgia as Democratic rivals battled coast-to-coast for front-runner credentials. President Bush swept the GOP contests, but Patrick Buchanan maintained his determined challenge.

Bush was sure to win Colorado and the president said he was "well on our way to the nomination." He said he was "committed to regaining" the support of Republican voters who deserted him for the more conservative Buchanan.

Tsongas said his victory made him the "breakthrough kid," because he was the first Democrat to prevail in a primary outside his home region.

Georgia presented Clinton with his first victory of the primary season, but it lacked drama, coming in his southern stronghold.

The first votes from Colorado showed a close, three-way finish among Clinton, Tsongas and Jerry Brown.

Bush, Yeltsin set summit for June 16

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush announced Tuesday that he and Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin will hold their first formal summit meeting June 16 in Washington. They'll try to use the two-day meeting to establish new momentum toward eliminating additional thousands of strategic nuclear warheads.

In the post-Cold War era, agreements to reduce nuclear arsenals have been easier to achieve than U.S. commitments for massive financial assistance to help Russia stabilize its foundering economy.

That could prove even likelier for a summit taking place in the midst of a presidential campaign.

Bush said he and Yeltsin would "get into the nuclear and military questions, and then the joint efforts in support of reform in Russia."

Federal judge to review Tilton's restraining order

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge will hear arguments Wednesday on whether the state should be barred further from access to financial records of televangelist Robert Tilton's Word of Faith church in Dallas.

The hearing before U.S. District Judge Sam Sparks of Austin will determine whether Tilton's temporary restraining order barring Texas Attorney General Dan Morales from access should be extended into a preliminary injunction.

A preliminary injunction could bar Morales' legal team from the records according to a time span set by the judge.

Tech officials reviewing phone registration

by KENDRA CASEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

With Student Association elections today, there are a number of issues facing candidates and voters. Included among those is the possibility of implementing a telephone registration system at Tech.

Gene Medley, the director of admissions and records at Tech, said the telephone registration process and installation of the service is being reviewed.

"We (administration) don't have a stance," said Medley. "It is being looked at seriously. If it works, I think we'll go with it. If not, we'll go with something better."

Medley cited some problems he foresees with a telephone registration system:

- Changes in the current advising system will have to be dealt with;
- Scheduling seniors and graduate students to register first may pose a problem with a new system;
- Students will have to rely on a computer to handle their registration problems such as a section or course being closed rather than a human operator.

Medley said he feels that in the long run, phone registration could save money, however, initial start-up costs are substantial.

In addition, Medley said phone registration cannot solve all the registration problems students currently face.

"Every problem you have now with registration, you will have with phone registration," he said.

SA president Russell Laird said while phone registration may benefit students in the long run, the initial starting costs would come at a time when budget cuts are already of primary concern.

Laird added that he talked to students at other Texas universities who enjoy the phone registration system because it allows students to register

Bush Jr., Hutchison draw Lubbock support for president

Son slams Demos in campaign for dad

by BRIAN COFER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison and George W. Bush, son of President Bush, criticized congressional Democrats and praised the president's character at a Lubbock campaign rally Tuesday.

"We're on super mission today," Hutchison said. "We want to send a message from Texas to the rest of the world, and that is, Texas is Bush country."

She said that murmurings of discontent concerning President Bush's performance are both overstated and undeserved.

"Everybody is talking about sending the president a message," she said. "I don't want to send the president a message. I think he's got the message about the country. I want to send a message to Congress, and that is to start working with the president."

Hutchison said that because the country is in a recession, it is important to elect a president with experience and who has a viable plan for economic recovery.

"That is why the president is fighting Congress on increasing taxes," she said. "He knows this is not the time to increase taxes, and every time a Democrat comes up with a new plan in Congress it's more taxes."

She said voters need to give Congress a message that more taxes will not be tolerated.

Hutchison praised President Bush's performance during Operation Desert Storm last year and said he has made the world a safer place in which to live.

"This is the perfect personification of the leadership the president is providing," she said. "Desert Storm made America proud again, and it made sure our children will never have to worry about nuclear warfare."

George W. Bush said he is confident his father's character and strength of leadership will win him a second term in the White House.

"When people get in the voting booth, they will be looking at what a person is made of," he said. "There is no question in my mind that in the character test, there will be a tremendous stature gap between George Bush and the person he runs against."

Bush also assailed Democrats for their performance in Congress, and said their candidates will not measure up to the president's.

"Our country would be in disastrous shape if we had a Democratic president with our Democratic Congress," he said. "I can't wait for the Democrats to pick their candidate, because the contrasts will be huge."

George W. Bush said he is not concerned about potential threats to the president from Republican candidate Patrick Buchanan.

"I woke up the other day and Bush won by 17 points in New Hampshire, and the headlines said he lost," he said. "If he'd have won by 17 points in any other election, any time he ran for any office, they'd have said it was a landslide, and so we're not playing the percentage game."

He said his father's campaign is more concerned with the number of delegates than the number of votes.

"We're going to win all of the delegates in Texas, I'm convinced," he said.

Salvadoran mayors plug future peace

by BRIAN COFER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A delegation of Salvadoran mayors detailed changes in their country and expressed hope for lasting peace at a forum Tuesday in the University Center's Lubbock Room.

The mayors are visiting the United States as a part of a U.S. government program designed to teach the workings of local government to officials from El Salvador, where the government is decentralizing.

A peace treaty, signed earlier this year, ended a 12-year civil war that left the nation's social and economic order in shambles.

"Everybody in El Salvador has suffered, no matter who they are," said Mayor Marciano Chavarria.

The war resulted from a lack of empowerment and human rights abuses, which led to a popular uprising, said one of the mayors.

"All civil wars are initiated by a lack of power," said Mayor Enris Antonio Arias. "In the '70s and '80s, with all the human rights violations, people felt oppressed and began to take up arms."

He said the United States must share the blame for the civil war.

"The war in El Salvador was partly funded by the U.S., and you cannot deny the fact that they have prolonged the war," he said.

However, Chavarria said the United States made major contributions to the peace process once it started.

"Washington has seen the peace process through with a lot of heart and passion," he said.

One of the consequences of the war was a destruction of the nation's economic infrastructure, Chavarria said.

"Before the war, the major source of income was the exportation of coffee. Now it is goods imported into the country."

Mayor Oscar Rene Tobar said El Salvador's economy is currently being rebuilt with loans from the Inter-American Development Bank, but only on a short-term basis.

Lecturer focuses on intimacy over sex

by CATHERINE DUNN
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

"Intercourse is the seal of commitment, but it's not the commitment itself," said Dan Hayes, a traveling speaker for Campus Crusade for Christ, during a lecture Tuesday night on sex and intimacy.

"Sex has ceased to be something relational, but rather something you have," he said. "You have a car, you have chicken pox, you have sex."

He said most people are looking for fun in a relationship.

"Sex is fun," Hayes said. "There's nothing like skin on skin. Certainly, people are looking for fun, but there are some things deeper than this."

Intimacy is the deeper factor people look for in relationships.

"Intimacy is the trusting, close, secure and unthreatened relationship you have with another person," he said. "It is the freedom to be who you really are, and still be accepted."

"From my perspective, sexual relations get better over time. They become more fun and more fulfilling if in the right context," Hayes said. "If sex is not in the right context, it would still be fun, but it would become less fulfilling."

Hayes said there are five reasons why intercourse was intended to be in a single, "one-flesh" relationship: personality delusion, the law of diminishing returns, massive confusion or disregard to what love is, the trust factor and child soil.

Personality delusion comes into play whenever two people have intercourse because it is still a one-flesh relationship even if the partner is a prostitute, he said.

When two people come apart, they leave a little of themselves with the other person so that eventually free sex results in a loss of personality.

The law of diminishing returns is one reason to not have casual sex, Hayes said.

"You have to do more and more, and sometimes kinkier and kinkier to get the same buzz," he said. "The first time you take a woman out and hold her hand, it's just like a shot goes through your body. But after a while, it gets like cold mashed potatoes. And you get farther and farther involved sexually."

He said nothing will fog what love is more than sexual relationships, and even "heavy petting."

Sadat remembers father's accomplishments in Egypt

by STEPHEN ARMOUR
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The key to peace is education. At least that is what Camelia Sadat, the third daughter of slain Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, said when she addressed the Texas Tech and Lubbock communities Tuesday night in the University Center's Allen Theatre.

"It is a pleasure to be here and a pleasure to talk about a man of peace, a man whose convictions in the pursuit of peace hasn't been matched — my father, Anwar Sadat," Sadat said.

"This is a time of mixed feelings for me," she said. "I miss my father's counsel, wit and fellowship. I wish he were alive to see the fruits of his sacrifice, to show him that his sacrifice has not been in vain."

Sadat addressed the current problems in the Middle East, including Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

"The U.S.-led multicultural coalition during the Persian Gulf War was an attempt to curb the efforts of Saddam Hussein," she said. "It created the situation that allowed for an honest dialogue."

Sadat said when her father came to power, he was seen as a renegade and a terrorist because of his radical ideas.

"When he was born in 1918, it was a time for the Egyptian liberation from Britain," she said. "My father grew up listening to the stories his grandmother told him about heroes, and when he read about (Mohandas) Gandhi, he knew he wanted to be a leader and liberate the country."

Sadat

Sadat said her father's trip to Israel to address the Knesset, the Israeli parliament, was a time for him to reassess Egypt's relationship with Israel.

"Immediately, other Arab countries put out death threats against my father," she said. "Even Khomeini, who was not involved in this, put himself into the conflict by calling for my father's assassination."

Sadat also said that Israeli President Menachem Begin shared her father's dreams for peace, although her father was skeptical about traveling to Israel.

"Both my father and Menachem Begin suspended the old views and with new eyes saw the possibilities for peace," she said. "Both believed they fit into the window of opportunity for peace as equals. Neither country was superior to another and each was willing to trust the other, thereby enabling them to open a dialogue of how to get peace and prevent further conflict."

However, Sadat said her father feared for his life throughout this time.

"He wasn't sure if he'd survive this momentous occasion, so he wrote his own epitaph four years before he was killed. It said, 'President Sadat, you are war and you are peace.' This is on his tomb outside Cairo. He wasn't sure if he should fear the Arabs or the Israelis."

She said her father laid the foundations for any peace to come with his historic meeting with Begin.

VOTE TODAY

Today is the big day — at least for the one-tenth of the Texas Tech population who cares.

But this is another year, another group of students. (That means you!) Maybe you are better than students from previous years. Maybe more than one-tenth of you will vote in the Student Association elections today.

We are encouraging you to do so. We interviewed each candidate for the positions of Student Association president, internal vice president and external vice president. We chose the ones we felt were best qualified for each position.

These are our opinions. Repeat: Our opinions. Not only do we want you to vote, we want you to formulate your own opinion of who are the best candidates.

Platforms of all candidates for the three positions mentioned earlier are on page 4. Read them. Think about them. Vote according to your own convictions.

Don't blindly accept our opinions as your own. You are in college. You had to have some intelligence to be accepted to Tech. Put that intelligence to good use, exercise your student right and vote.

#2A: CHRIS LOVELESS

The University Daily endorses Chris Loveless for Student Association president. Even though he has served as senator for only one year, he has a strong grasp of how the SA is run and has detected what problems lie within our student government.

His 5-point plan to create new opportunities for Tech students is one that strays from the usual SA president goals — which always seem to remain the same, and therefore, unchanged. He has shown the initiative from beating dead issues and looking at new angles to provide better services to Tech students.

Most important, Loveless realizes that no problems affecting Tech today — whether old or new — can be effectively addressed without the proper support from the State Legislature.

Loveless has had experience dealing with Legislation's top chess — a quality that will help Tech a great deal now that we face huge budget cuts.

By focusing his attention on funding, Loveless can make the student body feel more confident that there will be enough money for the university in the near future. He realizes that we do not need to spend more money on conveniences — for that is all they are — such as improving the busing system and applying a new registration process.

Now is the time to think: Can we afford higher education?

Chris Loveless has shown the utmost interest in answering that question. What Tech needs now is to realize that higher Student Service fees are not the answer to our financial problems; getting funded by the state is.

The University Daily encourages you to vote for Chris Loveless today.

#4A: MICHELLE SUTTON

The University Daily's candidate for internal vice president is Michelle Sutton, currently a student senator for the College of Arts and Sciences. Of the three candidates running for this office, Sutton is the most qualified not only because of her previous senate experience, but also because of her strong convictions to turn the Texas Tech Student Senate into a body representing all of Tech's student organizations.

Sutton's main concern is that organizations that use all of their funds each year continue to receive funding from the Student Association while those that do not are educated on their responsibility to use the funds each year in order to continuing receiving money from the SA.

She stressed the need for equal representation concerning the annual budget allocations for all student organizations within the senate. As internal vice president, Sutton would be in charge of appointing senate committee members, making it possible provide the "less recognized" organizations with the representation they deserve. She also was adamant about gaining minority representation.

She said she hopes to rid the senate of its bureaucracy and appoint committee members based on interest and knowledge rather than "popularity."

She is currently the secretary for the committee on rules and administration which handles rules for student organizations, legislation and approving bills. Because of her experience in this position she has a firm understanding of how bills are passed and rules governing organizations concerning the allocation of university funds.

#7A: STACY GILBERT

The Student Association external vice president serves as a voice for Tech and Tech students to external bodies. After an interviewing process, The University Daily editorial board feels the voice of Stacy Gilbert is the most representative voice for Tech out of the three candidates running for this position.

Gilbert reiterated a theme prevalent in her campaign during her interview with The UD editorial board when she said, "You don't run to represent a few, you run to represent all the people."

Gilbert expressed the conviction to do so.

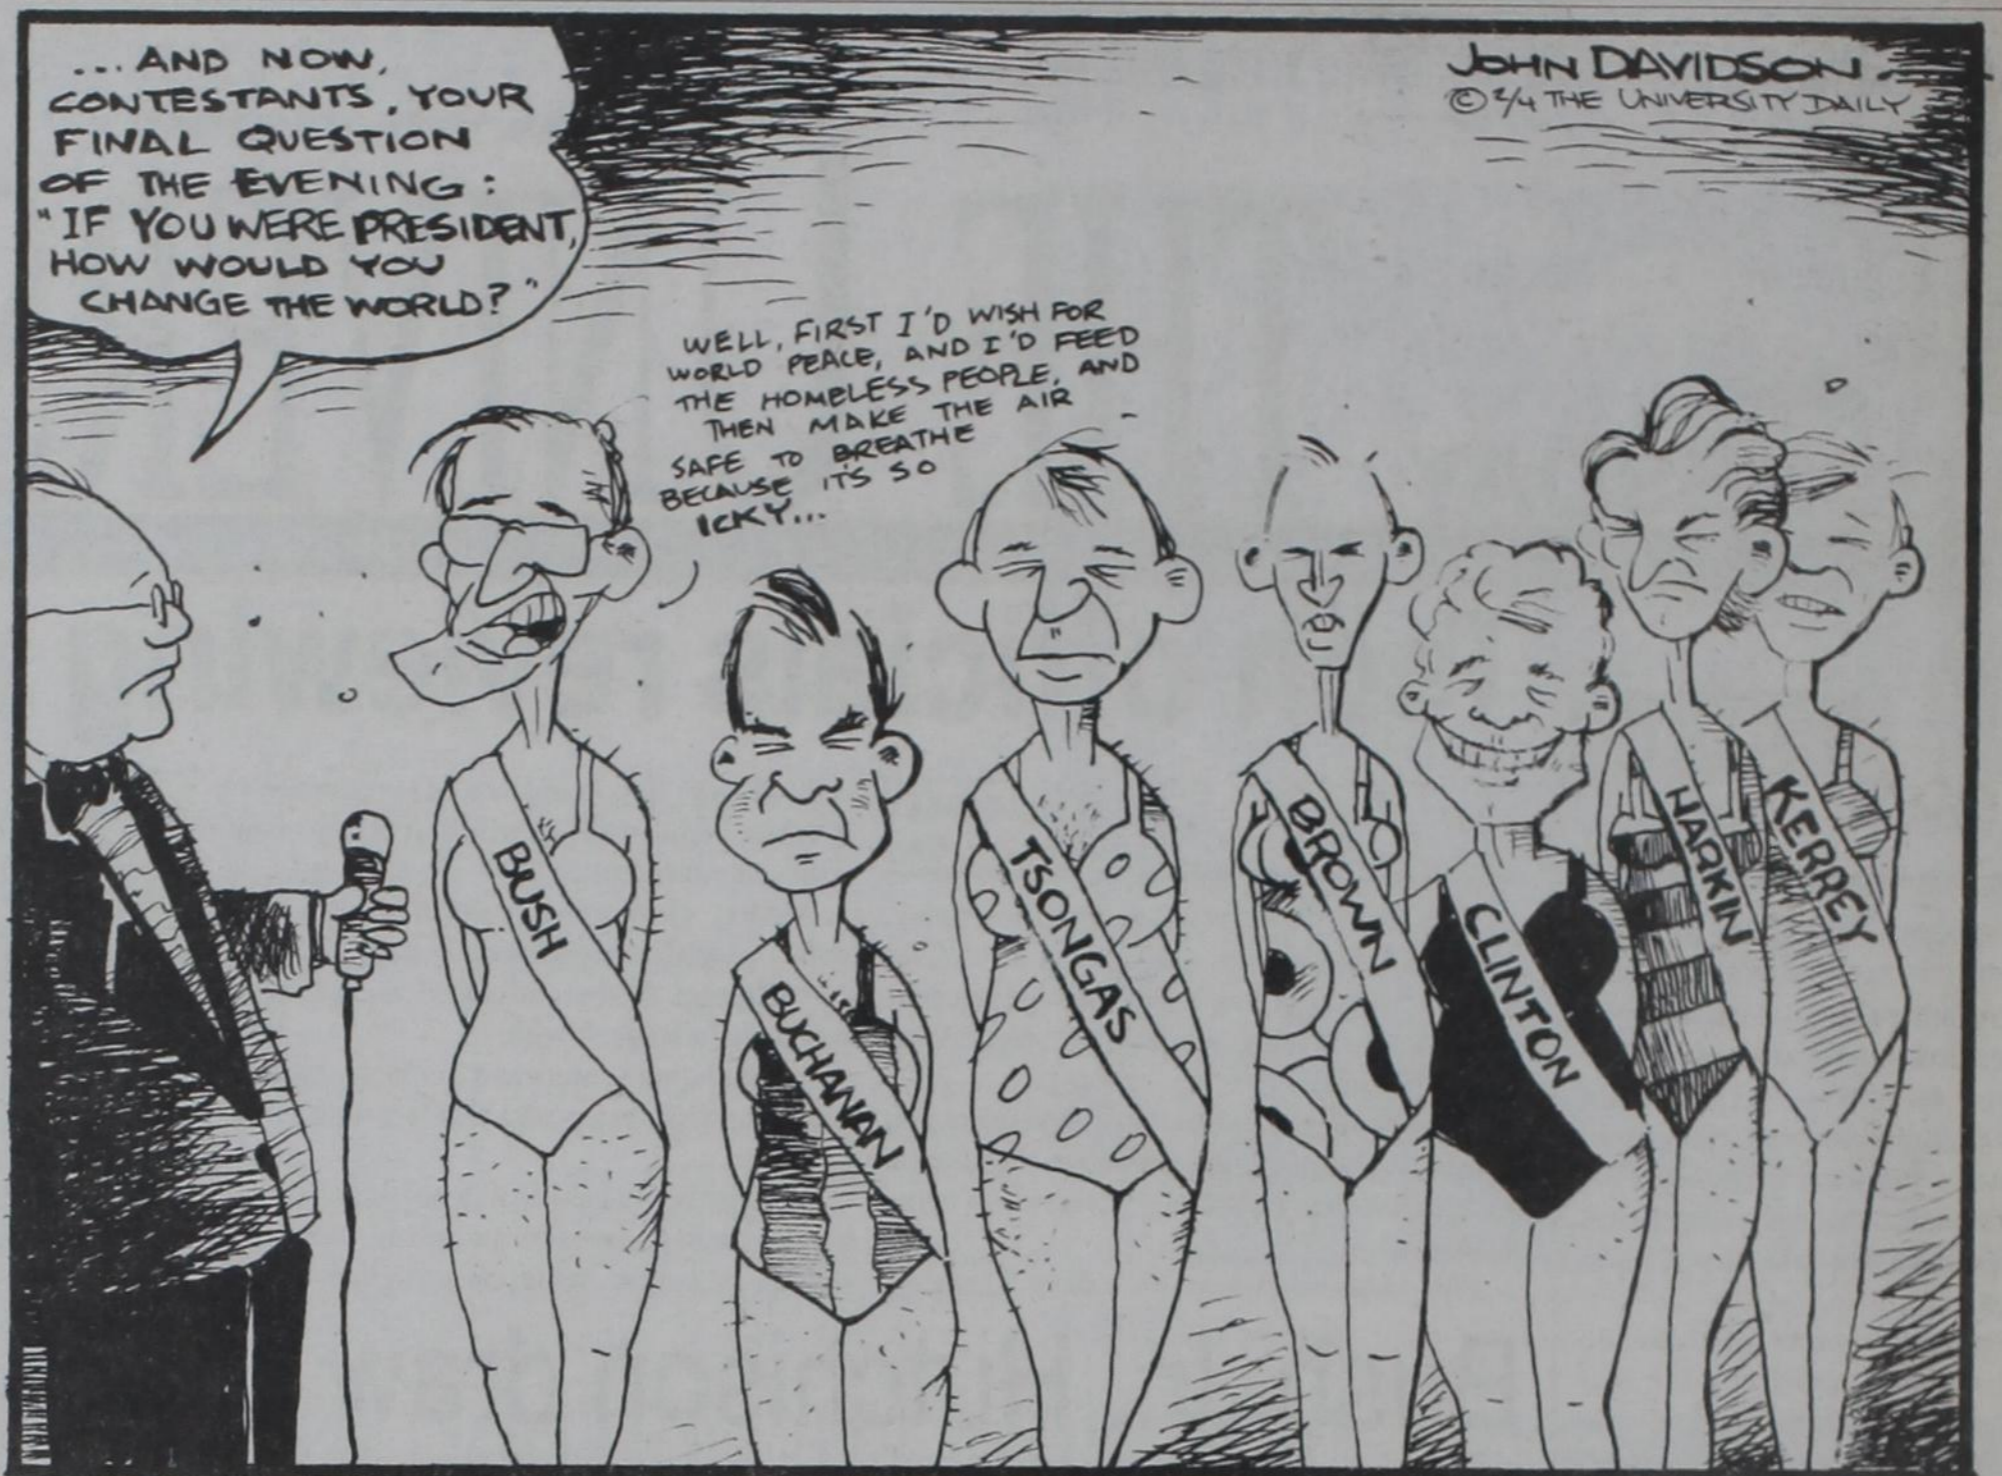

She also showed the combination of professionalism and enthusiasm needed to be an effective liaison between Tech and outside communities such as the City of Lubbock and the State Legislature. This will be increasingly important in the coming year as Tech will have to brace for further state budget cuts in higher education and will have to work to minimize increases in tuition and student fees while maintaining services.

Gilbert seeks increased involvement from the community, corporations, and other organizations in the university that will benefit all involved.

She appears genuine in her motivation to run for the betterment of the university and not just for her own personal advancement.

And as a two-term student senator from the College of Agriculture, Gilbert has the Student Association experience necessary to work effectively within the organization.

For these reasons, The University Daily encourages students to vote for Stacy Gilbert for Student Association external vice president.

RUSSELL LAIRD

Yes! You should go vote today in the Student Association elections and here is why:

First of all, it is a short and painless process. Raise your hand if you've ever taken a test on a Scantron answer sheet (filling in the circles). That is what I thought! At a university this large we have all taken tests on scantron sheets, especially in those larger freshman basics. Well, this year you don't have to punch holes in your ballot but just blacken in the circle for the candidate of your choice on a scantron sheet.

But, I just go to class, go to work, and go home. I shouldn't care about student government — NOT!

To make it simple, even if you don't care about the Student Association's programs and efforts to improve our campus you do care about your $money! Guess what, these people who will be elected control some of your money and your campus services. The Student Association President has extensive control over how your Student Service Fees are spent. This is a total of more than $4 million which we all pay almost $90 for on our tuition bill every semester. Also, if you're involved in a campus organization the Student Senate decides on levels of funding for more than 100 campus organizations every day.

With the current situation in the State Legislature we must continue to have strong representation in Austin to stand up for our concerns as students. This is another reason to vote for the candidates for executive office who you think could best represent you. If you think your college could use stronger representation in the Student Senate to outdo the "bad guys" in those colleges then you had better examine the candidates running for Senate from your respective college and use your voting power.

But, it doesn't matter if I vote or not because enough other people will vote — NOT!

At Texas Tech our average voter turnout is around 10 percent. This is still ridiculous. The activities of the Student Association affect the whole campus, not just 10 percent. We've all heard that stupid little cliché "You shouldn't complain about how things are if you didn't vote."

These Student Senators and executive officers can't really do much, nobody really listens to them, and it is not really that special of a job anyway — NOT!

When these officers are in the position to serve their fellow students and they work hard and efficiently, there is no limit to what they can accomplish.

They are listened to by administrators, the media, and the legislature. What they say is representing your voice whether you agree with them or not.

Let me share a secret with you: There are a few perks to the job of Student Association President and the two Vice Presidents. Of course, we hope that these perks and privileges always go hand in hand with a commitment of hard work. If nothing else, please go vote for the candidates who you feel will work hard enough to deserve the perks of the office.

So examine the candidates' experience and platforms and go out and vote!

Just do it!

Russell Laird is the president of the Student Association.

Women are taking themselves more seriously

ANNA QUINDLEN

Desiree Washington says somebody offered to pay her off. She told this to Barbara Walters on national television.

Ms. Washington is sweet and earnest, the kind of young woman who would have shown up at a train station with a small valise, big eyes and high hopes in old-fashioned movie musicals if old-fashioned movie musicals ever cast black people. She is the woman who was raped by Mike Tyson.

She says she was offered a million dollars to drop the charges, which is awful lot of money to offer someone if you think they're lying. The matter's under investigation, so she wouldn't name names. But she says the people who offered her money also offered her names to say, magic words to explain to the public why she was loath to go forward.

Patricia Bowman. Anita Hill. She didn't budge.

It's been a great time for women in America. I know that conclusion seems contrary to fact. The reason many were shocked that Mike Tyson was convicted was not because they thought he was innocent. Quite the contrary. It was that for the last year being female in America seemed like a bad country-western song:

Can't Win for Losing.

It wasn't only, for example, that Dow Corning had manufactured a product of questionable safety after questionable research. It was that the suits who run the company were dismissive of women who complained about their breast implants.

In this way, they deftly turned what might have been handled a public relations problem into the national nightmare they richly deserve. They treated their consumers like crybabies. They didn't take them seriously.

That is why it's been a good year — because we've taken ourselves seriously. And personally. Any good reporter knows that the best way to illuminate an issue is to write about the people who embody it.

It's been more than two decades since the world began to change so dramatically for women, but this revolution has been long on issues and short on people to embody them.

When Bernard College asked its entering freshman class to list the women they most admired, Eleanor Roosevelt led the pack. Among the living, Margaret Thatcher was the most popular choice. Madonna, Mother Teresa, Golda Meir — the list revealed something obvious: There has been no Rosa Parks of women's rights in recent years, no splendid average person whose indignity summed up injustice.

any good reporter knows that the best way to illuminate an issue is to write about the people who embody it.

Now there are real women to hang the issues and the anger on. Mention Anita Hill and there is still an adrenaline rush. "I thought I'd stop feeling angry when it was over," one woman said of the hearings, which Jay Leno likes to say could have wiped out the federal deficit if they had aired on pay-per-view. "But I'm still mad."

And why not? History repeats herself. Many of the members of the senate treated Professor Hill's accusations the way the officials at Dow Corning treated the pain of women whose implants had gone haywire. Hysterics. Complainers. Crybabies.

Women who get beaten up by their husbands can tell you about this phenomenon. They know the moments when their eye is slowly turning indigo and their old man says, "You made me do it." Why did you stick around? people asked Anita Hill. Why did you go there? they asked Ms. Washington, who was believed, and Patricia Bowman, who was not.

The good guys of America should be tired of this blame-the-victim stuff, which assumes that any woman with half a brain knows that her male counterpart is the functional equivalent of a loaded gun.

People have been predicting the death of feminism for years now, but feminism isn't dead. Like any distance runner with a long way to go, it was just getting a second wind. Now there are more real people to make the political personal, which is to make it real.

Rape victims have stepped forward. Women who feel that they've been maimed by big business and big medicine are speaking out. And Professor Hill has come to stand in many minds, not only for sexual harassment, but for courage, dignity and a refusal to move to the back of the gender bus.

I bet she'll be near the top of the Barnard list come September. I wonder how much her example encouraged Desiree Washington, not to back off, but to move forward.

Candidates, students facing several issues

from their homes. Similar to Tech's current system, phone registration does not necessarily eliminate lengthy waiting for an open computer.

Laird said next year's student service fees committee will have the option to allocate funds to install a phone registration system should the system be approved for implementation.

Other issues student candidates and voters must deal with are on-campus busing and budget cut proposals.

Some candidates' platforms concerning the busing system have included the possibility of an express route from commuter lots to various buildings on campus.

Laird said an express route would not serve many students because of the number of different class locations around campus.

Tech currently has a contract with CitiBus which provides the 80.86 hours of busing on campus everyday.

The two-year contract, negotiated in 1990, was renegotiated with this year's student service fees committee and plans were made to add two additional buses to the Tech route during peak morning hours.

It (phone registration) is being looked into seriously.

— Gene Medley

The changes were instigated by concerns voiced by students that buses do not arrive at stops in the designated six to seven minutes due to overcrowded buses or having to make too many stops.

All the candidates running for SA president generally have expressed the same concerns regarding budget cuts.

However, Laird said the newly elected president will be responsible for researching the current funding situation and developing a presentation to take to Austin lawmakers.

While the issue of a smoke-free environment at Tech is not one directly facing candidates, it is a concern for many Tech students.

Laird said the Student Senate supported the proposal to ban smoking from all buildings on campus as did the Faculty Senate.

Low voter turnout result of miscommunication, apathy

by JULIE COLLINS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

In the past, voter turnout for Texas Tech Student Association elections has hovered between 9 to 13 percent.

Dan Burns, adviser for Tech's student election commission, said that while today's SA elections may face the same kind of student voter turnout as past elections, this election will act as a springboard for future elections in revamping ways of dispersing student election information.

"We are going to try to identify various student populations that are not voting in these elections, and from there we want to build a broad base student voter population," Burns said.

He said the highest student voter turnout for a Student Association election occurred in 1986 when Tech student Bill Caraway defeated Tech student Scott Phelan for SA president.

Out of approximately 21,000 Tech students in 1986, about 2,800 or 13 percent of students voted in that election, Burns said.

Despite voter apathy among Tech students, poor publicity and poster vandalism also have marred election campaigns in the past.

In a 1989 University Daily article, candidates complained that posters were being ripped down before the election took place.

Likewise, Liz Toombs, assistant to the dean of students, said in the article that miscommunication concerning approval of student election campaign posters led to the removal of some of the candidates' posters.

Campaign election posters must be stamped with an Election Commission Stamp before they may be placed on display.

Toombs served as election commission adviser for three years.

Candidate debates have remained a popular campaign technique for student election candidates.

This year's student association candidate debate took place in late February.

"We have gotten a lot more coverage in The UD and KTXT, (Tech's radio station) so that has helped stir students interest in this year's campaign," Burns said.

Toombs said low voter turnout stems from most students not knowing enough about the candidates in SA elections or that they are not familiar with the candidates' platforms.

Despite low student voter turnout on Tech's campus, she said this is also common among local and national elections.

More slated for ballot than candidate selections

by STEPHEN ARMOUR
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

In addition to voting for the offices of the Student Association president, internal and external vice presidents and senators, students voting in today's SA spring general election also will vote on two other issues.

The first issue involves the adoption of an amendment to the Student Association constitution that would delete Article II, Section 6, subsection

3 and replace it with an amendment which would determine the line of succession to the executive offices.

"This is something that was not set in stone," said Russell Laird, Student Association president. "We figured we better get it straight just in case we ever needed to use it. Hopefully, we will never have to use it."

The amendment would only be used in unique circumstances like the death or resignation of the Student Association president or another instance when the president was unable to fulfill the duties of the office, he said.

The proposed amendment states that in the event the Student Association president was removed from office, the internal vice president would then fulfill that office.

If the internal vice president could not fulfill the duties of the office, it would then be filled by the president pro tempore of the senate. The external vice president would fill the office in the event that person could not continue in the office.

In addition to the proposed amendment, students also will be asked to vote on a list of priorities they would like the Student Association and Student Senate to concentrate on during the 1992-1993 legislative year, said Daniel Burns, an assistant director of operations in the University Center's Main Office.

The priority list will be separate from the actual ballot and will be available at all polls on campus.

What they do:

Student Association President

The president heads the executive branch and is the spokesman for students to Texas Tech's Board of Regents, administration and national organizations. The president acts as the Student Association's office manager, as well as the account manager for campus organizations funded through the SA.

The president appoints more than 130 students to various standing committees and councils. These committees and councils hold the power for the students' voice within the university.

The president serves as chairman of the Student Service Fee Advisory Board which allocates student service fees to campus services. The president sets the legislative agenda for the Student Senate twice annually, and maintains a cabinet.

Internal Vice President

The internal vice president serves as the liaison between the executive and legislative branches. He or she also serves as president of the student senate.

The senate consists of members who represent every college on campus including the law and graduate school. The internal vice president presides over senate meetings, appoints senate committees and supervises the operation of the legislative branch.

External Vice President

The external vice president implements and oversees programs of the Student Association. He or she is a liaison between the students and the City of Lubbock. In addition, the external vice president manages all SA publications and serves as vice chairman of the president's cabinet. He or she also serves as the voice for students in external affairs.

As SA President, I would like to start targeting issues which matter most to Tech students. It is time the Student Association commits itself to once again representing the students. There are 2 areas that I would like to begin work on immediately: phone registration and the campus bus system.

The current registration process is one that no one is pleased with at Tech. Students are tired of long lines and being sent all over campus just to be able to register for their classes. It's a shame that Texas Tech still uses this current system when other universities have found a better way. Phone registration is the best solution to improving student services on this campus. It is being used at several universities and junior colleges throughout the state. As SA President, I would offer specific proposals to the Administration to ensure that students can have phone registration by the fall semester.

My second goal is to improve the campus bus system. The SA President negotiates the contract and directly oversees the entire bus system at Texas Tech. Currently in our bus contract, it reads that a bus will go by each stop every 5-7 minutes. Obviously this is not happening on our campus. There is no reason why a better service shouldn't be provided since we, the students, are paying for the campus bus system. I would be dedicated to improving our campus bus system and making the service what it should be. I have two ideas to improve this service. First, I would like to implement an "Express Route" on our campus. This new route would run from the commuter lots — from the Rec Center and Jones Stadium — to the University Center. There would be no stops at Holden Hall or the BA, but a straight shot to the center of campus. This would be a great service to students and would help improve our campus bus system.

I would also like to implement busing at home football games by the fall. It's a shame that students have to walk 2 and 3 miles to Jones Stadium on football Saturdays when we ought to be able to reserve the Rec Center parking for students and have buses take us up to the Stadium. The Student Association allocates the Athletic Department approximately $700,000 a year out of our student service fees, and I believe that some of this money should be used to benefit us all. This idea is something that I would carry through for the students by Tech's home-opener with OU in the fall.

These are a few of my ideas to begin improving student life on our campus. In addition to serving the student body on the campus, I would be dedicated to representing your views at the Legislative Session in Austin. Not only do I feel that I am best suited to represent Tech students with the legislators, I also have the most experience in working in this area. With rising tuition costs and cuts in university appropriations, it is a necessity that Tech students have someone who is capable and qualified to represent them in Austin. I am the person most qualified to be your representative in Austin.

I have been active in leadership positions both in student government and other organizations for the past 3 years. I would be a diversified and well-rounded leader.

This past year I have served as a vice president of the student body and have gained the necessary experience to know how to meet student needs. There is no question that I am the most qualified candidate in this race for President. I have the experience that Tech students need in order for us to accomplish the goals that I have outlined above. I would combine my experience with fresh ideas in order to best represent the students of Texas Tech University. I am ready to begin serving you now and do not need any on-the-job training. I would appreciate your support for SA President and encourage you to vote today.

Student Association President is more than just a title, it is a tremendous opportunity. It is an opportunity to make a difference for the students of Texas Tech. An opportunity to take a good situation and make it better. I will take advantage of his opportunity as your Student Association President.

As your Student Association President, I will have some basic tasks to complete. These include chairing the Student Service Fee Advisory Board, which allocates nearly 4 million of your dollars to services as the Rec Center, Thompson Hall, Career Planning and Placement Center and the buses. I would also appoint approximately 150 qualified students to about 25 various committees and councils around campus where students have direct input to the administration. I will do these and the other tasks that go along with the office, and I will do them well, but I am also going to expand the job.

The foundation of my platform is to improve the perception of Texas Tech as well as to create new opportunities for all students.

I have a 5-point plan to achieve this goal. Briefly the five points are: 1) Game Day Donations, a program to utilize the restaurants and hotels during big home football game weekends, 2) develop a strong campaign aimed directly at the freshmen and their parents during orientation to increase membership in all campus organizations and thus improving the current retention rate, 3) initiate a plan to get students and administrators on the same level of understanding, 4) coordinate a campus organizations' presidents roundtable to discuss where we see our position within our university, Lubbock and Texas...where we want to be...and how we are going to get there, and finally, 5) coordinate a Legislator Day at Texas Tech to increase awareness of Tech to key legislators.

My number one priority, however, will be to prepare for the 1992 Legislative Session. Experience gained in Austin during the summer tuition wage and at a State Students Association meeting is invaluable as I prepare to represent you in Austin again.

As students, we can create and pay for services to make college life seemingly more convenient, however, we must first examine our current economic environment.

A new registration process and improving our transit system seem noble, but are our current services worth improving to the point of increasing student service fees?

Now uncertain times and definite tuition increases are around the corner and we must ask ourselves if we really need extra services. I believe these areas can be improved upon with effective management without additional cost to students.

The key to any successful presidency is proper experience. Experience is more than titles, it is taking advantage of the title to get extra projects done to expand the job.

To properly represent 25,000 college students, I believe a president must be able to see the "big picture" of things and be able to relate it to.

My experience in the Students Association combined with a national office, much campus involvement and civic leadership not only makes me the most qualified candidate but also allows me to comprehend the bigger picture.

I strongly believe in my goals, qualifications and motivations for this job. By electing me, I will not just be a figurehead or merely carry a title, but I will work to accomplish a better Texas Tech. I ask you to join my supporters and cast your vote for the most qualified and hard working candidate...Chris Loveless!

I am running for Student Association President because I see it as a way to implement new ideas to better Texas Tech while allowing me to serve the students. I want to put more "student" in the Student Association and in doing so I want students to help me set the agenda. As my resume indicates I have had experience in several different areas not limited to campus work.

As I said I want to work to implement new ideas and one of those is my proposed Student Advisory Board - a group of students appointed by the President who will meet with students regularly to discuss problems and brainstorm possible courses of action. I also want to work with students to address different campus issues such as student parking and campus security. In regard to parking, I want to prepare a list of student recommendations which we can present to the proper officials and work to layout a short and long term plan for parking. In regard to security, I want to work with students and university officials to evaluate our current situation and improve on it.

As President, I want to be able to travel to Austin and work with the legislature thus providing positive representation for Tech students as I am well qualified to do. Also, to increase awareness of Tech happenings I want to send a monthly newsletter to all officials in Austin. In the same sense, I will encourage officials to visit Texas Tech so that students can voice their concerns directly.

I have always been one who tries to work with others as a team rather than an individual. This is evident in my desire to increase student involvement in the Student Association and it is apparent in my desire to create a coalition of West Texas schools as a forum for the exchange of ideas and information.

This campaign is one of ideas and enthusiastic leadership, a campaign of friends working with friends to better Texas Tech.

PLATFORM

As Internal Vice President and President of the Student Senate, three of my goals include: to increase student input into the allocation of student service fees, to deal with the problems facing the student body at Texas Tech by being an effective leader of the Student Senate, and to represent Texas Tech in the legislative session in Austin by lobbying for increased funding and no further cuts.

The first goal I have set as Internal Vice President is to make students aware of the student service fee, and what various services are provided by it. In order to accomplish this, I will work with the media to publicize what students are currently paying for and encourage them to submit their recommendations on how these services can be improved to the Student Association Office. I will then make sure that the Student Association President and the committee members of the Student Service Fee Advisory Board are made aware of the recommendations so that they can make reference to these in the Student Service Fee Advisory Board Interviews.

My second goal is to be an effective leader of the Student Senate and this can only be accomplished if student input is received. There will be a number of issues which I plan to have next year's Student Senate address including: improvements in academic advisement, easier access to the Student Health Center at Thompson Hall, the registration process, and the traffic and parking problems. This year along with the election ballot will be a student response form in which students will identify the problems on campus and list their priority from one to five. One of my first objectives will be to evaluate these responses, and then work with the Student Senate to resolve these problems. To publicize next year's Senate activities, I will implement a new radio program in cooperation with KXTX radio to be called, "Senate Update" in which the week's activities will be discussed.

A third goal is to represent Texas Tech in the upcoming Legislative Session in Austin and to lobby for the increased funds that Tech needs for such things as the library and to discourage any further cuts. In recent years, the students of Texas Tech have seen increases in student health fees, student service fees, tuition and the UC fee and there is no need to support or encourage any more of a financial burden on the students.

These are three of my goals that I will work to accomplish as Internal Vice President and President of the Student Senate. This year I have served a number of roles in Senate, but by far the biggest role I have served is that of a leader and this is why I am the most qualified candidate. I will make sure that next year's Senate addresses the problems on this campus which trouble all students and that we receive the student input necessary to solve these problems effectively. I have a lot of new ideas which I will implement into this position and with the help of the Tech media, I know that these ideas can and will be a success. However, my most important qualification is that I have the desire to make Texas Tech and next year's Senate a better place by opening up to the people who are most affected by the situations here — the students.

I seek the office of Internal Vice-President because I want to lead the Texas Tech Student Senate into the 1992-1993 school year. There are many changing times coming upon our school this next year because of budget cuts. I will make sure that the students have a voice in exactly what gets cut here at Texas Tech. It is probable that we will have another cut in our budget, but I really feel like the students should have a voice in the matter, because after all, we are the ones being cut, not the men down in Austin. Second, I will make sure that the Student Senate is dealing with issues you think are important. The Senate is here to serve you and your needs. I will make sure that the students you elect as your Student Senators will represent you to the best of their abilities. The Student Senate will make things happen. Third, I am a firm believer in people will work harder if they are motivated in a positive way. When I am elected Internal Vice-President, one of my duties will be to appoint every Senator to one of the seven standing committees that make up the Senate. I believe the students will work harder if they are placed in a position that they want to be in; where the can work on issues they are in. So, when I appoint these Senators, I will make sure every one of them are in a position to serve you best.

I should be your Internal Vice-President because I can initiate new ideas into the Senate. I can motivate the Senate into action, and most importantly I can and will communicate what action the Senate takes; I want to represent you in the 1992-1993 school year, and I hope you will elect me today to be your Internal Vice-President.

PLATFORM

Having served on the Student Senate Rules and Administration Committee for the past two years, I am educated on the internal procedures and policies of the Senate. If elected to the position of Internal Vice President it would be my duty to serve as President of the Senate. My background gives me thorough knowledge of this position.

In addition to these qualifications, it is my desire to further develop public relations with the administration so views of the Tech students are more readily heard. I will make myself and senators accessible to the students through posted office hours and encouraging better communication between senators and their respective colleges. Such communication could be increased by use of surveys and suggestion boxes. As their President, I could ensure that these procedures are followed through and that the results were channeled in such a way as to reflect the interests of the students which they would affect.

Also, I would appoint a committee and a chairperson who would distribute funds fairly and equitably for all student organizations who meet the criteria. Appointing students with an objective mindframe and the ability to compromise is vitally important because all students contribute to the funds allocated through this service and each should be treated fairly. If sufficient thought and unbiased decision making are not enforced in this process some student funds may be lost completely.

Student involvement is the key to a successful and representative senate, the opportunity for leadership is great and students should realize that their voice can make a difference; however, they must let their position be known. Providing a way for the students to do this will be one of my priorities in the coming year.

With the recent decrease in state funding, having experienced and confident leaders to lobby for Texas Tech is imperative. Higher education is at a crossroad and it is up to us to choose the representatives who can best direct its path.

Being Internal Vice President is one of the most important positions a student can hold on the Texas Tech campus. This position needs someone with experience. I have that experience and more of it than either of my opponents. Also I have a genuine interest in the voice of the Tech students and I am determined to see that that voice is heard. Above all the students should have a working knowledge of the Student Association activities and be aware of the power that they hold as students to influence legislation and decisions.

I am running for External Vice President to serve the students at Texas Tech by continuously striving to make this an even better University. I want to be able to look back at the end of my term and say that I made a difference. One way to do this is to get Student publications to publish the Word. This would bring money in to Tech and allow students a chance to gain experience in this type of a publication.

Another way I would to this is to increase Tech visibility and through this help to increase student recruitment. I would work through Chamber of Commerce, Mass Communications, Marketing, and Dean of Students to publicize Texas Tech and all that is offered. Since the enrollment standards are now higher, freshman enrollment is down. Recruitment in the coming years will prove to be extremely important and I will work out an effective way to market our University.

I would also like to coordinate the efforts of the Lubbock community and the student body to lobby against the proposed state budget cuts on higher education. The fact that Tech is the largest single segment of the Lubbock economy relates to a lot of support in the community that has not been tapped. The student relations with the community could be increased by bringing in more employment recruiters and encourage students to become involved with the community through the Chamber of Commerce. As chairman of the Projects Committee for Saddle Tramps, I helped with the founding efforts to restore the Dairy Barn. Plans have been approved and the restoration is on-line to be started by the end of the semester. I would start now on efforts to turn the building into a student center by rallying support within the community to get behind this project.

My name is Eric D. Sanchez and I am running for External Vice-Pres.

My platform consists of (3) main goals:

The first objective being a publication of a Student Course Guide, a magazine which would consist of teacher evaluations done by students.

promoting a positive image is through each student being prepared and ready to be excellent in their field of study.

The importance of being a team player and leading by example are very significant ones. By working together and having feedback from everyone, there will be many meaningful accomplishments by the Student Association.

The reason I, Stacy Gilbert, am running for this office is not for selfish reasons. I believe any elected office is to serve; therefore, I am running because I know I can be of service to Texas Tech. Serving as an officer should be something you decide to do because you know you have great ideas and a strong work ethic which would benefit the organization. It is equally as important to make a lasting impression - to incorporate ideas and move people to positive actions that will not only have an impact today or tomorrow, but in the future! It is also my belief that a person is not elected to represent a few, he/she is elected to represent everyone at Texas Tech. I have concluded each of my speeches with something a very special friend shared with me and I would like to share it with you. She simply said, "Stacy, always remember: WE'RE NOT BORN WINNERS AND WE'RE NOT BORN LOSERS. WE'RE BORN CHOOSERS! Will you choose to take an active part in the PURSUIT OF EXCELLENCE today?"

It only takes a few minutes to vote — do it!

Album pairs blues, environment

by ROB WEINER
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

California's San Francisco Bay Area has produced a plethora of musical talent: The Grateful Dead, Jefferson Airplane, Journey and Quicksilver among many others.

Multi-talented keyboard player Merl Saunders also hails from the Bay Area. His newest release, "Save the Planet So We'll Have Someplace to Boogie," attests to his talent.

Saunders made a name for himself in the mid-'70s, when, in addition to releasing several solo albums, he released a double album with Grateful Dead guitarist Jerry Garcia. "Live at the Keystone" was an excellent work of R&B classics (long out of print "Live at the Keystone" has recently been reissued on CD). Saunders' "Save the Planet..." continues in the R&B vein but with much more diversity than the "Keystone" albums.

The release kicks off with "Save Mother Earth" which, along with tracks like "The System," show Saunders' sadness in man's misuse of the environment. He laments "Man has treated her (the earth) so badly, all for greed you know."

Saunders then covers the Grateful Dead classic "Sugarce" adding much more boogie to the song than the Dead's version.

He does a few of his own instrumental compositions: "Finders Keepers" and "Merl's Tune." These tunes have a very funky feel to them. "I Feel Like Dynamite," "You Can Leave Your Hat On," and the classic standard "High Heel Sneakers," rock out with just the right touches of jazz and soul to get feet moving.

"Save the Planet..." ends with two of Saunders' own compositions, "Blue Hill Ocean Dance" and Blues from the Rainforest." These musical suites give off New Age impressions complete with rainforest samples and world beat rhythms. It is hard to pinpoint Saunders' style as a keyboard player. Gospel, blues, jazz, and soul can all be heard on "Save the Planet..." which attests to Saunders' diverse abilities. Comparisons could be made to Sly Stone, Stevie Wonder, Herbie Hancock, or Big Joe Turner. As the title suggests, "Save the Planet..." is an album to boogie and have fun with, but at the same time remain environmentally aware.

Lawyer uses unusual teaching methods, life experiences in class

by HEATHER PARKER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Marginal utility demonstrated with Barbie dolls and students skits displaying the economic theory — does that sound like the usual economics class? It is not, and Kay Spikes Moore is not the usual economics professor.

Since the first day of class, visiting assistant professor Moore has sparked the students of two Economics 2305 classes with her dedication and enthusiasm.

"By teaching, I think I can make an impact," Moore said. "Therefore, like everything else I do, I am going to do it to the max."

Moore was raised in Lubbock and graduated from Monterey High School in 1972. She furthered her education at the University of Texas where she earned her BA in economics. She went on to gain her master's in international management from Arizona's Thunderbird Institute of Management.

With such abroad education, Moore has various real-life job experiences that she brings into the classroom.

She first worked for Continental Grain Company, which, at the time, was the second largest grain company in the world. While there, she made company history.

"At 23, I was the first woman ever to be made a departmental manager at the 100-year-old company," Moore said. "I worked very hard though for that position and everything I have done in my life. Hard work, persistence, and a little southern charm are what landed me the job."

Then Moore moved to New York where she was a commodity and stock broker on Wall Street and later for a firm in Scottsdale, Ariz. Eventually she owned her own firm, Western Commodities Incorporated. In Phoenix, Moore was president and senior broker of the regional commodity brokerage firm. Her firm dealt mainly with cattle and grain hedging. In 1988, she sold her firm and moved back to Lubbock to go to law school.

"My family is here, and I believe, as a single mother, coming back here was the best decision," Moore said.

In May 1991, Moore received her Doctor of Jurisprudence from the Texas Tech University School of Law.

So why is Professor Moore teaching economics at Tech instead of practicing law somewhere?

"Because teaching is something that I have always wanted to do," Moore said. "I am at point in my life where I can do whatever I want, and teaching is what I want to do right now. I can still practice law later."

However, Moore is not letting her new law degree collect too much dust. On Tuesdays and Thursday, in between writing lectures and grading homework, Moore does practice law on a small scale.

"Some of the firms that I clerked for while I was in law school refer cases to me. I was the attorney ad litem in an adoption procedure a couple of weeks ago," Moore said.

She said that teaching has been a big adjustment for her. However, just coming out of law school and being in the "academic mode" has made the adjustment a little easier.

"I was really nervous the first day of class, but all the nervousness was channeled into energy. Now, I love it," Moore said.

She always wants her classes to be meaningful, thought provoking, but some fun, too.

"Economics really is an interesting subject, one just has to find a new way to spark the students. I guess that is why I am so energetic in the classroom," Moore said. "I love what I am doing, and I want to pass that on to the students."

So far, there has not been any downfalls in Moore's new-found teaching career. However, she has received some rather interesting excuses for missing her class.

"One day I had a student come up to me and said, 'I missed your class last item because my mama wouldn't let me come.' That is pretty funny," Moore said.

Looking back, Moore does not regret traveling any of the roads she has chosen throughout her life.

"I have enjoyed everything I have done. Each job opportunity I took advantage of has given me more real-life experiences to bring into the classroom," Moore said. "But teaching has definitely been the most fun." Professor Moore is married to Thomas Moore. She has a daughter, Katie, who is 9 years old and is in the third grade.

As for her teaching career, she already has submitted her application to teach in the summer.

"Yes, I would do it again," Moore said. "Teaching is so much more than I ever thought it would be."

Fong and Pet Shop Snew climbing way up CMJ chart

by LARA CAMPBELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Editor's note: The following article contains information that has not been confirmed and should be read with a certain degree of levity.

Driving down a dark Texas road one night, two girls in a beat-up pickup truck struck a cow. Little did they know this would be the beginning of Fong and Pet Shop Snew, a band with a unique sound.

The band consists of three members, known as Fong, 31, the Female half of Pet Shop Snew, 28, and the Male half of Pet Shop Snew, 16. Each was born and raised in small Texas towns. Fong is a native of Happy, the Female half of Pet Shop Snew is from Earth, and the Male half of Pet Shop Snew is from Muleshoe.

"We were driving down I-20 when we struck a cow that was owned by the Male half of Pet Shop Snew. Apparently he did not realize he could not drive his cattle across a major highway," said the Female half of Pet Shop Snew.

Fong is by far the most bizarre of the band members, claiming she is female, but her appearance and voice make it hard for one to tell the exact sex of this strong vocalist.

Fong claims to have received her name as a child while at the circus.

"I was with my mom and dad at the circus, and I fell off an elephant and landed on a trampoline. The sound I made was "fong." I've been called that ever since," Fong said.

The group describes their sound as a funk, punk, rock, acoustic billy goat.

Fong is lead singer and also plays the guitar. The other two play the harmonica, tambourine and the flute.

Their fourth album, "142 Hours," was released last fall under the M & M record label, and their single, "He Buys Us Lunch," is slowly moving up the College Music Journal (CMJ) Chart. It has been receiving play from New York to Peoria, Ill. Their "142 Hours" follows their popular third album, "Drill Team on a Stick."

"It ("He Buys Us Lunch") is an evolving song. Anyone who wants to buy a verse can take us out to lunch," Fong said.

We perform all over Lubbock, mostly in our car.

The members of the band have been on MTV's 120 minutes and have also performed locally.

"We've performed all over Lubbock, mostly in our car," said the Female half of Pet Shop Snew.

The band members will not give out exactly how long they have been performing together, saying only that they have been together for "quite some time."

The band is currently working on a new single, "America's Most Wanted." The song idea came after the Female half of Pet Shop Snew recognized a friend on the television show of the same name.

Raiders eye SWC title in showdown with A&M

by MIKE HEWLETT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

It isn't often that a team has the opportunity to make school history.

But the opportunity to do just that presents itself tonight for the No. 15 Texas Tech women's basketball team (21-4 overall and 11-1 in the South-west Conference) when it plays host to the Lady Aggies of Texas A&M (15-11 overall and 7-6 in SWC play) at 7 p.m. at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Should the Red Raiders come away from the Coliseum with a victory, they will claim the first-ever SWC title by a Tech women's team in any sport.

"To win the conference at home would be real special for us," coach Marsha Sharp said. "The honor of winning the first-ever SWC title for women's sports at Tech gives the game versus A&M added meaning for our kids and myself as well."

Tech athletic teams have won seven SWC team titles: twice in men's golf (1959 and 1971), once in football (a co-championship in 1976) and four times in men's basketball (1961, 1962, 1973 and 1985).

No Red Raider women's team has finished higher than second in the final league standings.

But before history can be made,

Tech will have to take care of a dangerous Lady Aggie squad.

In the two teams' first matchup in College Station Feb. 1, the Raiders took a 75-69 win.

Tonight's game finds Tech facing off against an A&M squad that Sharp said played her team the toughest all season, aside from a 70-63 loss to Texas in Austin.

"The main thing we're going to have to do, as far as Xs and Os go, is to handle the full court pressure better than we did down in Houston," Sharp said. "The other thing we have to do is defend their strong inside game and especially (senior center) Dena Russo."

Russo tallied eight points in the first game against the Raiders and pulled down a game-high 12 rebounds.

Junior forward Sheryl Swoopes led both teams with 29 points in the last meeting, as she also pulled down six rebounds.

Also, both Tami Wilson and Teresa McMillan finished with 13 points in the last meeting.

Regardless of the outcome of today's game, Tech has one regular season game yet to play.

The Raiders travel to Fort Worth this weekend to square off against the 0-12 Lady Horned Frogs of Texas Christian to finish out SWC play.

Nowhere to run

Texas Tech junior forward Sheryl Swoopes looks for room to the basket against a Rice Lady Owl. Swoopes and the Red Raiders will take on the Texas

A&M Lady Aggies tonight, as they will try to win their first-ever conference title. Tech enters the game with a record of 21-4 overall and 11-1 in the SWC.

Swoopes among finalists for player of the year award

NEW YORK (AP) — Texas Tech's Sheryl Swoopes was among five finalists selected Tuesday for a women's college basketball player of the year award.

Other finalists for the Women's Basketball Coaches Association award are Boston College's Sarah Behn, Furman's Rushia Brown, Miami's Frances Savage and West Virginia's Rosemary Kosiorek. The award will be selected in mid-March.

Swoopes, a junior forward, is averaging 22.1 points and 8.7 rebounds. She has made 50 percent of her shots and 79 percent of her free throws.

The finalists were selected solely based upon their statistics. Champion Products Inc., the sponsor of the award, oversaw the selection process.

Division I members of the coaches association now will vote for a winner.

Sharp accepts new contract

by MIKE HEWLETT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

In a press conference Tuesday in the Texas Tech Letterman's Lounge, Athletic Director T. Jones announced that women's basketball coach Marsha Sharp has accepted a new four-year contract to coach through the 1995-96 season.

In the midst of the most successful season in her 10-year career at the Red Raider helm, Sharp's team has amassed a record of 21-4, improving her overall won-loss record to 206-93.

"When Mr. Jones and I first discussed this I was speechless," Sharp said. "I probably stopped breathing there for a little bit."

The new contract allocates her $20,000 more per year than her previous agreement of $55,000 which she received annually. Along with a base salary of $75,000, Sharp retains the rights to money from any basketball camps or media deals that might present themselves during the terms of the agreement. Tech President Robert Lawless was on hand for the announcement and extended congratulations to Sharp for her achievements.

"There is no peer for coach Sharp in the nation. We have the premier women's basketball coach in the country," Lawless said.

Jones said the athletic department and the Texas Tech Board of Regents felt Sharp's efforts were worthy of further recognition and acknowledgment from the university.

"We feel that Marsha has moved her team up to that next plateau," Jones said. "I think it's good for Marsha to know that she is right up there in that upper echelon salary-wise with the top coaches nationwide."

"If someone would have told me that I would get paid like they are going to pay me for coaching basketball, I probably would have thought they were from another planet," Sharp said.

At the time Sharp accepted the new contract in the third year of a five-year contract she signed in April, 1989.

Tech's Shook hopes hard work lands him in major leagues

by JOSEPH HAYES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

At 5 feet 8 inches, senior outfielder/designated hitter Wes Shook does not look like your typical slugger at the plate. But as the saying goes, "Looks can be deceiving."

Despite being one of the shortest players on the team, Shook said his size has had no effect on his style of play.

"I don't let my size bother me," Shook said. "I feel like I'm as good as the next guy."

Although he quickly made a name for himself by being named to the All-Southwest Conference squad as a designated hitter a year ago, Shook said he almost did not get to play college ball.

"I didn't know if I would have a chance to play in college, because none of the scouts had talked to me," Shook said.

"I thought I could play, but I guess I didn't get much exposure playing at a 4A high school."

After playing for Lubbock Christian as a freshman and New Mexico Junior College the following year, Shook transferred to Tech.

"Being from West Texas, this is really where I've always wanted to play," said Shook, who played his high school ball at Lamesa.

As a Red Raider in 1991, Shook led the team in RBIs with 60, and in home runs with 13.

As well as batting .322, he also set a school record for most at bats in a season with 227.

"It's been great playing here. I think said,

"He worked real hard over the summer and has improved by a 100 percent in the outfield," Anderson said. "He's got above average speed and a good arm."

Like most college athletes, Shook said he would like to try playing in the pros, but it's not something he is counting on.

"I'd like to see if I have what it takes to play at the next level," Shook said.

"Being realistic, I'm not exactly what the scouts are looking for, but maybe with some hard work and a few breaks, who knows?"

we've got a great program and some good coaches," Shook said.

Success has had its disadvantages though, Shook said.

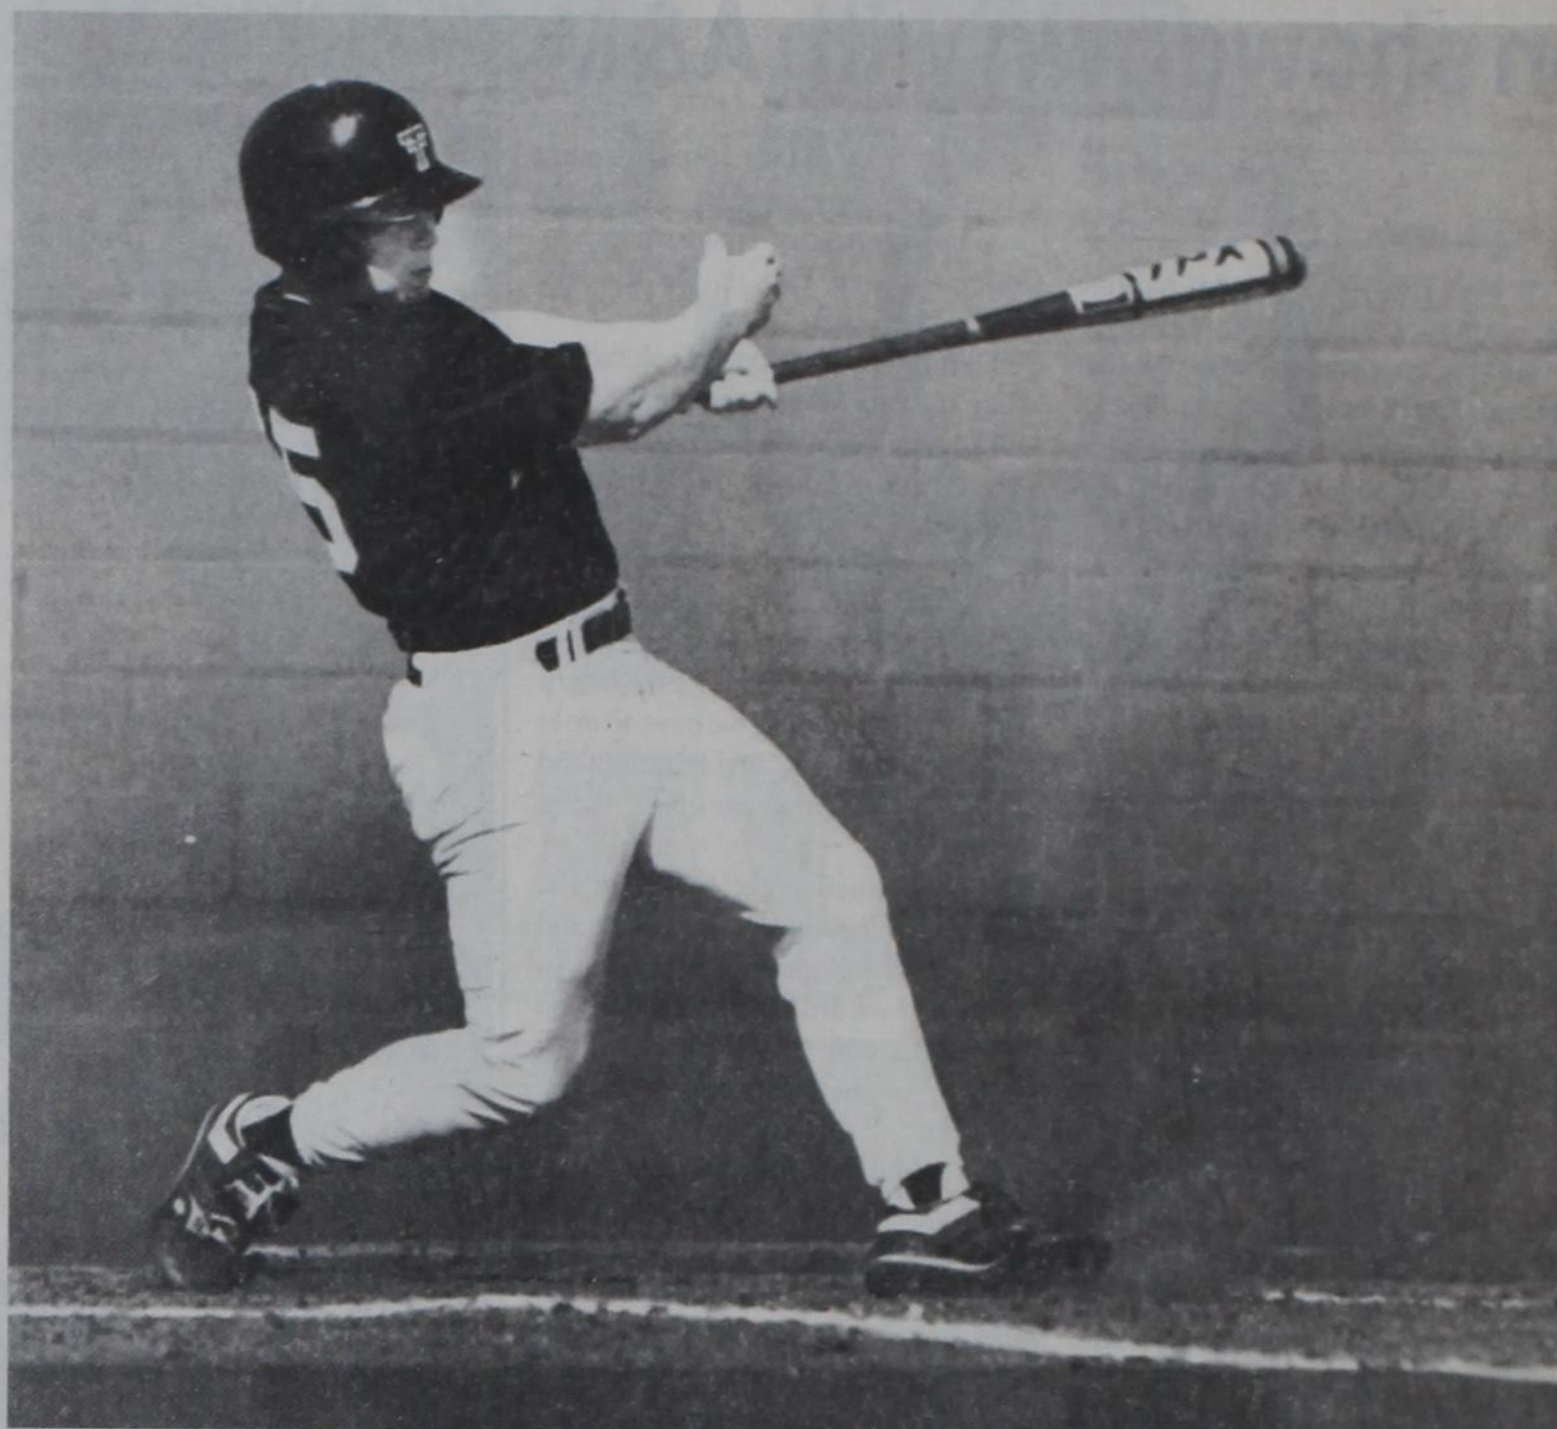

"Last year, the pitchers didn't know me very well, and I loved it because they just kept giving me fastballs," Shook said. "After they get to know you, you don't see the same pitches, so I'm having to learn how to be patient on the curve balls."

As an outfielder, Shook has shown tremendous improvement from last year, assistant coach Frank Anderson

Whether or not he makes it, Shook said he is looking forward to getting his degree in corporate fitness and someday running an employee fitness program for a major company.

With the Tech offense being as unpredictable as the West Texas weather, coach Larry Hays said that Shook's ability at the plate has made him one of the team's offensive leaders.

"I don't mind being the 'go to guy', as long as I can still do my job and produce," Shook said.

Longhorns better position for NCAA tourney

AUSTIN (AP)—The Texas Longhorns, who fell out of Top 25 consideration before Christmas, are trying to climb back in the poll by burying their late season foes.

With time running out for teams to jockey for position in the NCAA Tournament, Texas coach Tom Penders has kept his starters in until the game's final seconds, averaging 18.5 points more than their opponents in their last four games.

And it appears to be working. "It's obvious, because we've jumped way up in both polls," Penders said. "I wish it wasn't that way but we have to concern ourselves with that because the league doesn't get the respect it deserves."

Although still not among the AP Top 25, they have moved much closer. After receiving only 10 votes two weeks ago, the Longhorns got 50 points in this week's poll placing them 31st.

Texas is 20-9 overall and atop the Southwest Conference at 10-2. The Longhorns were the 26th team in the Nov. 24 poll, but plummeted in the following weeks. Penders waited until the final 12 seconds against Baylor before clearing his bench. Texas subs also didn't shed their sweats until the final four seconds of a 22-point win over Texas Christian and a 20-point win against Oral Roberts.

"Whatever they were trying to prove, I hope they accomplished it," Baylor's David Wesley said Saturday after Texas' 97-67 victory over the Bears.

The victory against Baylor was Texas' 20th—considered the mythical magic number for a tournament invitation. The Longhorns also could earn an automatic berth by winning the SWC postseason tournament next weekend. So, it's not the bid Penders is concerned with as much as where Texas is placed in the bracket.

"It's become evident to me that margin of victory does count in seeding," he said.

After the Oral Roberts and Baylor games, he said he feared quick strikes by opposing offenses which he said both teams were capable of doing because neither emptied their bench.

Penders also wants his players to be comfortable with several different lineups. He often has called this year's team his deepest at Texas and wants to be able to use a variety of combinations in the postseason.

Texas' Franco looking for same luck in '92

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP)—The Texas Rangers media guide for 1992 is out and neither Nolan Ryan or Ruben Sierra made the cover. American League batting champion Julio Franco did.

Franco is photographed with a big smile while holding his silver championship bat.

Franco, who hit .341 last year, said he got lucky.

"I could have been among the league leaders in 1989 and 1990 but I hit a lot of line drives right at people," Franco said. "Last year, I got a lot of balls to fall in. You have to be lucky and good."

Franco is more concerned about his fielding in the Rangers spring camp than his hitting. He has made 46 errors in three years.

"I know I can swing the bat," Franco said. "My defense needs to get better."

Franco believes new shortstop Dickie Thon holds the key.

"Last year we had three or four different shortstops and that made it hard," Franco said. "Each shortstop is different. You have to know how he likes the ball thrown to him and get your timing down. I'd like to work with one shortstop."

Franco said hitting won't be the big key to the Rangers in their AL West division race this season.

"Defense and pitching will be the keys to this team," he said. "We're working hard on our defense in spring training."

Franco, who was married in the off-season, is getting back into full drills after taking it easy the first several days because of a sore left knee.

Hockey players give strike mandate to rep

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

National Hockey League players are prepared to strike if no collective bargaining agreement is reached within the next two weeks.

"I hope things get resolved, but it will be interesting," Buffalo Sabres star Pat LaFontaine said Tuesday. "It has come down to the wire."

Players on at least 11 teams have voted unanimously to give NHL Players Association chief Bob Goodenow a strike mandate to take into meetings with league governors March 9-10 in New York. All 22 clubs are to take votes this week.

Montreal Canadiens captain Guy Carbonneau and New York Islanders chairman and general manager Bill Torrey each said this week they expect a walkout if there is no agreement at the meetings.

The players have been without a collective bargaining agreement since last September.

"If no progress is made, they'll walk on the 16th," Torrey told the Montreal Gazette.

"There's no other solution," Carbonneau said. "If nothing happens, I don't see how a walkout can be avoided. If we play for the rest of the regular season and the playoffs, they will lock us out next year. Most of us really feel that way."

The timing suits the players, who make most of their money during the regular season. The owners' payday comes in the playoffs.

Players receive their last regular-season paychecks on March 13. A walkout on March 16 would give management three weeks to reach an agreement before the postseason begins.

The Sabres, Islanders, Vancouver Canucks, Quebec Nordiques, New York Rangers, Boston Bruins, Los Angeles Kings, Chicago Blackhawks, Philadelphia Flyers, Pittsburgh Penguins and San Jose Sharks have voted for a strike mandate.

"Let's put it in perspective—it was an authorization vote," Islanders player representative Ken Baumgartner said. "We don't have the intention of going out."

"It is one of our options, but we have many options. We thought it was important to assess the union's strength going into the important meetings."

Goodenow, negotiating his first agreement since he succeeded Alan Eagleson as NHLPA executive director, was not available for comment. Nor was Blackhawks president Bill Wirtz, who heads the league's Board of Governors.

Raiders to face hapless Texas A&M

by KEVIN CASAS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech, which saw its National Invitation Tournament hopes fade in a loss to Northern Illinois on Saturday, will be vying for a win against Texas A&M at 7:30 p.m. today at G. Rollie White Coliseum in College Station.

The Red Raiders (13-12 overall, 5-7 in Southwest Conference) need a victory to better their seed in the Southwest Conference tournament, while the Aggies (5-19, 1-10) look for their second win in SWC play.

"We know it will be extremely tough for us to defeat Texas A&M. They have been playing very well lately and I expect them to be ready for us," Tech coach James Dickey said.

Sophomore forward Allen Austin said A&M's Sherrick Anderson will be a force to be reckoned with.

"Anderson will be a big key in the game," he said. "We'll have to play pretty good defense and Will (Flemons) must contain him."

Anderson averages 10.5 points an outing and 6.3 rebounds. Those statistics compared to his counterpart Flemons (19.4 points, 9.8 rebounds per game) might suggest a mismatch on the inside, but Flemons does not see it that way.

"Anderson is a tough player and I'll have to take the ball right at him," he said. "He and David Edwards complement each other."

Edwards is able to get the ball inside to Anderson but can shoot the jumper if Anderson is not open, Flemons said.

Edwards averages 14.7 points per game to lead the Aggies.

Austin said his team will not be emotionally exhausted after close losses to Houston and Northern Illinois last week.

"It's getting towards the end of conference and everybody will give it a great effort," Austin said. "We just need to do the best we can on the road."

As of late, a major key to Tech's losses has been the rebounding category, Flemons said.

"Against Northern Illinois we got out-rebounded like by 24 or 25 rebounds," Flemons said. "They had a lot of turnovers but offset them with good rebounding."

The Raiders were out-rebounded 58 to 34 by the Huskies.

Freshman guard Chad Collins is expected to rejoin the squad after sitting out the NIU game with a deep thigh bruise.

Has Ford reclaimed NASCAR circuit?

LEN HAYWARD

Many people feel this time of year, otherwise known as the post-Super Bowl blues, is a time when not many sports are going on but this time of year means the coming of the opening events for the Winston Cup Stock Car series.

Davey Allison, son of the great Bobby Allison, won the Daytona 500 for the first time and also showed me a few things that might have changed in the world of stock car racing for this new season.

Allison, if many of you do not follow the series, drives a Ford and the past four years a General Motors Product has taken home the championship in the series. The last time a Ford won the Winston Cup circuit was in 1987 when Bill Elliot won.

The Fords, during Daytona and the most recent race at Rockingham, N.C., showed they have returned to the NASCAR circuit in full force. In Sunday's race at the Goodwrench 500 (there is that corporate sponsorship once again), Fords finished in four of the top 10 slots with the top two being filled by Elliot and Allison.

With the driving talent of Elliot and the engine building expertise of Johnson, the matchup should be virtually unstoppable.

During Daytona at one point, Fords occupied the first seven slots with the eighth being filled by of course Dale Earnhardt. Earnhardt, the defending champion, finished in a lowly 24th place Sunday at Rockingham, which is uncharacteristic of the driver. He will come on again later in the season, but the partnership of former driver/moonshine runner Junior Johnson and Elliot this season may just be a difficult challenge for Earnhardt to overcome winning another championship. To many this is a match made in heaven, but to the rule makers this is a match made in hell. Because if many of you recall, at one time Elliot was criticized for his so-called bending of the rules, while Johnson has been known to take the rules to their full extent. When rule makers found out these two were going to join forces, I think they grabbed a beer just to ponder what this partnership might do.

With the driving talent of Elliot and the engine and car building expertise of Johnson, this matchup should be virtually unstoppable on the circuit.

Johnson has been using the Fords for some years now and his other car driven by a young, up and coming driver Sterling Marlin may also surprise many fans this season.

Many of you are probably saying I am Ford basher, but I think it is about time that someone else had a shot at a title. Earnhardt has dominated for too long. It is time for him to be dethroned and GM to come back to reality.

But the one thing that will make this season special is the fact that this is Richard Petty's last season as a driver.

This man epitomizes stock car racing in the United States and it is a shame to lose him. But Richard has finally called it quits and he should go down in style with a ceremony at each race track. No one person has done so much for the sport as Richard Petty has done for stock car racing.

The big question now is, who will fill his shoes?

INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL PLAYOFFS UNDERWAY

Intramural basketball playoffs began last Thursday and are now in full swing. Most of the top seeds either began their All-U drive last night or will do so soon.

In the Open division, top-seeded TSF Arsenal takes on Run-n-Gun tomorrow night at 10:45 p.m. on SRC3 while other top seeds One Time was challenged last night by Gotta Have It and Above the Rest takes on the Homies tonight at 8:345 p.m. on SRC1, and Downtown begins their run against Generic tonight at 8:35 in the Women's Gym.

Greek Black action resumes last night with top seed KA 'A' Red, Sig Ep Red, and Sigma Chi Blue taking on SAE 'B', Farmhouse Green and Sig Ep Purple, respectively. The Red division continues this evening with top-ranked FIJI taking on Chi Psi 'B'. Other top seeds include Delta Sigs 'A', Phi Psi 'B' and Chi Psi 'A'.

Club play continues Monday for the top 16 club squads. The favorites in that division include Lench Mob, ODP, Guanajuato, and 5 Guys Named Bob. The Residence Hall quarterfinals are slated for Sunday with the Buschwackers taking on Pilsner Imbibies, 10th Weymouth challenging the Bud Men, the Loozers playing the White Boys, and the Bomb Squad taking on the Brew Crew.

Women's action resumes tomorrow evening although the top-seeds, 2 Legit, Beer Whiz, Fastbreak, Silver Bullets, Fillies, Old Timers and the Tri-Delts don't play until Sunday. The No. 2 seeded Hoosiers are off until Tuesday.

Play will continue right up until Spring Break with the All-U Tournament scheduled for the week after Spring Break.

TECH OPEN RODEO

The Rodeo Association at Texas Tech will be sponsoring their annual "Spring Play Day" this Saturday, March 8, at the Lubbock Livestock Pavilion. The books open at 11 a.m. and the open rodeo itself begins at 1 p.m.

The entry fee for Bareback, Saddle Brone, and Calf Roping will be $40 per event while Barrel Racing, Girl's Breakaway, Open Breakaway, Mixed Ribbon Roping, Goat Tying, and Bull Riding will be $30 per event. Team Roping will also be contested beginning at 8 a.m. with unlimited entries at 2 for $24.

Organizations and fraternities are encouraged to take part in the 3-man steer saddling competition. The steer saddling fee is $30 per team. For more information call Weldon at 7-44-6439.

ENTER NOW FOR INDOOR SOCCER

Intramural indoor soccer entries will be accepted next Tuesday through Thursday, March 10-12, in SRC 202. Men's and women's and co-rec divisions will be offered. Blank rosters may be picked up now in the Rec Sports Office (SRC 202). Managers need to complete the roster with team member names, addresses and phone numbers. A $25 refundable forfeit fee is also required at the time of entry. Remember that the earlier you enter, the better your chances of selecting your most preferable playing time. Play begins Monday, March 23.

MEN'S SOCCER TRYOUTS

The Tech men's soccer club will begin their spring tryouts today at 4 p.m. at the Women's Gym field (19th and Boston). The club is planning two spring tournaments at this time - a one day trip to West Texas State University in Canyon and a weekend trip to the University of Arizona Tournament in Tucson. For more information, call Mike Sizemore at 742-4499.

9-BALL POOL RESULTS AND 8-BALL DOUBLES ENTRIES TAKEN

Rec Sports hosted the annual 9-ball tournament at the University Center Gamesroom, last Thursday, Fe. 27. Twenty-five pool sharks competed for this year's title. The eventual champion of the consolation bracket tournament was Nguyen Tran, a Lubbock sophomore defeating Michael Steward, also a Lubbock sophomore in a best three out of five matches. Longtime competitor, Max Nguyen fought his way back through the consolation bracket after a first round loss to Damien Nguyen to become the consolation champion.

Next week Rec Sports will host a second poll tournament at the UC gamesroom, Thursday night, March 5. Entries are being taken at the UC gamesroom and the Rec Sports office, Room 202.

ROAD TRIP!! PERSONAL SAFETY FOR WOMEN: CHANGING A CAR TIRE

It is bound to happen sometime, and probably occur when you have no assistance. Learn where all the necessary items for changing a tire are and how to use them. Meet in the North entrance of the SRC tomorrow at 3 p.m., and we will proceed to the Commuter Lot. You may want to bring your own car to find where your jack, etc., are. There is no charge for this clinic.

OUTSTANDING BASKETBALL OFFICIALS NAMED

Recreational Sports would like to recognize seven students for outstanding service to the intramural basketball program. These students officials were found by the staff to be outstanding in appearance, mechanics, rules knowledge, and showed effective administration of the game. The officials were named at the General Meeting, Thursday, Feb. 27. The honorees were: Scott Doring, a Lubbock freshman; Rick Johnson, a Burnet senior; Eddie Ochoa, a El Paso grad student; Brett Patrick, a Clovis junior; Terry Rodgers, a Wichita Falls sophomore; Lance Vanover, a Woodlands senior; and Jeff Worst, a Carrollton sophomore.
