Convicted German kills self, six others

EUSKIRCHEN, Germany (AP) — A man fined for battering his girlfriend walked quietly from a courtroom Wednesday, then came back blazing away with a pistol. He left again and returned with a bomb in a backpack. He set it off without saying a word.

Seven people died — the bomber, his girlfriend, a woman believed to be her mother, the judge, a witness and two lawyers. Fifteen people were wounded, two critically, in the worst non-political crime that German police could recall.

The explosion buckled masonry and walls of the unguarded, three-story misdemeanor courthouse in Euskirchen, a town of 50,000 people about 15 miles west of Bonn. The blast threw the bomber's body through a window into the street and scattered bloody law books, shards of glass and bits of furniture.

Fed reports steady economic growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy is growing nicely with few signs of inflation, according to the Federal Reserve's upbeat report that could ease concern about a new rise in interest rates.

"The economy expanded moderately in January and February despite unusually severe weather in the East and Midwest," the Federal Reserve said in a survey of regional activity.

Even the weather impact was not all gloomy, the report said. Ski resorts and other winter getaways got a boost.

Perhaps more significantly, the survey said, "Overall, only limited price pressures are reported."

Analysts said the jitters of financial markets should be calmed by the findings.

"The report said we have the best of both worlds — fairly solid economic growth with not much inflationary pressure," said Sung Won Sohn, chief economist for Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis.

TSU dean testifies before grand jury

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Southern University's pharmacy college dean and his wife have been called before a grand jury investigating whether questions and answers to state licensing tests were given to students.

Henry Lewis III, dean of the College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences, and wife Marisa Lewis, who reviews test questions, declined to comment about their testimony, on their lawyer's advice, the Houston Chronicle reported today.

Authorities began to look at the school's prestigious pharmacy program after accusations surfaced that students had been cheating on the state pharmacy licensing tests.

The Harris County grand jury is studying whether the law was violated through distribution of the questions and answers prior to the tests.

Off the Ranch, On the Wall

THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Princeton alumnus Watt Matthews can tell you everything you want to know about cattle ranching.

Matthews, a 91-year-old cattle rancher, operates one of West Texas' oldest ranches, Lamshead Ranch, near Albany.

Photographer Laura Wilson has captured Matthews and his ranch in 62 photographs on display at the Texas Tech Museum.

The ranch occupies 62 square miles in Throckmorton and Shackelford counties and has been owned and operated by the Matthews family since the 1850s.

The exhibit is an array of six years of Wilson's work from her book, "Watt Matthews of Lamshead - Photographs by Laura Wilson."

"He is one of the last of the great Texas cattlemen," Wilson wrote.

Except for the four years Matthews attended Princeton, he has spent his entire life at the ranch.

"He carries with him the history of a large part of the cattle industry, from the Civil War to the present," Wilson said.

The exhibition is part of a series of traveling exhibitions the museum accepts every year.

The Watt Matthews exhibition is brought by the Eiteljorg Museum of American Indian and Western Art, said David Dean, associate director of museum operations and programs.

"The exhibition represents the essence of the American West ranch life, and the images that represent that lifestyle," Dean said.

Matthews also has received the Golden Spur Award at the Ranching Heritage Center for outstanding rancher of the year.

"He sets certain standards and has a

City to hold public hearings on arena sites

by NY LYNN NICHOLS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Lubbock's Multipurpose Arena Task Force recommended to City Council members Thursday that a 13,000-seat arena be built on Texas Tech's commuter lot between the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium and Jones Stadium.

Task Force President David Seim said an arena would cost about $3,000 per seat, with the total cost being $39 million. Land acquisition for the commuter lot is at zero cost.

Seim said the task force also recommends the arena be built as soon as possible or within the next five years.

Task Force member Jack Chapman said, "The top three sites have a zero acquisition cost."

The No. 1 ranked site is the commuter lot, the second is at the corner of Fourth Street and Indiana Avenue and the third site is at the South Plains Fairgrounds.

While all three are the least expensive in land acquisition, the Fairgrounds site would have additional costs, Seim said.

"The cost (at the Fairgrounds) would be around an additional $600,000 to reroute Avenue A," he said.

Some council members said there will be greater commercial development in any area the arena is built, but Seim said there is only one site where such development is possible.

"Many people might look to the facility as a measure of economic development," Seim said. "The only area (the task force believes) would have the potential for hotels and restaurants is the Northeast Overton area. Any other location — we really don't see any commercial development around it."

Don Cosby, Texas Tech vice president for fiscal affairs, said alternative parking situations are being studied for the commuter lot site.

"We are going to need to add some additional parking out west of Indiana (Avenue)," Cosby said.

Some council members expressed concern about the amount of parking available at the Fourth

Cosby

Street and Indiana Avenue site, but Cosby said there is not a major parking problem there.

Seim said, "(The arena) is a quality of life issue. Lubbock is a progressive city. In order to attain the kind of events that will give us that quality of life we all desire and expect of ourselves, we feel a larger facility is needed and desired.

"(The task force believes) there's enough interest among citizens of Lubbock today that they should at least be allowed to vote on the issue," Seim said.

The City Council plans to conduct public hearings concerning the arena.

Requirement may not be set in stone

by JENNIFER GILBERT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Faculty Senate's General Education Committee met in December to discuss possible ramifications of a multiculturalism requirement at Texas Tech.

Vice President and Provost Don Haragan charged the committee with "determining how to implement these recommendations," according to a General Education Committee's report.

According to the report, Haragan is not in favor of one or two courses to fulfill the multiculturalism requirement.

A subcommittee was formed to study what criteria should be used to determine what courses could satisfy multicultural content and exposure.

Robert Marlett, faculty senate representative to the General Education Committee, said the issue is not whether the committee supports the multiculturalism requirement, but "how one defines the word 'requirement.'"

He said the committee is researching the addition of a "soft requirement," meaning, "nothing will be nailed down with specific courses."

March Madness

■ Drunken driving big killer of students

by JENNY ANDERSON
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Drinking may be a spring break tradition for some students, but drinking and driving is an activity that kills one person every 30 minutes.

"When you consider how many people are senselessly killed and injured each year in alcohol-related crashes you realize the need to get together on this violent crime," said Brandy Anderson, media relations assistant for the Mothers Against Drunk Driving national office.

Organizations such as Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) and Students Against Drunk Driving (SADD) have been formed to aid the victims of alcohol-related crashes and provide an education to prevent such catastrophes from occurring in the future.

"I think people are becoming aware and afraid of getting caught drinking and driving," said Brandy Hickerson, an accounting major from Bedford.

The cities that have the highest number of alcohol-related crashes are Dallas and Houston, however, Lubbock has its own problem with drinking and driving said Nancy LaRue, an administrative assistant at the MADD Texas office.

"In 1992, 15 people were killed and 465 people injured in alcohol-related crashes in Lubbock," LaRue said.

The Lubbock police have obtained new sophisticated equipment that makes it easier to apprehend drunk drivers, said Tom Cannon, a county court at law judge. Some policemen's vehicles are now equipped with cameras that capture audio and videotape of intoxicated individuals.

Since the city is public property, the police are under no obligation to inform the suspect that he or she is being filmed unless they are asked.

If a person is stopped for suspicion of drinking and driving in Lubbock, the initial procedure consists of a field test. A field test is a series of tasks including repeating the alphabet, standing on one leg, heel to toe walk, counting fingers, the front to back clap, and the astigma-gauge test, where the suspect is required to follow the end of a pen with his or her eyes.

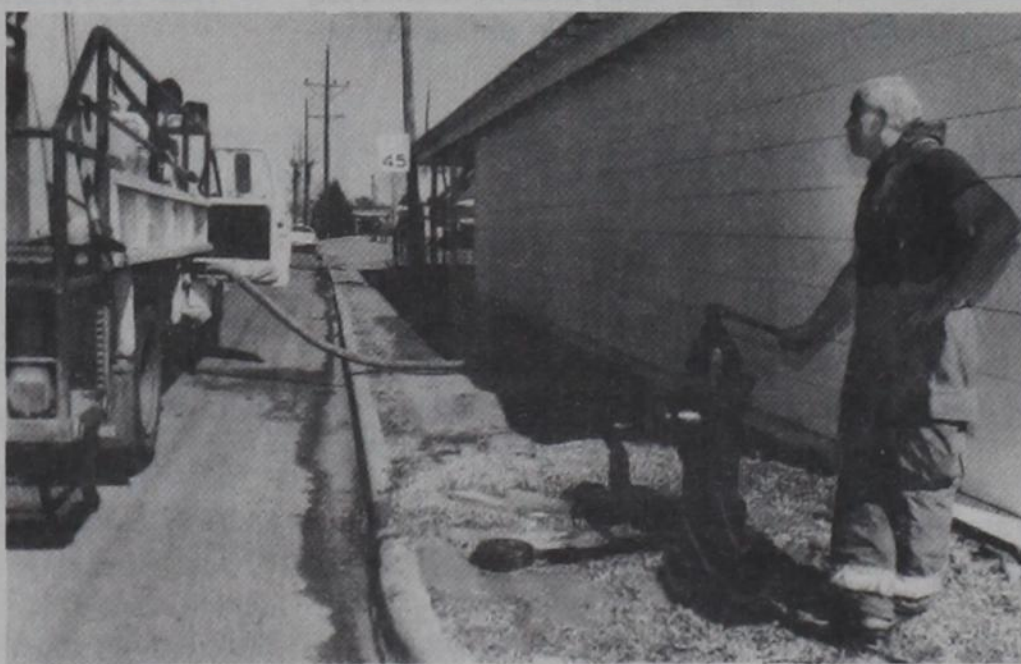

If the results of the field test convince the investigating officer that there is reasonable suspicion that the suspect is intoxicated, an arrest is made. Upon detention a breathalyzer or a urine test is performed on the suspect. Upon conviction, the first drunk driving offense consists of a fine no less than $100 and no more than $2,000. First offenders also must serve no less than 12 hours in jail and no more than two years, according to Cannon.

It took the firemen an hour and a half to stop the fire. The fire was a few hundred feet from Friendship High School. Wolforth Fire Department officials said four departments responded to the call. The fire was started by a passing train spark from a railroad tie.

Life still terrifying for Jews in '90s

BY FRANK RICH

My grandmother, who was no fool, took a strict line on people and events. They fell into two categories: they were either good for the Jews or bad for the Jews.

In the simpler times of the 1950s, the bad-for-the-Jews list began with Hitler, always the gold standard, and descended all the way down to the jerk who elbowed his way to the front of the line at the Woodmont Country Club buffet. In between came Roy Cohn, Meyer Lansky and the Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan.

Good for the Jews were Adlai Stevenson, Abba Eban, Steve Lawrence, Edyie Gorme, Eleanor Roosevelt and Sammy Davis Jr.

About the only public personality I remember being a close call, in my grandmother's eyes, was Elizabeth Taylor, when she converted to Judaism to marry Eddie Fisher after stealing him from Debbie Reynolds. Was this good for the Jews or bad? Though debated with Talmudic intensity up to the intrusion of Richard Burton, the issue was never resolved.

I can imagine my grandmother's voice now adjudicating the likes of Jerry Seinfeld (good for the Jews) and Michael Milken (you have to ask?). But how would she have coped with the recent escalation of bad-for-the-Jews developments? My grandmother was worldly; her parents had known pogroms in the old country and her children had experienced anti-Semitism in the new. Even so, she might not have retained her philosophic equilibrium when hearing of a Jewish terrorist like Baruch Goldstein. Nor would she have easily grasped the news of Hasidic blood spilled on the Brooklyn Bridge.

The more insidious poisons of hate polluting the air might have baffled her still more. For instance, I wonder what my grandmother, who ignored my parents' orders and let me stay up late to watch Jack Parr, would make of the extraordinary late-night talk show Arsenio Hall bestowed upon the nation last Friday night.

Hall's sole guest was Louis Farrakhan. Farrakhan did not turn up to play his violin a la Bill Clinton with his sax. He turned up to spread his message while pretending to conduct a neutral journalistic probe.

Boasting of "my research department," Hall told us that "I've never had this many notes for an interview."

He threw in the names of Jewish friends he had consulted — at least he didn't say they were some of his best friends — and then let his guest filibuster.

Farrakhan explained to an acquiescent Hall that he wasn't a "new black Hitler" because he "never desired to put another human being in an oven" — thank you so very much! — as if this cleared him of all charges of anti-Semitism.

Farrakhan then plugged the anonymously written Nation of Islam book "The Secret Relationship Between Blacks and Jews" — holding up this anti-Semitic screed like a product on QVC and claiming it to be a scholarly work by rabbis and eminent historians. "So if it is anti-Semitic," Farrakhan said, "the Jews themselves are the ones we are quoting."

He attributed the book's fictional thesis, that Jews controlled the slave trade, to a historian from the respected American Jewish Historical Society.

But Hall made no effort to challenge or verify the statement. Had he made a simple phone call before or after the taping to Michael Feldberg, executive director of the Historical Society, he would have learned that that organization has clocked 84 distortions of fact in the first chapter alone of this pseudo-historical tome.

Later Farrakhan complimented his host as "not just an entertainer" but "a man of principle."

What this supposed man of principle failed to see is any connection between Farrakhan's loose talk and rising violence against Jews. Farrakhan, who is not stupid, had scored a victory. "Arsenio" gave him a wider audience beyond the partisans who might watch a Nation of Islam broadcast, a serious news program or a college address.

Thus was "The Secret Relationship Between Blacks and Jews" sugar-coated as mass entertainment — on a show produced by that most prized of American media companies, Paramount, no less. In the tinderbox we live in now, a far cry from my grandmother's secure 1950s, this isn't just bad for the Jews but terrifying.

A few thoughts to pick at your brain

KENNETH BOBO

Since I'm sure most of the UD readers have taken the day off for various and sundry reasons, I will not expand on any one controversial issue. Rather, I'll just spit out a few things that are on my mind.

Has anyone ever considered that maybe Tonya Harding is innocent. It's been almost three months since Nancy Kerrigan was piñatad in Detroit. You could get a case against the Pope in three months.

I hate redundancy in words, so please refrain from the following terms: Rio Grande River, SAT test, armed gunman, PUF fund...

I am the biggest Michael Jackson fan in the world so I'm a bit biased. I could easily see MJ playing with some kid and letting him come into the private areas of his mansion.

What does it say for the boy's family who allowed their son to spend the night at a grown man's house. Another thing, if somebody sexually molested my son, brother or relative in any manner there would be no amount of money that will keep me from settling this matter.

Settling out of court is a common practice and is not an admission of guilt. Quit picking on Mike.

Rap music is in fact music. If not, then why is it a Grammy category. Snoopy Doggy Dog, Dr. Dre and Cypress Hill have all had number one albums on the pop charts.

The funny thing is that a lot of the people who hate rap are the same people who fought and defended that blasphemous thing called rock 'n' roll in the '50s and '60s.

Speaking of r&r, I can't believe L.L. Cool J will attempt to play Jimi Hendrix. That's like Gary Coleman playing Shaq O'Neal. Jimi Hendrix is the greatest guitar player of all time. He was a lyrical genius who died too soon. Denzel, Denzel, Denzel!!!

If the nation was as concerned with the economy, the deficit and the health care situation as it is about every rumor and character accusation against the First Family this could be Utopia.

I miss Josh Mora. This could turn into a real stink. If the administration wants to save a lot of problems and rumors they might want to give a little more detail about Josh's dismissal. The press will not stop digging. In every controversy there is a career to be made.

Josh did initiate Unity Day. Big mistake. This campus is not unified across the races. There is no need or room for idealism in a progressive society. Face it.

Go see "Shindler's List." Take your kids and explain to them the realism of the situation. My parents were straight with me about the Holocaust, and that movie still haunts me.

Just think, some of the perpetrators of this crime walk the streets of America today.

After seeing that movie read "Roots" and see true American history.

When you think about it Rush Limbaugh and Louis Farrakhan are mirror images of each other.

Think about it...

Finally if anyone goes to Padre and sees a pair of black and red Air Jordan's on the beach could you please return them to me. I left them there two years ago.

Saving the hardest assignment for last — writing mentor's obit

JOE MURRAY

Clayte Binion Jr., one of the last of the old-time journalists, began his career pushing a broom at the small-town newspaper his father had co-founded. When he retired some 50 years later, he was executive editor of the Houston Chronicle. He would have been 82 years old on his next birthday, June 7.

Sara Dell, Clayte's wife, called last week to tell me he had died a few hours earlier.

"He went the way he wanted," she said.

Clayte was hospitalized several days ago after suffering a heart attack, but had been in good spirits and responding to treatment.

That morning, he told his wife, "I feel dizzy."

"Then he was gone," Sara Dell said.

A lot of newspaper history went with him. Here are my three favorite Clayte Binion stories:

Story No. 1: How Clayte got his first job.

He was barely in his teens. His father phoned him one day.

"Come down to the newspaper," Mr. Binion said, "I've got a job for you Sonny Boy." His father always called him Sonny Boy.

The job was sweeping up the office.

In time, he was promoted to carrier boy.

Later, he also worked as a printer's devil, an apprentice in the composing room, which was in the old tradition of journalism — a newspaperman who knew the business from the front office to the back shop.

Story No. 2: How Clayte got his first byline.

It came not on the Lufkin newspaper, but the Beaumont Enterprise when he was working part-time as the newspaper's regional correspondent. It was on a spring-like day in 1937.

Sara Dell remembers it all too well.

"We were at our pre-nuptial party when word of the New London school explosion came," she said. "Clayte jumped in his car and rushed to New London, leaving me and the party."

The New London disaster, March 18, 1937, left 296 students and faculty dead. Clayte's report from the scene was the lead story in the next day's Beaumont Enterprise.

Story No. 3: How Clayte got beat up and still got the story.

Soon after they were married, Clayte went to work for the Lufkin newspaper as a reporter. He looked the part, like someone out of the "Front Page."

Somewhere in the files there's a picture of him with a snap-brim hat pushed back on his head, an old-style telephone cocked at his ear and a cigarette on his lip as he bangs away at a typewriter.

Years later when I was a cub reporter they would still tell the story about the day Clayte went to cover a strike at a construction site near Lufkin.

The strikers, not so impressed with this brash young representative of the First Amendment, roughed him up and broke his camera.

A short while later, Clayte stalked back into the newsroom, his eye blackened and his coat ripped, grabbed another Speed Graphic and again headed out the door.

This time with another reporter driving his car, he roared up to the strikers, snapped their picture from the window of the car and then took off with them in pursuit. The story and picture were in that day's edition.

Clayte was Houston Chronicle managing editor while I was the Chronicle's East Texas correspondent stationed in Lufkin during the 1960s.

When I left the Chronicle, it was to become editor of the newspaper his family once owned. All these years, I've sort of felt like Clayte was still my boss.

When Sara Dell called, she said Clayte had wanted me to write his obituary.

It was his last assignment for me.

He saved the hardest one for me.

Range and wildlife students from throughout U.S. to visit Tech

by LESLIE WEEKS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Students from as far away as Idaho and Montana will converge on the Texas Tech campus this weekend for the 30th annual Western Wildlife Student Conclave.

Members of Tech's Range and Wildlife club will host the event.

Stephen Demarais, associate professor of Range and Wildlife Management, said the western United States annually hosts a wildlife conclave.

"The location of the conclave rotates among the states," he said. "This year it is Texas' turn and Texas Tech sponsors it."

Conclave events include a quiz bowl competition, panel discussions, a presentation of student papers, a dance and an awards banquet.

The conclave begins Friday with registration at the Goddard range and wildlife building.

All other events will take place in the business administration building, room 358, beginning with the quiz bowl competition Saturday.

"It is kind of like a college bowl academic competition," Demarais said. "It is an academic competition dealing with wildlife related knowledge."

Conclave Chairperson Diana Perv Harris said the competition is very competitive and said it allows students to see which university is being taught the most.

A dance, featuring a wildlife contest, takes place Saturday night.

"I spoke to some people from (another university attending)," Harris said. "They told me they had enrolled in courses in Western dancing so they can dance here."

Demarais said the contest requires each school's representatives to mimic wildlife behavior.

Other school representatives have to guess what the participants are mimicking and must choose the best and worst, he said.

Sunday will begin with a presentation of student papers.

Students from various universities will be entering and competing for the best paper, Demarais said.

Presentations will be made Sunday by wildlife related professionals such as Peggy Horner, a representative from the Texas Parks and Wildlife department, and Wyman Meinzer, a nationally known wildlife photographer.

A panel discussion about biodiversity and an awards banquet will conclude Sunday's events.

Students may return home or may participate in optional field trips Monday.

Demarais said 11 schools will be coming to the conclave, and said it was scheduled during Spring Break to allow the schools time to attend the convention and return home, Demarais said.

"They won't get to experience the full flavor of Texas Tech, but they will be able to travel to get here," he said. "We won't have to worry about conflicts with classes."

Though the conclave focuses on range and wildlife people or on members of wildlife clubs at other universities, Demarais said other students are welcome to attend.

Reading skills low in Texas

AUSTIN (AP)—Parents with poor literacy skills may pass down that sad legacy to their children, who aren't read to or helped with homework, education officials said Thursday in reviewing a Texas survey on the problem.

State Board of Education members said they hoped to conduct a further study and make legislative recommendations to help with adult literacy.

The survey — which was released last fall but analyzed in more detail before Thursday's board presentation — found that reading and writing skills of more than one-quarter of Texas' 12.7 million adults were at the lowest measured level.

The best those at that level could do was perform basic tasks, such as totaling a deposit slip or finding a single piece of information in a short story. Some couldn't do that much.

Of the people in that lowest group on reading skills, 52 percent said they had not been helped with school work or been read to by parents or guardians. In the more skilled categories, more people had such help.

"It's kind of a self-fulfilling prophecy," said board Chairwoman Carolyn Crawford of Beaumont. "If the parent is not literate, then they can't help you with your homework. They can't read to you, and the likelihood is that you are more prone to remain in the lowest level of literacy."

"How do we break out of that cycle? — That's of course the great challenge of education," Ms. Crawford said.

Not all condoms equal in durability, STD prevention

by CHRISTY EVERETT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Many people may consider all condoms to be the same, but a recent study determined that condoms may vary in effectiveness.

A study conducted by the Mariposa Foundation, a non-profit research organization, found that not all condoms are the same in providing protection against sexually transmitted diseases.

More than 1,000 condoms were tested to learn about the limitations condoms have during sexual intercourse.

"The overall objective was to conduct a study into viral leakage," said Frances Larose, a spokeswoman for the Mariposa Foundation. "We wanted to generate awareness in the differences found in condom brands."

According to the report, the study attempted to record the risk of sexually contracting the HIV infection in relation to condom usage.

Larose said she hopes the study also will help to increase the amount of research conducted about condom effectiveness.

"Given today's STD and AIDS crisis, it is essential that government agencies and research organizations study the effectiveness of condoms in preventing the spread of infection," the report stated. "Currently, consumers in the U.S. can obtain more information and data about the performance of a refrigerator than they can about a condom."

The study was a follow-up and a control to an earlier National Institutes of Health Study.

"I hope this is just the beginning and that more studies are conducted," Larose said. "We hope the report will encourage more universities and other groups to do their own studies."

Another purpose of the study was to increase awareness about the differences in condoms. Larose said she believes most individuals do not realize that not all condoms are alike.

"It is not only students that don't know there is a difference," Larose said. "Many adults do not know."

Robin Brewton, health education coordinator for Student Health Services, said she believes the main difference in condom effectiveness is found between latex and animal skin condoms.

"Anything made out of natural skins or membranes is not effective against STDs and viruses," she said.

Brewton said she believes most latex condoms are effective against viruses and STDs.

She said she believes the amount of research completed on condoms and the protection ability available is sufficient.

"I think more research needs to be completed on effective ways to get sexually active people to stop having unprotected sex instead of additional research on condoms," Brewton said.

Sunburn not only Spring Break danger

by JENNY ANDERSON
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

As spring break approaches, many students are planning an excursion to South Padre Island, one of the most prominent vacation spots during the spring break season, according to the South Padre Island Police Department.

When anticipating the week of fun and excitement, there are some additional plans that students should incorporate into their adventure, said Kim Sanchez, an officer with the department.

"If you're going to party, that's fine, that's what spring break is for. But always be aware and cautious, and most importantly, use the buddy system," Sanchez said.

Just as spring breakers plan to take along the right bathing suit and the right amount of money, they also should plan to protect themselves from crime so that the vacation will not include any unpleasant surprises, she said.

The end of February to the second week of April marks the spring break season for South Padre Island. Shortly after the end of the spring break season, South Padre police officers begin to prepare for the arrival of the following season's spring break crowd, Sanchez said.

Police officers undergo additional training and make sure the patrol cars are in perfect condition so they will not have to take time away from crime control to have the cars repaired, Sanchez said. South Padre police officers work extended shifts of 10 hours, and they work six days a week instead of five in order to minimize the amount of crime.

Many people encounter unexpected crime during the time they spend at South Padre Island, and nine out of 10 of the crimes are committed by other spring breakers, Sanchez said.

There are two main situations where theft occurs, she said.

People bring expensive jewelry and items like CD players, then they have several people stay in one hotel room and only two keys. They leave the room unsecured so people without keys can get in. When they come back, their things are gone, Sanchez said.

"If planning a trip to South Padre for spring break, leave expensive jewelry at home or plan on wearing it the whole time," she said.

The second situation is when a student meets someone on the beach who seems trustworthy. Students often allow strangers to stay in their hotel room.

When they wake up in the morning, they have been robbed, Sanchez said.

Angela Blanton, a junior management information systems major from Carrollton, became a victim of theft last spring break in South Padre Island. Halfway through the week, $80 was stolen from her purse at a party.

"I remember thinking, I'm going to be real hungry for the rest of the week, and I felt bad because of all the money I had to borrow from my friends," Blanton said. "I was real depressed."

Students should leave expensive items at home and only carry small denominations of money.

Columnist, author to address Friends of Library

by LARA M. CAMPBELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Humor manages to touch just about everyone's life in some way. Writer and Texas Tech English lecturer Sara McLaughlin will speak about "The Ingredients of Humor," her bi-weekly column in the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, at 7 p.m. today at the Godeke Branch Library at 66th and Quaker Avenue. She will speak as part of the Friends of the Library Spring Speaker Series. For more than five years, the speaker series has tried to recognize local writers.

"The speaker series is an opportunity for us to get to know people who have made a contribution to our community," said Eileen Goggin, public relations chairman for the Friends of the Library.

McLaughlin has written several scholarly articles on C.S. Lewis and G.K. Chesterton and has written on theological issues. Last year she published her first book, "Meeting God in Silence," a book on Christian spirituality. She has written for the Avalanche-Journal for six years.

"I usually get my ideas (for the column) through observing human nature," McLaughlin said. "I tend to have a serious point that I want to make about human nature." McLaughlin said she feels there is an odd connection between humor and Christianity. She said both Christianity and humor are based on truth and that often people will read humor when they will not read serious subject matter.

She currently is working on two more books, one on paradoxes and Christianity and one is a collection of prayers of St. Augustine.

The Friends of the Library is a group that supports the Lubbock area libraries. Each year the group has a book sale to raise funds for local libraries.

Last year it raised $33,000 which was donated to the libraries.

broad social view," said Bob Green, neighboring rancher. "He's given Albany a reputation for square dealing in the cattle business."

Museum coordinators said the photographs would be popular in this area.

"We brought (the exhibit) because the subject matter falls within the museum's mission of regional subject matter, and because of the good quality of work," Dean said.

Wilson will discuss her work at a reception at 6 p.m., April 7 at the museum.

Admission to the museum and the lecture is free.

Alternative schizophrenia treatment receives criticism

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One schizophrenic committed suicide. Another tried to go to Washington to kill the president. Both were subjects of a federally approved university experiment in which their medication was withheld and they suffered relapses.

A preliminary federal report obtained by The Associated Press criticizes the University of California, Los Angeles, for failing to warn the patients adequately about risks and alternative treatments.

In the UCLA experiment, the federal Office of Protection from Research Risks found inadequacies even though the patients signed forms acknowledging "my condition may improve, worsen or remain unchanged."

The study was designed to look at patients recently diagnosed with schizophrenia and weigh the benefits and disadvantages of drug treatment. Side effects of the drugs can include uncontrollable motor movements that may become irreversible.

Schizophrenia is characterized by delusions, hallucinations, depression and inability to think clearly.

In May 1993, researchers completed the part of the study in which medication was withdrawn, said Dr. Keith Nuechterlein, a clinical psychologist and co-director of the study. The drug involved was Prolixin, a commonly used treatment for psychotic illnesses.

The families of two patients complained to the NIH, prompting the review, and sued UCLA.

"They just left out all the bad stuff," said Robert Aller, whose son was enrolled in the study from March 1988 to March 1991.

Tech's Tim James fits mold of typical pole vaulter

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

In some sports you have to be just a little bit crazy to excel.

The pole vault is one of these.

Meet Texas Tech senior Tim James, the 1994 Southwest Conference indoor pole vault champion.

"If you ever meet a sane pole vaulter they usually don't last very long," James said. "If you ever doubt yourself, get scared or nervous that's when you either miss or get hurt."

James left Thursday for Indianapolis to compete in the NCAA Indoor Championships on Saturday.

"I'm ranked No. 13 right now," he said. "I'm not picked to win it, so I have nothing to lose. It's an honor just to get to go."

James has overcome adversity to get to where he is today. In his junior season at Tech, he finished second in the SWC meet but has faced recurring knee injuries. His injuries forced him to undergo a double arthroscopic surgery on both knees simultaneously last October.

"It was originally a high school injury," James said. "It was my left knee and I got to where I was favoring it, so I messed up my right knee."

James said the key to the vault is the run to the bar.

"I try to have a good run to the takeoff," he said. "I know if I have a good run and a plant (the placement of the pole) the rest of the vault is basically physics and momentum."

James said anytime he steps on the runway he knows he can make the bar.

"If you think you can do it, there's not many things that can hold you back," James, a junior college transfer from South Plains, has excelled in the sport since junior high. He captured the junior college national championship four times at SPC, with a personal best of 17-9.

He said his most memorable meet was when he captured the pole vault title at the SWC Indoor Championships in Fort Worth.

"It didn't look like I was going to have a very good day at first," James said.

James

SHARON M. STEINMAN: THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Assistant track coach and vaulting specialist Brad Pursley said he was impressed with James' performance under pressure at the SWC meet.

"He was down and looking at fifth," Pursley said. "He came back and did what he needed to do to win it."

Pursley said James has a history of rising to the occasion in big meets.

"I think he has a good chance to do well this weekend as well as have a good outdoor campaign," Pursley said. "Tim is very consistent as far as his technique goes. He's worked really hard."

Pursley said James is one of the best vaulters Tech has ever had.

"Eventually the key for him will be his speed," Pursley said.

Pursley said it takes a certain amount of "bravado" and "guts" to take a 16-foot pole and run down the runway.

"Tim doesn't have a confidence problem," Pursley said. "He's not scared to change poles in competition if he has too, which is a problem for some vaulters."

Dallas' Norton, Casillas considering other offers

FORT WORTH (AP) — Dallas Cowboys defensive leaders Ken Norton and Tony Casillas are considering lucrative free-agent offers from other teams, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Thursday.

Norton told the newspaper he has been unofficially offered a multi-year contract from the San Francisco 49ers.

"I'm leaning that way," said Norton, the Pro Bowl middle linebacker whom the 49ers have atop their shopping list. "I guess you'd call their offer unofficial. But they are interested, and it could be a deal that allows me to finish out my career there."

Casillas said he has "an official offer on the table" from the Chicago Bears that would pay him $1.5 million per year.

Bears defensive coordinator Bob Slowik phoned Wednesday to urge him to sign quickly so he could attend the beginning of the team's off-season workout program next week, Casillas said.

Casillas also said the Green Bay Packers are among the National Football League teams that have talked of exceeding the Bears' proposal.

"(The Cowboys) have already set their parameters," Casillas said. "And if you're not in the top three (stars of the team), everything else changes."

He said he could make a decision this week, but that timetable could be complicated by the impending birth of a second daughter with his wife, Angela.

"They've already lost one defensive tackle (Jimmie Jones, who signed with the Los Angeles Rams). So it seems like if they lose me, it would be a tough blow," Casillas said.

Tech expects tough matchup against SMU

by LEN HAYWARD
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

DALLAS — Texas Tech's 10-game winning streak in the Dr Pepper Conference Classic will be put to the test today against Southern Methodist.

The two teams will face off in the second game of the semifinals at 2 p.m. today in Reunion Arena. The Lady Raiders are coming off a 103-55 win over Texas Christian in the first round of the Classic at Moody Coliseum.

Tech was led by Connie Robinson with 22 points in the contest Wednesday night.

Noel Johnson currently is one of the hottest shooters in the country after hitting 14 of her last 17 three-point attempts. Johnson hit four three-pointers against TCU and finished with 14 points.

"SMU played really well today," head coach Marsha Sharp said after SMU beat Houston in other first-round action.

"I think they got a mental boost from getting (Kim) Brungardt back. We will be ready for a physical game."

There will be more pressure on us in this game than we've ever experienced in our history.

Rhonda Rompola
SMU women's basketball coach

Tech owns an 18-9 record in tournament play and has made the finals every year since 1988.

The Lady Mustangs defeated Houston 82-73 Wednesday at Moody Coliseum and are hoping for a NCAA bid after the tournament.

"There will be more pressure on us in this game than we've ever experienced in our history," SMU head coach Rhonda Rompola said. "The result of this game may decide how far we advance in the postseason."

SMU was led by Mary Gleason and Leslie Frazier, each with 20 points against the Lady Cougars.

"Having a chance to go to the NCAA Tournament is a position we've worked for here for a number of years," Rompola said.

TOURNAMENT NOTES

- The Lady Raiders have shot at least 52.9 percent from the floor over the last five halves. During that span Tech is shooting 57.4 percent.
- Tech has scored 50 or more points in a single half eight times this season. The Lady Raiders scored 60 in the first half against Texas A&M on March 5, the most thus far.
- After shooting 63.9 percent from the floor Wednesday, Tech bolstered its field goal percentage from 49.9 percent to 50.1 percent on the season. Last year Tech shot 51.9 percent from the floor en route to the national championship.

Texas A&M too much for SMU, 85-66

DALLAS (AP) — Guard David Edwards and forward Joe Wilbert erased a 13-point deficit with a second-half charge that brought Texas A&M an 85-66 victory over Southern Methodist on Thursday in the Der Pepper Southwest Conference postseason classic tournament quarterfinals.

The Aggies (18-9), who finished tied for second in the SWC regular season, play Texas Tech in Friday night's semifinals. The Red Raiders whipped Houston 110-86 earlier at Reunion Arena.

SMU finished the Mustangs with a 6-21 record. The Mustangs had defeated A&M 64-57 two weeks ago at Moody Coliseum, but the Mustangs went cold in the second half as they withered under the Aggie full-court press.

Edwards had his third triple-double of the year with 26 points, 12 rebounds and 14 assists. He hit 8-of-8 free throws and was 7-of-18 from the field.

Wilbert scored 21 points for the Aggies and Brett Murry produced 14 points and 14 rebounds.

James Gatewood was high for SMU with 14 points.

A second-half 16-2 Aggie run that brought a 45-all tie was capped by a 3-point shot by Edwards.

Texas A&M stretched the lead to 58-51 with 14:33 to go on a 3-point play by Tony McGinnis.

SMU built a 33-20 lead on a layup by Troy Mathews at the 5:29 mark of the first half, but the Aggies cut the deficit to 45-38 on a 3-point shot by Edwards just before the buzzer.

Texas A&M coach Tony Barone said Edward's 3-point shot at the end of the first half was big.

"It cut their lead under double figures and we got the ball at the start of the second half," Barone said. "It was a big momentum swing."

Barone chewed out his team at intermission, challenging them to "step up to the table."

"We were just sleepwalking in the first half. I really got on 'em at there.

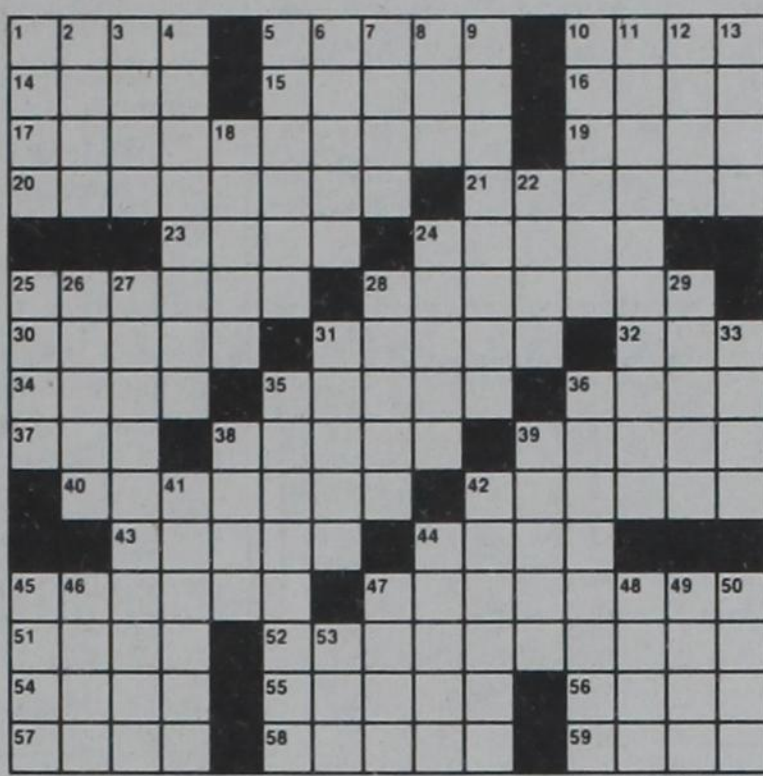

"There's no doubt David carried us today," Barone said. "He had a triple-double and we got a lot of easy baskets off his passes."

Edwards said he was going to do anything it took to win.

"I just want to win," Edwards said. "I didn't want to take the game over. I just wanted to get everybody going."

Tech beats Houston in record-setting performance

by LEN HAYWARD
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

DALLAS — Texas Tech continues to answer the questions many had of this team at the beginning of the season.

One of those questions was, could this team repeat as champions in the tournament?

The Red Raiders made a giant step toward answering that question by defeating Houston 110-86 in the first round of the Dr Pepper Southwest Conference Classic at Reunion Arena in Dallas.

The Raiders had three players with 20 points or more, while they hit a tourney record 42 shots from the free-throw line against the Cougars.

"I was concerned about this game today and they (Houston) were coming in with momentum," Tech head coach James Dickey said. "We had to do two things: One, shoot the ball well from the perimeter and two, we had to do a good job defensively. We did that."

With the win, Tech's record is now 17-10. Houston finished the season with an 8-19 mark.

The win was the Raiders' seventh in a row — the longest winning streak by a Tech men's team since 1985.

Tech's next opponent is Texas A&M in the semifinals of the tournament.

The Aggies defeated Southern Methodist Thursday 85-66 even though they were down at half-time 45-38. Texas A&M outscored SMU 47-21 in the second half to take control.

Game time is scheduled for 8 p.m. today at Reunion Arena.

The 110 points Tech scored against Houston Thursday was the fourth-highest in tournament history.

The Raiders are the first team to score more than 100 since the Arkansas Razorbacks did it in 1979.

"You really have no chance to win when a team goes to the free-throw line as much as they did," Houston head coach Alvin Brooks said.

Tech shot 72.4 percent from the charity stripe, making 42 of 58 shots.

"This team has gotten better. They understand that you have to play defense," Dickey said. "They understand they have to rebound well and they understand you have to hit free throws to win games."

The Raiders' largest lead of the game came at the 11:13 mark in the second half when Lance Hughes hit a layup, making the score 76-52.

Hughes finished the game with 24 points, while hitting four of nine shots from behind the three-point stripe.

In the last two tournament games against Houston, Hughes has scored 51 points, including 27 in last year's championship game.

"(Houston) presses so hard and double teams a lot and that leaves some open area," Hughes said. "It is easy to shoot with no guys on you and I just hit them."

Mark Davis led the team in scoring with 27 points, hitting 15 free throws. Sasser added 23 points with seven field goals.

"I thought we answered a lot of questions today about our free-throw shooting," Davis said. "The guys stepped up, concentrated and knocked down the free throws."

After Houston took a 14-11 lead with 14:19 left in the first stanza, Tech went on a 30-6 scoring barrage that was helped by almost perfect free-throw shooting.

During the stretch the Raiders hit 10 of 11 shots from the charity stripe.

Tech tied the game at 14-14 after Hughes hit his second three-pointer of the game with 14:07 left in the half.

"We have an out-of-bounds play where Gionet Cooper sets a screen for me to try to get me an open shot," Hughes said. "He set two good screens early in the game, and Koy Smith's inbound pass was perfect, and I was fortunate enough to hit those shots and get off to a good start."

The Raiders' largest lead of the half was at the 5:55 mark when Davis hit two free throws to make the score 43-22.

Davis and Hughes led Tech in scoring with 13 points each, while the 52 points was the second-highest first half total this season.

TOURNAMENT NOTES

- Tech guard Chad Collins wore jersey No. 34 Thursday after his own No. 3 jersey was inadvertently left in Lubbock. No. 34 belongs to freshman Jason Hamm, who is redshirting this season.

- Davis made a tourney record 15 free throws. The old record was 14 by Houston's Rob Williams against Rice in 1980 and by Tech's Phil Wallace against Texas A&M in 1985.

- Tech's 24-point margin of victory was its largest ever in tournament history. The Raiders' previous largest margin was 22 points against SMU in a first-round game in Lubbock in 1981.

Bryant, Tech prepare for SWC play against TCU

Third base is not a new position for Texas Tech's Clint Bryant.

Coach Larry Hays decided to move Bryant even though he was a consensus All-Southwest Conference player in left field as a freshman.

"Coach said he was thinking about moving me but wasn't sure," Bryant said. "I played third and pitched in high school. I like third better. You are more into the game than you are when you are in the outfield."

However, the sophomore from Lubbock's Monterey High School has had some trouble with the move, committing eight errors so far this season.

"Third is a lot different in college," he said. "The ball is hit harder and quicker. There are a lot of shots down the line. I am still not satisfied with the way I play. There are some plays I should be making."

Bryant has remained productive at the plate. He is hitting .333 and tied a school record with three doubles in one game against Wyoming Monday.

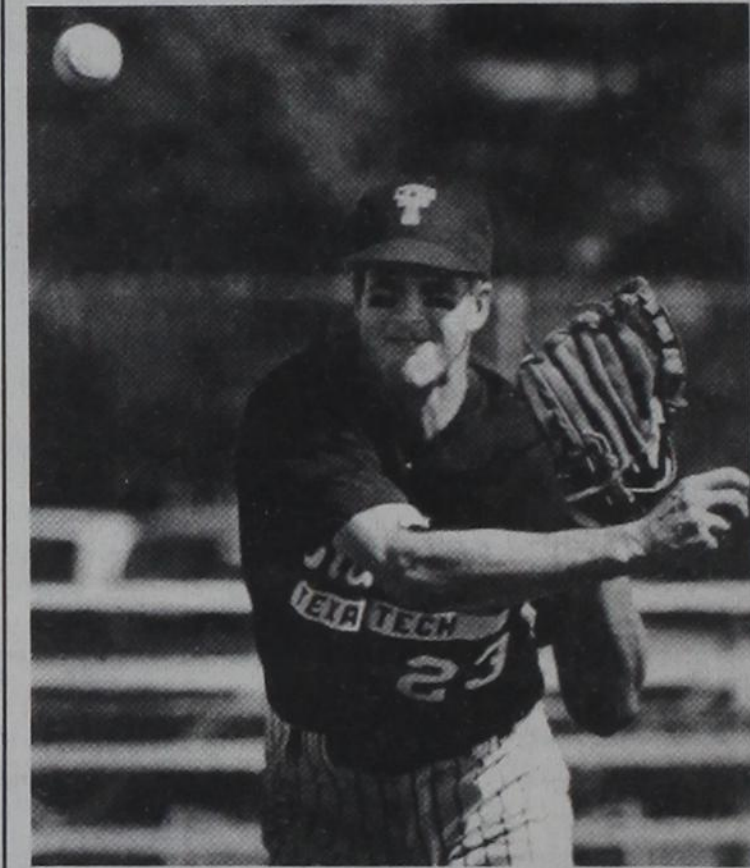

"I really like hitting because it is you against the pitcher," he said. "It is all competition. The fast ball is my favorite to hit. It doesn't fool you. It is quick. The curve can get in front of you."

Bryant said one of his dreams came true when he received a call from Hays.

"I grew up a Tech fan," he admitted, "and jumped at the opportunity. At first I wanted to be drafted out of high school and kind of get out of town and live on my own, but I would never change anything."

Bryant and the rest of the Raiders (14-6) begin conference play against Texas Christian at 7 p.m. today at Dan Law Field. He said he expects strong competition this season from the SWC.

Ryan Nye will get the start for the Raiders today and Jason Whittle will be called upon for Saturday's first game.
