Bosnian civilians flee fighting

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP)—Cold and hungry Bosnian civilians, unable to withstand a vicious Serb onslaught despite airdropped U.S. aid, braved deep snow and fighting Wednesday on a desperate trek to safety.

At least 18 people were reported killed in the eastern enclave of Konjevic Polje when they tried to collect food and medicine dropped overnight by U.S. planes. An unconfirmed Bosnian news report said 1,400 people were missing and feared dead in nearby Cerska.

Thousands of other residents reportedly were under fire in the Cerska-Konjevic Polje area after Serb fighters drove them from their homes and burned their villages. A U.N. official said some refugees were headed toward Tuzla, 25 to 30 miles away across rugged terrain.

Krueger campaign evaded 1987 tax

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Bob Krueger's campaign committee was cited by the federal government in 1987 for failing to pay more than $5,000 in unemployment insurance taxes for campaign workers, IRS documents show.

The Texas Democrat who previously served in the U.S. House and as a university dean was named in January by Texas Gov. Ann Richards to the Senate seat vacated by Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen. He will face several challengers in a May 1 special election to fill the remainder of Bentsen's term, which runs through 1994.

Since 1990, Krueger had been a member of the Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates oil, natural gas and transportation.

Hutchison doubts Sharp's model plan

AUSTIN (AP)—State Treasurer and U.S. Senate candidate Kay Bailey Hutchison said Wednesday that taxpayers should carefully study a state comptroller's audit being touted as a model for streamlining the federal government.

Earlier, President Clinton announced an audit of the federal government based on State Comptroller John Sharp's Texas Performance Review. He also tapped Sharp to serve as special adviser to the project, to be headed by Vice President Al Gore.

But Ms. Hutchison said the Texas plan contains "more accounting tricks and money shuffling gimmicks" than cuts to government waste.

"I'm strongly in favor of any serious effort to cut unnecessary government spending," said Ms. Hutchison, a Republican. "The danger here is that an artful sales job may mislead taxpayers into wrongly thinking that government is tightening its belt."

Her comments were echoed by those of state Republican Party Chairman Fred Meyer.

Glory days

Zach Brady, the newly elected external vice president, is congratulated by Senator Chris Driskill after the Student Association election results were announced Wednesday night. Brady garnered 84 percent of the vote.

About 10 percent of the students spoke, but those 2,278 voices were strong enough to elect Matt Weinheimer, Mike Fietz and Zach Brady to the 1993-94 Student Association executive office positions.

The new officers will be initiated at the Student Association banquet April 15 and will begin their official roles as SA officers April 16.

Senior agronomy major Weinheimer defeated junior international economics major Greg Fletcher 57 percent to 43 percent for the Student Association presidential position.

Weinheimer said he will begin working immediately because he has been involved with the Student Association for the last four years and does not have to take the time to learn his position.

Factors that Weinheimer said helped him win the position are speaking to more than 80 student organizations, conducting a phone-a-thon session with his campaign workers and campaigning on election day.

Before the results were announced, Heidi McKinley, Fletcher's campaign manager, said, "We can honestly say we did everything we could up to this point. Now that I look back, it was fun. It made me feel like I could make a difference. For me, helping Greg out has been rewarding."

feated junior cell and molecular biology major Chris Driskill 52 percent to 48 percent for the internal vice presidential position.

"Now it's time to sit down and evaluate the best way to put my ideas into effect," Fietz said. "It's been a very long couple of weeks. This campaign has opened my eyes to see how much we need to get the students' voice heard."

Fietz said being himself during the campaign helped him win.

"The president of the Student Senate needs to be a strong leader," he said.

Driskill said, "(Campaigning) was definitely an educational experience. You meet a lot of people."

Junior agricultural communications and Spanish major Brady defeated junior advertising major Telea Johnson 84 to 16 percent for external vice president.

Brady said he plans to immediately form a staff of people who can help him reach the goals he outlined in his campaign.

"I'm going to put together a team who can help me carry out what I see is my vision for the external office," he said.

Reaccreditation process smooth, Harms says

by SANDRA RIEGLE
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The National Architecture Accreditation Board completed a five-day tour and evaluation of the Texas Tech College of Architecture facilities Wednesday, ending the college's role in the reaccreditation process.

The board will determine this summer whether the college will receive reaccreditation.

College of Architecture Dean Martin Harms said he believes the reaccreditation process was a success.

"The faculty and staff work well together in a productive fashion, and everything was extremely well organized," he said.

Board members met with faculty, staff and students to determine their productivity by observing the college's inner workings.

Harms said the team room, where student projects were displayed for the board, was of particular interest because it demonstrated the quality of work within the college and also integrated the 54 performance criteria, such as social and technical contexts, recommended by the board.

Harms said the board noted that the college has a "strong faculty, good teaching and dedicated students engaged in their work."

The board members believe the college's teaching staff is demanding because the faculty and staff must instruct a large number of courses, Harms said. The board also observed that the college's mid-level professors earn less than the national average.

Also recognized was the college's demanding curriculum, he said.

"We have a strong program because we must meet the contemporary needs of the profession, and the price we pay for that is some lack of opportunity for students to be able to pursue their own individual areas of interest through elective courses," Harms said.

The board recommended more emphasis be put on teaching theory and criticism to increase the critical abilities of students, he said.

He said the board gave a favorable evaluation of the college's enrichment program.

Computerized journal system may be added to library's TECHPAC; to provide accessibility

by SANDRA PULLEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Journal subscription cuts at the Texas Tech Library could be offset by an expansion of the TECHPAC system, if the university receives a Department of Education grant this spring.

The library requested $338,692 from the department over a three-year period to fund the implementation of a program that would place full-text journals on the TECHPAC system. The system would allow library users to access the journals through modems on personal computers and through library computers.

"This is really going to revolutionize how people do their research papers," said Jan Kemp, head of the library's acquisition department. "It will allow people with computers and modems to use the journals all of the time."

Library Director Dale Cluff said a computer journal system would provide increased access to journals at a time when journal prices are increasing rapidly.

Before implementing the system, the library must buy expansion disks for the VAX system and obtain licensing agreements with companies that publish journals electronically, Cluff said. Between 600 and 700 journals are available electronically, he said.

Cluff said the cost of the electronic journal system is comparable to paper copy subscriptions, but the electronic system offers accessibility to more journal titles.

"The cost per title should come out to be less," he said.

Lab defends spending, denies its part in pork-barrel politics

by JULIE ANN ANDRES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech agricultural officials responded Wednesday in a news conference to accusations of wasteful government spending for the Plant Stress and Water Conservation Research Laboratory.

The Citizens Against Government Waste, a taxpayer watchdog group in Washington, D.C., dubbed Tech's lab as "another example of the government's pork-barrel spending" in its 1993 Congressional Pig Book Summary.

"There is no way this is a pork-barrel project. It was designed by Congress to serve national and international needs, not just local interests," Agricultural Sciences Dean Sam Curl said.

"This is America's bread basket and the results of our research are applicable throughout the Great Plains and the nation."

The research lab, located on Fourth Street across from the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, has earned $3.5 million in federal grants for its research on the effects of extreme temperatures and soil conditions on plants.

Lab researchers are vying for an additional $8.6 million to complete a 62,000-square-foot structure that would house about 60 scientists and personnel.

"We're at the halfway point, but completion depends on the funding," Curl said.

If funding is appropriated, the project is expected to reach completion in late 1994. When completed, the $12 million lab is expected to have a $5 million annual operating expense.

Officials from the College of Agricultural Sciences will testify before Congress later this year to receive additional federal funding.

Leader: Awaiting further instruction from God

WACO (AP)—Authorities appeared to settle in Wednesday for a long wait to the end of a stalemate with a heavily armed religious cult whose leader, the FBI said, was awaiting "further instruction from God."

Court documents used to charge two elderly cult members with murder describe the Branch Davidian cult as a well trained, committed fighting force with a "massive weapons cache" at its disposal.

Negotiations continued a day after cult leader David Koresh had promised an immediate, peaceful end to the deadlock if a 58-minute taped statement were played on radio stations. Court documents said Koresh "has told federal law officers words to the effect that they would fight to the end."

FBI Agent Jeffrey Jamar said Wednesday, "Koresh stated he had received a message from God instructing him to wait."

"The goal is to resolve this situation ultimately in federal court with no further bloodshed," he said in the first briefing on the situation since Monday. U.S. Attorney Ron Ederer said all adults would likely face criminal charges.

Thunder Tongue's alternative style may spur band to make it big

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

THE NAME THUNDER TONGUE MEANS SOMEONE WHO GETS THEIR POINT ACROSS. IT MEANS GREAT COMMUNICATORS.

Greg Faz

There is a new rock band on the Lubbock music scene, Thunder Tongue, that according to its fans, 'shreds', or gives a high energy performance.

Comprised of four different and unique personalities, Thunder Tongue has the potential to make it big if it gets the right breaks.

Thunder Tongue members are Texas Tech senior mechanical engineering major Matt Adelman, drummer; Lanny Moore, lead guitarist; Jay Holder, bassist and Greg Faz, lead vocalist.

Adelman was a drummer for the Goin' Band from Raiderland for four years and said the experience gained from participating in the band was invaluable to him. Band members have known each other for more than a year, but have been 'jamming seriously' for the past four months.

"It feels like four years though," Holder said.

"The name Thunder Tongue means someone who gets their point across," Faz said. "Martin Luther King, Hitler, good or bad, it means great communicators."

Moore said some people think the name is vulgar, but added that vulgarity was not the band's intention when thinking of a name for the group.

"We play a type of heavy rock, funk and alternative style," Adelman said.

The band's lyrics are heavily influenced by current events. The group performs a song called "Brick in the Face" about the Los Angeles riots and "Johnny Coward," a song that deplores gang violence and drive-by shootings.

"'Brick in the Face' is a tribute to Reginald Denny," Adelman said.

"We don't preach to people," Moore said. "But we don't sing stupid love songs either. Our new single that we're going to release, 'Johnny Coward,' is about how it's so easy for kids to say I'm Mr. Bad, and I'd rather buy a gun and shoot you than fist fight because they might get hurt."

Thunder Tongue members said they have positive messages in most of their lyrics. The group is producing its first album, which is as yet untitled, Moore said. Adelman said he hopes the album will be out in late spring.

Thunder Tongue has played at clubs such as the Depot, Main Street Saloon and the Main Street An-X. On March 26 and 27 the band will play at the Main Street An-X and will open for the band Tripping Daisy at the Depot Warehouse in April.

Choir, quartet performances top School of Music's agenda for week

by BETH RASH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech School of Music has announced its events for the week of today through March 10.

At 8:15 p.m. today composer Amy Faris will present her senior recital in Hemmler Recital Hall. Admission is free.

At 7:30 p.m. on Saturday the Texas Tech University Choir 1993 Tour Home Concert will be in Hemmler Recital Hall. The Tech Choir will be joined by the High School Invitational Choir for this event, directed by Kenneth Davis, Tech's director of choral activities.

The joint choir will perform works including Knut Nystedt's "Cry Out and Shout," Orlando di Lasso's "Cantate Domino" and Haydn's "Te Deum." Admission is free.

This concert is the finale of a one-day high school choir festival hosted by the Tech music department. More than 50 students from 14 high schools in Texas are expected to attend Saturday's festival.

The University Choir will begin its tour to Los Angeles on March 12. During its journey, the choir will perform for high school and college audiences as well as church and public functions. Stops on the tour include Pepperdine University, Loyola Marymount College and the University of Southern California.

At 8:15 p.m. on Sunday, Quadriga, the Tech Faculty Piano Quartet-in-Residence, will present a program of chamber music in Hemmler Recital Hall. The quartet consists of music professor James Barber, violinist; associate music professor and violoncellist Arthur Follows; associate music professor and pianist Steven Glaser and associate music professor Susan Schoenfeld playing viola. Admission is free.

At 8:15 p.m. on Monday the Tech Symphonic Band will perform.

Television lawyer shows not grabbing ratings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For television's lawyers, popularity has become elusive these days. We are far from the heyday of the old "Perry Mason" series or even "L.A. Law," the NBC drama now doing a drag turn as a soap opera.

It's true that lawyers fare poorly in opinion polls on job respectability, sharing the same bottom-feeder status as congressmen (OK, OK, and journalists). But that's nothing new.

In the late '80s, such public disdain didn't keep "L.A. Law" from an easy hold on a top 10 ratings spot. The drama was the choice of more than 16 million households in one typical showing in 1989. But last month, the series slunk in at 61st in one weekly ranking, which translates into just about 9 1/2 million households.

To be judiciously fair, it was competing with CBS's monster miniseries "Queen." During the "Queen"-less week of Feb. 8, however, "L.A. Law" managed only a 39th-place showing.

Far, far behind was TV's other series set in a law firm, ABC's "Civil Wars."
