Clinton accepts more spending cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton and Democrats labored in harmony Tuesday to craft an economic program, as the president signaled acceptance of deeper spending cuts and lawmakers advanced his $16 billion job-creation plan.

The House Appropriations Committee ratified the jobs package over Republican opposition, and sent it to the full House for expected approval next week.

Separately, members of the Democratic-controlled House and Senate budget committees worked on spending plans that expand on Clinton's initial calls for spending cuts.

"We need all the suggestions we can get about other places we can cut the budget and we will need to do that until the budget is finally passed," Clinton said at a brief news conference.

Reno's hearing smooth sailing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Janet Reno promised on Tuesday to blend tough law enforcement with respect for people's rights at a smooth confirmation hearing that both Democrats and Republicans predicted would lead to her approval as America's first female attorney general.

Miami's chief local prosecutor for 15 years, Reno described herself as a no-nonsense person who lived by the credo: "Don't pussyfoot, don't equivocate, don't talk out of both sides of your mouth."

For members of the Senate Judiciary Committee, an especially welcome quality seemed to be that she was non-controversial. "You have no idea how happy we are to see you here today," said chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del.

President Clinton's first nomination for the top Justice Department job, Zoe Baird, was withdrawn after criticism.

Koresh reaches out to media members

DALLAS (AP) — A radio talk show host succeeded Tuesday in opening lines of communication with cult leader David Koresh, who had complained to government negotiators for cutting his earlier access to reporters.

About mid-afternoon, a white banner reading "God Help Us We Want The Press" was unfurled from an upper-story window in the fortress where Koresh has been holed up with his followers since a Feb. 28 shootout that left four agents dead and wounded about a dozen others.

The banner, along with an earlier one that a gust of wind blew away, were an apparent response to an on-the-air appeal by a Dallas radio station.

The first banner appeared moments after host Ron Engelmann asked during his talk show Tuesday on Dallas station KGBS that cult leaders hang a white sheet from a window if they were listening to the station and wanted the legal and medical assistance that had been offered by cult sympathizers.

Faculty Senate disputes use of parking fee revenue

by KENDRA CASEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech's Faculty Senate will challenge a proposed parking fee increase at 3:15 p.m. today in the University Center Senate Room.

A senate committee will present a report on the appropriation of parking fee revenues.

The report states that the Board of Regents recommended the hike in parking fees to fund more than $500,000 in parking lot repairs and to remain competitive with other Texas universities.

The regents also recommended the increase because only one increase of 50 percent has taken place in the last seven years.

The report also states that parking fees serve as "excise taxes" because the generated revenue is applied to non-parking services and is not utilized directly by parking lot patrons.

"Funds raised from parking revenues but applied to non-parking purposes should be properly applied," the report states.

Accounts funded by the Parking and Traffic Services Income include:

- The Office of Traffic and Parking, $283,971.
- Towing Service, $58,170.
- Parking Lot Construction and Repair, $114,000.
- The University Police Department (funded primarily by Physical Plant Operations), $613,043.

Faculty Senate President Benjamin Newcomb said Tech's night shuttle van also is an example of non-parking services that are funded in part by the parking fee revenues.

One-third of the shuttle service, $46,783, is funded by parking fees. Housing and Dining Services funds the remaining two-thirds of the van's budget.

TECH PARKING FEES

Do You Know Where Your Money is Going?

$613,043	University Police Department
$283,971	The Office of Traffic and Parking
$114,000	Parking Lot Construction and Repair
$102,598	Police Maintenance and Operations
$66,954	Police Communications Officers' Salaries
$58,170	Towing Service
$46,783	Shuttle Service
$11,230	Fire Marshal Salary

LAURA WALDUSKY: THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Newcomb suggests that Housing and Dining take full financial responsibility for the program.

"I doubt any faculty members use the shuttle vans," he said.

Newcomb said more than half of the revenues generated by parking fees funds UPD programs.

Some programs noted by the committee include:

- $11,230 to the fire marshal's salary, a position no longer managed by UPD. The report states, "This is a prime example of a non-parking expense charged against parking fees."
- $102,598 for police maintenance and operations, which includes fuel and vehicle maintenance for UPD. The report states that the physical plant's maintenance and operations contributes $1,200 to this portion of the UPD budget.
- $66,954 to pay police communications officers' salaries. The report states that the parking fees account should be responsible for only half of the salaries, $46,000.

Senators to vote on parking fee increases, submit resolution on Tech's athletic policy

by SANDRA PULLEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech's Faculty Senate will take action on proposed parking fee increases, a resolution on intercollegiate athletics and a proposed reduction of general requirements at 3:15 p.m. today in the University Center Senate Room.

"Parking fees charged at Tech are actually excise taxes, in that they are not applied solely to expenditures directly connected to parking..." a Senate Ad Hoc Committee on Parking Fees report states. "The committee concludes that raising these taxes would result in those funds being further applied to non-parking expenditures."

Funds from parking fees are used to fund a portion of the fire marshal's salary, a night shuttle van service, police maintenance and non-parking related road construction, the committee report states.

The parking price changes, presented by Executive Vice President and Provost Don Haragan at the Feb.

10 Senate meeting, would raise residence hall stickers from $46 to $51 and commuter parking from $32 to $35 in fiscal year 1994.

Individual faculty and staff reserved spaces would increase from $82 to $90, and faculty and staff lot parking would go from $43 to $47.

The general faculty and staff lots are the R-18 lot near the traffic and parking building and the R-6 lot near the architecture building. The R-18 lot is reserved for Tech employees who work near the traffic and parking complex, and the R-6 lot is used for teaching and assistant parking.

"The senate president (Benjamin Newcomb) was the only opponent to what appeared to council members to be a pocket change increase," the Provost Council minutes from March 1 states.

A resolution on the athletic policy, submitted by geography Professor Gary Elbow, calls for the majority of the Athletic Council to be elected faculty representatives. Of the council's nine members, five are faculty representatives, three are businessmen and one is a student. Athletic Director T. Jones also sits on the council, but is not a voting member.

The resolution also calls for the elimination of paid trips for council members to athletic competitions, and a requirement that athletes in every sport consist primarily of students who qualify for regular admission to Tech.

The Academic Programs Committee will recommend that a 3-hour multiculturalism course replace the general requirements for courses in oral communications, physical education and technology.

The senate also will elect officers for 1993-94. The nominees for president are John Burnett, an associate professor of political science, and Sue Couch, an associate professor of nutrition and restaurant and hotel management.

Vice-presidential nominees are Oliver Hensley, a professor of educational psychology and leadership; Leon Higdon, a Horn professor of English; and Richard Zartman, a professor of agronomy, horticulture and entomology.

Task force to hear student input for solutions to racial tension

by KRISTIE DAVIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech students will be able to offer suggestions and express concerns today and Thursday about improving the racial climate on campus.

"I think there's some good ideas out there," Human Relations Task Force Chairman Paul Morrow said. "People just haven't had a chance to voice them. We'd like to learn where people think we should go from here."

The task force, which is a student advisory committee to the Dean of Students Office, was formed last semester following the "Party in the Projects" mixer and subsequent incidents.

"We are being reactive to what happened in the fall," Assistant to the Dean of Students Joshua Mora said. "We're trying to be proactive for the future."

Task force members will be available in the University Center Courtyard from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. today and from 12:30 to 5 p.m. Thursday.

Morrow said the task force would like to receive as many ideas as possible to continue the reformation of racial tension. Task force members will discuss and research all ideas they receive and then will make recommendations to administrators.

"We'd like to see students step forward to initiate progress, rather than rely on the administration," Mora said. "This is a golden opportunity for students to be heard. We need suggestions. None of us have all the answers."

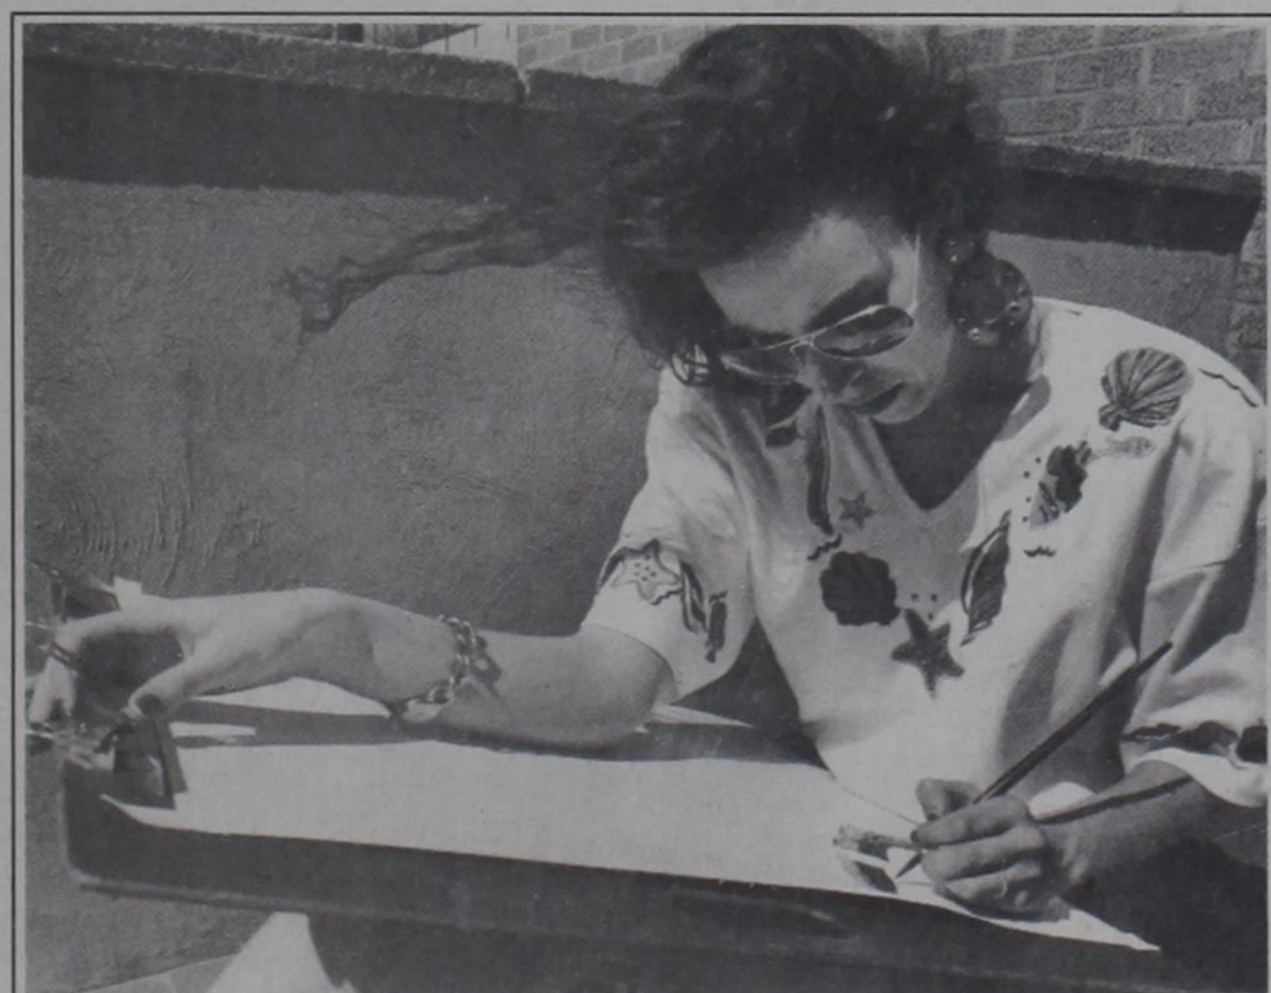

Through today's open discussion, the task force members hope to devise solutions that represent all sides of the racial intolerance issue.

Group discusses community development

by SANDRA REIGLE
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Lubbock neighborhood representatives attempted to understand problems facing the city's communities during a workshop Tuesday with the Texas Tech architecture faculty and renowned real estate strategic consultant Peter Katz at the University Center Ballroom.

The group discussed a common direction for the (re)building of central Lubbock neighborhoods and cited the proposed Department of Defense finance and accounting center as a project that will open possibilities for Lubbock's north side by offering existing neighborhoods opportunities for redevelopment.

Participants also discussed the New Improvement Project that will assist in the reformation of communities in their early and later stages of deterioration, which is determined by factors such as poverty and the area's unemployment percentage.

Representatives from the Overton community, which is bounded by University Avenue, Fourth and 34th streets and Avenue Q, addressed the problems transportation imposes on the area.

Doris Fletcher, a north Overton community representative, said the neighborhood is "too accessible because there are too many entries to the area which contribute to crime problems."

Mary Critz, chairwoman of Lubbock's Urban Design and Historic Preservation Committee, said not offer limited access into their communities.

Fletcher also said the north Overton community offers an abundance of space for development, but the lack of publicity about the neighborhood's positive aspects has hurt the area.

Katz said, "We need to focus on the positive instead of running around bandaging all of these crises. The negative will take care of itself."

Crime that exists in housing developments often is exaggerated, he said.

An increase in the number of housing rentals also has resulted in a depreciation of property value, which contributes to the deterioration of neighborhoods, Critz said.

Katz offered investment as the most prominent means for change in communities.

"We've got millions of dollars of infrastructure, but they are not being used because of location," he said.

Forensic artist discusses work in crime

by JULIE HARRIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Facial reconstruction of unidentified skeletons and composite drawings of criminals are all in a day's work for forensic artist Karen T. Taylor of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Taylor presented a lecture, "The Forensic Artist as an Aid to the Investigator," Tuesday in the human sciences building.

The lecture was sponsored by the Texas Tech Anthropological Society, Pathology Associates of Lubbock and Tech's department of sociology, anthropology and social works.

"I work a lot with victims of crime," Taylor said. "I do composite sketches of the suspects by interviewing the victims."

Taylor also reconstructs the faces of unidentified skulls, in a 2-dimensional drawing or 3-dimensional sculpture, after a forensic anthropologist determines features such as age, height and sex from the skeletal remains.

"I can't do anything without good information from an anthropologist," Taylor said.

Taylor applies the information to data tables, such as average tissue depths for a particular sex and nationality, and uses mathematical formulas to recreate the face.

Three-dimensional sculptures of faces are infrequent, Taylor said.

"People are often traumatized by coming into my office and seeing a sculpture," she said. "It is much easier to put a drawing away."

Taylor also ages photographs to aid in the location of missing children and crime suspects. The DPS is in the process of purchasing state-of-the-art equipment that ages photographs.

"This equipment was previously available only at the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children in Washington, D.C.," she said.

Taylor, who does city, county, state and national work with the Texas DPS, also is a free-lance forensic artist for the Fox television show, "America's Most Wanted."

"A photograph I aged of a suspect in the 1976 car bombing that killed the U.S. ambassador to Chile was aired on 'America's Most Wanted' recently,"

Taylor said. "The suspect, Virgilio Paz Romero, was found within five days."

Taylor's position as a forensic artist at the Texas DPS evolved from her original duties as a graphics artist.

"There is no place to go to school and learn postmortem drawing," Taylor said. "I give workshops now to show other artists what I have learned."

Taylor said she was asked to go into a cell with convicted mass murderer Henry Lee Lucas and draw his victims based on his description, but she refused.

"I sometimes regret that I did not do it," she said.

"My job is hard at times. Some days I just don't think I can interview another sexually abused child."

Community

The stages of neighborhood development in Lubbock vary, resulting in problems for communities, said Jim Shearer, a member of the Centercorps, an association of downtown businessmen.

Some communities require redevelopment, whereas others require preservation.

Lubbock resident Dave Burns said housing problems are a contributing factor in the New Improvement Project because "there is a conflict between the builders building what the people want and the people buying what is available."

Pride of ownership also is a factor that needs to be emphasized in the developments to make the areas more attractive and appealing for the community, Katz said.

Communities need to implement a specific product that centers around a particular interest to attract people, said Henry Huneke, president of Lubbock Development, Inc.

McDonald house celebrates five years of helping families

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Lubbock's Ronald McDonald House will celebrate its fifth anniversary Wednesday with an open house beginning at 2 p.m.

About 250 to 300 people are expected for the event, said Ronald Huckaby, development coordinator of the house.

Open house registration will begin at 2 p.m., and until 7 p.m. house tours will be given, refreshments will be served and the "Journey of the Heart" video will be shown.

Outdoor kite displays and demonstrations of kite flying will take place from 2 to 6 p.m. The "Texas Highland Celtic Brigade" bagpipe corps will perform at 5:30 p.m.

The McDonald's clowns also will be available from 4:30 to 7 p.m. to give children free face paintings and balloons.

The closing ceremonies will include a flag ceremony by Boy Scout troop 528 of Bowie Elementary School.

Huckaby said the purpose of the Ronald McDonald House is to provide "a comfortable room in a home-like atmosphere" for people whose children are in local hospitals.

"We provide all the food free of charge," Huckaby said. "The families prepare their own meals with the exception of the evening meal, which is usually supplied and cooked by outside sources."

The cost to stay in the house is $10 per day and use of the house is not need-based.

"Anyone is eligible as long as they have a child in the hospital," Huckaby said.

The house is supported primarily by local donations and is not aligned with other Ronald McDonald houses in terms of fund raising, he said.

"We do all our own fund raising locally," he said.

The first Ronald McDonald House was established in 1974 in Philadelphia after Philadelphia Eagles player Fred Hill spent many long hours sleeping on furniture and staying in expensive hotel rooms when a child of his was in the hospital.

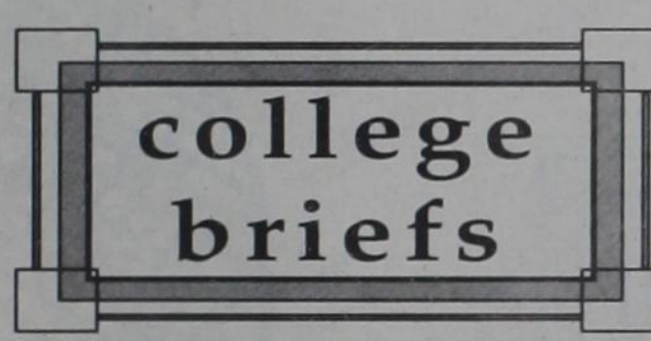

Hill and the Philadelphia McDonald's restaurants established the first Ronald McDonald House in Philadelphia in response to a need. More than 150 houses exist in the United States, Huckaby said.

He said more than 1,250 families have used the facilities at the Lubbock's house since its inception in 1988.

"That's an average of 250 per year," Huckaby said.

The move to begin construction for a Lubbock house was started in 1981 by the Junior League of Lubbock, and in 1983 fund raising for the project began.

Construction began after one acre of land from Texas Tech was leased in 1985.

• Academic requirements for athletes at the University of New Mexico will not be changed by the New Mexico Board of Regents, despite resolutions passed by the Faculty Senate and the Athletic Council calling for higher grade standards. The 0.00, 0.20 and 0.933 GPAs reported for three Lobo basketball players last semester were not typical, a New Mexico spokesman said.

• The University of Texas-Austin froze faculty recruitment in the College of Liberal Arts in late February because of budget constraints. The decision came after the dean of liberal arts decided not to hire two new faculty members for the English department.

• Legislators in Indiana are receiving complimentary tickets to Indiana University basketball games, despite a lack of tickets for students, the Daily Student states. IU officials said the university is a state university, so it extends the privilege of free tickets to legislators. IU normally gives out 40 to 70 tickets per game, but gave out 100 for the Indiana-Purdue game.

• The marketing department at the University of Southern California closed in late February because of budget cuts. Nine of the 10 employees probably will be re-assigned in the university, and marketing for USC will be handled through contractors.

• The Alpha Chi Rho chapter at Kent State University-Ohio received sanctions from the university's Interfraternity Council Judicial Committee after a chapter member called Sigma Chi fraternity members — holes. Alpha Chi Rho members said they have a First Amendment right to say what they want about other fraternities. The committee reprimanded the fraternity and demanded it give an apology or pay a $5 fine per member for violating a rule about creating harmony between Greek organizations.

'Falling Down' portrays shocking results of person 'driven over edge'

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

"Falling Down" is a story of urban decay in modern Los Angeles.

Michael Douglas and Robert Duvall star in this stirring epic of human decay and the drop into oblivion for one yuppie who lost it all.

Douglas plays his part as a fired defense missile engineer who is divorced from his wife and is living with his mother. Frustrated with the little daily annoyances common to living in Los Angeles, Douglas is driven to the brink of exhaustion and panic with the stresses of everyday life in that cesspool of humanity. Small things like traffic jams, outrageous prices in convenience stores, waiting for a burger at a fast food restaurant.

These and other nuances of urban life are treated with what can only be described as a sick sense of humor.

Duvall plays a typical Duvall role, a cop. He's a sergeant on his last day on the force just trying to stay alive for his hypochondriac wife. She wants him to come home as soon as possible so they can start their retirement.

The plot develops as Douglas ventures across the city on his way to see his daughter on her birthday. His ex-wife, who has slapped a restraining order on him, is less than enthusiastic about the prospect.

During his walk through the city, Douglas is accosted by gang members and is forced to defend himself. Needless to say, the gang is somewhat irritated after having their butts kicked by a wayward yuppie out of his territory so they opt for the revenge route.

The film is well made, and the plot is fast paced, exciting and unpredictable. It's also more than a little humorous at times — in a sick sort of way. The film's depiction of the aura of decadence that hovers over the city is especially effective.

Many of the scenarios depicted probably represent the unfulfilled secret fantasies of people fed up with the daily grind of city living. "Falling Down" is an excellent portrayal of what can happen when a person is driven to the brink of frustration — and ultimately over the edge.

Agnew's papers released to University of Maryland

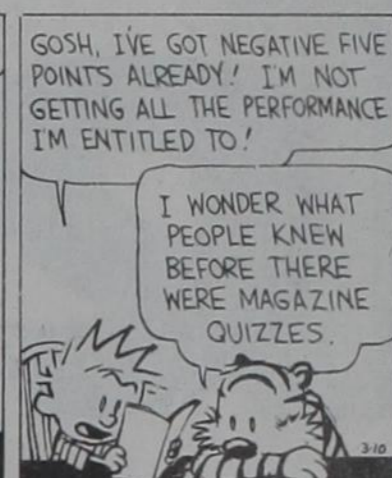

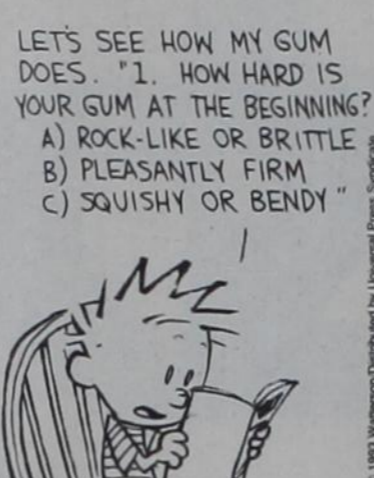

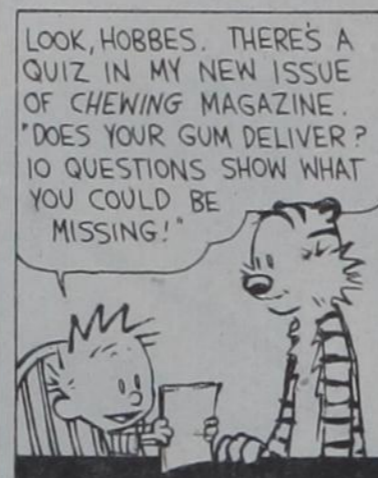

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Remember Spiro T. Agnew and moon rocks? What about a gift from Ferdinand Marcos? Two decades after Agnew resigned as vice president, those and other tidbits were made public Monday in papers he donated to the University of Maryland. The 56 boxes of documents cover Agnew's four years as Baltimore County executive, two years as governor and five years as President Nixon's vice president. Most of Agnew's vice presidential papers won't be released for years.

"I don't think they have any bombshells," said George Callcott, a University of Maryland history professor. "If you want to know what Agnew said to the Rotary Club of Catonsville on a given day, you'll find it here."

The moon rocks? Agnew handed them out to dignitaries in 11 countries on a tour of the Far East in 1969.

THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON

"The problem, as I see it, is that you both are extremely adept at pushing each other's buttons."

Parton caters to younger audience with new album

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Forget about the curves, let's talk about the rest of Dolly Parton's anatomy.

Concentrate on the cool eye of a master business opportunist, and the sensitive heart of an artist. Then there's the inventive mind that keeps finding ways to combine the other two.

Take "Romeo" — the record and video. After decades of men offering records testifying to their lust, the first single from Parton's new album "Slow Dancing With The Moon" turns the tables.

"I may not be in love but let me tell you I'm in heat," Dolly sings on the song that also has vocal help from Kathy Mattea, Mary-Chapin Carpenter and Tanya Tucker.

It's Tucker who sings of using a man ("Achy Breaky Heart")-throb Billy Ray Cyrus in the video for a swing in her backyard.

"I was catering to a younger audience, and that's why I got Billy Ray and Tanya, and the money from the song is going to the Red Cross," Parton said. "I figure the worst we'll do is feed somebody's kid and rebuild somebody's house, so how hard do you want to be with me?"

That takes care of business. But like most things with Dolly Parton, the initial idea has nothing to do with the bottom line. It turns out that "Romeo" wasn't written from a leering perspective at all.

"I have a 16-year-old nephew named Bryan Seaver. He's just cute as a doll, and he's crazy about the girls and he'd rather be with them than do his schoolwork or anything else.

"I started calling him Romeo about a year ago. I'd say, 'Hey Romeo, you can have your girlfriends, but you got to keep your grades up.'"

The same good intentions and canny marketing mark other aspects of Parton's career. The Dollywood theme park in her native East Tennessee employs many in the area, including immediate family members. It also preserves, honors — and sells — the culture of the Smoky Mountains. She looked up singer-songwriter Mac Davis a few years back, after he had more or less retired to the golf course. She convinced him to put down the clubs and collaborate, and the partnership has paid off with the new album's title cut, which Davis wrote alone with Parton as his muse.

camping equipment available in outdoor shop

Recreation Sports Outdoor Shop has all the recreational equipment that you will need for Spring Break this year. Whether you are going to the mountains for one last ski trip of the year or heading south to soak up some sun. It is all right at your finger tips and available to students, faculty, staff and Rec Center members for minimal rental cost.

You can rent or reserve equipment by going to the Outdoor Shop, room 206 of the Student Rec Center and filling out a contract and paying the rental fee. Reservations are currently being taken for over Spring Break.

The Outdoor Shop is open Mondays and Fridays, 12-6 and Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, 1-5. The office phone is 742-2949.

Some of the winter equipment that is for rent includes downhill and cross country skis, boots and poles, snowshoes and ski racks.

The water activities that you can be set up for include canoeing, whitewater rafting, sailing and sailboarding.

All water craft equipment comes with paddles and PFD's.

The camping and backpacking equipment that is available for rent includes tents, sleeping bags and pads, backpacks, lanterns, cooking equipment (stoves and cookware), plus ice chests, water containers, canteens and compasses.

All renters must have a current TTU ID and must take responsibility for the equipment that is rented. There are damage and late fees if the equipment is not returned on time or in satisfactory condition.

The Outdoor Shop can outfit you for any of you Spring Break needs.

If you are planning on going skiing, camping or rafting come and check it out.

enter now for indoor soccer

Intramural indoor soccer entries will be accepted through tomorrow, (Thursday, March 11) in SRC 202. Men's, women's and co-Rec divisions will be offered.

Blank rosters may be picked up in the Rec Sports office (SRC 202). Managers need to complete the roster with team member names, addresses and phone numbers.

A $25 refundable forfeit fee is also required at the time of entry.

Remember that the earlier you enter, the better your chances of selecting your most preferable playing time. Play begins Tuesday, March 23.

should plan to attend practice today and tomorrow at 4 p.m. at the Soccer Field. The field is located on the corner of Flint and Main (north of Stangel/Murdough).

The club has currently scheduled one game at West Texas State and plans to attend a tournament hosted by the University of Arizona featuring Northern Arizona, Arizona State, Cal Tech, Utah State and Long Beach State. For more information, contact Chad Hobbs at 799-2330.

aerobic auditions to be held in April

The Student Recreation Center will hold auditions for Aerobic Instructors for both the Summer and Fall semesters April 12-14. Applications are available in the Fitness/Wellness Center; a completed application must be returned before securing an audition time.

National aerobic certification is NOT required but the ability to develop routines using safe exercises to appropriate music are necessary. All instructors are required to take the Red Cross Standard First Aid course before they begin teaching. An information packet is available in the Fitness/Wellness Center which includes information on two workshops that will be held to help prospective instructors work on routines.
