Iraq announces cease-fire in zones

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP)—Iraq on Tuesday announced a unilateral cease-fire in the no-fly zones patrolled by allied aircraft, saying the move was a goodwill gesture toward the Clinton administration.

The ruling Revolutionary Command Council headed by President Saddam Hussein said there would be no more attacks on United States, French or British planes because of the inauguration Wednesday of President-elect Clinton.

The cease-fire goes into effect at 8 a.m. Wednesday (midnight Tuesday EST), the council said.

"The RCC decided the cease-fire beginning Wednesday morning as a gesture of goodwill toward the Clinton administration and through him the American people," the council said in a statement.

Sessions ordered to pay government

(AP) — FBI Director William S. Sessions was reprimanded for "a clear pattern of your taking advantage of the government" and ordered to reimburse the Treasury for improperly billing the FBI for personal expenses, according to documents released today.

Before he left office last week, former Attorney General William P. Barr found that Sessions had abused his position as head of the FBI to take personal trips at government expense and to install a privacy fence around his house for nearly $10,000 that did nothing to enhance his security.

Barr's Jan. 15 memo to Sessions outlining his findings was released by the Justice Department along with a 160-page report of the investigation conducted by the agency's Office of Professional Responsibility.

Barr said the "evidence supporting the report's conclusions is overwhelming and your explanations, where provided, are wholly unpersuasive."

Two wounded in Dallas shooting

DALLAS (AP) — A man opened fire outside a Dallas County courtroom Tuesday, shooting his estranged wife and a teen-age bystander before turning the gun on himself as dozens of others ran for cover.

The shooting was the second in six months in a Metroplex courthouse, renewing concerns over security measures in public buildings.

The 30-year-old man, Van Huynh, and Dang Lee, 26, were in critical condition at Parkland Memorial Hospital with single gunshot wounds to the head late Tuesday afternoon, said spokeswoman Michelle Raglon.

Rogelio Gutierrez, 16, was in fair condition with a gunshot wound to the left leg, Ms. Raglon said.

Locals celebrate presidential inauguration

by KAREN E. SNEAD
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Amid the ringing of bells, star-studded galas and firework-capped evenings, today's events in the five-day presidential inaugural celebrations will be one to make the history books.

Beginning before noon, eastern standard time, under expected clear skies, Bill Clinton will take the 35-word oath of office to become the 42nd president of the United States. Vice president-elect Al Gore's swearing-in ceremony will precede the presidential inauguration at 11:45 a.m., EST.

"This is the beginning of renewing our nation," President-elect Clinton said, addressing crowds on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial Sunday. "In this world and the world of tomorrow, we must go forward together or not at all."

Following the swearing-in ceremonies on the steps of the Capitol, Clinton will give a 45-minute inaugural address. Clinton and Gore will then proceed to a congressional luncheon in the Capitol.

At 2 p.m., EST, the Clintons and the Gores will lead the parade from the Capitol to the White House. The presidential party will cap the day's events with visits to each of the 11 inaugural balls scheduled.

The Lubbock Democratic Party will sponsor its own inaugural ball at 7 p.m. today in the Holiday Inn-Civic Center ballroom.

"We're taking time out to celebrate Clinton and Gore's inaugurations," said Brad Frye, Lubbock County Democratic chairman.

It will be a "communal looking forward" to what the next four years will be, he said.

Frye said he is excited about the new administration.

"It's a real opportunity for some real progress for our country," Frye said. "I have really high hopes for him (Clinton)."

Clinton's trek, and mounting $30 million budget, to the White House began Sunday morning with a tour of Thomas Jefferson's home in Monticello, Va. Clinton and Gore spent the rest of the morning in a question-and-answer session with area school children.

From there, the two families began their 15-bus caravan through the Virginia hills to Washington, D.C.

The trip commemorated the same 121-mile stretch President Thomas Jefferson made during his inauguration in 1801.

Clinton's entourage made several stops along its route, including one in Culpepper, Va., to attend an hour-long service at the Culpepper Baptist Church and a surprise stop in Warrenton, Va., where Clinton told crowds that he would not see LOCAL, page 4

Tech boosts chances for local DOD site

by JULIE ANN ANDRES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Lubbock officials say the Hub City offers a university willing to lend its expertise and assistance in landing one of the multimillion dollar Department of Defense centers.

"The very fact that Texas Tech University is in Lubbock, Texas makes us just that much more attractive as a community for one of these sites," Lubbock Mayor David Langston said.

Lubbock Economic Development Director Rod Ellis said a large and necessary factor in Lubbock's proposal for one of the four DOD finance and accounting centers is Texas Tech and the incentives the university has added throughout the bidding process.

"We couldn't have put this package together as well as we did without the assistance of Texas Tech University," he said. "The help from the (colleges) of architecture, business and continuing education made our incentive package much stronger."

"This is one time where the community really tapped the resources of the university and I think we worked together very well on it."

Langston said Tech's help with the bid package has been enormous.

"The College of Architecture has worked on the conceptual models that we displayed to the Department of Defense site and selection team when they were here on Dec. 7," he said. "The business college also has agreed to institute both degree and non-degree programs, and the College of Continuing Education has promised to help train the employees."

The employee training incentive Tech is offering in the Lubbock bid for the DOD center will range from basic to graduate skills on a credit or non-credit basis, Tech Continuing Education Director Michael Mezak said.

The employee training for a project of the center's scale will be customized to the needs of the employer and employees, he said.

"Our function will be to meet the needs as they become defined," Mezak said.

Unofficial enrollment figures show decrease

by SANDRA PULLEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech's preliminary spring enrollment dropped to 21,294 students for the first day of classes after hundreds of students were dropped for non-payment by the bursar's office Friday night.

Undergraduate enrollment decreased almost 3 percent from last spring's preliminary figures when 21,849 students enrolled. Spring enrollment from 1992 and 1993 fell below Tech's 1991 enrollment record of 23,443.

Spring enrollment also dropped from last fall's official enrollment of 24,285 students.

"It is hard to compare these preliminary figures with the official figures from last fall which were calculated after the 13th class day," Director of Institutional Research Gary Wiggins said.

Steve Kauffman, assistant director of University News and Publications, said enrollment is expected to increase from between 400 and 700 students before the 12th class day.

Graduate school enrollment increased to 3,519 students over last fall's preliminary enrollment of 3,337, Graduate Admissions Director E.F. Arterburn said.

Graduate enrollment probably will reach 4,000 students this semester because students still are registering for off-campus workshops, he said.

War not likely, military professor says

by KAREN E. SNEAD
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The probability of the United States returning to war with Iraq is not likely, Texas Tech Professor James Reckner said in the wake of recent U.S.-led air attacks over Iraq.

"I don't think it (a war) will happen again," said Reckner, a military history and naval science professor. "I can't imagine that as a viable option at this point."

Exactly two years after the Persian Gulf War began Jan. 13, 1991, the United States began launching attacks against Iraq in response to President Saddam Hussein's defiance of United Nations resolutions.

Reckner said the deployment of 1,100 troops of the First Cavalry Division from Fort Hood to Kuwait Jan. 13 may be purely symbolic.

"I think the troops' (deployment) is a symbolic intent for America to stop any further aggression," Reckner said.

"He (Saddam Hussein) knows that we are ready to act. We need to give Saddam Hussein unquestionably strong responses to his infringements."

"Talking doesn't get anywhere with Saddam Hussein," he said. "The situation that is developing is one where he will have to be controlled by periodic application of force."

However, Reckner said a major military operation to eliminate Hussein would endanger a number of American lives.

"There is no way a U.S. military could reasonably cause his ouster," Reckner said. "The logical course is to realize that he is going to be there, and persistently demand he follow United Nations resolutions."

Mark Somma, an assistant political science professor, said the United States created people like Hussein through weapon sales to other governments in an effort to retrieve dollars spent on oil.

"It's not wise for us to be dependent on that oil," he said. "We need to be more dependent on domestic energy."

Somma said dependence on domestic energy would require a national energy policy, which the United States does not have.

The United States does not have a choice about fighting Hussein because of the need for it to protect its oil supplies and the supplies of Japan and Europe, he said.

Tech, Lubbock community members gather to remember Martin Luther King

by KENDRA CASEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

During the 25th anniversary year of his death, the Texas Tech and Lubbock communities gathered last night on the Tech campus to share how Martin Luther King Jr.'s "I have a dream" message impacted their lives.

"It seems to me Martin Luther King is not the kind of human being who comes along every decade or century," said Mark Davidson, the pastor and director of University Ministries at Grace Presbyterian Church.

Davidson discussed King's message in reference to King's religious background.

He cited the civil rights leader's commentary stating religion should be concerned with social issues and should seek to change social conditions that hinder change.

"Dr. King was and remains a prophet for humanity. His message is universal," Davidson said.

Tech President Robert Lawless also discussed King's message, saying he served as a symbol for changes that have taken place since his death.

"There are things he would see and say we have made progress," Lawless said.

He referred to the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity and Fashion Board mixer "Party in the Projects" as an embarrassment to the university, and said he believes that although such incidents are not beneficial they serve as reminders that racism is alive and needs to be addressed on campus.

"That brought it home that we have a problem," Lawless said.

He called for change on the Tech campus in the non-violent spirit of King.

"Our first challenge is to change Texas Tech, to change this community. What is an education if all you

Hey, Bill, party smart

There's nothing finer than a good party. Not just a small gathering of friends to sit around and drink a few beers, but an all out gala event including live bands, liquor aplenty and hoards of people you've never seen before and will never see again.

An event such as a birthday, graduation, marriage or a bar mitzvah usually calls for a celebration of this sometimes unadulterated caliber. But the U.S. presidential inauguration?

It seems Clinton and his aides have concocted the inauguration of "our generation." The inauguration for the people.

This is no inauguration, it's a love-in tailor-made for the '90s.

We have news for Bill Clinton and his aides — some people don't want to see the likes of Madonna donning her pointed breasts and grabbing her crotch or Michael Jackson doing the latter at "their" inauguration, and they sure don't want to pay for it.

This inauguration, which is being compared to Kennedy's back in 1961, will begin after the swearing-in ceremonies at our nation's capitol. Let us not forget that being sworn in is really what the inauguration is all about; however, after watching your favorite talk show host devote a whole hour to the inaugural preparations and television ads for all the musical entertainment, it's easy to forget.

After being sworn in, the president and his entourage will be whisked away to attend 11, yes 11, "inaugural" balls with prominent figures from around the nation at each stop. Party-goers have been advised not to wear anything they value because it will be no doubt destroyed during the celebration.

Why don't they just bring the bands to the White House lawn, put about 50 kegs on the sidewalk and call it a night?

There's no question that this "celebration" is representative of our generation, but it's just not the way to celebrate becoming the 42nd President of the United States.

The presidential inauguration should be dignified with more sedate entertainers. There's nothing wrong with being traditional, especially if it earns respect.

Clinton was elected on the premise of hope and change. This celebration has left us with little hope that Clinton will act like an adult and change his style of celebrating while in the White House.

But we still hold out hope that his remaining 1,460 days in office will be a change for the better.

Play it safe with Hussein

The most visible dilemma Bill Clinton inherits today at noon is not the soaring deficit. It is not solving the nation's health care problems. It is not keeping the plethora of promises he made as a candidate.

The problem has a name, and that name is Saddam Hussein.

For the past week Hussein has been playing cat-and-mouse with United Nations' officials and President Bush. He has agreed to U.N. regulations minutes before deadlines expire but has placed conditions upon compliance. He has disregarded regulations affiliated with the U.N. inspection team's mission. He has attempted to lure allied planes into missile range by crossing the 36th parallel, the Iraqi border of the no-fly zone.

Hussein has taunted the U.N. and U.S. at every turn since the end of Desert Storm almost two years ago.

Last Wednesday the U.S. led a limited air strike against selected targets in Iraq. Then the political positioning and strategic verbiage broke free completely. Hussein has said the "mother of all battles" is not yet over and has threatened to fire on allied planes in Iraqi airspace, while Bush has held fast in demanding Iraq's full compliance with U.N. orders.

Now Bill Clinton enters the game cold, and the fans expect him win at all costs. Should he go for the Hail Mary pass or kick a field goal? Doesn't matter; just win, baby.

But, Iraq apparently fumbled the ball Tuesday, practically begging Clinton to recover. The government-controlled Iraqi News Agency reported Hussein's announcement of a unilateral cease-fire as of midnight Tuesday CST. Hussein said it was a goodwill gesture toward the incoming Clinton administration.

Bill, beware.

The INA also reported Hussein as saying the cease-fire "will continue unless the other side continues to shoot." Translation: "I rallied my people by depicting Bush as the bad guy. With Clinton in office I have to do the same to him, if I hope to continue defying the U.N."

No need for the Hail Mary here. It's first and 10 with two minutes to play, and the U.S. has all three timeouts left.

Liberalism? Look at New York

CARL TEPPER

Most of my Christmas vacation was spent in my original hometown of New York.

I couldn't be happier to see my family but while in the Big Apple, I came to realize a couple of things. First, I was safer in the Persian Gulf than in New York City, and second, I am now very proud to call myself a Texan.

I made a few observations while there, and I would like to pass them along to the good people of Texas Tech so that someday our graduated students will go back to their respective towns and not make the same mistakes New York has made, and if you do, I told you so.

New York has generally been controlled by the Democratic Party and liberals for as long as I've been alive.

As I was growing up, New York was still a relatively safe and affordable place to live and work. It was a proud city.

The Democratic Party still had a platform of common sense and decency. Political battles were fought over subjects such as the subway schedule and whether to give the sanitation department a raise or not.

Things have certainly changed.

The debates in New York today rage over how to get more tax money from small failing businesses and if the public school children should be taught about homosexuality in first or second grade. Meanwhile hard-working citizens are afraid of leaving their homes and even loyal city people are packing it up and moving to Florida.

This year, like every year, I scheduled a day off for myself so I could just wander around the city and take in the sights.

Never again.

I made the mistake of taking the subway. For a mere $1.25 I had the survival adventure of a lifetime. Every subway car had a homeless person begging for money. I'm not fooled by their sad stories. They're not helpless individuals with physical handicaps but mean alcoholics and drug addicts who would cut you as soon as look at you. The city used to get these people treatment and help, but it's not allowed anymore. Keeping them in a treatment facility against their wills is against their civil rights. Or so states the ACLU and some wacky judges. To be put away they have to harm you or someone else.

Columbia University is now in gang territory as is most of Central Park. The police (who are probably this nation's best) have few rights compared to the gangs and other miscellaneous crooks.

They can't protect you and, of course, you can't protect yourself because of the strict gun control laws.

Everything in the city has become ridiculously expensive.

Even a slice of pizza has gone up in price, but at least the pizza is worth it. I wish I could say the same for the necessities.

A tiny studio apartment in a barely decent neighborhood will set you back $1,100 a month. That's if you can find one. The trick is the barely decent neighborhood — they've become more and more rare.

As I wandered around my old stomping grounds I noticed many nice but empty apartment buildings. When I researched why they were empty I discovered it's because of rent control imposed by the former Mayor Koch's administration. The controls imposed connected with high taxes makes the buildings unprofitable and, therefore, they close. Once again a brilliant Democratic administration that promises to help the little guy but instead puts everyone in the street.

While watching the evening news I was admittedly a bit surprised as to how the anchor casually reviewed a single day's insanity. A woman was raped in Central Park in broad daylight, a cop was shot by a gang member (luckily she was wearing her bullet-proof vest) and local firefighters were arrested for arson, an act they had "allegedly" been engaged in since June.

This was all topped off by Mayor David Dinkins' state of the city address. After telling us the state of the city was "bad and broke," the highlight of the speech was his promise to help small business by setting up more day care centers.

I'm still wondering how setting up day care centers, another costly program, is going to help small business. After all who's going to end up paying for this? Small business.

Let's not forget the rest of the state. My home of Long Island had the highest taxes in the nation. This includes property taxes, state income taxes, federal income taxes and sales taxes. Sales taxes have become so high (ranging from 8.5 percent to 10 percent) that many New Yorkers now shop in New Jersey.

This practice has become so widespread that Gov. Mario Cuomo now sends patrol cars to New Jersey shopping malls to copy down the license plates of New York cars.

The owners of these cars are sent warnings to pay New York taxes on the items bought in New Jersey or face fines. For a man who claims to care a lot for civil rights he certainly has a lot to learn about privacy.

Even with all of the taxes imposed on the people of New York, the roads are still potholed, the public schools do little more than day care and sex education and the only way to get any service in New York is to commit a crime. Then at least you're kept warm and fed.

Mario Cuomo is blind to the consequences of his own policies.

These policies have forced hard-working people and profitable businesses out forever. If there is doubt to this then why are the New York Jet and Giants now based in New Jersey? Why did JCPenney, among innumerable others, move to Dallas? Why did I several years ago give up my New York roots and take up Texas residency?

And it's not just because I love hamburgers with jalapenos and Lone Star beer, although those were factors.

If you feel I have painted a bleak picture of the condition of New York then I am pleased because that was my intention.

But make no mistake about it, my little scribbling here is nothing to actually being there in the proverbial belly of the beast. New York is the perfect example of why liberal policies do not work no matter how compassionate or flowery they sound. Compassion and kindness are good things if directed toward the right people.

The right people are not the ones that have fifty sob stories, no job and no condoms, but the guy that's breaking his back working to feed a family and is saving to buy a home.

Something the Democrats seem to forget. Someone on a New York radio show was asked, "If you could give any advice to the new president, Bill Clinton, what advice would you give?"

I know what I would say. I would tell him not to take any advice from Mario Cuomo and steer clear of any policies developed and implemented in New York unless it has to do with pizza.

Discrimination, not harassment

To the editor:

Now that the anti-harassment regulations of the Code of Student Affairs have been found unconstitutional, the university should turn to confronting the real issue at stake in the matter of the "Party in the Projects" — not harassment but discrimination against minorities. Unlike provisions prohibiting harassment, provisions prohibiting discrimination are indeed constitutional, and the university has an obligation to enforce these. One such, already in the Student Affairs Handbook, directly applies. On page 12 under Part IV, Registration of Student Organizations, A, Conditions for Registration, is found the following:

"3. Membership in the organization shall be open only to students of Texas Tech University without regard to race, religion, sex, handicap, or national origin, except in cases of designated fraternal organizations which are exempted by federal law from Title IX regulations concerning discrimination on the basis of sex."

This provision is clearly pursuant to federal civil rights legislation, and indeed such is there cited. It is also pursuant to the University's Policy on Non-Discrimination. The University is obliged to be non-discriminatory by enforcing this regulation.

The university should apply this provision to the organizations involved in the "Party in the Projects" incident, revoking registration on the grounds that the provision has been violated — that the student organizations involved are manifestly not "open" "without regard to race ... or national origin."

No one can reasonably claim that these organizations are "open" when they sponsor such activities as this insulting and degrading party. It is logically contradictory to assert that organizations are "open," if they conduct activities which would of necessity repel those of different race or national origin.

No one can reasonably assert that people would join a voluntary organization that mocks their lifestyle. These organizations can no more claim to be "open" than could any group which mocked, degraded or insulted minorities so that none became involved with it. Certainly no state agency could be considered "open" if it sponsored insulting anti-minority displays.

A student organization might attempt to prove that it was open without regard to race or national origin merely by citing its own rule against discrimination (which may be vague and unenforceable). The regulation quoted above does not refer to any specific proof of openness; the most plausible interpretation of it is that organizations must be actually and according to reasonable tests "open."

The argument above demonstrates that the organizations in question cannot pass a reasonable test of openness.

To press the point to its extreme, under the precedent established in the misapplied, unsuccessful disciplining of the organizations in question, the university could be compelled to grant registration to a KKK group. Such a group could delete any stated membership restrictions, become registered and be entitled to have a racist float in the homecoming parade! That is the position in which the university has put itself by failing to come to grips with discrimination.

It is time to confront institutional racism by compelling student organizations to obey the Constitution and federal civil rights acts. Revoke their registration for not being "open" or apply lesser penalties, such as those originally imposed in this case, which will ensure compliance.

Tech radio station undergoes management change

by KRISTIE DAVIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Telecommunications senior James "d." Faust was appointed station manager for Texas Tech's campus radio station, KTXT-FM, after Mike McDermott resigned last fall.

"James was my right-hand man," McDermott said. "He'll do an excellent job."

The station began a paging system last fall in the event of problems at the station. McDermott said his pager never sounded because Faust always managed to handle any problems.

"He's a full-time, round-the-clock kind of guy," McDermott said.

Chad Kopec, a junior telecommunications major, replaced Faust as operations director.

Faust said the relationship he has with the staff has enabled him to move into the station manager position easily.

"I love my staff and I know they're going to do their job," he said. "I'll cut my salary for someone who's kicking some righteous ass."

Faust has worked at KTXT for three and a half years in sportscaster, sports director and operations director positions. He also has worked on national public service announcements.

Faust said he did not always aspire to be station manager.

"When I first came out here, I wanted to be sports director for the rest of my life," he said. "Radio is my first love and a love of the music has kept me in this business."

Faust said he does not anticipate major changes within the station or the format.

He said he would like to make the station "the new rock spot" for alternative music by playing more music from newer bands, as well as the more popular alternative bands.

"It's going to be a better mix," he said. "I love this station so much. I think I can keep it going in a good direction."

KTXT will offer a new talk show every Tuesday night this spring. Various disc jockeys will sponsor the show, which will consist of controversial topics in the news. Faust also added additional news and sports shifts.

"The additional shifts give more opportunities for those who want to do news and sports," Sports Director Oscar LeRoy said. "You can learn here and make mistakes and not get fired for it."

McDermott said while he was station manager he worked on remodeling the station and implementing new management policies to make the station more of a training facility. He said Faust now has the opportunity to make changes in programming.

"Everyone adds their own personal touch," McDermott said.

James Morgan, a senior computer science major and KTXT news director, said of Faust, "He's very capable and has plenty of experience. I expect great things from him."

Supreme Court rules against SWT in newspaper solicitation case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to let Southwest Texas State University restrict the on-campus distribution of most newspapers.

The court, without comment, let stand a ruling that said such a regulation violates free-speech rights.

Southwest Texas State, in San Marcos, expanded its anti-solicitation rule in 1989 to include all newspapers that contain advertising.

Distribution of such newspapers was limited to vending machines at five campus locations, a single "free expression area" or by subscription.

The Hays County Guardian, a free newspaper then distributed throughout San Marcos, challenged the university's policy but U.S. District Judge Walter Smith threw out the lawsuit in 1990.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last August said the school's policy on solicitation could not be applied to newspapers.

Clinton promises innovation; Senate approves cabinet members

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the brink of his presidency, Bill Clinton pledged on Tuesday to inject a spirit of innovation in government and said, "I desperately want to make a difference."

Nearly half his Cabinet received preliminary approval and Clinton filled out his State Department team to confront a rash of global crises.

"I face daunting challenges too great for any person's mind to comprehend or wisdom to judge or strength to meet alone," Clinton said.

At noon Wednesday, Clinton will recite the historic 35-word oath and become America's 42nd president. Fifteen minutes earlier, Vice President-elect Al Gore will be sworn in. Both men will begin the day worshipping at the Metropolitan African Methodist Episcopal Church.

Thousands of people paid between $100 to $1,000 for tickets to "a presidential gala" of entertainment featuring such stars as Elton John, Barbara Streisand, Aretha Franklin, Chuck Berry, Judy Collins and the Alvin Ailey Dance Troupe. The rock group Fleetwood Mac reunited for the performance.

Clinton began his day by paying solemn tribute at the graves of the two slain Kennedys, John and Robert, his political heroes. He placed a white rose at each burial site and bowed his head in prayer. About 20 members of the Kennedy clan joined him.

President Bush held a farewell lunch with Vice President Dan Quayle and said goodbyes to his aides.

Clinton invited past and present governors to lunch, and he spoke to them about his vision of the presidency.

"My goal as president will be to bring to this city a new spirit of innovation," Clinton said. He quoted Franklin D. Roosevelt, another former governor who became president in a time of economic trouble: "We ought to be about bold experimentation."

Reciting a long list of objectives, he said he wanted to fix the economy, create jobs, reduce the huge federal debt, control health care costs, improve schools and "reinvent our national government." He promised to eliminate unnecessary bureaucracy and work for campaign finance and lobbying controls.

"I did not run for this job just to warm the seat," Clinton said. "I desperately want to make a difference."

He said the government must find a way to experiment, to embrace what works and reject what does not. "It doesn't work that way in government," he complained. "We have to find a way to make the exception the rule."

Clinton said the nation must enact a health care program this year, but said it has to be linked with efforts to reduce the budget deficit. He said the states will have to shoulder part of the burden.

The incoming president asked that the issue of health care "be urgently placed high" on the agenda of the National Governors Association. "What should we do nationally, what should be left to the state and local levels? How should we work out the balance?"

Clinton urged the governors to call him when they think his policies are going astray. "We're going to open the door of the White House to you, but you've got to walk in."

TASP time creeps up on Tech freshmen; director encourages early registration

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

To avoid costly registration fees, entering students who have not taken the Texas Academic Skills Program test need to register by Friday for the Feb. 20 test.

"The consequences of not registering early for the TASP can be costly," said Fred Sallee, assistant director of undergraduate admissions. "The test fee if you pay by the 22nd is $26. If you wait until 10 days prior to the test, it's $46, and three days before the test the cost jumps to $65."

All entering students who have not taken the TASP and do not have previous college credit prior to Sept. 1, 1989, are required by state law to take the TASP examination if enrolled in a public state university or community college.

"The TASP test was implemented to assess the abilities of entering college students to ensure that they have the ability to do basic college level work," Sallee said.

The test is a requirement, and students who have not taken the examination prior to earning nine credit hours will be blocked from pre-registration until their scores are received by the TASP office.

In the past, some students have ignored the requirement and have learned about the TASP under unpleasant circumstances, such as being unable to attend Tech for one semester.

"The ones that frustrate me the most are students who tell me 'I'm going out of state, or transferring to a private school,' then come back to Tech a year later and want to be re-enrolled. We just can't do it," Sallee said.

The test is divided into three parts: reading, writing and mathematics. Students are required to achieve a minimum score of 70 percent in all three areas to pass the exam.

"If they don't pass a particular area, they will be contacted by the TASP office for advisement," Sallee said. "The TASP adviser will sit down with the student and work out a program of remedial instruction to help the student attain a passing score."

Sallee said many students entering Tech begin with a demanding course load that they are not ready for.

"For example, some entering freshman arrives, decides he wants to be an engineer and starts taking calculus and easily gets in over his head when not prepared," Sallee said. "Taking the TASP early helps to identify problem areas that can be rectified through remedial instruction."

Tech's failure rate for the TASP is not high. Fifteen percent of the students who have taken the TASP at Tech have failed a section.

"A community college typically has a 50 percent failure rate," Sallee said.

"If you fail one part of the exam, you are not required to re-take the whole test, just that section you failed."

Tech has 300 students working on TASP remedial requirements. To take upper-division courses, a student has to pass all sections of the TASP before earning 60 credit hours.

TASP registration booklets are available in West Hall, room 128. For more information on the TASP test, contact TASP assistant Alyson Brown at 742-1183.

Additional help in passing the TASP test can be received in the PASS center, located in West Hall.

soon," Somma said. "However, we can't do this indefinitely."

Somma questioned how long the United States can keep ships stationed around Iraq.

Neither professor said President-elect Bill Clinton, who has little foreign policy experience, will have difficulty in handling the Iraqi situation when President George Bush leaves office today. Clinton has supported Bush's actions in the Gulf and has not ruled out the future use of force.

"I don't think having previous experience is necessarily going to make a difference," Somma said.

Reckner said Clinton will be able to manage foreign policy with the advisers he has surrounded himself with. The true question will be a moral one.

The air attacks launched Jan. 13 against a dozen southern Iraqi missile sites began a week of bombing the Middle Eastern country.

Sunday's bombing included the downing of an Iraqi warplane over northern Iraq. Three Iraqi civilians were reported killed and 30 wounded.

The White House will be open to anyone who has tickets from 9 a.m. to noon.

The party spent the rest of the day attending events in D.C., including a visit to Clinton's alma mater in Georgetown and a symbolic walk across the Memorial Bridge.

Sunday's activities ended with a ringing of a replica Liberty Bell at the Lincoln Memorial. Quincy Jones led an all-star chorus, including Michael Jackson and Diana Ross, in singing "We are the World."

Tuesday's festivities promised an even greater show of star talent. The 52nd Presidential Inaugural Gala, broadcast on CBS, featured the reunion performance of Fleetwood Mac, along with performances by Barbra Streisand and Elton John.

To round out the inaugural activities on Thursday, President and Hillary Clinton will sponsor an open house at their new home at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

The White House will be open to anyone who has tickets from 9 a.m. to noon.

Figures

In the past three years the graduate school has placed emphasis on recruitment to attract quality students to Tech, Hendrick said.

"The increase in graduate enrollment is really offsetting the decreases in undergraduate admissions in terms of state subsidies," he said. "According to the formula funding, the state gives Tech more money for master's and doctoral students than undergraduates."

ager Nancy Tarwater said.

"Enrollment at the medical school does not change noticeably, but we do lose a few students who are on leave during the spring," she said. TTUHSC enrollment reached 1,061 during fall 1992, which was the first time enrollment surpassed 1,000 students. The fall enrollment increased 12 percent from the fall 1991 enrollment of 946.

STUDENT SERVICE FEE REQUEST 1993-94

The Student Service Fee Budget Review Committee will begin budget review discussions for the 1993-94 academic year after February 8, 1993. Departments or programs currently receiving Student Service Fee money must submit a budget request with twelve copies to the Office of the Vice President for Student Affairs by February 5, 1993.

Programs which might be eligible to receive Student Service Fee support and do not now do so from either the Student Service Fee budget appropriations or the Student Association should submit budget requests to the Office of the Vice President for Student Affairs no later than Friday, January 29, 1993. Forms for submitting requests are available in the Office of the Vice President for Student Affairs and the Student Association Office.

Fifties era, Buddy Holly memorabilia showcased at local drive-in

by JESSICA SMARTT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

In the words of Sherry Holley, "Don't say hello, say Hi-D-Ho."

When you step into the Hi-D-Ho, you are transported back into the 1950s.

A current brochure boasts that the restaurant has the largest display of Buddy Holly and '50s nostalgia anywhere.

The walls are decorated with memorabilia from the original drive-in along with glass cases filled with photos and souvenirs from the '50s and '60s. Articles and stories about Buddy Holly and some of the other musicians who perform at the Hi-D-Ho also are available.

The original Hi-D-Ho was opened in 1948 at the corner of Third Place and University. The building was round so that cars could cruise around it.

"It was always busy," said Hi-D-Ho owner Shannon Hughes. "They came from all over West Texas."

In the '50s the owners of the car hop installed canvas awnings for cars to park under which were replaced with metal awnings later.

In the late '60s the Hi-D-Ho had speaker boxes for people to order their food from, and in 1957 restaurant

I REALIZED THAT HISTORY HAD BEEN GOOD TO THE HI-D-HO. WE TRY TO KEEP THE SPIRIT OF THE '50s ALIVE.

Shannon Hughes

employees began wrapping the Hidy burger in foil with six tater tots, a tradition that Hughes has continued.

The Hidy burger is unique because of the secret sauce that Hughes learned to make when he was an employee of the original Hi-D-Ho. Hughes said he is the only one who knows the ingredients of the sauce, and he will pass the secret on to his son.

In the '60s both A&W root beer and Kentucky Fried Chicken were served at the Hi-D-Ho before building their own stores, Hughes said.

The Hi-D-Ho awnings were destroyed by a tornado that hit Lubbock on May 11, 1970, and the restaurant had to shut down.

In 1988, Hughes decided to reopen the Hi-D-Ho at its current location, 6419 University. Hughes said the nostalgia of the Nifty '50s car club inspired the reopening.

"I realized that history had been good to the Hi-D-Ho," Hughes said.

He said he also revived the Hi-D-Ho in order to serve nostalgic foods, such as purple cows and cherry lime shakes.

"We hope that we adapt to the changing times and prices," Hughes said. "We try to keep the spirit of the '50s alive," he said. "It was a good time."

Holley, the niece of Buddy Holly, frequently performs at the Hi-D-Ho, along with gospel singers and '50s-style bands.

Elvis impersonators are not uncommon at the Hi-D-Ho, and they perform in a large room in the back of the store.

Hughes also holds celebrations in honor of Holly, and classic car clubs often meet at the Hi-D-Ho, giving it a reminiscent feel of the 1950s, Hughes said.

Tech graduate offers advice, makes changes to help satisfy students' needs

by BETH RASH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Liz Toombs has worked as the assistant to the Dean of Students at Texas Tech for three years. She is involved with many aspects of the university, but the bulk of her duties deals with students who wish to withdraw from Tech.

This may not seem like a tough job, but after knowing that more than 1,400 students withdraw from the university each semester and more than 400 already have withdrawn for the spring semester, it makes her job seem more difficult.

Toombs said she tries to make withdrawing from the university as easy as possible for students. In her first year as coordinator, the withdrawal process was shortened from 12 steps to less than three. Before 1988 students would have to visit all of their professors as well as university offices such as Financial Aid and Housing and Dining before their request for withdrawal was approved.

Toombs said the most difficult part of the withdrawal process for her is adapting to state and federal law while trying to relate to the needs of the student.

Toombs said one of the most challenging cases she dealt with concerned the soldiers who withdrew to serve in Operation Desert Storm.

"Helping those kids gave me a different insight into their feelings than the average American saw," she said.

Toombs said she is making an effort to be more approachable to students. One of her goals for this semester is to remember more names and faces. She is in contact with students during the day through work, classes she teaches and student organizations she advises.

"I graduated from Tech," she said. "I know how students feel. If they try to make the most of their time here, they will be glad they did."

Clinger, Atkins look to neutralize Texas' inside game

by CASEY WESTENRIEDER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Lady Raiders will face their Southwest Conference rival Texas at 7 p.m. today in the Lubbock Coliseum, in a game junior Kim Pruitt said is the matchup Tech looks forward to all year.

The No. 16 Lady Longhorns (9-4, 3-0) are favored to beat No. 12 Tech (12-2, 2-0) for the SWC championship this year, despite the Lady Raiders' higher ranking in the current AP poll.

One key factor coach Marsha Sharp mentioned that is on Tech's side is the 6-foot-2 senior from Freedom, Wyo., Cynthia Clinger.

Clinger will have the job of defending against Lady Longhorn Cinietra Henderson, a 6-foot-4 senior from Duncanville, the Sports Illustrated Player of the Week who, against Baylor and Southern Methodist, shot 17 of 24 from the floor, 10 of 14 from the line with 30 rebounds, 16 of them offensive.

Clinger is playing the matchup by ear.

"I'm a little nervous," Clinger said about starting in tonight's game. "I'm definitely looking forward to it. We'll have to wait to see what happens. (Henderson's) got the edge, as far as strength, but if I can beat her to the spot then maybe I can pull her down."

Clinger has come alive in the past four games, earning the No. 12 NCAA spot with a 64.3 shooting percentage from the field.

"I went through a slump in Miami," Clinger said. "It got to the point where I realized it was more of a mental thing. I decided I can't let myself get so nervous all the time and I just have to play my game and do the best that I can do. That's when I started playing better."

Clinger's high marks on the court have given assistant coach Roger Reding something to smile about.

"We're a great club when she plays good," Reding said. "I'm glad for her because we've always known she was a great player. When we lost our three big players from last year, we knew Clinger was going to be the one we wanted to get the job done. Without a doubt, she's responded in a great way."

"I'm amazed every day what a great athlete she is for her size. She's a great player without a doubt."

Clinger has one weakness — fouls. And the Lady Raiders have a solution — Michi Atkins.

"Clinger's a good shot blocker," Reding said. "She jumps so well and she's got long arms and that helps her block shots. Sometimes good shot blockers get into foul trouble. We don't try to get her to play tentatively because if she gets into foul trouble, we can come in there with Michi."

Atkins, a freshman from Loraine, has appeared in every outing for Tech, shooting 53.9 percent from the floor. She also has made more than 60 percent of her free throws.

"I feel extremely confident," Atkins said. "I'm a little nervous because I've never gone up against a post player as big or as strong as (Henderson)."

But even with a great player like Clinger and Atkins, what will it take to beat a team like Texas?

Coach Marsha Sharp's answer is momentum.

"I don't think there's any substitute for momentum," Sharp said. "Especially in the big games. We have a lot of momentum going into this game, after beating SMU and Houston."

The Lady Longhorns have always been a thorn in the Lady Raiders' side. In fact, Texas had a 37-game winning streak over Tech until two years ago when Tech pulled off a victory in the SWC Post-Season Classic. Including that victory, the Lady Raiders have taken three of the last four meetings between the two teams — a tradition Sharp would like to continue.

The Tech-Texas game has piqued an interest in the Lubbock community. The only available tickets left are student tickets. Sharp contributes the game-hype to the rivalry.

"What a great matchup," Sharp said. "The people who won conference last year (Tech) against the people who are picked to win it this year (Texas). I think it's going to be a tremendous atmosphere for women's basketball."

Cowboys' assistant Wannstedt named as new Bears head coach

CHICAGO (AP) — Dallas defensive coordinator Dave Wannstedt was named coach of the Chicago Bears today to replace Mike Ditka, whose fortunes fell as Wannstedt's rose with the Super Bowl-bound Cowboys.

The announcement came two weeks after Ditka was fired following 11 seasons with the Bears. Up until the past few days, Wannstedt was considered the front-runner for the New York Giants coaching vacancy, while Washington assistant Richie Petitbon was a top candidate for the Bears.

Wannstedt becomes the Bears 10th coach. Ditka was fired Jan. 5 by club President Michael McCaskey.

The 40-year-old Wannstedt has been credited with rebuilding the Cowboys' defense into the NFL's best this season.

The timing of the announcement is a surprise as the Cowboys are preparing for the Super Bowl against the Buffalo Bills on Jan. 31.

But it is believed the Cowboys didn't want Wannstedt's job status to remain in question until after the Super Bowl.

The Cowboys' defense held opponents to 15.2 points and 245.8 yards per game in the regular season.

Wannstedt followed Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson from the University of Miami in 1989.

The Cowboys were 1-15 that season, but improved to 7-9 in 1990, 11-5 in 1991 and posted a 15-3 record going into the Super Bowl, including playoff wins against Philadelphia and San Francisco.

Tech hopes to end losing skid with win over Owls

by JAKE RIGDON
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

After losing two of its last three games, Texas Tech (8-4, 0-1) is attempting to improve in three different areas as the Red Raiders prepare to face the Rice Owls (8-4, 3-0) at 7:30 p.m. today at Atrium Court in Houston.

Those three areas include improved free throw shooting, less turnovers and better defensive rebounding.

For Tech to even its conference record, senior forward/center Will Flemons said the Raiders need to hold on to the ball against the Owls. Tech has turned the ball over 213 times in 12 games this season, including 19 times in the Raiders Southwest Conference opening loss to Southern Methodist Saturday.

"The biggest part of our turnaround has to be for us to cut down on our turnovers," Flemons said Tuesday before the team left for Houston. "Against SMU, we had 19 (turnovers) and you can't expect to win a game with that many turnovers."

In defense of the Raiders, Tech coach James Dickey said turnovers can be contributed to the sign of a young team.

"At one point, we had three freshmen on the floor," Dickey said after Saturday's loss. "We have a lot of young players that are going to play. We just need to grow up."

Freshmen Jason Sasser, Koy Smith and Lenny Holly all have received significant playing time during the course of the season. Sasser collected his first career start against SMU.

"Turnovers are one of the biggest things we need to work on," Sasser said. "That can really hurt you late in the game, and Rice is an excellent team at home."

Flemons said the Raiders also need to improve their free throw shooting and rebounding. Against the Mustangs, the Raiders gave up 14 offensive rebounds and made only 12 of 23 free throws.

Flemons

"We have to make our free throws down the stretch. It's a team effort, so we're all guilty," he said. "We also have to play better on the defensive board play. Against SMU, those second and third chances just killed us."

Grabbing those defensive rebounds will be tough for the Raiders, as they will face an Owl team led by senior center Brent Scott.

Dickey considers Scott, a native of Lansing, Mich., one of the best players in the Southwest Conference.

"Brent Scott is one of the top big men in college basketball," Dickey said.

Flemons said the Owls are relying more heavily on Scott's production in the low post, which will make getting good low post position important.

"He's a big man," Flemons said. "He's one of the best in the league, but as far as our comparisons go, he is strictly a low post player — and he's very good at it."

After last weekend's loss at home, both coaches and players feel a win on the road becomes even more important.

"If we go in and just take care of business like we're supposed to, not let the crowd affect us and if we don't get so emotional and stay level headed, then I think we'll have a chance," sophomore guard Chad Collins said. "The importance of this game can't be overestimated."

"Rice is one of the toughest Southwest Conference teams we will face, especially on the road," Flemons said.
