Boy looking to 'divorce' parents

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Squirring and chewing a gum drop, a 12-year-old boy went to court Thursday seeking a "divorce" from his parents in a case that could help give children more protection against parental abuse.

Gregory Kingsley, brown-haired and pale, sat in the back of the courtroom with members of the foster family he hopes to live with permanently.

His mother, Rachel Kingsley, cried as she denied allegations that she abused, neglected and abandoned him for most of his life. In the past eight years, Gregory has lived with her only seven months.

Mrs. Kingsley also denied that her fiance, Steve Hack, had recently beaten her in the presence of her two younger sons.

Guerrero resigns, remains in race

AUSTIN (AP) — Lena Guerrero, whose 1991 appointment to the powerful Railroad Commission was described by Gov. Ann Richards as a signal that times had changed in Texas, resigned under fire Thursday.

But on the verge of tears, she declared she would remain the Democratic candidate for that post in the Nov. 3 election.

Flanked by her husband and 4-year-old son, Ms. Guerrero, 34, apologized for falsely claiming for 12 years to be a graduate of the University of Texas.

"I have been in a hurry all my life. In my haste, I was reckless. I made mistakes, deeply serious mistakes," she said in a speech punctuated by applause from supporters who filled the the House chamber.

1992 VOTE POLITICS

Senate overrides president's veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Thursday to override President Bush's veto of the family leave bill, shining a campaign-season spotlight on an issue Democrats think will wound him come Election Day.

Supporters of the legislation conceded that even with the Senate's 68-31 vote, a House override effort will probably fail.

"Those Republicans who voted with us today chose families," said Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton's running mate. "Those who voted with the Bush-Quayle position chose to say, 'Read our lip-service to family values.'"

The measure would require businesses with 50 or more employees to grant workers up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave each year to care for newborn babies or sick family members.

Despite size, Tech lacks system funding

BY SANDRA PULLEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech receives no administrative system funding from the state, although Tech has more students and manages more campuses than other Texas universities receiving system revenues, Tech President Robert Lawless said.

"Texas Tech University and Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center are two separate institutions with a common president and board of regents," Lawless said. "There has never been a bill passed in the Texas Legislature to make a Texas Tech system."

The Tech and TTUHSC campuses in Lubbock and three TTUHSC regional academic health centers in Odessa, El Paso and Amarillo are governed by Lawless and the board. The regional academic offices obtain funding from the TTUHSC budget.

In addition to state higher education appropriations, the University of Houston system receives $1 million per fiscal year to maintain four campuses, and the Lamar University system is appropriated $800,000 per year for the maintenance of three campuses.

"The Lamar system has about half as many students as the Tech campuses," Lawless said.

"But they successfully had the Legislature approve their system of universities, therefore they get money to cover administrative costs associated with running several campuses."

Tech cannot receive system funding until the Legislature approves a bill to officially create a Tech system. Presently, there is no legislation pending to integrate Tech and TTUHSC into one system, Lawless said.

Running multiple medical schools and a doctoral institution is more complicated than running a system with no medical schools, he said.

"We actually have a tougher administrative job than the University of Houston because we have medical schools," he said. "We have an increased administrative complexity and more sites to run."

Lawless said he pointed out the disparity between Tech's state funding and system university funding to the Texas Senate Subcommittee on Higher Education on Sept. 11 because the committee makes key recommendations to the Legislature about higher education appropriations.

Lawless said a Tech system probably will not be created because Texas does not have the resources to fund another university system under the current budget.

Local man predicts Perot to re-enter race

BY KENDRA CASEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

When Ross Perot abandoned his presidential candidacy during the summer, speculation was raised as to whether he would stick to his decision.

Now, after more than two months, Perot is expected to announce his re-entry in the race for the White House next week.

Gary Bennett, the Panhandle region coordinator for the Perot campaign, said he expects the Dallas businessman to announce his intention to continue his campaign for presidency early next week. The United We Stand America organization, established as a support group for the Perot campaign, is circulating petitions requesting Perot's re-entry.

"I think he's got a better chance than George Bush," Bennett said. "And, the Democrats have been complaining that Perot is taking votes from Clinton."

Bennett said he thinks Perot will obtain support from a large sector of undecided voters and from the Republican and Democratic camps.

"I think you'll be surprised at how many people will move from Bill Clinton," he said.

Bennett also said he thinks the Perot campaign will attract a number of middle-class minority voters.

He said Perot has an economic policy that would call for expanding the tax base to continue funding programs such as social security and Medicaid, but said supporters would like to see a detailed, comprehensive plan from Perot.

"This guy is a capitalist, not a politician," Bennett said.

Perot will be able to accomplish more with Congress than past administrations because he is not affiliated with a party, Bennett said.

He also said Perot has not secured a running mate.

The intense bi-partisan conflicts on Capital Hill have impeded progress in the past, including during the Bush administration.

Third annual Students Day proves successful

Weenie roasting 101

SHARON STEINMAN: THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Craig Wheeler, the trade department assistant manager at the Texas Tech Bookstore, roasts hotdogs in front of the University Center Thursday for Students Day. The hot dogs were free to all students who dropped by. About 1,000 to 2,000 stopped by during the event.

After two unsuccessful attempts to attract a crowd to Students Day, the third time proved to be a charm. "This was the last chance," said Student Association President Chris Loveless. "We struck out twice already."

Jo Hutcherson, assistant to the Dean of Students and staff development committee chairwoman, said Students Day might have been discontinued if it received a low turnout this year.

About 1,000 to 2,000 students met with department heads from campus student services and took advantage of the free hot dogs at Students Day, she said.

"We definitely figured out how to draw a crowd," Loveless said. "Free food. We couldn't have asked for better weather, either."

Loveless said placing the event during homecoming week helped increase the number of visitors.

"In the past there was not much traffic, only about 15 students," he said. "There were more older students this year. We were hoping to see more freshmen."

Hutcherson attributed Students Day's success to the weather, location of the tables, free food and door prizes. In the past, Students Day was conducted during the spring semester in the University Center Courtyard and Ballroom. This year it was outside the UC.

Hutcherson said student service representatives gave away door prizes about every five minutes, totaling about 40 prizes.

Career Planning and Placement Director David Kraus said he saw four or five students last year and between 30 and 40 this year.

"If we helped one student, it was well worth it," he said.

Tech students gave New Student Relations Director Marty Grassel the names of more than 20 high school students to contact about attending Tech, she said.

Loveless said the student service fees are well spent.

Council begins search for manager, secretary resigns

BY LYDIA GUAJARDO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Lubbock City Council decided on a selection process for a new city manager during its meeting Thursday.

The city council members will send requests to search committee firms to hire a replacement for the position. The position became vacant Sept. 10 when Larry Cunningham resigned during a meeting.

The council was offered three options concerning the process of filling the city manager's seat. It could have developed a program using in-house staff, hire a search firm from the outside, or use a combination of the two.

The council will consider and evaluate firms that specialize in city government and the executive level.

"We have a tremendous task before us that should not be taken lightly," Councilman T.J. Patterson said. "This person will be here long after us and I will not feel comfortable unless I know that we took this in the right direction."

The council will select a firm by January 1993, if a firm is to be hired. Until a city manager is instated, interim city manager Bob Cass will continue to serve in the position.

During a discussion of the search for a firm, council members asked Mayor David Langston if they also should send requests for aid in the replacement process of City Secretary Ranette Boyd.

Germany sees rise in nationalism

BY STEPHEN ARMOUR
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

An upsurge in German nationalism, resulting from recent changes in Germany, is sweeping across the European country.

Siegrun Fox, an assistant professor of political science at Texas Tech, said the nationalism is a reaction to Germany's immigration policy and the destitute social and economic system in the former East Germany.

The unemployment rate in Rostock, the German city where much of the violence has occurred, is 13 percent, Fox said. It is 17 percent in the suburban areas around the city.

"The actual unemployment rate is twice as high, about 34 percent or so," she said. "This is especially true among the young people. They are the ones who have done the burning because they have nothing to do anymore." "It is a class issue," Fox said. "The middle class students have after-school activities, but the poor teen-agers have nothing to do. Sixty percent of the young former East Germans say they miss the social activities the previous Communist regime provided."

Many people associate nationalism with Naziism and anti-Semitism, Fox said.

"Anti-Semitism is not what is happening," she said. "The people have lost their ideologies and haven't found new ones yet. Thirteen percent of the people had anti-Semitic behavior before, so this is not being perceived as an anti-Semitic thing right now."

Lawrence Mayer, a political science professor at Tech, said German people tend to frame their idea of what it means to be German in terms of blood, soul and race.

"There is a deep history of the racial component of citizenship in Germany," he said. "The quintessential people are peasant workers and it has been from time immemorial. The Jewish people are the epitome of the antithesis of the folks."

Mayer said Germans still consider Jewish people a separate group of people, and want to physically separate themselves from any non-German person.

"Germans always talk of the Jewish problem and the Polish problem, but basically it's a German problem," he said. "The Jews make an obvious target. Germans have the attitude that they are pure and everyone else is part of a polluting problem. But the Jews are not the only ones who are subject to this. It happens to a variety of people."

Fox said a major problem for Germany is its liberal immigration policy.

"Germany has the most liberal immigration policy in Europe," she said. "There are a lot of foreigners in Germany because they are taken care of. For example, Germany gives foreigners 500 marks per month plus housing

Children deserve choice

There has been a movement within the last 10 years or so in which victims of sexual, physical or verbal abuse have come forward to tell horrifying tales of growing up in environments filled with perversion and sickness.

By telling their stories, these people are trying to heal unwanted emotional scars that have been left by family members. But while these people are trying to absolve their past and move forward with their lives, one boy is trying to prevent this vicious cycle.

Gregory Kingsley, a 12-year-old Florida boy, went to court Thursday seeking a "divorce" from his mother, Rachel Kingsley. Gregory said he felt unwanted and unloved most of his life and wants to live with his current foster parents.

Gregory charged that his mother abused, neglected and abandoned him for most of his life. Witnesses testified that his mother, Rachel, was an alcoholic, a drug abuser and a prostitute.

Although the term divorce is a bit sensational, the concept is a good one. By allowing children living in abusive homes to bring legitimate cases against their parents, the courts can aid in preventing further abuse by taking a child out of the dysfunctional home and placing him or her in a healthy environment.

Children are human beings too. Parents have the chosen responsibility of raising their offspring according to the parents' standards. Household rules must be understood and followed by every child.

But, parents who beat their children until black and blue bruises well up on their frail bodies, parents who sneak into their child's bedroom at night and sexually molest them or parents who consistently break their child's spirit by telling them how stupid and worthless they are day after day after day do not deserve the privilege of bearing children.

But there are no laws in America against having children. Sure, we have child protective services and the Department of Human Services, but the hands of social workers employed by these agencies sometimes are tied by paperwork and the American bureaucracy. And although the laws governing domestic violence have tightened somewhat, police officers often cannot take action in a domestic violence call.

By allowing children to stand up for themselves and plead their cases in court, we are allowing them to avoid the insanity of growing up in the presence of people who have yet to grow up themselves.

Practice what you preach

Barry Williamson shouldn't have cast his stone so soon. When it was discovered that incumbent railroad commissioner Lena Guerrero lied about her academic accomplishments, Williamson, her opponent, took the offensive and demanded that she resign from the position to which she was appointed in 1990.

But now it appears that Williamson's claim that he launched an investigation into misconduct in the U.S. Minerals Management Service, which he oversees, was an utter fabrication. As it turns out, the investigation had been going on for a month before he even found out about it.

Not only did Williamson lie about initiating the FBI inquiry into the misconduct, which involved employees hiring nude and topless dancers for parties, he also threatened to take action against the whistleblower who really did call the FBI.

It is one thing to tell a simple lie. It is quite another for Williamson to take credit for actions that he originally fought.

Once again, voters have been let down by a candidate who is more interested in promoting himself than telling the truth. By telling lies and engaging in two-faced tactics, Williamson has shown that he is just as unfit as Guerrero to serve in public office.

The behavior of the two candidates raises a serious question concerning the future of American politics.

The sorry state of American campaigning, which holds dear the strategy employed by Williamson, is reflected in all races for public office. The tactic is no longer to present the views that build up and reinforce public support for a candidate have been replaced by attacking the opponent's shortcomings. Candidates also play Russian roulette with skeletons in their own closets. Bring out the worst in the opposition and hope that the closet key is not found before voters cast their ballots.

This leaves voters with quite a dilemma as we face election day. Who shall we vote for? The candidate who lied about her education, or the candidate who lied about his job performance?

In examining the fitness of either candidate, things have never looked darker.

True separation of church, state

ANTHONY LEWIS

For 200 years America has been a country extraordinarily tolerant of diversity, one where people can think and speak and worship as they wish. But it has also been a country gripped periodically by hatred of religious, racial and political groups.

Religious intolerance flared in the Know Nothings, the anti-Catholic movement of the mid-19th century.

The Ku Klux Klan roused mobs against Catholics as well as Jews, with murderous effect well into this century.

Fear of unfamiliar foreigners led to restrictive immigration laws: the Chinese Exclusion Act of 1882, then the 1920 Immigration Act designed to keep out Jews, Italians and others from Eastern and Southern Europe.

As recently as the 1930s Father Coughlin preached hatred of Jews to a large radio audience.

Political paranoia goes back to the beginning of the Republic. In the 1790s, fear of the French Revolution produced a hunt for American "Jacobins" and French spies. We have had periodic hunts for supposed radicals ever since.

Thoughts of those two conflicting streams in American history — freedom and intolerance — were evoked by a visit to Bethany, a small town in the panhandle of West Virginia. It is the home of Bethany College.

The college was founded in 1840 by Alexander Campbell, a leading religious figure of his time. He was in the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), and Bethany College is still affiliated with the church.

But Campbell, with his faith, was also a great admirer of Thomas Jefferson and a believer in the idea that Jefferson introduced in this country: separation of church and state.

Campbell made it a rule that Bethany accept faculty and students of all faiths — and that the college not teach theology. It sticks to those principles still.

Bethany College was also the place where Sen. John F. Kennedy began to meet head on the anti-Catholic prejudice that threatened his candidacy for president. He spoke here on April 19, 1960, as he campaigned in the West Virginia primary.

When he was asked about his religion, Kennedy told the Bethany audience that he stood on the First Amendment's religious guarantees.

"When America chooses a president," Kennedy said, "it will be on the basis of his ability to fulfill the responsibilities of the office rather than on the basis of where he goes to church on Sunday."

Bethany cheered those words. But when Kennedy spoke them, it was not at all certain that they were true — that America would elect a Catholic president. His victory in West Virginia, a heavily Protestant state, put him on the road to overcoming religious prejudice.

But not far from Bethany there are reminders of the other America, the fearful, the intolerant.

Across the river in Ohio, during World War I, Eugene Debs was arrested for making a pacifist speech. He was brought to the West Virginia prison in Moundsville, charged with violation of the Espionage Act, convicted and sentenced to 10 years in prison: a monument to the paranoia of that age.

And 14 miles south of here in Wheeling, in 1950, Sen. Joe McCarthy began his career of demagoguery.

"I have here in my hand," he said, "a list of 205 known to the Secretary of State as being members of the Communist Party and still working and shaping the policy of the State Department."

History should make Americans worry when politicians try to arouse fear and hate. That is why I find the Republican campaign scary in 1992. It was scary when Dan Quayle denounced "the cultural elite," a code phrase for people unlike Us Good Americans. It was scary when Pat Buchanan called on the Republican convention to wage religious war.

The other night Bush went to Virginia Beach to join Pat Robertson, the minister who heads the Christian Coalition, at an evangelical rally. Robertson is a hate-monger. He wrote members of the coalition that the forces seeking equal rights for women wanted women to "kill their children" and "practice witchcraft."

What was George Bush doing with that professional hater? Would he go to a Klan rally for votes?

Waging war against the establishment

To the editor:
 We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, declare war against the political candidates.

We the people are disgusted with processes of campaigns, by which your country is turned into a three-ring circus of insults, irrelevant subjects, and a complete ignorance of pertinent issues.

No longer is a race for office a presentation of ideas, separating the candidates to choose the best person for the job.

It is now a flurry of backstabbing to find out who has slipped up the least.

The informed voter is no longer satisfied with knowing which candidate can spell "potato." Spelling is not a requirement of the vice president, nor is it an accurate measure of one's intelligence.

We are repulsed by hearing about who cheated on his wife.

This has no relevance to how someone can get a grip on the national deficit.

We are bored with talk of draft-dodging, family values and which wealthy snob can better relate to the poor and middle classes.

There is not a single politician that is in the middle income bracket, much less the poor income bracket. Our stomachs churn at the thought of another question of whose wife will have more input in the presidency, or who would "allow" their daughter or granddaughter to have an abortion.

We are not fooled by campaign managers, emotional party conventions, staged appearances, or election year promises.

Most of all, we will not be deluded to believe that no one man can be held accountable for all the successes or failures if his country or state.

Let all politicians, presidential or other, be aware of this war.

Earlier in the year, we displayed our disgust by demanding a third candidate.

This was not a fluke.

It is a warning and a threat.

If this trend of making our country a laughingstock does not stop, we will still be voting in November, but we will not be voting for you, George, Bill, and Dan.

We the people will win the war.

and Italy gives 140 marks only. The United States is not even that generous."

However, many foreigners immigrate illegally, which creates a conflict and fuels enormous clashes, she said.

"There is high unemployment, a lack of social belonging and the Germans feel the government cares more for the illegal immigrants than it does for the German people," Fox said. "The resentment builds up over many months. The government has taken such good care of the foreigners that they continue to come."

Mayer said Germans tend to react to threats of foreigners with a certain vigor that others do not.

"They are trying to throw out and exclude certain people," he said. "The Germans have a policy of being a refugee station and there has been a lot of reaction in the former Eastern parts of Germany. They were socialized under an authoritative regime and the assumption is that they would share the democratic values of the West."

He said there is a great disposition among the Germans to be receptive to xenophobic behavior, the anti-foreign behavior against non-Germans.

Last year, 250,000 people immigrated to Germany, Fox said. By the end of July this year, the same number already had immigrated to the country.

The number of immigrants is expected to double by the end of this year.

"The rise in nationalism is disturbing and the Neo-Nazis are exploiting the tension-laden situation by turning it into a nationalistic issue," she said.

"But they are a minute group. Out of a population of about 80 million, there are only about 40,000 Neo-Nazis, which is only 0.05 percent of the total population. I'd guess that of these 40,000, about 4,200 are so-called skinheads that are willing to commit violent acts."

Fox compared the situation in Germany to the Los Angeles riots earlier this year and the problems in Miami between the indigenous population and the foreigners who move into the cities.

Boyd said she enjoyed her years in Lubbock, and her resignation has nothing to do with Cunningham's recent resignation.

She has been a city employee since December 1974. The Lubbock position was her third job in city government.

The council also turned all responsibilities over to Cass, and delayed appointments to the Landfill Siting Advisory Task Force until the Oct. 6 meeting.

Among other items brought before the council were the appropriation of funds for the Lubbock Substance Abuse Prevention Partnership and Crime Victims Assistance Program. The programs are in their early stages and possibly will have funds set aside for them in the future.

Former faculty member, student leaves Tech $17,000

BY JULIE ANN ANDRES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech's College of Home Economics received a $17,000 gift from the estate and memorial of Jessie W. Bateman-Barns Narsutis, who died in June 1992.

The gift will be added to the original Narsutis scholarship, created in her name with the initial donation of $2,500 in 1989, to bring the endowed total to $25,250.

Mary Reeves, director of external relations for the College of Home Economics, said Narsutis was a "forward-thinking individual."

"A donation of this size gives our college an opportunity to increase the amount of awards to exceptional students, and also attract more outstanding undergraduates," Reeves said.

Narsutis, who was named a Tech distinguished alumna in 1989, earned her bachelor's and master's degrees from Tech in 1931 and 1941, respectively.

She earned a doctorate in philosophy at Cornell University in 1953.

Eleanor Woodson, a former Tech associate professor, said Narsutis was active in many civic and political organizations.

Narsutis contributed to the Denton

Area War on Drugs, the Arts Guild, Denton County Health Planning Council and many other programs in the Denton area and elsewhere, Woodson said.

Woodson said other universities also have received donations for scholarships in Narsutis' name.

Narsutis was a professor of home economics education and director of graduate studies at Tech from 1958-61.

She also was a professor of home economics education at Texas Women's University in 1961.

She served as dean of the College of Nutrition, Textiles and Human Development at the university from 1962-70.

Narsutis was named the Business and Educational Woman of the Year in 1983, and is listed in Notable Women of Texas 1984-85 and the World Who's Who of Women.

She also was a life member of the Lions Crippled Children Camp in Kerville.

Eligibility for the Narsutis scholarship is based on academic performance and leadership qualities.

The College of Home Economics offers 118 scholarships totaling $153,000 for 320 students.

IS CREATION REALLY IMPORTANT?

Dr. Henry Morris has written, "It is high time that people...recognize the foundational significance of special creation. Creation...is the basis of all real science, of true Americanism..., and of true Christianity. Evolutionism on the other hand, can be shown to be only a pseudo-science masquerading as science. As such, it has been acclaimed as the so-called 'scientific' foundation of atheism, humanism, communism, fascism, imperialism, racism, laissez-faire capitalism, and a variety of cultic, ethnic, and so-called liberal religions....The creation/evolution issue is, in a very real sense, the most fundamental issue of all."

The Bible says, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth...and God created man in His own image."

Tech alumna writes wildflower book, supports alma mater

By JENNIFER SANDER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Two things that tie in closely with tradition are schools and family. A West Texas family, the Kirkpatricks, have made Texas Tech a family tradition, and one member of that family, Zoe, has decided to give back to her alma mater with a book signing party of her first book at the Tech museum, Sunday.

Zoe Kirkpatrick recently has written a book titled, "Wildflowers of the Western Plains." She started her hobby of studying, researching and photographing nature about 25 years ago. The book was number one on the local best seller list in the hardback non-fiction category in early September.

The book features 48 families of wildflowers and 86 species. She said the idea for the book began to take shape about seven years ago, so she presented her idea to the University of Texas Press on a trip to Austin.

"They liked the idea, and we went from there," she said.

"They are the ones that published my book. I have always been interested in wildflowers and nature, and decided to write a book to finally get these ideas out of my head and into my hands."

The Kirkpatricks, who now reside on a ranch near Post, began their tradition of being a Tech oriented family when Jack and Zoe Kirkpatrick attended Tech in the 1950s. Zoe Kirkpatrick, a Lubbock native, graduated from Tech in 1953 with a degree in Spanish. She was also Miss Lubbock in 1953 and a member of the Tech fencing team. Her husband Jack Kirkpatrick represented Tech on the calf roping team and played quarterback for Tech, lettering four years from 1952-1955. He is also in the Texas Tech Athletic Hall of Honor. They are the parents of present Raider linebacker, Ben Kirkpatrick.

Ben Kirkpatrick is not the only Kirkpatrick child with a Tech background. Their son Kent graduated from Tech with a degree in theater arts. Another son Cliff was a member of the Tech Rodeo Team. Their son Will graduated from Tech with a degree in agriculture. Another son, Joel, attended West Texas State University, Kilgore Junior College and Henderson State University in Arkansas, where he played football.

"I have reared five sons, traveled innumerable miles, taken countless photographs and devoted many years to research and study, in the course of which, this book has evolved," she said.

Zoe Kirkpatrick has been invited to join Lady Bird Johnson at a book signing in October at the National Wildflower Research Center in Austin.

She said the University of Texas Press said her three-day book signing in Post was the second largest of any of their publications.

"I was elated with that news," she said. "The entire process has been overwhelming to me, but I am loving it. It is my hope that my love of the colorful flora of the areas will be apparent in this book, and because of it, others will benefit and appreciate the beauty that abounds here."

The Texas Tech Museum will host Zoe Kirkpatrick's next book signing party, from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., Sunday.

Promoter asked to drop Ice-T

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The director of Jack Murphy Stadium has asked the promoters of a concert there next week to drop rapper Ice-T from the lineup or keep him from performing the song "Cop Killer."

"We've got several hundred police officers working this event and I just don't think that's an appropriate song," said Bill Wilson, who was a policeman before taking the stadium job. "I'm not trying to be a censor. But I've had 27 years on the other side of the badge, so I certainly understand how they feel," said Wilson, who made his request in a letter Wednesday.

A 233-officer contingent from the San Diego Police Department will work with 1,200 private security guards at Wednesday's concert, which features heavy metal bands Metallica and Guns N' Roses. Ice-T and his speed-metal band Body Count is scheduled to open the concert. The president of the San Diego Police Officers Association, Harry Eastus II, called Ice-T's planned performance "a real slap in the face."

The lyrics to "Cop Killer" talk about killing a police officer with a sawed-off shotgun and include the line "Die, pig, die."

Telephone calls to one of the concert promoters, Avalon Attractions of Los Angeles, went unanswered on Thursday. The other promoter, Bill Silva of Bill Silva Presents in San Diego, was unavailable for comment, his office said.

The idea for the event came about through the Minority Advisory Committee.

The committee, an organization devoted to the retention, recruitment, and services for minority students, heard from several alumni who said that homecoming was not special for them.

"We had students come up to us and say they have nothing they can come back to," said Marlene

Minority students gather for first-ever Homecoming reunion

BY MIGUEL BONILLA
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech will sponsor its first ever minority alumni reception this Saturday from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. in the University Center Green Room. The event is sponsored by the Multicultural Center in West Hall and is part of Homecoming.

Hernandez, new student director for New Student Relations.

Hernandez and several Tech faculty members will speak at the event on issues that concern minorities.

Joshua Al Mora, assistant dean for minority affairs, will speak on recruitment, and Greg Jones, coordinator for the Multicultural Services Center, will speak on multicultural issues.

The reception is the first of its kind sponsored by Texas Tech. Hernandez said she feels this reception will be one of a kind.

"To me, it's ground breaking. Tech is very interested in having alumni know they have a place here," said Hernandez.

Cross country team looking for third win

BY JAKE RIGDON
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

After winning their first two meets of the 1992 fall season, the women's cross country team will travel to the Mountain View Classic Invitational meet in Montana this weekend.

The Red Raiders won the Abilene Christian Invitational on Sept. 11 and the Wayland Baptist Invitational last Saturday in Plainview.

The team's morale is high after winning the first two meets so "handedly."

"There shouldn't be too much of a problem about all the flying," Tech cross country coach Brenda Webb said. "We're giving the girls off on Friday (today) and they should be fresh for Saturday."

During the first two meets, the Raiders have been anchored by the running of sophomore Mandy Malouf, along with freshmen Louisa Tan and Jill Williams.

"We've been successful so far because of a total team effort," Webb said. "We have some real team leaders this year, especially Mandy (Malouf). She gets the team excited when needed, and then calms them down when she needs to."

Malouf

The girls attribute all of their recent success to the extensive off-season work program that Webb put them through.

"Over the summer, Brenda called us up to give us a workout," Tan said. "She kept us in shape and called us to make sure everyone was keeping in shape. She's really worked us hard and she's done a pretty good job so far."

The Raiders will be competing against some "tough" competition in Montana that they normally wouldn't get a chance to compete against during Saturday's meet.

"I know that coming in this meet there are, I believe, five teams ranked higher than us," Webb said. "But there are also several teams we can beat."

"I told the girls coming in that I know that we won't win this one, but that we can come in here and run well, and even surprise a few people. We'll use this experience to better prepare against the (Southwest) conference," Webb said.

After Saturday's meet, the Raiders face a tough upcoming schedule, starting with the Texas Tech Invitational.

"I think that our best showing should be at our meet here in Lubbock," Mandy Malouf said.

"But the rest of the Southwest Conference has some pretty good teams this year."

"I'm excited about how things have gone so far," Webb said.

"It's just a combination of things that have really helped the team get so far. We should be pretty good this year, but this meet ought to help us out, especially against some of the tough teams like Baylor."

Sports briefs

Raiders head for Cal Poly tournament

The 15th-ranked Texas Tech women's volleyball team will hit the road once again this weekend after a six-match homestand. The Red Raiders are traveling to the Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo tournament in San Luis Obispo, Calif., after winning five of their six matches during the homestand.

Tech is fresh off a victory over Texas A&M on Wednesday giving them their first SWC victory of the season and upping the Raiders overall record to 8-1 on the season.

The Raiders will be looking to keep a tournament string alive of finishing no worse than second in any of their tournaments. Tech won its first tournament of the season at Oklahoma, and finished second at the Red Raider Classic to No. 9 New Mexico. Tech will face the Cal Poly Mustangs today at 9:30 p.m. CDT, and will face the Pepperdine Waves Saturday at 3 p.m.

Men's Tennis team readies for ITCA meet

The Texas Tech men's tennis team opens the season at the Texas A&M ITCA Invitational this weekend. Play begins at 8:30 a.m. today in College Station.

The Aggies, Baylor, Texas Christian and Oklahoma will all be attending the meet, along with Tech.

The Tech singles lineup includes No. 1 Clint Graf, No. 2 Juan Gutierrez, No. 3 Thomas Cook, No. 4 Erick Guzman, No. 5 Shay Coker, No. 6 Jason White and No. 7 Will Tankersley. In doubles, Graf/Cook will play at No. 1, Gutierrez/Guzman will hold down the No. 2 spot and the No. 3 doubles squad will be Coker/White.

Women's tennis team opens year in Nebraska

The Texas Tech women's tennis team opens the fall season today at the Cornhusker Invitational in Lincoln, Neb. Baylor, Wichita State, Iowa State, Colorado, Kansas State and Drake will all be in attendance.

The Tech singles lineup will include No. 1 Jennifer Brennan, No. 2 Christy Davis, No. 3 Lynne Jackson, No. 4 Debbie Biswell, No. 5 Sheri Gilreath, No. 6 Elizabeth Ameel and No. 7 Renna Rhodes. Doubles teams are No. 1 Brennan/Jackson, No. 2 Davis/Ameel and No. 3 Biswell/Gilreath

Men's cross country team looks for first win at SMU

The men's cross country team will travel to Dallas today to participate in the Southern Methodist Invitational. The meet starts with the 800-meter run Saturday at 9:30 a.m. at Norbuck Park in Dallas.

Gabe Ruiz, Joe Perez, Bill Rush, Raffeg Ayyad, Ben Friedman, Dewayne Carter and Don Koohitz will run for Tech this weekend.

Baylor's Mims overcoming size disadvantage on way to becoming one of best backs in SWC

BY JAKE RIGDON
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

At 5-9, 186 pounds, Baylor running back David Mims doesn't look very imposing to anybody. But what he lacks in size, he makes up for in performance.

"I think one of the things that I have always respected him (Mims) the most for is his determination," Baylor head coach Grant Teaff said. "He is not a very large running back, and he has had to work extra hard to overcome his smaller size with great speed."

In 1991, Mims finished out the season with 852 yards and a 5.8 yard average per carry. His 5.4 career average per rush ranks third all time at Baylor, and his career yardage total of 1,542 is the ninth best in Bear history. Mims didn't always play running back. In fact, during high school, he was known as a better defensive back. He came out of Daingerfield High School with the aspirations to play tailback in college.

"Out of high school, I was recruited mostly as a defensive back. I played mostly corner and some running back. Part of the reason why I came to Baylor is because they were willing to let me run the football," Mims said. "I enjoy running the ball. You can pretty much do whatever you want."

Mims' transition into college football has been helped by playing with long time friend and roommate, quarterback J.J. Joe. "David and J.J. are very close friends and that has really helped both players tremendously," Teaff said. "They have both kind of grown up and learned the system together and at the same pace. There is no question that being close off the field has helped their execution during the game."

Now that Mims' career at running back has taken off at Baylor, he faces playing in the shadow of 260-pound fullback Robert Strait.

"Robert (Strait) and I are big buddies," he said. "We get along just fine. He blocks real well for me and he can run the ball as good as anyone. I think that Robert is the top fullback in the country."

Looking toward Saturday's game against Tech, Mims is trying for another big game. Last year, he had a career-high of 168 yards against Tech.

"We match up real well against Tech. They've got a lot of talent at the skill positions. They're a good team, but we should do well against them," Mims said.

So far in his first three games, he has rushed for 202 yards and has accumulated 112 yards receiving with only two catches. His 8.4 yard per rush is one of the top averages in the SWC.

"David is a complete football player. As I have mentioned several times before, David can hurt a defense from any number of ways," Teaff said.

Raiders prepare to break Homecoming jinx

BY LEN HAYWARD
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Homecoming games against the Baylor Bears have always given the Texas Tech football team fits.

The last time the Red Raiders played Baylor on homecoming was in 1990, when the Bears won by a score of 21-15.

Both teams enter Saturday's game with equal records, and this game may prove to be a live or die situation for both teams.

The Red Raiders enter the game with a record of 1-2 after a tough 16-13 loss to the Oregon Ducks last week. The Bears enter the game at 1-2 also, but won last week 45-10 over Utah State.

Kickoff is slated for 7 p.m. at Jones Stadium.

The Bears have won six of the last eight meetings, usually the opening conference game for both teams. Baylor holds the advantage in the overall series by a 17-15 margin.

"It's (the game against Baylor) always been tough," senior outside linebacker Mike Liscio said. "Baylor is Baylor and they are always picked in the top three in the conference."

The Raiders triumphed over Baylor last season during a rain soaked day at Floyd Casey Stadium in Waco.

Tech's defense, which gave up 222 yards rushing to the Ducks last week, will now face the Baylor option attack led by quarterback J.J. Joe.

So far this season the Bear option attack has racked up 614 yards on the ground and 481 yards through the air.

David Mims leads the team in rushing with 202 yards, while fullback Robert Strait has only 105 yards on 31 carries in three games.

"We've got to stop him by gang tackling him (Strait). He runs straight ahead," senior outside linebacker Ben Kirkpatrick said of Strait.

The Raider offense will be going against an inexperienced Baylor defense that has allowed 799 yards passing in the first three games.

Tech is hoping to improve its running game, which gained only 50 yards last week against the Ducks.

"This was the worst running performance we have had in I don't know how long," Dykes said. "We did a lot of self-destruction."

Kirkpatrick happy about Tech career

BY JAKE RIGDON
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Ben Kirkpatrick, an outside linebacker for Texas Tech, is starting to make a name for himself on defense. Being the youngest of five brothers has "toughened" him up and helped him with his game.

"All my brothers played football," Kirkpatrick recalled. "I of course played at home with my brothers and I watched them all the time."

"Growing up, I was always the runt. I got beat up on and picked on, but now I can say that I'm bigger than my brothers are."

He started playing football at a young age and continued to develop his game from there.

"That was the thing to do. When you got in the seventh grade, you played football, so I started from there."

At Post High School, Kirkpatrick played both linebacker and running back, excelling at both positions.

"When he was in high school, he led that district in rushing and receiving, and then led the district in tackles on defense," defensive coordinator Carlos Mainord said.

"With those kinds of stats and the kind of player he was, we just felt like we wanted him in our program."

"I don't think that I'm cut out for running back in the Southwest Conference," Kirkpatrick jokingly said. "I don't think that I have enough speed to play running back."

Choosing Tech was a fairly easy decision for him.

He was recruited by Tech, Lamar (before they dropped their football program), Abilene Christian University and West Texas State.

"Growing up so close to Lubbock, Tech has always been a place that I've wanted to go to. When they gave me a scholarship, I was more than happy," he said.

"Going here has just been like a dream come true."

Kirkpatrick was inserted into the starting lineup last season as a junior. Some of his fondest memories came from being in the starting lineup, although a few injuries have prevented him from playing more games.

"Some of the bad times have come from injuries," he said, "Also having to wait your turn to get a chance to play."

Kirkpatrick slightly injured his left ankle against Oregon, but says he will be ready to play Saturday.

So far this season, Kirkpatrick has 22 tackles including 11 solos and one tackle for loss.

Going to Tech has taught him many things, especially the value of patience.

"Once you come from high school, and you were a starter and everything on your high school team, and you come to college. You have to learn to be patient. Most people can't just step in and play, and that was my case," he said.

"You have to learn the ropes and pay your dues."

Going to college has been an experience for Kirkpatrick that he'll never forget.

"(College) has taught me responsibilities. But if I could do it all over again, I would. I have no regrets," he said.

"Ben is a totally dedicated football player," Mainord said. "I think that Ben does everything that is possible for him to be a good football player."

"Oh, Ben's a great person off the field," Mainord continued. "He's a good guy to get along with, and a very popular guy with the players. He's a great team guy, he's never been a 'me' guy, he's always been a team person."

Miss Lubbock applications now available

Applications are available for women, ages 17 through 24, interested in becoming the 1993 Miss Lubbock. The competition will begin in October with preliminary competition.

Preliminaries will be at 1 p.m. October 11th, at the Briercroft Academy, 1901 D 50th Street. Each girl will present her talent and have a private interview.

Finalists selected during the preliminaries will compete for the Miss Lubbock title on December 5th, at the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium. They will be judged in swimsuit, evening gown, talent, and interview competition.

The new Miss Lubbock will receive a variety of gifts and services as part of her award, including scholarships, a new wardrobe, make-up, and hair consultations, nail care, tanning and weight control services.

The winner also will receive an all-expense-paid trip to Ft. Worth in July to represent Lubbock in the Miss Texas Pageant.

For more information call Janis Geddes at 799-0336, or 747-5850.

Applications are available at: Varsity Bookstore, 1305 University Ave., "Hair by Daniel", 8001 Quaker and 1105 University Robert Spence School, 7200 Quaker #53 Briercroft Academy of Dance and Gymnastics, Briercroft Center, 1901 D 50th.
