Clinton may offer troops to Bosnia

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Clinton administration said Wednesday U.S. troops could be sent to enforce peace in the former Yugoslavia if warring factions can negotiate a settlement. "Our conscience revolts" at unending accounts of murder and rape, said Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher.

Christopher announced the possibility of using American troops as part of an international force to deal with what he called "a cauldron of ethnic hatreds."

Other key provisions of a six-point administration plan included the appointment of Reginald Bartholomew, the U.S. ambassador to NATO, to assist international mediators forge agreement, and a pledge to tighten the U.N. trade embargo against the federation of Serbia and Montenegro.

If asked, Powell will complete term

WASHINGTON (AP)—Gen. Colin Powell said Wednesday he will complete his term as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff if asked by President Clinton, but would prefer to leave a bit early.

In a day of appearances on TV interview shows, Powell strongly disputed a New York Times report that his desire to retire early was reinforced by disagreements with Clinton over the new president's policies on homosexuals and budget cuts.

Powell, 55, is the nation's highest ranking military officer as well as the chief military adviser to the president. He has held the job since Oct. 1, 1989.

"I am not unhappy, I am not disappointed, I am not crosswise with the administration," he told CNN.

House leaders set weekend deadline

AUSTIN (AP)—Democratic House leaders worked Wednesday to get enough Republican votes to put a share-the-wealth school funding proposal on a state ballot.

The proposed constitutional amendment must win House approval this week to have a chance to go before voters in time to beat a court deadline for reform, said Public Education Chairwoman Libby Linebarger, sponsor of the proposal.

Her measure would allow some local property tax money to be transferred from wealthier to poorer school districts within counties and statewide.

If it isn't passed this week, Rep. Linebarger said, lawmakers will have to look toward a solution that doesn't require amending the constitution, such as school consolidation.

Senate proposes boost in parking prices

by SANDRA PULLEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

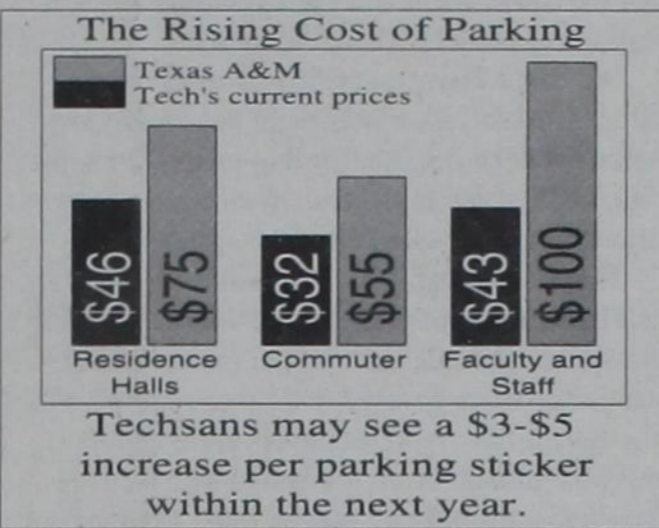

Parking price increases for Texas Tech students and faculty may be needed to finance campus road maintenance, Executive Vice President and Provost Donald Haragan said Wednesday at a Faculty Senate meeting.

Under the proposal, student residence hall parking will increase from $46 for the academic year to $51 in fiscal year 1994. Commuter parking will rise from $32 to $35 and faculty and staff lot parking will increase by $4 to $47.

Tech parking prices will continue to rise through fiscal year 1997 if the resolution is passed. Committee recommendations about the price increase will be submitted to the full senate at its March 10 meeting. The Tech Board of Regents will take final action on the proposal at its March 26 meeting.

Residence hall parking at Texas A&M costs $75 per year, faculty lot parking is $100 and commuters pay $55, according to a slide provided by Haragan.

"I hate to compare Tech to other universities, but our prices are considerably less than those at Texas A&M and the University of Texas," he said.

Haragan said other universities have constructed multilevel parking garages by using funds from outside investors, but Tech has not been able to attract a firm to build a garage.

The senate also discussed Haragan's recommendation to the Academic Council to uncup the number of hours a student could retake under the proposed grade replacement policy. The senate suggested at its Dec. 9 meeting that students be allowed to retake 12 hours.

Haragan also said he had reservations about academic bankruptcy, which was discussed by the senate

Dec. 9. Under the plan a student would be able to drop one or two semesters of courses.

A student's transcripts would show an adjusted and unadjusted GPA to reflect the dropped semesters. Courses taken during the dropped semesters would not count toward graduation and would be recorded on a student's transcripts.

"To me this proposal does not reflect what academic bankruptcy actually means," Haragan said. "Bankruptcy is supposed to allow a student who had a few bad semesters, left the university, then decided to come back

Hot on the trail

Newly appointed U.S. Sen. Bob Krueger, D-Texas, said Wednesday during a campaign stop in Lubbock.

appointed Krueger to the U.S. Senate seat in January after Lloyd Bentsen was named secretary of the treasury.

Krueger says he's committed to reducing deficit

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Americans do not look at their government as a value anymore, U.S. Senator Bob Krueger, D-Texas, said Wednesday during a campaign stop in Lubbock.

"If the federal government were a retail store, nobody would shop there," he said. "If it was an airline, there wouldn't be any passengers."

Krueger said he is committed to reducing the deficit and has personally taken a 20 percent cut in his salary as a senator.

Texas Gov. Ann Richards temporarily appointed Krueger in January to a U.S. Senate seat, which became vacant when Lloyd Bentsen was named as secretary of the treasury.

Krueger is running in the May 1 special election for the U.S. Senate seat.

"I only received one vote to get this position — Ann Richards," Krueger said. "I'll need much more than that in May to justify my position."

Krueger said he does not favor a unilateral intervention in Bosnia, but does support an international effort in the former Yugoslavia.

"Air power alone won't be enough," he said. "I think we have to commit massive ground forces and anything done has to be an international effort involving the United Nations or, at a minimum, NATO."

The other candidates for the Senate seat are State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison, a Republican, and representatives Jack Fields, R-Houston, and Joe Barton, R-Ennis. The filing deadline for candidates is March 31.

Gary Koops, spokesman for the National Republican Senatorial Committee, said several other people, including former Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, a Democrat, are considering entering the race.

The Republican Party is not endorsing a candidate unless a run-off election is necessary.

"We feel that we have three excellent Republican candidates who can beat Krueger in the race," Koops said.

Lubbock civic center to see name in lights

by JULIE ANN ANDRES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Lubbock City Council will decide at a meeting Thursday where to install a proposed $100,000 electronic marquee that will display Lubbock Memorial Civic Center's upcoming events.

The double-sided message center will display two rows of 12-inch tall letters and will be about 20 feet long and 4 feet 6 inches tall.

The city council will consider the placement of the proposed electronic marquee on a parcel of land, between Avenue Q and the fountain on Eighth Street, that is a dedicated public right-of-way.

The land is not subject to the city's zoning ordinance because it is a public right-of-way and is in an urban renewal area, city zoning specialist Jerrel Northcutt said.

The electronic message center will be the first of six civic center improvement projects. The other five projects are estimated to cost the city $100,000.

An expansion project will be considered after the $200,000 improvements are completed.

Money for civic center improvements is available through the refinancing of a debt service incurred from building the center, said Duane Lavery, a city administrative assistant.

The city uses a portion of revenues from the 2.25 cents hotel/motel tax to pay the center's debt service, of which payment will be completed in December during the 1994 fiscal year. A resolution passed by the 1992 city council allocates a portion of transient, or hotel/motel, tax revenues to civic center improvements, giving future councils more financing power.

"The city can allocate (tax revenues) however they want as long as it stays within the guidelines set by the state statute," Lavery said.

Gina Thompson, a city budget analyst, said that of every 7 cents collected from transient taxes, 4 cents will be allocated for center improvements. She also said money that would have gone to debt service can be diverted back to the economic level once the bond debt is paid.

Lavery said many civic center improvements are needed because Lubbock is losing large conventions to cities that can offer better facilities.

Panel discusses backslide of women's movement since 1960s sexual revolution

by SANDRA PULLEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Clinton administration may change the regression in sexual discrimination legislation that occurred under Republican rule, said panelists at a television seminar Wednesday night in the Texas Tech University Center Ballroom.

The panelists' discussion and audience participation were part of a KLBK television series called "Ideas and Issues." The show, moderated by KLBK reporter Lois Waraskevich, tentatively is scheduled to air at noon Feb. 20 on KLBK.

"Advances in the women's movement swing back and forth like a pendulum," said Karol Kelley, an associate professor of history. "For the past 12 years the pendulum has been swinging backwards."

Significant advances in social attitudes toward sexual discrimination have occurred since the 1960s sexual revolution, Kelley said.

"Fewer people are inclined to say that women are the second sex," she said.

"But I think that when men and women are hired, the management, which is predominantly male, looks for employees that are similar to themselves."

Kelley said discrimination is a historical problem that became prominent in the 17th and 18th centuries.

"It all starts with the Europeans, but they did not call it discrimination then," she said. "The men's work, which was out of the home, was considered more important. It was not until World War II when women were allowed to do men's jobs."

Laws such as the Texas Equal Rights Amendment and equal opportunities legislation are helping people combat sexual discrimination in the workplace, Lubbock lawyer Mary Alice

Getting to know your student senator

CARL TEPPER

I've already been hearing rumblings of the approaching student elections. I must admit, I'm not very well-informed about the subject. So poorly informed that I don't even know who my student representatives are.

Being a political science major, I'm usually confident of my knowledge concerning government. I can tell you the names of my state representatives, my congressman and even my city councilman, but for the life of me, I can't tell you the names of any of my student council senators.

At least I know that Chris Loveless is the Student Association president, but I really don't know what he does, or for that matter, what the Student Senate does, except for making a big show during the election in the spring.

I should probably be ashamed of myself for not being more perceptive, but after conducting a not quite scientific poll (which means asking around) I've discovered that no one knows who their respective representatives are either. Is it possible that all of the students I've asked are lazy and uninformed? Maybe I just have my classes in all of the wrong buildings, filled with those wacky arts and sciences type people.

How about this: Maybe, just maybe, our student council has a public relations-communications problem. Considering they're supposed to be "our representatives," this is a bad sign.

I finally did some looking into the Student Senate. Nothing serious, just some basic information. They're responsible for approximately $140,000 in funds and have an operating budget of more than $79,000. With the operating budget they sponsor activities such as luncheons and Family Day. They print, among other things, the WORD magazine and a housing guide. The $140,000 goes toward student organizations and special interest groups. Sound familiar? I actually think that it's fine to sponsor these organizations, but I would really like to see more money allocated for the good of the entire student population. If these specialty organizations start falling short then let them collect dues. If they don't survive in the free market, then they probably weren't worth the funding in the first place, unless they bring considerable prestige to Texas Tech. If we keep up this free-for-all, then I'll join the tiddlywinks club.

The lines around campus during the beginnings of the semester are ridiculous. During these times, more help can obviously be used in the bursar's office, financial aid and the grant and loan lines. I've heard that part-time help has been hired before with student funds to handle these legitimate gripes. That is to be commended, but also is the kind of actions that needs to be more common.

The commuter buses remind me of the Haitian Yacht Club, and the campus police are more interested in ticketing and towing our cars than protecting our personal and public valuables. Example: the statue of Will Rogers has been violated three times this year right in the middle of campus, and the police never see anything. But if you park in the wrong place, they move like the doughnut stand just opened. Our student government needs to act as the intermediaries between the students, "us," and them. We don't want to hear "It's not feasible," like the phone registration idea last year.

Another thing I would like to harp on is "leadership." This has been one of the most controversial years this campus has had in a long time. Wannabe Hitler Youth and Malcolm Xs have grown out of the woodwork. I would've certainly liked to see some legitimate, elected student leader come forward and attempt to settle this. Even if this means just serving as a non-biased mediator. I realize that politicians usually abhor controversy, but let's take a stand for something, before the reputation of this university is blemished further on another national TV show.

If a Student Association candidate wants my vote, then be a real leader. Strive for more than just resume material and find out what's on the mind of the electorate, before and after the election, and act upon it. Then don't disappear, as seems to be the current trend.

If I am inaccurate concerning any part of this column, I would be ecstatic to hear rebuttals from the Student Association. Something is better than the usual nothing.

Celebration turned sour

What was supposed to be a celebration turned ugly for about 400,000 Cowboys fans Tuesday after a riot broke out leaving at least 24 people injured and stores and vendors looted.

The Dallas manager of special events, Andrew Robinson, said Tuesday's violent celebration was the city's own version of Mardi Gras. "There was just too much emotion. Too much love for the Cowboys," The Dallas Morning News reported Robinson as saying.

Funny, when does loving someone or something mean it's OK to smash beer bottles in people's faces or repeatedly kick them while they lie on the ground from the first blow? Quite an expression of love.

Robinson's attempt to gloss over the city's lack of planning is infuriating. What is even more aggravating is the fact that the city did fail to adequately plan for an event in which violence was a potential.

In this era of no values, the concern for safety should always be foremost in our leaders' minds. Instead the Dallas city officials chose to ignore that our society is one of drive-by shootings, gangs and drug dealers positioned on virtually every street corner.

Dallas officials apparently thought 350 police officers patrolling the downtown area and 110 additional officers on call were more than enough to keep the crowd under control. Last year, more than 500 police officers ensured peace during the city's annual Texas-OU party, which drew about 75,000 people. Something's wrong with this picture.

Deputy Chief Granver Tolliver, who directed the police department's security planning, said the night before the riot/celebration he estimated that about 160,000 people would attend the parade — 85,000 more than the Texas-OU party, yet 40 police officers less were dispatched for the parade. Something's still wrong with this picture.

The fault ultimately lies within ourselves and our increasing love of values. Our children are learning that it is OK to take an eye for an eye, and it's OK to punish innocent people for any perceived wrongs inflicted by society.

Because we are a society that has become so depraved that people cannot gather anywhere without hurting or killing someone, our law enforcement leaders need to take proactive steps rather than reactive.

Stalkers of Texas beware

Texas has always been a little slow at things. It seems we're always bringing up the rear in lawmaking, but better late than never, right?

Finally, Texas has added to its penal codes an anti-stalking bill which prohibits anyone from harassing, annoying, alarming, abusing, tormenting or embarrassing another person with the threat to harm the victim, the victim's family or property.

Within the past two years, 25 states have added this law to their penal codes. Under the new law, stalking is classified as a Class A misdemeanor requiring up to 180 days in jail or a fine not to exceed $3,500. Repeat offenders would be charged with a third-degree felony and serve two to 10 years in a state prison, or a year in a county jail with a maximum fine of $10,000.

Women and men alike are antagonized by stalkers, but for the most part women are the victims of these criminals. Desperate pleas for peace bonds and extra security have passed the lips of victims of stalking for years, but little or no action was taken. Often times the victim was found beaten, stabbed or even murdered, before law enforcement agencies took their requests seriously.

One Austin woman's ex-boyfriend had been stalking her for months. He sent her letters, waited for her at lunch breaks and after work. Sometimes he was there when she arrived at home.

Sensing that her life was in danger, she asked law officers repeatedly to place a peace bond on him. Nothing was done.

A few months later, the woman was found on the ground having been attacked by the stalker with a claw hammer and stun gun.

"You think I could qualify for a peace bond now?" was the first thing she uttered after being carted into an ambulance.

It's too bad people have to live in fear, day after day for the safety of themselves, their property and family, from someone who knows their every move.

It's time the requests for action against stalkers be taken seriously. We need to put an end to the senseless harm that comes to victims of these sick individuals.

This new law will make a potential stalker think twice before terrorizing someone. Equally important, it will empower victims to have the courage to voice their fears without the worry that no one will listen or shrug it off as "an ex problem."

It's much more serious than a break-up. It's life threatening.

Greeks against Pikes

To the editor:

I have been quite impressed with the level of communication regarding the racial issues surrounding the Pi Kappa Alpha controversy. The letters that have been written on both sides show the length we still have to go to achieve racial harmony. I wish to contribute to the discussion.

I believe wholeheartedly that the Pikes had a fundamental Constitutional right to express themselves in the manner they chose to express themselves. While legally protected, however, their actions are still morally suspect. I refer not only to the "Party in the Projects," but also to the Pike's subsequent unrepentant attitude, as shown by their unwillingness to accept minor sanctions for their carelessness. The condescending, and possibly racist, sentiments that have surfaced since the infamous mixer should not be condoned without some kind of response by citizens who feel that our country deserves more than an us-and-them mentality. Therefore, I will participate in the protest against Pi Kappa Alpha during Pikefest.

I am an alumnus of a local fraternity and I have decided to wear my letters while participating in the demonstration. I encourage any member of a sorority or fraternity who feels that the Pike's actions have been wrong to do the same. What the Pikes have done unquestionably tarnishes every organization within the overwhelming white Greek system. The fraternities and sororities that do not actively oppose the Pike's derogatory actions will ultimately appear to have condoned such expression. Right or wrong, these organizations will be judged guilty by association. As representatives of their organizations, Greeks should be willing to publicly state that the message sent by the Pikes, whether intentionally or recklessly delivered, was inexcusable.

I will proudly stand with anyone who chooses to tell the world that the conduct which took place at a predominantly white mixer last October was wrong. Also, out of responsibility to an organization to which I once belonged, I will wear my letters in support of diversity and dignity among all people. I can do no less.

Robert W. Young

Texas Tech and Marge Schott

To the editor:

It seems strange to me that the National League can enforce sanctions against Cincinnati Reds owner Marge Schott for racial and ethnic slurs, but Texas Tech cannot enforce similar sanctions against the Pikes and Fashion Board for similar behavior.

There are not significant differences between these two situations. Both situations involve organizations which have rules and guidelines restricting the conduct of members of the organization's community (for the National League, the community involves all persons associated with the teams; for Texas Tech, the community involves all students, faculty members, and campus-related organizations). While all Americans are protected by the First Amendment right to free speech, there are obvious exceptions within organizations which are not deemed unconstitutional.

It might be argued that Texas Tech is not a private entity as is the National League; as a "state school," Texas Tech is part of the government. However, the military is also a part of the government, and its members are not allowed to claim First Amendment protection for actions which violate military codes of conduct. As a simple example, all military personnel must stand at attention when the national anthem is being played (if they are in uniform). They are not able to claim protection under the First Amendment for a failure to stand at attention during the national anthem, regardless of whether or not they are making a personal statement. The fact is, organizations can and do place restrictions upon the members of their communities. The officials of Texas Tech should realize this and deal with the behavior of the Pikes and Fashion Board accordingly.

Take lessons from a leader

To the editor:

I found it very interesting that when I went to the Lubbock Post Office today the teller told me that she still has lots of people asking for Elvis stamps, but that no one requested any of the Percy Lavon Julian stamps that were released on January 30 of this year. Perhaps it is because not enough people know Julian's story.

With the sensitive stories of racially insensitive activities by certain groups at Texas Tech in mind, maybe we need to hear more stories about people like Julian in order to appreciate what these people have done to celebrate their achievement in spite of many obstacles.

Also, lest we forget our past, it is worthwhile to review a few of the highlights from an article published in the Feb. 1 issue of Chemical and Engineering News on the story of Julian's life.

"Julian's story is one of a grandson of slaves who overcame prejudice, blatant job discrimination, and two bombings of his home to become a pioneer in the synthesis of medicinal drugs, an industrial research manager and eventually a millionaire entrepreneur."

When Julian was a youth, he climbed the fence around a Montgomery, Ala., high school that blacks were not permitted to attend and watched through the window as white boys experimented in a chemical laboratory.

When Julian left the South to go to college, his substandard education in high school forced him to take remedial lessons three times a week at a high school near his college campus while handling the usual college course load.

But despite this initial disadvantage and the need to work his way through college, Julian excelled in his studies. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and was valedictorian of his class when he earned a bachelor's degree in chemistry.

At that time, though, he was told that there was no need to obtain an advanced degree, for there was no future for him in an academic or industrial job. Due to his continued interest in research, however, he later went back to school and obtained a master's degree from Harvard University.

He had to travel to Vienna, Austria to receive his doctorate in chemistry. This still did not allow him to obtain an academic position, but by accepting lesser positions he was able to achieve a remarkable research career and make many important discoveries.

A statement on his career was printed in a Chicago Sun-Times editorial in 1950, after arsonists attempted to burn his home when he moved into a white neighborhood near Chicago.

"Would (perpetrators) refuse to take synthetic cortisone if they were wracked with the pain of arthritis? Would they forbid their wives the use of synthetic female hormones now abundantly available because of Dr. Julian's work? Would they refuse to use his synthetic phyostigmine if they were afflicted with glaucoma? (Derivatives of the compound now show promise for the treatment of Alzheimer's and are being tested in clinical trials). If they themselves were caught in a raging gasoline fire such as they tried to set, would they order the firemen not to use Dr. Julian's great discovery, chemical foam? This stuff saved the lives of thousands of American airmen and sailors after crash landings during the war. No! They welcome the discoveries of Dr. Julian, the scientist, but they try to exclude Dr. Julian the human being."

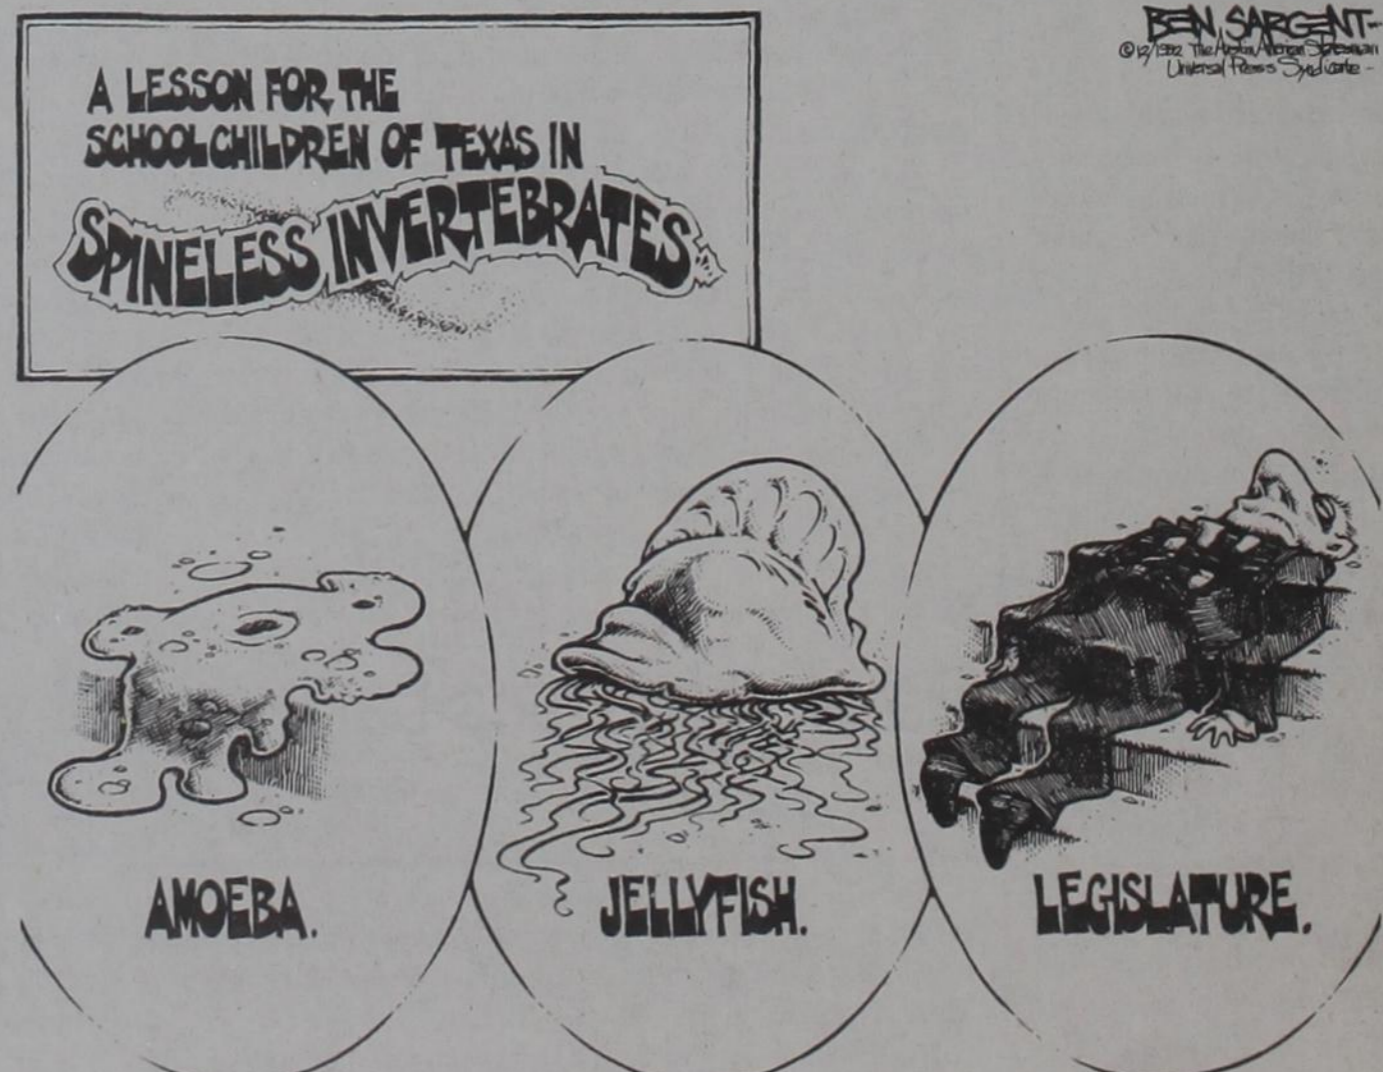

Julian went on to establish a non-profit research institute in conjunction with the University of Illinois to seek out potential talent among minority students and encourage them to add to the American cult of science. He was elected to the National Academy of Sciences 1973.

The following statement was made at the ceremony for issuance of the new stamp: "Percy Julian's path...is a tale of high intelligence, hard work, devout Christian faith and practice, firm belief that the status quo can surely be improved and a life-long commitment to the simple admonition, 'Go farther on!'"

Black students reception to help ease racial tensions

by KRISTIE DAVIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech's New Students Relations is sponsoring a black students reception at 7 p.m. today in the University Center Ballroom.

The reception's theme, "The Dawning of a New Era," should encourage students to put behind them the negative feelings caused by racial tension on campus, said Shannon McAdoo, New Students Relations admissions counselor.

"The aim of the reception is to give students a positive attitude about themselves and the university and to build a social and academic network," he said.

"I'm going to be encouraging student participation (at the reception)," McAdoo said.

Tonight's reception will be unlike any previous black students receptions, McAdoo said.

An extra effort went into organizing the reception because of the racial tension.

Students are asked to arrive promptly at 7 p.m. to register for door prizes and to have time to visit with about 24 representatives from black student organizations and student service organizations.

"Many students probably question why their tuition is so high," McAdoo said. "Student service representatives will have an opportunity to tell students what their offices are for and how their service can help students."

From 7:45 p.m. to 8:45 p.m. the students will divide into four groups of about 60 and will spend 10 minutes discussing topics relevant to students attending college in the 1990s.

Facilitating each group will be Larry Polk, a counselor at Richland College in Dallas; Barbara White of the city's personnel department; Don Rolfe, a Slaton Junior High School principal; and Joshua Mora, assistant dean of students.

The facilitators will speak for three minutes to each group about their assigned topic and then will encourage interaction and feedback from the group. The groups will have about 10 minutes to discuss the topics.

"I wanted to do something different this year, something more thought provoking," McAdoo said.

"I want students to feel like they had something to offer at this reception. They won't have time to get bored."

Some community leaders also are expected to attend, which will allow students to network with the community, he said.

The reception is expected to last until 10 p.m. and refreshments will be served.

a few years later, an opportunity to start over."

The grade replacement and academic bankruptcy policies will be discussed at the next Academic Council meeting.

The senate also amended a proposal from Haragan about course requirements for students given provisional admission to Tech. Under the amendment, provisional students will be required to take three hours of a general education requirement course and at least three hours of remedial instruction to gain fall admission to Tech.

Under the current program, provisional students are required to take 12 hours of college work with a 2.0 GPA before their initial fall enrollment.

One course must be in mathematics or English and at least one other must fulfill a general education requirement.

The senate amendment will be forwarded to the Provost's Council for further consideration.

Other senate discussion included:

- A request for more recommendations concerning the senate's action on an athletic policy.

- A report by Haragan that the senate's statement on academic freedom and artistic expression is in the process of becoming official Tech procedure.

Fero said the work force proposal will be achieved through the merger of the Texas Department of Commerce, the Texas Employment Commission and the job-training functions of the Texas Education Agency and the Department of Human Services. The union will create a Texas Commission on Commerce and Labor.

"It's a revolutionary plan," Fero said. "It's the first time in Texas history to put business and labor together.

Business and labor commissions need to be working together."

Derrell Rogers, regional director of the Texas Employment Commission, said he wants to review all the information regarding the report's recommendations before commenting on the proposed merger.

"If there's a way for it (the merger) to be beneficial to us, of course we will support it," Rogers said. "But I think it would be premature to comment on it now."

The Legislature will vote on the proposed recommendations in May.

Of the 1,000 recommendations proposed in the comptroller's 1991 report, the Legislature adopted about two-thirds.

Hispanic reception to provide meeting ground

Representatives from Texas Tech Hispanic student organizations and campus student support services will be available for questions during the spring Hispanic students reception at 7 p.m. today in the University Center Ballroom.

Marlene Hernandez of the New Student Relations office said the reception is aimed at student retention in the classroom and at Tech.

She also said it gives students an opportunity to meet with other Hispanic students and faculty members in a social setting.

The event is sponsored by the Dean of Students office, the Vice President for Student Affairs, the Counseling Center and New Student Relations.

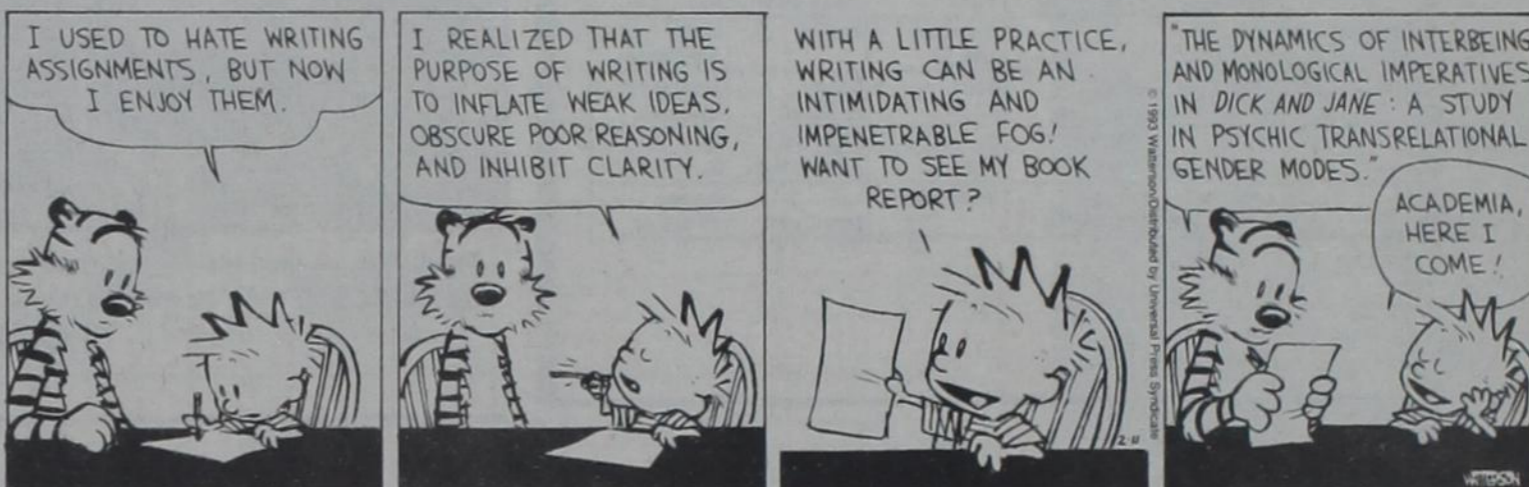

A dance will follow the reception.

McClarty said.

Tech Law School Professor Rodric Schoen said, "We tend to focus on women's discrimination, but men have also suffered discrimination."

"In some jobs, employers prefer women or they think a man would be inappropriate. We have to keep in mind that discrimination runs both ways," he said.

Schoen said men also are discriminated against in child custody suits.

"We all know that there are differences between men and women," Schoen said. "But there are no significant differences to justify discrimination in the workplace."

Sweden and Iceland have made significant advances in lessening sexual discrimination in employment, Schoen said.

Ugly Kid Joe show nearing sellout status for FMX Birthday Bash

by JENNIFER SANDER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Hard rock band Ugly Kid Joe is taking time out to help local radio station KFMX celebrate its 12th year on the air by performing at the station's annual Birthday Bash Friday night at the Depot's 19th Street Warehouse. Local band Smashing Atoms will perform at 9 p.m. and Ugly Kid Joe will take the stage around 10 or 11 p.m. Doors open at 8 p.m. Advance tickets for the concert sold out on Tuesday, but the station will print about 100 more that will be available at both locations of Ralph's Records and Tapes on Friday for $4.94. There will also be a limited amount of tickets available for $5.94 at the door the night of the show to allow out-of-town guests a chance to see the show. KFMX hosts a birthday party every year on Jan. 18, the station's actual birthday, but decided to schedule its party later this year in order for Ugly Kid Joe to appear.

"We had people calling the station on Jan. 18 asking us if we were still having our annual bash," said Wes Nessmann, morning radio personality for KFMX. "Every year we've almost sold out for this thing. It's a lot of fun." Nessmann said the bash usually sells out even with just one local band performing. The station gave away passes to 94 listeners to join a pre-party before the concert. FMX radio personalities will be on hand throughout the evening, hosting games and giving out prizes between sets.

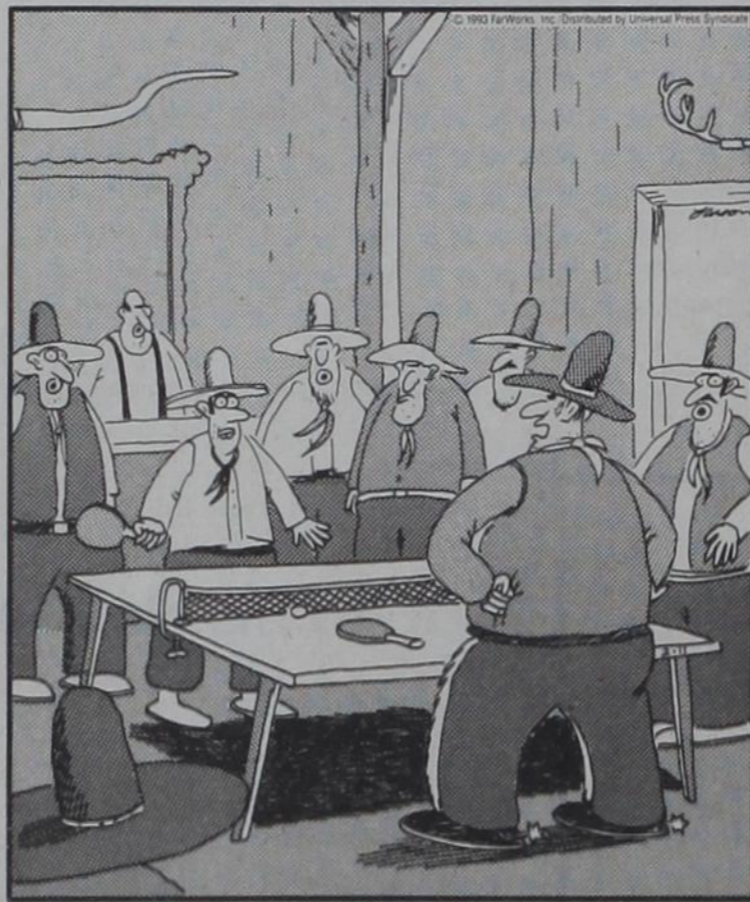

KFMX listeners were also asked to bring decorations, such as birthday banners, prior to the concert. The person with the best banner receives free tickets to the upcoming Def Leppard concert. Nessmann said KFMX employees had to "go through a painful process and bite, scratch and make threats" to get Ugly Kid Joe to play at their bash. "No, it really wasn't that bad," he said. "We had a lot of prospects, but they were the first ones we tried, and we landed it. It was just a long process, but it will be worth it. It's a fun night."

ROTC classes surpassing other universities; unusually large number of cadets assigned to regular, active duty

by BETH RASH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Take charge. That's what Brig. Gen. John N. Daly wrote to Cadet Capt. Paul E. Marion after his Army Reserve Officer Training Corps camp this summer. In a matter of months, Marion and nine other Texas Tech senior Army ROTC cadets will do just that. The 10 of 14 senior cadets have been assigned to either active or regular Army duty. This percentage is significant because it is larger than the number of assignments to duty of Texas A&M, a university known for its strong military program. "It's really, really rare that Tech has such a large number," Marion said. "We beat A&M and they're the military school. They always dominate." Of the 10 cadets, two have been assigned to Regular Army status. The selected two are Cadet Capt. Shea Russell (field artillery) and Cadet

Maj. Dale Snider (engineering). Eight cadets have received Active Reserve status: Cadet Maj. Jason Colbert (military police), Cadet Kristina Hudson (nursing), Cadet David Longbine (military intelligence), Cadet Maj. Lisa Love (air defense artillery), Cadet Capt. Paul E. Marion (armor), battalion commander Cadet Lt. Col. Chad Parrack (infantry), Cadet Capt. Jason Utzman (infantry) and Cadet Maj. Beth Wassum (engineering). The assignments were announced by the U.S. Army Accessions Board. The board makes decision regarding duty status based on individual cadets' grade point averages, personal preference of duty and the National Order of Merit List, which is a ranking list of all Army ROTC Cadets. Marion said Tech's performance in military science is outstanding. "This class is doing things that nobody has done at Tech before," he said. "The fact that we had so many people assigned to duty reflects very well on Texas Tech," Marion said.

Tripping Daisy brings retro show to Lubbock; predicted to 'make it big'

by JESSICA SMARTT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Depot will be rocking once again this weekend with the sounds of a Dallas band, Tripping Daisy. Tripping Daisy will be making its Lubbock debut at 9 p.m. on Saturday. Cover for the event is $5. Tim DeLaughter, vocalist and songwriter for Tripping Daisy, said he and his girlfriend came up with the band's name. The group wasn't named after a flower or someone doing acid. "It's about a girl and her ride through life, what she runs into and her adventures," he said. DeLaughter said many of the songs focus on the fictional character, but they are all about things anyone can relate to. All of their songs are originals. "We have an unorthodox way of writing them," he said. "We improvise, just get together and jam, the songs just happen. It's sort of a chemistry thing." DeLaughter describes the band's sound as "smoothing, melodic driving, high energy with some expression in it."

Trout fishing becoming more popular in Lone Star State

RAZOR DOBBS

Stocking trout in some Texas waters seems to be a popular project for a growing number of communities throughout the Lone Star State. Texas fishermen do not have to travel to New Mexico or Colorado for rainbows due to the 45 trout-stocked sites here in Texas.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department began stocking rainbow trout in 1966 in the tailrace areas of the Guadalupe River below Canyon Dam near New Braunfels.

When the program started in 1966 the trout population was 10,000 but skyrocketed to 256,000 in 1987.

By 1984 the trout program had grown to incorporate various state park lakes.

In the months of December through March, trout keep fishing enthusiasts on their toes until warmer months kick in, when better fishing starts for the states' normal game fish.

Besides purchasing a Texas fishing license you must buy a Freshwater Trout stamp if you plan to trout fish. The money generated from each $7 Freshwater Trout stamp goes to ensuring the continuation of the trout program in Texas.

The TP&WD recommend that ultralight spinning tackle, using 4-to-6 pound test-line and 1/32 to 1/8 ounce spinners, works great for landing trout. Artificial lures such as small spoons, feather jigs and flies also will catch trout. The most successful natural baits used for catching hatchery reared trout is cheese, whole kernel corn and salmon eggs.

It is recommended when trout fishing with natural bait to use a long shanked hook like a No. 8 or smaller. Two parks in Lubbock — Ribble on 58th and Ave. U and Higginbotham on 19th Street and Utica — are both stocked with trout during the winter months. The next stocking date for these ponds will be Feb. 17.

It does not matter if you are a "perfectionist bass fly fisherman" or a "laid back chicken liver blood bait catfish kind of guy," because Texas trout fishing embraces all of us into a unique additional fishery we can all enjoy.

For more information on trout fishing in Texas, contact the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Texas 78744, or call 1-800-792-1112.

Johnson's Super Bowl success spawns charity golf tournament

IRVING (AP) — A Super Bowl victory has spawned The Jimmy Johnson Classic on the tour of charity golf tournaments.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson, saying he felt the time was ripe after a Super Bowl victory, announced Wednesday the start of a non-profit organization to help disadvantaged children in the North Texas area.

The Jimmy Johnson Foundation for Children's Charities will "give back to the community some of the support shown us," Johnson said. The foundation will use a block of tickets to the Dallas Cowboys 1993 home games for kids with good attendance records in school.

Plans are to work with the local school systems to execute the program of incentives for good attendance in school. The tickets will be called "Jimmy's Corner" at the Dallas games. Asked if he will get a discount from owner Jerry Jones for the block of tickets, Johnson quipped, "Jerry might make me buy seat options for the end zone."

Johnson said the reason he decided to do the foundation was "since our recent success in Pasadena, my office has been overwhelmed with requests from the corporate community wanting to participate with the Dallas Cowboys.

Johnson will have his own golf tournament, "The Jimmy Johnson Classic," on May 3 to help raise funds. It will be played at the Hyatt Bear Creek Golf Course.

Lady Raiders roll over Cougars 88-70

by CASEY WESTENRIEDER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

HOUSTON — The Lady Raiders defeated Houston 88-70 at Hofheinz Pavilion Wednesday night with senior forward Sheryl Swoopes leading the team in scoring with 20 points.

Tech came out with the first points of the game before the Lady Cougars showed a strong side and eventually took a 22-13 lead, but it wasn't long before the Lady Raiders answered with a 17-point run. The Lady Raiders came back from the nine-point deficit, going into the locker room at halftime with a 34-27 lead.

The scoring run in the first half was the third-largest run of the year for Tech.

The Lady Raiders ended the first half hitting 43.8 percent of its field goals and 71.4 percent from the line.

"I didn't really feel like we attacked very well in the first half," coach Marsha Sharp said after the game. "I don't know the cause of that. A slow start is really uncharacteristic for them."

In the second half, Tech came out with Krista Kirkland hitting a three-pointer to get things rolling.

The Lady Raiders shot 49.2 percent from the field by the end of the game, while hitting 60 percent from the line.

Lady Cougar Margo Graham sat much of the first half on the bench due to foul trouble. Graham, who finished with just two points, left the game with 8:07 left after picking up her fifth personal foul.

Kirkland

"I really wouldn't say Margo made that big of a difference," Swoopes said of Houston's leading scorer coming into the game. "I don't think we played as well as we did at home. That was basically the difference from when we played Houston before."

Graham made only one of seven field goals and grabbed three boards before fouling out.

Michi Atkins and Janice Farris both reached career highs, with Atkins having 15 points and Farris scoring 14.

Wednesday was the eighth time in nine games where Atkins has scored in double figures and it was the second time she garnered a double-double, grabbing 12 rebounds against the Lady Cougars.

Daytona 500 just won't be same without 'King of Stock Car Racing'

LEN HAYWARD

Those of you who will watch the Daytona 500 by STP Sunday, take notice of one major person not in the lineup of this year's "Super Bowl" of Stock Car Racing.

Richard Petty.

Petty retired after last season's farewell tour of NASCAR's Winston Cup Circuit, and he now has turned to working on the other side of the fence as a car owner.

This man, known simply as the "King of Stock Car Racing," will be missed in the driver ranks, but he is a welcome addition to the owner ranks.

His name will no longer be a part of the 42-car starting field on Sunday, but his name will still be visible — on the car that he owns.

Richard Petty has meant more to racing than any other superstar has meant to any other sport. In the United States, the closest comparison could be hockey's Wayne Gretzky.

Someone may not know about auto racing, but they will likely know of Petty.

Even though he did not fare well the past five or six years, it was still great to see him compete every week in that familiar Red and Blue No. 43.

He was then, and remains, devoted to the sport he loves so much and to his family.

One of the things that makes Petty special to sports is his devotion to the fans.

A portion of an article written in The Tennessean, discussing the difference between Indy Car fans and Stock Car fans, states that "Stock car drivers will autograph your hat, tell you where the fish are biting and ask you over to their house for supper."

Even though this article was all in fun, that particular piece of the article is true. Most drivers in the stock car ranks are just "good ol' boys," who are personable and will talk to their adoring fans because they know it is those fans who pay their bills. Richard Petty went above and beyond this. He would stay behind his trailer for hours signing autographs after long days on the track, for anybody who wanted one. He would even take the time to talk to a fan, which is tough for many sports superstars to do these days.

Petty was one of those superstars who you felt as a fan you could relate to. Someone who you could talk to about anything, not just auto racing.

He indeed will be missed in the driver ranks, but as an owner he will add something new to the profession.

Richard, we loved you as a driver, but more than that we loved you as a person. The familiar cowboy hat and the dark classes will still be a fixture on the circuit, but this time he will be watching someone else do the work.

Petty ended his career the best way I think a superstar could.

On top of the world.

Tech assistant coaches each add own niche to team

by JAKE RIGDON
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Players such as senior center Will Flemons and sophomore guard Lance Hughes have helped carry Texas Tech to an 11-8 and 3-5 Southwest Conference record, but some of the other players and coaches often go unnoticed.

You always hear about the star players who take the time to fame and glory, players like Hughes, Flemons and the "James Gang," but rarely do you ever hear anything about the assistant coaches. Earlier in the year, head coach James Dickey said having "Doc" Sadler, Greg Pinkney and Robert Brashear helps the team function.

Senior guard Barron Brown said Tech's three assistants, along with first-year student assistant Bryant Moore, have given Tech an added edge missing in years past.

"Most of all, the coaches have been a friend," Brown said. "They're always there to help you out. They help everyone out in different situations — if you ever need anything you can call them up any time of the day."

"They do more than just coaching and scouting," he said.

All three have different backgrounds and all three add a little something different to the team.

After Dickey was named as Tech's 11th head coach, Sadler was given a call shortly thereafter.

The Arkansas native's first dealings with Dickey were during the 1982-83 season at the University of Arkansas. At the time, Sadler was an assistant alongside Dickey under then-Razorback coach Eddie Sutton.

"Really, my first responsibility has to be recruiting," Sadler said. "Of course I don't think any coach would be happy just being an assistant coach, everybody wants to head their own program someday."

Sadler

Pinkney

"Then again, I might be one of them that stays," he said jokingly. "But I'm more than happy where I am."

Last year's recruiting crop is one of his biggest accomplishments for Dickey's staff.

"A big positive would be getting those three freshmen here," Sadler said in reference to Jason Sasser, Koy Smith and Lenny Holly. "The assistants have a lot to do with recruiting."

After Sadler is first-year assistant Greg Pinkney.

Only 30 years old, Pinkney already has an extensive coaching background at the high school and junior college level.

During the 1990-91 basketball season at Howard College, Pinkney helped the Hawks fashion a No. 1 ranking along with a 32-2 record.

"I would like to bring leadership and act as a role model to this team," Pinkney said. "I want to be the type of person that people can follow and look up to. I just want to do everything I can to make coach Dickey's job easier."

Rounding out Dickey's coaching staff is third-year assistant Robert Brashear.

Brashear started out his coaching career at Tech as an assistant for two years before moving on as the team's restricted earnings coach. Part of Brashear's duties include recruiting, scouting and on-the-floor coaching.

"Robert has done a great job in our program," Dickey said of "The Bull" earlier this season. "He's a former player (for Tech), who understands the commitment to coaching."

Olajuwon scores 25 in 98-90 victory over 76ers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Hakeem Olajuwon had 25 points, 20 rebounds, six blocked shots and seven assists Wednesday night as the Houston Rockets beat the Philadelphia 76ers 98-90.

It was just the second win for the Rockets in their last 26 visits to the Spectrum.

The Rockets built a 16-point lead with 8:18 left in the fourth quarter and still led by 11 with 1:58 remaining. The Sixers cut the deficit to five at 94-89 with 1:00 left on a pair of 3-point shots by Hersey Hawkins, but the Rockets then scored four of the last five points.

Houston's last win at Philadelphia was Dec. 12, 1990. Prior to that, Houston hadn't won here since 1974.

The Rockets had lost two straight, but the victory was their 13th in the last 15 games. Kenny Smith had 17 points and 10 assists and Winston Garland added 12 points. Olajuwon's 20 rebounds and seven assists were season-highs.

Hawkins scored 25 as the Sixers lost their fifth straight and seventh of their last eight. Jeff Hornacek had 17 and Clarence Weatherspoon 14 for the Sixers.
