U.N. consents to punish criminals

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The five permanent members of the Security Council agreed Thursday that an international court should be set up to punish war criminals in former Yugoslavia.

Agreement by the United States, Britain, France, Russia and China virtually assured passage of the resolution, which was to be taken up by the full council Friday. British Ambassador David Hannay said he believed it would be adopted Monday.

One goal of the effort is to deter further atrocities in Bosnia and other former Yugoslav states by raising the possibility that war criminals will be pursued.

A commission set up to study the idea of a court blamed Serbs for the bulk of the war's atrocities.

Haitian soldier hijacks airplane

MIAMI (AP) — A Haitian soldier hijacked an American missionary group's plane at an airport in Haiti and diverted it to Miami on Thursday, but surrendered when the plane landed.

The hijacker had given his gun to the crew during the flight, a federal law enforcement source said on condition of anonymity.

The plane was carrying nine passengers and two crew members plus the hijacker and a woman hostage he had seized on the ground, a Haitian government official said. Everyone but the hijacker was American, other sources said.

Moments after the plane landed at Miami International Airport, the man walked out the door of the plane with his hands behind his head as about 10 uniformed officers crouched nearby. The man then laid down on the tarmac and the officers surrounded him.

Wages increase at public universities

AUSTIN (AP) — Faculty salaries at public universities have increased 2.1 percent during the 1992-93 school year, according to the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board.

Professors, associate professors, and assistant professors at the state's public universities are earning an average of $46,201 annually, the board reported Thursday.

During the 1991-92 school year, they earned an average of $45,254.

The average salaries for various positions in 1992-93 are: $57,548 for a professor, up 2.2 percent from 1991-92; $41,853 for an associate professor, up 1.3 percent; $35,746 for an assistant professor, up 2 percent; and $26,621 for an instructor.

SPARTAN chides Clinton's economic plan

Without balanced budget amendment, Congress won't bite spending bullet, Ward says

by SANDRA PULLEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

President Bill Clinton's economic plan is full of well-defined tax increases and vague spending cuts, said members of the South Plains Area Residents Taxpayers Action Network Thursday.

"We wanted the specifics of the 156 spending cuts Clinton mentioned in his speech. He talked about what he wants, but gave us no specifics," said SPARTAN Chairwoman Mikel Ward.

SPARTAN, an affiliate of the national organization Citizens Against Government Waste, stressed that government spending has to be cut before tax increases can be effective.

CAGW President Thomas Schatz said taxpayers were burned by bait-and-switch tactics during the 1990 budget catastrophe.

"While we applaud President Clinton's attention to the deficit and his pledges to cut spending, taxpayers want to see dramatic, tangible efforts to eliminate waste and downsize government before we start talking about any more taxes," he said.

"(Clinton) wants to use a butter knife on a job that calls for a meat cleaver," Schatz said. "He could carve billions more from the bloated federal leviathan without hitting a vital organ — enough to meet new budget priorities and still significantly reduce the deficit."

Ward said Clinton's proposed spending cuts have to take priority over tax increases before his plan can work.

"We always hear about the spending cuts before tax increases, but the cuts never come once the new tax increases are bringing in the money," she said. "We strongly believe that it is not possible to tax a nation into prosperity."

Ward said she had hoped Clinton would address the line-item veto and the Balanced Budget/Tax Limitation Amendment.

"Until mechanisms like these are in place, we have nothing to make (Congress) bite the spending bullet," she said.

SPARTAN member Keith Potts said

Clinton's plan contained some proposals that could help the nation's slumping economy.

"We're not saying this is a bad program or bad idea because it sounds as if it could be very effective," he said. "Spending cuts have got to be implemented before tax increases can be effective."

Taxpayers are not undertaxed, Congress simply is overspending, Potts said.

To fund the proposed Department of Defense finance and accounting center Lubbock is bidding for, Hub City voters approved a half-cent sales tax increase in January and soon will face a multi-issue election May 1, which includes the state's school finance bill.

Campus to celebrate student unity

by KRISTIE DAVIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech officials have designated today as "Unity Day," symbolizing the willingness of students, faculty and staff to combat racial intolerance on campus.

The day will help celebrate the joint resolutions of minority leaders and Pi Kappa Alpha and Fashion Board members over the "Party in the Projects" issue.

"Everybody has been affected by this (racial tensions)," Student Association President Chris Loveless said. "Unity Day is an opportunity for Tech students to get together and show we are committed to moving forward and putting our differences behind us."

Lubbock Mayor David Langston, Tech Board of Regent member Alan White, Loveless, and Tech President Robert Lawless' wife, Marcy, will speak at noon at Memorial Circle. Assistant Dean of Students Joshua Mora will be master of ceremonies.

Lawless, who is out of town, asked his wife to speak on his behalf during the ceremony.

"The healing process has begun for many of those who have been actively involved in bringing this whole thing to closure," Mrs. Lawless said.

By coming together as a university, all students can share in the healing process, she said.

The university flag will be raised during the ceremony, symbolizing the Tech community's commitment to resolving differences.

"A lot of people are committed to becoming part of the solution," Mora said.

Cisneros, Texas leaders pledge support for DOD

by JULIE ANN ANDRES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros pledged his support Wednesday to Lubbock's efforts in obtaining a Defense Department finance and accounting center.

Lubbock Mayor David Langston met with the former San Antonio mayor during a three-day lobbying effort in Washington, D.C., for the multimillion dollar center. Lubbock City Council members and community leaders returned late Wednesday night after attending about 38 meetings in the nation's capital this week.

The mayor's meeting with Cisneros was arranged by former Lubbock mayor Alan Henry.

U.S. Sen. Bob Krueger, D-Texas, also arranged for members of the Lubbock group to meet with assistants and under-secretaries.

Councilman Alex "Ty" Cooke said the contingent was met by a Texas delegation ready to help, regardless of political affiliation.

"When Texas came up, everyone on the Texas delegation was very cohesive," he said.

New Mexico's leaders also are helping back Lubbock's push for a DOD center, Cooke said.

The trip was funded by GROPAAC with the $14,000 in donations left over from the half-cent sales tax's campaign fund.

Cooke said because the council decided to not hire a lobbyist, money is being saved lobbying on their own.

"We've chosen to take this path," he said. "I don't know that we've accomplished anything except to let (the Pentagon) know that we're prepared for the DOD to come to Lubbock."

Twenty cities nationwide made the Pentagon's short list in November for final consideration, but Tuesday was the deadline for cities to prove their financial feasibility.

Denver's bid fell through because of funding problems.

Cooke said Denver is the only city known to be off the list.

The $67 million facility, funded by a half-cent sales tax increase approved by voters in January, must be built by 1995 if Lubbock is chosen.

The Pentagon will release final selections March 16.

Former congressman indicted for bribery

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Former congressman Albert Bustamante and his wife were indicted Thursday by a federal grand jury that alleges Bustamante accepted bribes and illegal gifts in return for using his influence in Congress.

The 10-count indictment comes after more than 3 1/2 years of grand jury investigation into influence-peddling allegations.

The indictment alleges Bustamante accepted money from a food service contract company, a realty company connected with the politically powerful Jaffe family and the San Antonio law firm of Heard, Goggin, Blair & Williams.

Bustamante, a Democrat, lost the 23rd Congressional seat to Republican Henry Bonilla in November.

Bustamante is accused of assisting San Antonio-based Falcon Food and Management Services Inc. in getting a renewal of its contract to provide meals at Lackland Air Force Base.

Can't keep a good man down

Lubbock honors Will Flemons

by JAKE RIGDON
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

If you see a hulking man wearing a huge black toboggan enter a green, 1976 Cadillac, don't be alarmed. It's just Will Flemons.

But if you're on the opposing team and Texas Tech's 6-7 senior center is mauling his way toward you, then there is reason to fear.

"That's just Will," junior forward Allen Austin said. "He's always smiling and he's always very upbeat. Even some of the other Southwest Conference players will say the same of him."

"He's one of the toughest and best players in the Southwest Conference," junior forward Brad Dale said.

In celebration of Flemons' stellar career at Tech, Saturday has been designated by the city as Will Flemons Day. He also will be honored Saturday during the halftime of the Tech-Rice game, which will be played at 2 p.m. in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum, for his accomplishments on and off the court.

"This is the first time Texas Tech has done something like this, so for it to happen to me, it's pretty exciting," Flemons said. "I realize that this is for my accomplishments on and off the floor. You can't be a good basketball player but then be a rotten person — or at least you shouldn't."

More importantly for Flemons, he is also nearing his graduation. He said graduating may be his biggest accomplishment.

"The thing I'm really concentrating on now is just

A tribute to Will Flemons

Texas Tech's most famous Will sits unmoving atop a bronzed horse east of Memorial Circle, but the second-most famous Will has had an honor bestowed upon him that Rogers never received. Saturday has been proclaimed Will Flemons Day by Tech and the city in honor of arguably the greatest basketball player ever to pass through the men's athletic program.

Just a few of the accolades Flemons has captured during his Tech career: third place on Tech's career rebounding list with 821; seventh place on Tech's career scoring list with 1,425; averaging 16.6 points and 9.5 rebounds per game for his career; SWC Freshman of the Year in 1989-90; SWC Player of the Year in 1991-92. Keep in mind that Flemons accomplished all of this without playing most of the 1989-90 season due to a broken foot.

But the Will Flemons who is being honored Saturday is much more than a basketball player. Saturday's Will Flemons is the man underneath the No. 44.

The former Paducah Dragon is the embodiment of small-town values that the rest of America looks at quizzically, thinking, "Huh, what a bunch of yokels." But what are those values that the rest of America find so odd? Honesty? Integrity? Discipline? Respect? A hard-working attitude? Contentment?

These are values that the rest of America should strive to reach, not look down upon. To see why these are admirable qualities, just look at Flemons.

He has an abundance of these qualities. He enjoys life, school and basketball. If he didn't, why would he be smiling all the time?

"A class act," "a leader on and off the court," "an outstanding role model" and "an positive influence" are all statements that have been uttered by coaches, officials, athletic directors, players, students and friends about Flemons. That is high praise we all desire.

The current racial climate of Tech is evidence enough of the need for such enviable attributes — not just in athletes, but in students, faculty, administrators, people. Flemons stands as a mighty soldier who we can all look up to and admire.

The rest of the world can continue imitating Michael Jordan. As for us, we wanna be like Will.

Breaking the circle

The circle is regarded as the perfect union of lines, with no beginning and no end. The circle also symbolizes unity, which is defined as the combination of many into one cohesive unit.

Such is the notion behind today's ceremony, otherwise known as Unity Day. The administration, more specifically the Dean of Students Office, has taken this symbolic step to create a more amicable campus atmosphere.

"It is time to begin the healing process and go forward with positive change," reads the flier passed out to individuals and organizations.

OK, OK, so it sounds cliché, cheesy, elementary, politically correct or whatever, but it's time for the administration to take a stand and try to clean up the mess that's been left scattered on the university's front lawn. Our dirty laundry has been blowing in the Lubbock wind for quite some time and it needs to be washed, dried and put away.

The "laundry," however, cannot be put away until all parties honestly reconcile their own feelings and relations with other groups. Unity Day is the administration's attempt to begin the reconciliation so that we are able to move on with a more enlightened attitude.

Unfortunately, there will be no tangible by-product of this unification. No one will be able to see results on paper. Your neighbor's demeanor will not change suddenly, as if enlightened to the err of his or her ways.

For this reason some have said Unity Day is just an attempt to gloss over the situation. Some have even gone so far as to say that those individuals who attend are selling out.

Selling out to what? Selling out to the idea that there is a peaceful way to settle this situation? Selling out to the idea that something must be done in order to restore some semblance of order on campus?

For those students who want to protest this ceremony, think about the beliefs you are challenging. Unity, racial harmony and education to name a few. Protesting will only continue to accentuate the negative rather than the positive. It's self-defeating.

It is imperative for our administration to play a proactive role in the healing process rather than sitting back and watching the students duke it out.

The circle of racism must be broken and new circle formed. We must unify.

Calling for Unity

The following letters were written by the leaders of various campus organizations asking the Texas Tech community to show support for Unity Day.

Unity Day gives us the chance to recognize that our community is made up of different parts and gives us the opportunity to realize that we are all unified by a common bond. That being Texas Tech University

Charlie Tibbels
Saddle Tramps president

No one is asking that we forget what has happened because tragic situations such as this are always a great opportunity to learn and grow. Hopefully, the students at Tech will look at the situation in this way and commit themselves to take part in the healing process. It's important that we realize this process wasn't designed for only the groups immediately affected. In fact, every student was affected in one way or another, so it's the responsibility of all to support this healing process.

Laci Lasater
Kappa Kappa Gamma president

For five months the students of Texas Tech have been engulfed in an ongoing battle against the forces of racism and insensitivity. However, last Saturday's agreement between Pi Kappa Alpha, Kappa Alpha Psi, the Black Student Association and several other hard-working groups, who were genuinely interested in coming to a peaceful solution, was the first step in cleansing the racial wounds caused by the "incident."

Today's Unity Day is an equally important step. Your mere presence at this event is a commitment to be a part of the solution, rather than a hindrance to the new challenges Texas Tech is faced with for the future. The biggest lesson we should learn from this event is what the consequences are when we as people do not work together as students and interact amongst each other. Let's learn from the mistakes of others and come together and show our Unity.

T. Christopher Lewis
Kappa Alpha Psi president

This statement does not necessarily represent the opinions of Kappa Alpha Psi.

I would like to invite all Texas Tech faculty, staff, administrators and especially students to attend the Unity Day ceremony. It will be a short ceremony beginning about 12:10 p.m. and lasting no longer than 10 minutes. This ceremony will be an individual commitment on your behalf to becoming part of the solution with regard to the racial tension on campus. Collectively as a campus we must stand together, confront our concerns face to face and, finally, come up with and execute our own solutions. Please join Alan White, Mayor David Langston, Marcy Lawless and me in making a unified commitment.

Chris Loveless
Student Association president

Even though our differences are many, we have one common bond — we are all students of Texas Tech. I encourage everyone to attend the Unity Day ceremonies. It will be a great opportunity to show you support for all students at Tech. We know that there is a problem, and only you can be the solution!

Nicky Monica
High Riders president

Friday, Feb. 19, marks the date for Unity Day on the Texas Tech campus. I am writing this letter to encourage everyone to participate in this short afternoon event. The past few months here at Tech have been a strenuous time for all of us. This Unity Day is the perfect opportunity for all students to come together and show that we really are committed to change our campus. I would like to ask that all members of the Greek system as well as everyone in the Tech community, to come out and join us for this positive opportunity.

W. David Fay
IFC president

As a minority student at Tech, I have closely observed the racial tensions and divisions in our community with concern and some anger. However, the resolution of issues with the Pikes, Fashion Board and the minority organizations is satisfying in the short run. I think, however, that we have to look to the future and to long-term solutions to problems of racial insensitivity and to increase mutual acceptance and respect. I support the Unity Day celebration and hope that others will also. Let's work together as free and equal human beings to create a campus environment, local community and world where all are valued and respected. Let's take the first step of healing our divisions and wounds by supporting Unity Day, while continuing to look for long-term solutions to our problems.

Carla Davis

Who is satisfied?

To the editor:
 This letter is in response to both Cheryl Taylor and all those who feel as if Kappa Alpha Psi made a bad deal.

Speaking on behalf of KAPsi and myself, this letter is not an attempt to keep some form of tension among us and those who don't agree with our actions.

However, I have decided to take the time and educate those people in areas where they may lack some knowledge.

On Jan. 26 the brothers of Kappa Alpha Psi launched a protest titled "WE'RE NOT SATISFIED." We all know this. But what you didn't know is that we had a set of goals and objectives that we wanted to obtain. Since you don't know them, here they are:

1) Pressure the Pikes and Fashion Board to accept some form of sanction against themselves. By accomplishing this goal, we would show the Dean of Students Office that if they are not willing to take a stand, there are students here who will.

2) Target the DOS to open its eyes and ears so they may realize that their minority students (specifically blacks) are ready for justice and fair treatment that is long overdue.

3) Effect present and future legislation at Tech to cater to minority needs (specifically blacks) as well as the majority. Not by some form of "token," but by real representation of every ethnic race or background. Whether it is by increased minority faculty hiring (specifically blacks), or by minority involvement in all decisions that will affect the student body here at Tech.

These goals and objectives may not be exactly what you want to see or hear.

There may be other things you would like to address or maybe you think it's too little or too much. However, this is the plan of action Kappa Alpha Psi decided to take and we will follow through with it.

Many of you are probably asking, "What about picketing?" What about it?

If you were to examine every interview or media coverage, you will find that it specifically said that if we remained UNSATISFIED with the Pikes' overturning of the sanctions, we will picket Pikefest. At the beginning it seemed that would be our destiny, but as you see things did change.

I'll admit we as an organization could have handled the incident better, but when you have people forming outside groups such as the TASKFORCE with their own agenda and lack of concern from other organizations, you sometimes have to play it your way to get things done in a positive manner. Therefore, when we spoke, we spoke for KAPsi.

If you feel that picketing Pikefest is the only way you can sleep at night or have peace within your soul by all means go for it, and take Jesus with you.

If you recall during the civil rights era, Dr. M.L. King and Malcolm X both wanted equal rights for blacks. One was a Christian, and the other a Muslim. One spoke peace and the other "by any means necessary."

Two people with the same goal with two different directions to achieve it.

This is exactly what we have here — the so-called TASKFORCE and KAPsi.

I'm not here to make some long, drawn-out speech, but a house divided will not stand. Attacking each other is not the key. Ms. Taylor, I am no stranger to you. I remember once when we could disagree with a smile.

If you feel so strongly, why did you turn us down when asked to speak at the rally on Feb. 1? I'm sorry, I forgot it was a peaceful demonstration. (Doesn't feel good, does it?)

Everyone heard I'M SOMEWHAT SATISFIED, but what you didn't hear is what was said at the beginning and what was said at the end. I'm SOMEWHAT satisfied because all of our goals and objectives have not been achieved. My fight is no longer with the Pikes, but it is against the administration that allowed a group of students to tell them what they would or would not do. This is the problem. We cannot keep attacking individuals for being racist. However, we can attack the institutions that taught or allowed it. Therefore, we need to target the sources which are the home, school system, the media, the movie industry and all other sources that continue to demean or belittle the power of the black race. This is where your fight can and will be won.

To those people who feel as if I'm focusing on blacks or Black Power, I'm sorry. I'm a black man. Born, raised and I will die a black man. The life I live is that of a black man. So whom should I concern myself with? You guessed it, blacks, African-Americans or Negroes, whichever suits you best.

Now I have a question. After picketing Pikefest, then what? Will all of the frustration, anger and resentment end there? Well as for Kappa Alpha Psi, the fight goes on. Our next stop will be the Dean of Students, then the administration, then the Board of Regents and so on and so on until there is some form of change that can be felt here at Tech. Though we no longer wear black bandannas, we still have our hearts and our pride, and we will take a stand with PHI NU PI and the Lord on our side. So whether you choose to support us or not, that's up to you. But as for me and my house, we will press on, and one day our change will come.

Bobby D. Johnson

It's still punishing the middle class

To the editor:
 I'm not trying to make everyone angry with some kind of name-calling speech, what I am trying to do is show all of you exactly what is going on.

Electing a Democratic president is supposed to be a step forward in many ways.

Apparently, this step forward is not working very well yet. Don't get me wrong, I know Clinton hasn't been in office very long, but what I've seen so far is not very encouraging.

By placing a larger tax burden on the rich than the one they already face, Clinton will cause a loss of jobs which will, in turn, further deplete the middle class. In forcing the rich to give up a large portion of their income, they will have no reason to want to expand their businesses, and some may even be forced to pull out of major opportunities, which would raise the unemployment rate and send many middle class Americans plummeting towards the ever-deepening hole of poverty.

It may be true that the interest of the rich is to make more and more money.

If so, then taxing them with a vengeance will not help the economy. By easing the tax burden on the rich, and encouraging them to create new jobs, we might be able to start filling that deepening hole that looms before us.

Everyone says that "when the rich get richer, the poor get poorer." Well, the rich haven't been getting richer for a while now, and I don't see the poor being pulled out of their slump at all.

Clinton says that, yes, the middle class will also receive a tax hike, but they will not have the largest part of the tax burden. The fact of the matter is, the middle class works, for the most part, for the rich.

Like it or not, the middle class will face the full force of Clinton's tax assault. They may find themselves without their jobs, and being steadily jerked backwards. One step forward for our government is beginning to look like two steps back for our middle class.

Petition earns funding promise for law school's newsletter

by KENDRA CASEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech Law School Dean Frank Newton committed $1,000 of admission fees to the school's publication, The Nineteenth Street Journal, after law students petitioned him and Student Bar Association President Riley Shaw Thursday morning in an effort to find funding for the newsletter.

More than 375 of the law school's 610 students signed a petition, circulated by the newsletter's editor, Chris Taylor, during the last week.

The petition requests that the law school administration and the Student Bar Association "make some attempt to establish permanent funding for The Nineteenth Street Journal."

Taylor said he had submitted a budget request of $3,875 to the Student Bar Association to be considered for the organization's budget proposal to the Student Association.

"At the time of budget crunches, it was a program we decided we couldn't afford," Shaw said.

Shaw said the Student Bar Association does not want the newsletter to cease publication, but said the organization is facing budget cuts and the addition of six new organizations' budgets.

During an SBA meeting Thursday night, Taylor and the association compromised to cut the budget request for the newsletter to $2,500.

Taylor said the SBA denied his original request because of a misunderstanding that he wanted to be budgeted $3,875 or nothing.

Taylor said he will send letters to Student Affairs President Robert Ewalt and Student Association President Chris Loveless explaining why his budget request was omitted from the SBA request that was submitted to the student services fee advisory committee.

"If the only way they can come up with the money is by taking it out of what they give other law school associations, then forget it," Taylor said.

"If I don't get (the funding), I will have to go somewhere else."

"The petition represents 66 percent of the people in the law school," he said.

"Somebody will say, 'That's a lot of people — let's work something out.' I feel confident the funds will come from somewhere."

Taylor said his greatest concern is that he is graduating and whoever takes over the publication will not be able to pay for it.

Linda Kamp of the law school's registrar's office was responsible for the publication until last semester when the administration turned the newsletter and its budget over to the Student Bar Association.

Taylor said the problem with the newsletter's funding arose from confusion of who would pay for the costs of the publication.

"The administration assumed the students would be paying for it, and the SBA thought the administration would be," he said.

"Before I took it over the administration had been paying for everything because the only function it served was announcements," Taylor said.

"When I took it over, the administration assumed that it would be an additional student organization," he said.

Kamp said she was unable to continue working with the publication because of time constraints. However, she said the newsletter is important in passing information on to the law students.

"It keeps the students up to date on what's going on," Kamp said.

The newsletter's third issue was published Monday.

It is scheduled for publication again April 1.

Texas Tech supporters increase endowment

Longtime Texas Tech supporters Edward R. and Jo Anne M. Smith of Lubbock have donated stocks valued at nearly $100,000 to enhance a university endowment they established in 1974.

The couple created the endowment primarily for School of Music scholarships and other programs.

The Smith's endowment also provides an annual School of Law scholarship.

With their most recent donation of $99,354, the Smith endowment now totals $200,439.

Smith, a retired attorney and certified public accountant, was associated with the firm of Smith, Baker, Field & Clifford, Inc. He currently is president and chief executive officer of Resthaven of Lubbock, Inc.

The Smiths are members of the Texas Tech President's Council.

Among other past contributions, the couple donated a Steinway Concert Grand piano in 1982 for the School of Music's Hemmle Recital Hall.

Dimensions helping prevent breast cancer

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

In response to a growing need for prevention and education of breast cancer, the University Medical Center's women's health center, Dimensions, has opened a breast care facility.

Breast cancer is the second-leading cause of death in women ages 35 to 55, according to the American Cancer Society.

"Women should start practicing their monthly self exams by the time they reach 20 and continue for the rest of their lives," Dimensions Director Dianne Lowell said.

The American Cancer Society reports that 175,000 women in the United States a year are diagnosed with breast cancer.

Early diagnoses is critical to their survival.

"If discovered early, the survival rate is between 95 and 100 percent," Lowell said.

If a lump is discovered during a self examination, the woman should call

How to do a Breast Examination

1. Check your breasts about one week after your period.
2. Press firmly with the pads of your fingers. Move your left hand over your right breast in a circular motion.
3. Check your left breast with your right hand in the same way. If there are any lumps or changes, tell your doctor right away.

her physician immediately to set up a complete examination.

"It won't necessarily be breast cancer if a lump is found," Lowell said.

"Ofentimes it is fibrocystic breasts, a condition commonly found in young women.

"This condition is non-cancerous, and is found in 50 percent of women in their reproductive years," she said.

Lowell said women older than 40 years of age should have a mammogram every other year and women older than 50 years need one tion training.

"We have a video that shows how to do monthly self-exams and a breast model we use to demonstrate on," Lowell said.

Dimensions is open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and until 7 p.m. twice a month on Tuesdays.

For a free appointment on breast care, contact Dimensions at 743-HERS.

Lowell also is available to speak to groups about breast care and self-examinations.

annually. "In the meantime, monthly self-examinations and yearly physical exams will suffice," she said.

The breast care center, which opened Monday, offers women free self-examina-

Lecture walks Tech through 1874 trading post

by SANDRA PULLEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Charred floors, bottles and other artifacts are the only remains of the Adobe Walls trading post, which was destroyed by the Comanche Indians in 1874.

The post's excavation was the topic of "The Battle of Adobe Walls," a lecture given by Bill Harrison Thursday night in Holden Hall, room 77. Harrison is the former curator of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum in Canyon and co-author of the book "Adobe Walls."

"Fifty to 90 million bison roamed the Great Plains at one time," Harrison said. "As the bison were killed off in the North, hunting took over in the South."

Harrison said less than 1,000 bison hides came through the post before it was destroyed. The Adobe Walls site, which is 30 miles outside of Spearman, has no standing structures. "The walls and buildings are not there any longer because the Indians burned everything down," he said. "The monuments placed by the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum identify the location."

The Adobe Walls' sod structures were made by cutting strips of grass and dirt, stacking them like dominoes on top of each other and building a roof on top.

Excavation of the site began in the summer of 1975 and ended in 1979. The Adobe Walls' excavators placed concrete markers at the corners of the building floor remains to identify the location.

"We placed the markers there, so (that) if in a 100 years people want to see the site, they can see where the buildings were," he said.

The anthropologists found the charred remains of English peas, buttons, English china and a kerosene lamp at Adobe Walls, along with a potbelly stove, a table, scale and other artifacts. "We also found a John W. Steele's Niagara Star Bitters bottle," Harrison said.

"Alcohol was not really popular back then, so the medicine companies made bitters. People felt much better after they drank them because they were 90 percent alcohol."

Harrison said excavators expected to find the remains of 13 Indians and the settlers' horses near the site, but the bones probably were used as fertilizer during the 1890s or destroyed when a county road was built.

"There is a story that the traders killed 13 Indians, decapitated them and hung their heads on posts in the settlement," Harrison said. "The Indians still will not go to Adobe Walls at night because the spirits of the Indians are believed to be floating around. They are in the process of getting a medicine man or an elder to purify the site."

Greek show activities top weekend agenda

JESSICA SMART

For those of you who decide to brave the ice and snow, there is lot of stuff happening this weekend.

The Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity will be hosting the "Comedy Stomp Down Step Groove" at 8:30 p.m. Friday in the Allen Theatre as part of its state convention.

The fraternity will also host a comedy show in the Allen Theatre featuring Black Prince, Bird Man and Duke. All three comedians have performed on HBO's Def Comedy Jam.

In addition, Alpha Phi Alpha is hosting its Greek show which will feature steppers from all over Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma. All of the minority fraternities and sororities will be participating in the competition.

ON SATURDAY, ALPHA PHI ALPHA WILL HOST THE STATEWIDE BLACK AND GOLD BEAUTY PAGEANT IN THE UNIVERSITY CENTER BALLROOM.

Cover is $10 for both shows or $6 for one. The comedy show starts at 7 p.m. and the step show will begin at 8:30 p.m.

On Saturday, Alpha Phi Alpha will host the statewide Black and Gold Beauty Pageant in the University Center Ballroom. Proceeds will go to scholarships for area high school students.

Other things to do this weekend: The Main Street An X will be presenting metal bands Human and Castle on both Friday and Saturday. The shows start at 9 p.m. and cover is $5 at the door. The An X is now featuring live music seven days a week. On most evenings, there is no cover charge.

On Friday Crazy Train and Uncle Nasty will perform at the Depot Warehouse. Cover is $8 in advance and $8 at the door, and the shows start at 9 p.m. Also at the Depot at 9 p.m. on Saturday, the Nixons, an alternative band, will be playing. Cover is $5 at the door.

Day Break Coffee Roasters will present the Wickersham Project at 9 p.m. Saturday. The band plays post-modern acoustic and new age music. Cover is $2 at the door. Movies "Lorenzo's Oil" and "The Crying Game," will finally hit local movie theaters.

Phi Kappa Phi honor society taking scholarship applications

by BETH RASH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Phi Kappa Phi National Honor Society, a national scholastic organization that recognizes academic excellence in all areas, is accepting applications for competitive fellowships for students in first-year graduate or professional study. Fifty scholarships worth up to $7,000 each and 30 honorable mention awards of $500 each will be awarded by the national society of Phi Kappa Phi.

The Texas Tech chapter is awarding two $500 scholarships to Tech students. One award will be given to a nominee chosen by the chapter, and another will be given to any graduating senior or graduate student with at least one year of graduate work remaining.

Phi Kappa Phi faculty adviser Jane Ann Wilson said fellowships will be awarded based on scholastic achievement, test scores, honors, enrichment programs, leadership abilities, participation in university and community activities and other qualifications.

To receive any of these scholarships, students must be members of Phi Kappa Phi or have joined the society before the award can be presented. Any student who is not a member but is qualified for any of the awards will receive an application for membership in the society within two weeks of his or her application date. Applications are due Saturday for the national scholarships and March 19 for the chapter awards.

Arnolds collect tabloids in store

DALLAS (AP)—When Roseanne and Tom Arnold aren't hungry for food, they shop for gossip.

During their two-day stay in Dallas this week, the television stars of ABC-TV's "Roseanne" and "The Jackie Thomas Show" were spotted shopping at a local grocery store.

Their haul? Copies of all the tabloids. Tom Arnold told the staff of the Loews Anatole hotel the couple were "taking some time off."

The couple spent most of their stay inside their room before checking out of the hotel on Wednesday.

Thundering Herd band continues 60-year jazz tradition in Lubbock

by BETH RASH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Jazz bands are not dead. In fact, there are still a few ghost bands lingering around, even in the sophisticated generation of the '90s. But one Lubbock jazz band could possibly overcome this ghost band label.

The Lubbock Monterey high school band boosters are sponsoring the Woody Herman Orchestra, a swing band that has endured more than 60 years of jazz music throughout the United States.

The orchestra will perform at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Monterey High School auditorium. Tickets are available at Jent's House of Music, South Plains Mall and all Lubbock United supermarkets.

Jim Mertes, a Texas Tech professor of landscape architecture and chairman of the Monterey High School band boosters, said ticket sales are increasing and are expected to rise.

The concert is one of three major fund-raisers for the Monterey band. Other fund-raisers include a March-A-Thon in the fall and poinsettia sales during the Christmas holiday season. Mertes said the booster club profits ensure that students are not left behind on field trips and other band events that are not fully supported by Lubbock Independent School District receive financial support.

For example, the Monterey High School band will perform later this year at Disneyland sponsored in part by the boosters.

The Woody Herman Orchestra, nicknamed the Thundering Herd, began in the 1930s and produced its first hit, "Woodchoppers Ball," shortly thereafter. It was founded in 1936 by Woody Herman, one of the nation's leading jazz musicians at the time.

Herman died in 1987, and there aren't any original band members performing with the orchestra, but director of the band, Frank Tiberi, was hand-picked by Herman to lead the band.

Tiberi, a Philadelphia native, also is a clarinet and saxophone player.

Stu Jackson, owner of the Thundering Herd, said Tiberi was the perfect choice for conductor.

"He was a great confidante of Woody Herman and one of his great supporters within the band," he said. "He's known as a soloist all over the world in his own right."

Eight members remain from the days when Herman was still in charge, including road manager and baritone saxophone player Mike Bignolla and trumpet player Ron Stout.

Soloists are the basic ingredient in concerts, and pieces performed include new music written by Tiberi as well as classic jazz and swing hits.

"The soloists are phenomenal," Jackson said. "Everyone in the band is a major soloist in the country." Some pieces played during past performances are "It Don't Mean a Thing if it Ain't Got That Swing," and "Fanfare for the Common Man."

These jazz and swing concerts are constructed to entertain everyone from big band buffs and World War II veterans to high school and college band instrumentalists and everyone in between.

Jackson said the concert in Lubbock should be a success. The orchestra's last appearance in Lubbock was about 10 years ago.

Track teams prepare for SWC Indoor meet

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech men's and women's track teams will 'rattle the boards' this weekend in the Southwest Conference Indoor Championship Meet at Will Rogers Coliseum in Fort Worth.

The Tech pole vaulters are expected to dominate the meet. All-American Brit Pursley, currently the No. 1 pole vaulter in the conference, is going into the conference meet strong on the heels of his season-best vault of 18 1/2 at LSU. Jason Price and Jason Lavender are also competing well with both of them vaulting over 16-6 three times this season.

All-American high jumper Kent DeVille will be looking to improve on his season-best jump of 7-3 this week at conference.

Coach Corky Oglesby is optimistic about this weekend's meet.

"I think everyone should improve on last week's performances," Oglesby said. "It's really hard to gauge our racing shape at this time of year. It's not like outdoors when you've been racing for a couple of months and know what to expect."

Oglesby is also looking for good performances from David Shephard in the sprints and Gabe Ruiz in the distances.

The Tech women distance runners are coming off solid performances last week in Reno, Nev.

Distance running coach Brenda Webb is confident her group will improve again this week.

"The competition in Reno was good, but I think it will be even more intense in the conference meet," Webb said. "Texas and Baylor traditionally excel in the distance events, and this year is no exception."

Senior miler Gunilla Anderson was out last week due to a hamstring strain, but will run this week in the two-mile relay.

Freshman 800-meter runner Jill Williams also is expected to earn points for the women tracksters in the meet.

Webb says all the Tech runners should be sharper this week because all of the athletes have been running faster in their individual and relay races.

The SWC Indoor Championships get under way today at 9 a.m. with the trials. The finals start Saturday at 10:30 a.m..

Yesterday's Puzzle Solved:

Sports briefs

Tennis team set to travel to El Paso, Las Cruces

The Texas Tech men's tennis team will hit the road this weekend as it looks to build on its non-conference record.

Tech will play the University of Texas-El Paso today at 1 p.m. On Saturday, the team will travel a few miles north to Las Cruces to take on New Mexico State at 2 p.m.

"I am looking forward to the trip. This will be our first action outdoors, and it is important that we get used to playing outside," coach Tim Siegal said.

Kirkland named to GTE All-Academic team

Texas Tech senior guard Krista Kirkland was named to the GTE All-Academic team for District VI.

Kirkland, who has a 3.5 overall GPA, is a exercise and sports sciences major from Spearman. To be eligible for the team a student must have at least a 3.2 GPA.

Tech ready to continue roll against Cameron

by LEN HAYWARD
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Solid defense is the core of any baseball team.

For Texas Tech, that solid defense starts with the infield, which has three seniors and one sophomore returning.

First baseman Randy DuRoss, the youngster on the crew, knows his role in his position and says a good infield gives the pitching staff more confidence.

"I think it will help our pitching, so they don't have to worry about doing it all themselves," he said Thursday during practice in the Athletic Training Center.

Seniors George Kilford, Trey Forkerway and Jeff Schultz make up the rest of the infield. All three played well in the first series against Howard Payne, with Kilford coming out with the best average at .375.

Kilford says the chemistry is there with the whole team this season, mainly because of the senior leadership.

"Much more (chemistry than last season.) Everybody has a good relationship," he said. "The senior leadership is superior, and that is the key to a good baseball team."

The Red Raiders will take on the Cameron Aggies today at 2 p.m. in a doubleheader at Dan Law Field, weather permitting. Tech has not had a practice outside since the final game of the Howard Payne series last weekend. The Raiders will also square off with the Aggies Saturday at noon in a second doubleheader.

Tech enters the game with a 4-0 record after last weekend's sweep of the Yellow Jackets.

DuRoss, the 1992 Freshman of the Year in the Southwest Conference, said missing the outside practices hurts your rhythm as a ballplayer.

"It will affect our defense, you're just going to go out there cold," he said. "It's just tough to get a rhythm going."

DuRoss' numbers last year were not spectacular, hitting .271 with a fielding percentage of .983, but his season was solid enough to gain the honor.

"It all matters on how you look at it," DuRoss said of the honor. "I played a lot more than some freshmen who are better than I am, and they didn't have the chance to play."

Both Forkerway and Schultz played last weekend, but Schultz's time was limited because of a battle with mononucleosis. In the two games Schultz played in he hit .333, while Forkerway played in all four and hit .154.

Flemons

getting that slip of paper in my hands that says, 'Will Flemons, graduate of Texas Tech.' Graduating is very important to me," he said.

The road to stardom has been a rocky one. Early in his Tech career, things didn't always go his way. After leading the league in rebounding as a freshman, Flemons missed most of sophomore season with a broken foot. This was the low end of his career.

"I remember those couple of years where everything was going bad and then I broke my foot. I was just ready to chuck it in," Flemons said. "But I talked to my mom and she said, 'Your turn will come around.' I guess she was right."

In his usual fashion, Flemons came back with a vengeance the next season. In 1992, he was named the Southwest Conference's Player of the Year.

"That was a great honor for me, the town of Paducah, and the city of Lubbock. That was probably one of the high points of my career," he said.

After 21 games this season, Flemons is averaging 20.4 points and 10 rebounds per contest. He is one of two seniors on the ballclub, enabling him to take more of a leadership role.

This year has been capped off with several highlights on the court. Against Oral Roberts on Monday, Flemons scored a career and a Lubbock Municipal Coliseum high of 47 points. And against several of the SWC's top opponents, Flemons more than held his own. Yet coach James Dickey might feel lucky to even have Flemons on the basketball court. At Paducah, Flemons excelled at both basketball and football. He said choosing between the two was tough.

"I've known coach Dykes for awhile, and he's always asking me when I'm going to play tight end for them," he said. "I love both sports, but I'm glad I chose basketball. My dad used to always say 'football, football,' and my mother would say 'basketball, basketball,' so it was a tough decision. But I like basketball just a little bit more."

While Flemons looks toward his future, others are just glad to have had the opportunity to coach or play with him.

"It's a great privilege and honor for me to have had the opportunity to coach Will Flemons," Dickey said. "He exemplifies what you look for in a student-athlete. He's going to get his degree from our university, and for that I am very proud."
