City to help businesses, residents affected by freeway

Incentives to encourage those displaced by East-West freeway to stay in community

The state of Texas, the city of Lubbock and several Lubbock banks have joined together to help businesses and neighborhoods affected by the construction of the East-West Freeway.

Texas Senator John Montford, D-Lubbock; city council members; representatives from the Texas Department of Transportation and from Lubbock banks met Thursday at City Hall to announce a financial incentive package designed to encourage business owners and residents in the impacted areas to remain in those communities to ensure economic stability.

Mayor David Langston said the incentive package is a result of concerns voiced by the public about constructing the East-West Freeway.

"I think we are going to demonstrate to you there is a new relationship between the government and business here in Lubbock," Langston said.

The East-West Freeway will bring about $280 million into the Lubbock and West Texas economy, but some businesses will be forced to relocate, he said.

Montford said the state and city are sensitive to the needs of the people who have to relocate their residences or businesses.

"With the attitude of working with our citizens, it will greatly enhance the quality of our project," Montford said. "I would submit to you in the final analysis, it's an A+ for our town and an A+ for our area."

Gary Lawrence, executive vice-president at First National Bank in Lubbock, said there will be two loan programs available in the incentive package.

The first program will provide preferential loans for the area along 4th Street, just west of University Avenue to east of Avenue Q, Lawrence said.

Loans under the first program will be offered at fixed interest rates, and the rate will be lower than the standard market rate, he said. Individual loans will be given up to a total of $500,000 to any one borrower under the first program, Lawrence said.

The second program covers the remainder of the area affected by the East-West Freeway and a total of $55 million has been allotted to be loaned at market rates and terms subject to each individual bank's guidelines, he said.

The loan incentive package will be more than adequate to allow businesses to relocate within the designated areas, Lawrence said.

"We are excited about being a part of this East-West Freeway and lessening the impact on the businesses and people in this area," he said.

Councilman Victor Hernandez said the incentive package represents the city of Lubbock responding to the wants and needs of the community.

"With the East-West Freeway came a lot of concerns," Hernandez said. "I think what has been outlined today is going to help alleviate the fears of those directly North and South of the project."

Graduate Council proposes change in BA exam requirements

by JENNIFER GILBERT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech Graduate Council approved the Capstone course proposal Thursday to replace the comprehensive graduate exams in the College of Business Administration.

Graduate School Associate Dean Thomas Langford said the idea was to devise a course in lieu of the comprehensive graduate exams.

Bob Phillips, associate dean in the College of Business Administration, said the Capstone courses would integrate all previous graduate courses for graduate business administration students during their final semester.

He said faculty will monitor the demand for the courses, as well as forecast who will need the course each semester.

"We will be student oriented and Serviceplus oriented," Phillips said.

Ralph Bravoco, Information Systems and Quantitative Sciences associate professor, said the Capstone courses for the management information systems program will cover the seven required major core courses.

"It would be much more comprehensive than a comprehensive exam," he said.

Graduate Dean Clyde Hendrick said a national trend of business schools is getting away from comprehensive final exams and leaning toward the Capstone exams.

"The (national) trend is strongly in this direction," he said.

The Graduate Council also discussed proposed guidelines for doctoral course registration and two Test of English as a Foreign Language workshops.

Hendrick said the proposed Tech guidelines include a maximum enrollment of 13 credit hours per long semester or six credit hours during the summer terms.

"These guidelines seem to handle our needs here at Tech," Hendrick said.

According to the proposed guidelines, "a doctoral student not on campus who is required to register solely for the purpose of satisfying a continuous enrollment requirement shall be required to register for no more than one credit hour during each term."

Hendrick said there is no reason for doctoral students to enroll in three credit hours to maintain registration.

The guidelines also state, "...a doctoral student not on campus who is involved in internship, research or other type of academic study shall register for credit hours in proportion to the teaching effort required of the program faculty."

The council discussed that Sharon Myers, classical and modern languages and literatures assistant professor, will give two workshops next week about the new grading system for the TOEFL language exam.

Music tool for reaching out to community

Delta Sigma Theta sorority to host Gospel Fest Sunday

by JAKE RIGDON
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Delta Sigma Theta sorority is looking to reach out to the Lubbock community as well as Texas Tech through the gospel.

The sorority will conduct the first Delta Sigma Theta Gospel Fest at 6 p.m. Sunday in the Agape Church of God in Christ Temple.

The theme for the gospel fest is "He's Worthy to be Praised."

"It is an opportunity to join hands with the Lubbock community to provide adequate shelter and scholarships," said Kandace Barnett, a senior advertising major from Dallas and president of Delta Sigma Theta.

Tickets cost $5 with the proceeds going to Habitat for Humanity and the Gwen Titus Scholarship Fund.

Tickets are being sold at Cavalier's Pharmacy and at the door.

Habitat for Humanity is a nationwide, non-profit organization established to provide shelter for needy people.

Gwen Titus is a charter founder for Eta Lambda, the local chapter of Delta Sigma Theta, and recently received a Woman of the Year award.

The scholarship is given to an incoming freshman, Barnett said.

The reason for the gospel fest, said chairperson Micki McDonald, is to reach out to the community.

"We reach out to Tech all the time, and we want to show the community we are here for everybody," said McDonald.

McDonald said the gospel fest is not to push anyone into any religion, but she said it will be educational and uplifting for everyone who attends.

"Something like this is not really seen here, especially within a collegiate town, but we encourage everyone to learn and see what it is all about," McDonald said.

Choirs from Lubbock and surrounding communities from Amarillo to Midland will perform.

Workshop covers tornado safety tips

by LESLIE WEEKS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Flying debris, black swirling clouds and scenes of destruction and ruin began warning coordination meteorologist Larry Vannozi's tornado workshop Thursday.

The workshop, featuring slides and tornado footage, was sponsored by the Texas Tech chapter of the American Meteorological Society.

The workshop was designed to increase public awareness of the dangers of the tornado season, which began this month and lasts through June.

Vannozi defined a tornado as a violently rotating column of air that extends from a thunderstorm and touches the ground.

He said tornadoes could be classified in three different ways.

A weak tornado has wind speeds of about 100 to 110 miles per hour and its width can be measured in yards, Vannozi said.

It is on the ground five to six minutes.

"This type of tornado occurs 75 to 80 percent of the time," Vannozi said. "They occur most of the time, but don't account for many fatalities."

A strong tornado, which occurs 25 percent of the time, has wind speeds ranging from 110 to 200 miles per hour and is on the ground 10 to 20 minutes.

A violent tornado has wind speeds of 200 to 300 miles per hour and may stay on the ground for up to an hour.

Its width is much wider than weak and strong tornadoes, sometimes measuring over a mile, Vannozi said.

"A violent tornado accounts for 1 to 2 percent of all the tornadoes across the United States every year," he said. "They produce maybe 75 to 80 percent of all the fatalities."

Vannozi said Lubbock is located in tornado alley, which is an area ranging from North and West Texas to Kansas and Oklahoma.

Tornadoes are more likely to occur in this area than anywhere else, he said.

Vannozi said 1,139 tornadoes occurred last year, and the average number of tornadoes in Texas was 137.

Though tornadoes are usually considered one of the most deadly forms of severe weather, Vannozi said they ranked third in the average number of weather fatalities that occur each year.

Vannozi said there were 146 deaths resulting from floods, 80 deaths from lightning, 69 fatalities from tornadoes and 17 deaths from hurricanes.

"Flash floods are the number one killers," he said.

"If your car weighs 3,000 pounds it only takes two feet of water to displace it."

Vannozi said lightning can strike 15 to 18 miles away from the thunderstorm.

"If you are close enough to hear the thunder, you are close enough to be struck by lightning," he said. "It will strike the highest point in the area."

Vannozi said before storms, students should know what they are going to do and where they should go.

"Stay in touch with the weather," he said. "Know what is going on."

Vannozi said sources of information include the television and radio.

He said both will issue tornado watches or warnings.

A tornado watch indicates conditions are right for thunderstorms, and tornadoes and they may occur later on during the day, he said.

A tornado warning indicates a tornado is actually on the ground or has been sighted.

He said if a storm is approaching, the best place to be is a basement is unavailable is in a small interior room on the lowest floor of the building.

Student senate finalizes budget for organizations

by JENNIFER GOOCH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech's Student Senate passed Senate Bill 29.24 Thursday, allocating $140,000 to more than 113 student organizations.

The bill, entitled the 1994-95 Organization Funding Bill, appropriates funds for the support of certain university-registered student organizations for the fiscal year.

Tech's meats judging team was allocated $6,850, more than any other student organization.

"Students transfer to Tech just to be on the meats judging team," Senator Jonathan Card said. "They are truly great representatives of Tech."

The following student organizations were also allocated the top funds:

- $6,700 to the Forensics Union
- $5,000 to the Finance Association
- $4,700 to the Human Sciences Recruiters
- $4,530 to the Live Stock Judging Team
- $4,530 to the Horse Judging Team
- $4,400 to the Student Agricultural Council

The senate debated for almost three hours on the placement of leftover funds totaling $500.

The senate voted to amend the budget, allocating an additional $100 to each of these five student organizations: the American Institute of Architecture Students, the Data Processing Management Association, the Student Agricultural Council, the Student Engineering Council and the Human Sciences Council.

Senator Eric Sanchez made the motion to divide the $500 between each of the 113 student organizations in fairness.

However, Sanchez's motion was defeated.

The senate allocated almost $10,000 more in funding for the 1994-95 fiscal year than 1993-94.

SHERRILL ENTERTAINING IF NOTHING ELSE

To the editor:
I never thought I would find myself coming to the defense of professional malcontent John B. Sherrill, but let's lighten up, OK? Mr. Sherrill and I may be poles apart politically, yet I find his letters interesting and provocative, and it has been a rare pleasure to joust with him in the pages of this newspaper. His diatribes against the perils of illegal immigration, the sins of the Republican party and heaven knows what else are at least coherent, entertaining and topical. I much prefer them to editorial ramblings as to whether "Star Trek: The Next Generation" is politically correct.

Here's to you, Mr. Sherrill; may you never become a conservative neanderthal Fascist Republican like myself.

Dog owner duped into chase

JOE MURRAY Maggie is missing.

Maggie is the big ol' shaggy dog, the one that looks like a Disney dog. If you didn't know better, you'd think she was a giant stuffed toy I'd won at a carnival.

Maggie came to live at our house Thanksgiving night a year ago. My wife had found her in a sleet storm, sitting forlornly next to a "For Sale" sign in the front yard of a vacant house.

Not that one more dog makes that much difference when you have as many different dogs as we do. Maggie made it an even six-pack. Three are little dogs. All are inside dogs.

That's why I was especially worried that Maggie was lost in the woods. She doesn't know the woods the way we do.

Our property stops at the sagging barbed wire fence up the hill beyond the little creek, and so do I. It's a jungle out there, thick with thorny thickets, bramble bushes and bull nettle. If the wolves don't get you, the woods will.

Actually, wolves don't live in our woods. Coons, possums and armadillos live in our woods. The wolves live only in my wife's imagination.

My wife thought she's heard something big crashing through the brush, just before the dogs took out in pursuit. Now she was afraid something big would do something bad to poor lost Maggie.

She was right. Before the night was over, something bad would happen. She was wrong that it would happen to Maggie.

So it was that I found myself groping through the woods in the black of night, armed only with a flashlight, hunting for a dog and all the while hoping no killer possums were hunting me.

I crossed the creek, straddled the fence and climbed over a fallen tree or two, steering a zigzag path through and around the thickets, heading as best I could toward the spot where I'd last heard the dogs barking, 100 yards or so behind the house.

Then, suddenly, there it was, caught in the beam of my flashlight. It was big. It was bad. It was a big, bad tomcat.

The cat stretched, yawned and then melted silently into the blackness, leaving me alone in the night as the woods closed in all around. I found myself wondering if killer possums sometimes hunt in packs.

Then, suddenly, there was indeed something crashing through the woods. It was big. It was fat. It was me, trying to find my way back to the house. And that's when I found Maggie.

She was sitting off to one side of the trail, lost and afraid but no worse for where she'd been. She was so glad to see me that she almost knocked me down. That was the last thing I needed to happen. As it turned out, that was the last thing to happen.

We were almost home free. Only the creek remained. Maggie flew over the creek. My feet flew out from under me. Maggie never looked back. I never looked sillier.

There I lay, flat on my back-side in the shallows. I wondered how long it'd be before somebody missed me. I wondered how long it'd be before somebody set out to look for me. I wondered how long it'd be before frost-butt set in...

The way Whitewater is in Hillary's mind

WILLIAM SAFIRE

They were dead wrong, all of them, when they talked Bill into appointing special counsel. I knew it; I told him, when we were off in Moscow, that starting a criminal investigation would come back to haunt us.

But they all thought it was so smart to raise the standard of judgment to a criminal level. That would be a way of hiding under a subpoena all the documentation that made me look like a greedy, unethical lawyer, keeping it from Congress and the press.

It was so easy for the staffers here in Washington, feeling heat about the transfer of files from Vince's office, to cave in to the Democratic establishment and damn media. Even Bernie, the only one who put our interests first, was certain that Fiske never went to indictment without an airtight case.

And what really gets me is those sanctimonious jerks who say "there is nothing to hide; if only Clinton had made full disclosure in the first place" and "it isn't the 15-year-old embarrassments that hurt, it's the cover-up."

What do they know about what happened back then and how it would look now? Did they imagine I made $100,000 on an investment of next to nothing in cattle futures, thanks to the advice of our poultry industry? We did what everybody did in the state capital, and not just Arkansas—but go try and say "everybody did it."

If Bill had hung tough back in December, as I pleaded with him to do, we would have had a month of press huffing and puffing and it would all be over. But now we're being herded into an iron triangle: the grand juries, the press that pushes the counsel to call witnesses under oath and the cowards in Congress caving in to a televised-hearing soap opera.

That smarmy Leach, with his reasonable, nonpartisan, this-pains-me pose, is killing us. He's already taken away my argument that this is all a Republican plot to stop health care.

Now he's attacking our central position that we lost money on Whitewater, which we can never abandon no matter what the figures show.

Bill struck the perfect note in his prime-time press conference. No more fingers-on-the-chest, "Who, me guilty?" and no more "no, no, no" pounding on the lectern. Just the statesman who won't be distracted. Sometimes he's just marvelous.

I can't do that; I know too much. For a few more weeks, I can give interviews to the gentler journalists but sooner or later somebody's going to hit me with a murder drill.

"When did you first learn of the criminal referral? What did you and your chief of staff discuss after her heads-up meeting with the RTC at the White House? What did you say to Bernie Nussbaum about evidence in that long meeting after Vince's death? Did you discuss the Whitewater or Madison files with Vince, with Bill Kennedy, with Web Hubbell, with the president?"

I can deflect those to the press, but when the grand jury calls—as surely it will—what can I say under oath? And did anyone besides that Kansas City investigator secretly tape conversations? Will Susan McDougal turn on us?

The way the whole Rose firm is rattling on Web reminds me of time charges. Every lawyer has to detail the time, place, and subject of meetings for billing to clients; what did we submit to cover that $26,000 in billing to Madison Guaranty? What did Vince or Web or Bill or I bill Whitewater or McDougal? Were those records shredded at the firm? God, I hope so.

What makes me sick at heart is how perfectly normal actions now gain the color of cover-up. So what if George blows sky-high when he hears the RTC hired Jay Stephens for civil recovery? That prosecutor made a Republican name for himself by entrapping Washington's Mayor Barry with a sex lure—is that what I have to look forward to? (And what if Jay Stephens goes after Jack Stephens?)

It's as if we're on a phantom train that's gathering momentum and we can't get off. It's easier for Bill—he won't have to face those hearings and grand juries as I will, and I cannot pretend I don't know the details.

Why is this nightmare happening to us? We weren't rich, and money and political power always seek each other out; but now the usual, quiet statehouse dealings are being measured by impossible federal standards.

They tell me that after the Lance affair, when things began to go sour for President Carter, he called in Bob Strauss, who told him: "You know what your problem is? You used up all your damn luck getting here."

'Trash-Off' to clean up Texas roads

by CHRISTY EVERETT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Students may be able to save $10 to $1,000 in fines for littering through an awareness campaign against littering during this weekend's "Great Texas Trash-Off" activities.

Saturday, the ninth-annual event will be held as part of the Texas Department of Transportation's "Don't Mess with Texas," campaign. More than 95,000 Adopt-A-Highway and Keep Texas Beautiful volunteers across the state will be helping in the activities.

"The purpose of the event is to increase awareness and to teach people to find a place to throw their trash instead of dumping it," said Darlene Way, public information officer and secretary to the district engineer for Lubbock.

In Lubbock County, the weekend will include having 18 Adopt-A-Highway groups pick up litter and 4,500 Keep Texas Beautiful volunteers sprucing up the city's streets and parks.

In conjunction with the anti-litter campaign, the TDT is encouraging people to stop littering for at least 24 hours in support of Trash-Off day.

If every person would just pick up their own trash and throw it away instead of out of the window, it would save a lot of money.

Ann Finley
Lubbock Adopt-A-Highway coordinator

Since the program began in 1986, there has been a 72 percent decrease in the amount of roadside litter, according to information from the TDT.

Ann Finley, Adopt-A-Highway coordinator for Lubbock, said she believes individuals need to make a conscious effort to keep trash off the highways.

"A lot of people just throw trash out their window or toss it into the back of a pick-up truck and think it's going to stay there and it doesn't," she said. "We have a real problem with fast food containers and wrappers and lottery tickets."

Way said many organizations in the area spend time to keep Lubbock County litter free.

"We have programs year-round where groups or organizations adopt a two mile stretch and have a contract with us to pick up trash,"

Way said.

Finley said the organizations sign a two-year contract to adopt an area of land outside the city's limits and must pick up trash at least four times a year.

"It costs a lot of tax dollars when we have to hire someone to pick up after people who litter," she said. "If every person would just pick up their own trash and throw it away instead of out the window, it would save a lot of money."

Finley said she is asking the groups who will be picking up trash this weekend to count the number of lottery tickets, aluminum cans and unusual items that are found during the weekend's activities.

"The groups will count the items and then call a toll-free number to report what they found," Finley said.

Multiculturalism workshop set for this weekend

Diversity and leadership will be the topic of Texas Tech's Multicultural Services Center's Convocation for Educational Inclusion from 3 to 5 p.m. today in the Human Sciences auditorium.

The convocation is preceded by an open house reception from noon to 2:30 p.m. in West Hall, room 309.

Gregory Sawyer, Dean of Students at the University of North Texas, will serve the keynote speech at the convocation.

Sawyer is the past president of the Texas Association of College and University Student Personnel Administrators and is the creator of the association's first conference on diversity and leadership.

In 1992 and 1993, Sawyer received the Mortar Board Honor Society's Top Professor Award and was honored in 1991 for the UNT Outstanding Minority Alumni award.

He served on UNT's Advisory Board for Program Discovery for minority retention and was the Southwest Regional Academic Adviser for the Golden Key National Honor Society.

Patrick Day, coordinator of Tech's Multicultural Services Center, said various awards will be given at the convocation to recognize the contributions of students, faculty, staff and community members.

"These are people who have forced us to look at gender issues," he said.

"Race, ethnicity and gender issues are all sorts of ways that we can be different, and the Multicultural Services Center will be addressing what sorts of roles these issues play or will play in our lives," he said.

KEEPING THE PIECE.

Before you look at the whole picture this spring, look at the pieces. Specifically, the imaginative pieced wovens which are defining the season's most distinctive new shirts. Like the fun example here. Casual and easy-wearing khaki twill sleeves and collar paired with a brightly inspired American bandanna print body. Pure cotton, of course, and cut generously for a roomy comfort. All for a price that won't leave your budget in pieces. Just $39.50

Remember the Alamo...

But, remember it correctly

■ What really happened at the Alamo? Some are saying history hasn't been told accurately, and San Antonio is caught mid-debate.

SAN ANTONIO (NYTNS) — Before there were oil wells, before Neiman Marcus, Texas built fierce pride on tales of revolutionary valor at the Alamo.

But in recent years, a new generation of writers and politicians has taken another look at the Texas Revolution and called its leaders nuts, scoundrels and Anglo land-grabbers.

Davy Crockett, they say, did not wear a coonskin cap, and he tried to surrender at the Alamo rather than fighting to the death.

William Barret Travis, the Alamo's commander, crazed from drinking mercury to treat venereal disease, never issued his legendary challenge for the brave to join him across his sword-drawn line in the dirt.

Gen. Sam Houston, who was at least wise enough not to send reinforcements to the besieged fort, was a girdle-wearing opium addict.

And the major reason 189 Texans defended the Alamo against thousands of Mexicans in 1836, one researcher even says, was that Jim Bowie, who shared the Alamo command until falling ill, stole a hoard of silver and gold from Apaches he had butchered and hid it in a well on the Alamo grounds.

In Texas, this is no mere academic argument. All San Antonians, from Mayor Nelson Wolff to the owner of Uncle Hoppy's Alamo Plaza barbecue shack, has been swept up in a feud over who were the Alamo's true aggressors. By late March, city officials were making plans to rip up the street and plaza in front of the building to dig for the reputed Bowie treasure and for Indian graves.

Things have gone so far that many Hispanic residents and several politicians want to wrest control of the site from the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, who have managed the building since the State Legislature entrusted it to them in 1905.

His opponents, who include the leading candidate for mayor in next spring's elections, accuse the Daughters, a group whose more than 6,000 members are descendants of Texans before statehood, of perpetuating myths that support white supremacy.

Historians have long raised questions about some parts of the Alamo legend. But the latest generation of writers has challenged its very significance.

For them, the Alamo symbolizes not the American settlers' struggle against tyranny but U.S. imperialism and racism triumphant over Mexicans and Indians.

Many of the Alamo's defenders, some current scholars say, were outlaws and mercenaries, hungry for land. The legend, these writers point out, is founded in Travis's letters appealing for help, "in the name of Liberty, of patriotism and everything dear to the American character."

"The Alamo is part of an Anglo-Texan creation myth," said Cynthia Orozco, who teaches an updated version of Texas history at the University of Texas at San Antonio.

"The Euro-Americans wanted to distinguish themselves from people who were here before them. But some have argued that they were Texas's first illegal aliens."

In part, this fresh look at Texas history reflects the willingness of scholars across the country to think anew about the United States' past. From Columbus to frontier virtues, many a verity has been challenged.

But the dispute over the Alamo also arises from what some Texans see as the state's hard-won maturity, with less need for explaining and defending and more capacity for self-criticism.

"When I was young, you could never have this kind of discussion about Texas history," said the 47-year-old Lawrence Wright, who led a Texas writers forum called "Dibs on the Alamo." "There was an orthodoxy of belief, and nothing was more orthodox than the story of where we came from."

Closer ties with Mexico and the growing influence of the state's Hispanic residents are also factors in the raising of issues that many Texans had long thought settled.

"The doors have been opened," said City Councilman William Thornton, the leading candidate for mayor next year.

"Places have been made at the table for people whose voices have not been heard before."

Thornton, the Daughters' most powerful nemesis, is leading a campaign to restore the Alamo and adjacent grounds as the Franciscan mission founded by Spaniards from Mexico in 1718 and peopled by native Indians instead of leaving the current building, which was the mission's chapel, as a shrine to Crockett, Bowie and other interlopers.

The Daughters accuse Thornton of wanting to turn the Alamo and its nearby plaza into a raucous theme park — an Alamoland — and of pandering to the electorate in a city that is 56 percent Hispanic.

Texas history has in the past few years become the passion of dogged amateurs, who sometimes beat the professionals to new theories or evidence. If much of the historical record once read like Butler's "Lives of the Saints," it now reads more like People magazine.

Elizabeth Crook, an Austin writer, has concentrated not on Houston's triumph over the Mexican forces but on his first marriage, which fell apart in disgrace after 11 weeks. Houston, who later became president of the Republic of Texas, never cleared up the mystery about what had happened.

At the "Dibs on the Alamo" forum, in the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts, even Cook said she was taken aback by how much further another writer, Jeff Long, has gone in protraying Houston in "Duel of Eagles."

"I did not care if you made Houston look bad," she said, "but I care if you made him look silly. I did not think anyone would want to read a romantic novel about someone who wears a girdle."

If the latest Alamo battle can at times seem like refined academic discourse, in San Antonio it can quickly turn as stagey as pro wrestling.

On St. Patrick's Day several Daughters, dressed in green, joined the Harp and Shamrock Society of Texas in a wreath-laying ceremony in which they portrayed the Alamo defenders, who include several Irish and Mexicans and at least one black, as the first Rainbow Coalition.

"Today, the Daughters are being told that they are ignoring or down-playing the role of certain ethnic groups in the fight against tyranny that took place on these hallowed grounds," said Anna Hartman, a Daughter who heads the group's Alamo Committee.

"Today's ceremony is clear evidence of how wrong these detractors are."

Windmills to blow into Hub City

by NY LYNN NICHOLS THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

While the West Texas winds are showing no mercy to Lubbockites, efforts to bring a rare collection to the Hub City by the National Historic Windmill Project are a breeze for project organizers.

The task force, led by Director Billie Wolfe, is well on its way to bringing the Hundley Museum to Lubbock. An initial payment of $50,000 has been made toward the $225,000 purchasing price. The remainder of the funding will come from grants and sponsorships.

"There are different levels of sponsorship depending on how rare the windmill is," Wolfe said.

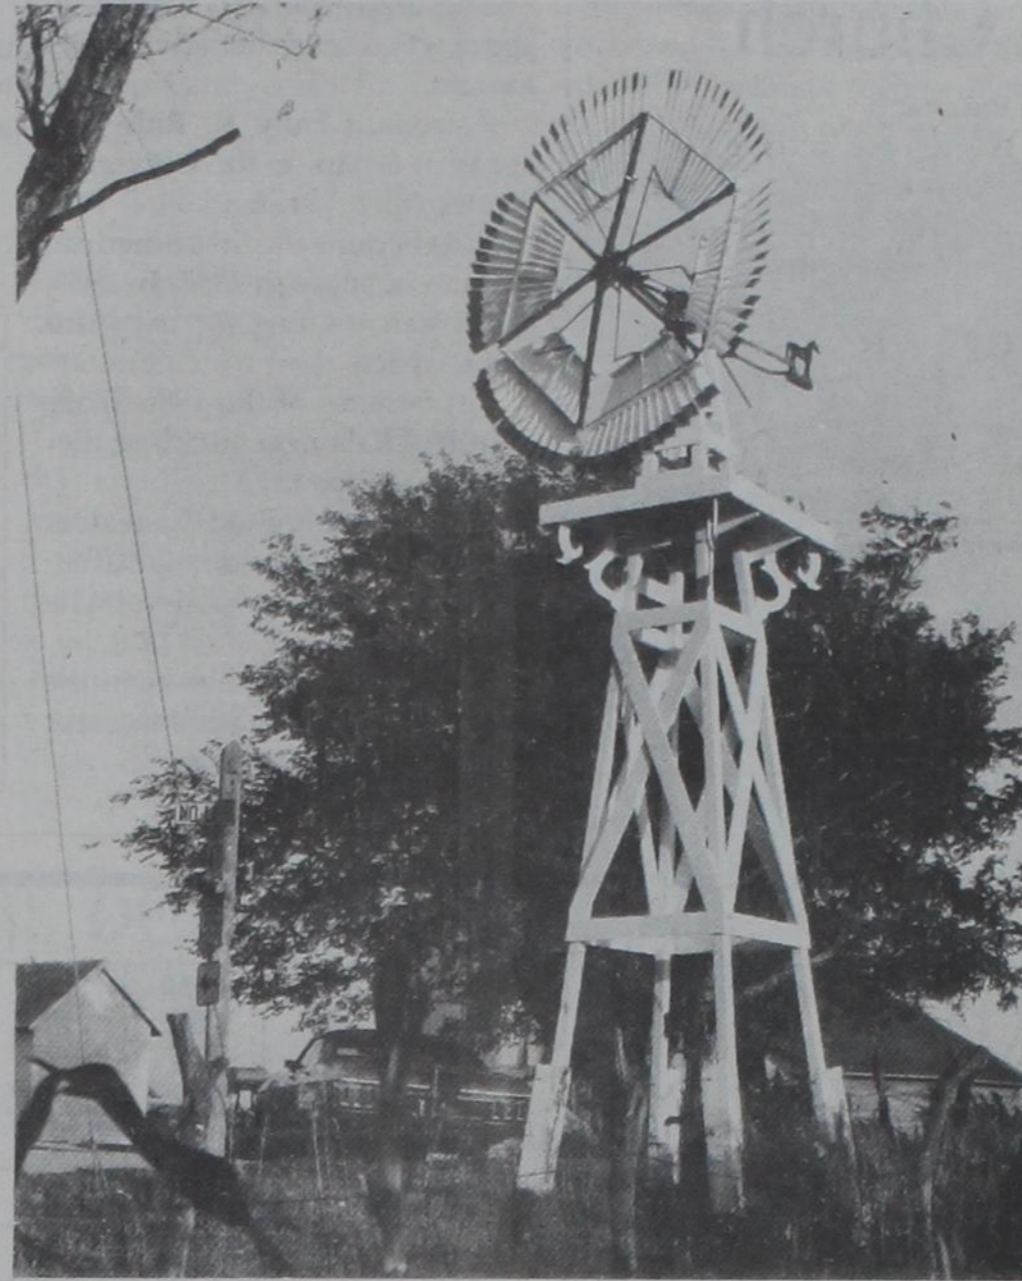

The collection includes 46 fully restored and four unrestored windmills, 56 pumps, 171 windmill weights, 22 vanes and more than 60 photographs and drawings.

Wolfe said preserving the windmills is important to the area because of the history behind them.

"The windmill did five important things," she said.

"It enabled the pioneers to cross this area," Wolfe said. "Without the water for the steam engines the windmills produced, (the trains) could only make tracks by lakes and rivers."

Wolfe said the windmill also enabled the settlers to settle land

Coming attraction

The Dempster self-regulating vaneless windmill is among rare windmills being brought to Lubbock by the National Historic Windmill Project.

because they had water. "Every time you see a settler in the Great West, you see a windmill," she said. Windmills also provided water for the ranchers so they were able to ranch a large area of land, Wolfe said. The XIT Ranch, which covered 10 counties in Texas, had over 1,200 windmills.

"In certain areas, (pioneers) used them for irrigation," she said.

Most importantly, Wolfe said, "The pioneers were able to use the windmills for power."

She said the windmills must be preserved "so our children will have an educational program (on the windmills).

"We're setting up this museum to preserve this legacy," she said. "(The legacy) was almost lost because of the two world wars. (The government) used so much of the metal for scrap iron and sold it."

She said there are four windmill companies in the United States today out of the 700 companies that thrived at one time. The remaining companies are in Ohio and Nebraska, with the other two in Texas, in the cities of Earth and San Angelo.

The museum will be located on a four-acre lot on Brownfield Highway east of Indiana Avenue.

She said it only makes sense to have the museum in Lubbock.

"The symbol of the Ranching Heritage Center is the windmill, the symbol of the Tech Museum is the windmill, the symbol of Lubbock is the windmill, and the symbol of the South Plains is the windmill," Wolfe said.

Brinkley, four others stranded on mountain after helicopter crash

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Christie Brinkley considers it a miracle that she survived a helicopter crash last week.

Brinkley was bruised when the craft went down during a heliski trip in Colorado.

She and four other people were stranded on a mountain for hours April 1.

"I don't know what happened. It felt as if the mountain was sucking us into it," Brinkley explained to "Entertainment Tonight" in a segment for broadcast Friday night.

"After we crashed the helicopter just started rocking back and forth, the blade was still swinging around... then it shook us over the edge of a cliff.

"We were rolling a little more and all of a sudden I felt myself starting to fall out of the side of the helicopter," she said.

"I came out into the light and it was all sort of slow motion, and all of a sudden I thought I'm either going to die right now, get hit by the blade, or I'm going to survive," she said.

Los Angeles real estate developer Richard Taubman was the most seriously hurt, with broken ribs, a broken collarbone and a punctured lung.

Human Sciences to host fashion design contest

by MEGAN CLARK THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The College of Human Sciences on Saturday will host the annual Natural Fibers Fashion Design Competition in conjunction with the Texas Food and Fibers Commission.

Fashion design students from Texas Tech, Texas Women's University, University of Texas-Austin, University of North Texas, Baylor University, El Centro Community College in Dallas, University of Houston, Houston Community College and the Art Institute of Dallas will participate in the weekend's events.

"As of right now, we do not know exactly how many students or garments will be submitted in the design competition," said Catherine Black, associate professor of fashion design.

"However, we will have professionals and students and professors from all over the state of Texas at the competition and students will be able to showcase their garments in a professional manner," she said.

The competition is hosted each year by a different university but will come to Texas Tech every fourth year.

Activities begin Saturday with a tour of the International Textile Center and will be followed by fashion-related discussions and fashion exhibitions in the El Centro Lounge of the College of Human Sciences.

Tiffany Hoffman, a New York fashion designer, will make the keynote speech.

About 200 designs will be modeled during the competition at 2 p.m. in the University Center Allen Theater.

Students submitted designs in mohair, cotton and wool categories.

"The major requirement for the competition was that students create their garments with the three natural fibers that are produced in Texas," Black said. "That includes cotton, mohair, and wool."

Students will enter garment designs in daywear, after five eveningwear and sportswear categories.

"It's really varied what students enter," she said. "They can be in all different categories, but made of Texas fibers."

Black said the priority of the design day competition and other events is to educate students about Texas fibers.

"The commission has many different mandates and two of the most important ones are to educate and promote Texas products," she said.

Astronaut Sally Ride to address UC crowd

The first American woman in space will discuss her adventures tonight. Astronaut Sally K. Ride will speak at 8 p.m. in the University Center Allen Theatre.

Ride became the first American woman in space in 1983. In 1985, she began training for her third trip to space.

Yet because of the 1986 Space Shuttle Challenger accident, her training stopped.

She then committed the next six months to the Presidential Commission Committee to investigate the accident.

Since then, Ride has been the assistant to NASA's administrator for long-range planning.

She has created NASA's Office of Exploration and studied the future of space programs, producing a report called "Leadership and America's Future in Space." This report, along with her numerous training experiences and space adventures, will be the topic of her lecture. Ride will also have a book signing from 3:30 to 5 p.m. today in the Book Gallery at Kingsgate Center.

Former Tech student says 'Stangel Beach' his major

by LARA M. CAMPBELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Look up "down to earth" in the dictionary and you might find a picture of Doug Supernaw next to the definition.

The former Texas Tech student, who said his major while at Tech was "Stangel Beach," performed in the Lubbock Coliseum Thursday night, along with Tracy Lawrence, to what he called "the rowdiest small crowd I've ever seen."

Supernaw didn't seem to fear getting mauled by his fans, when at one point during the show he jumped from the stage to sing "You Don't Have to Call Me Darlin'," giving the "Guns Up" sign as he walked along the floor.

Supernaw said he was glad to return to the Hub City.

"Lubbock is my favorite town in the world," Supernaw said. "I'm serious, I absolutely love Lubbock. I'm going to retire here."

"I like that the streets go from A to Z and one to 10," he said. "I like the weather here and there's three-to-one women to men."

Although he said he enjoyed his years at Tech, Supernaw did not finish his studies.

"I had a problem going to class. What's really funny is I actually love learning, but I cannot take a structured environment," he said.

"Today if someone had invited me to sit in classes, I'd have done it all day long, but I can't take having to besomewhere. I'm wierd like that."

While in Lubbock, he lived in a condominium behind Cold Water Country (what is now Midnight Rodeo). Even 14 years ago, Supernaw said he thought he would one day play there.

"I've always been a songwriter my whole life. I've always sang," he said.

As country music becomes more popular and more artists are hitting it big, many in the industry say some new stars aren't paying their dues. Supernaw said he doesn't agree with those who think dues aren't being paid.

"I worked very hard and I have for a long time. I'm not going to back up to anybody," he said. "Some may be talking about Clay Walker, but Clay Walker has paid his dues. He and his band were my back up band when he was 16 years old."

In fact, Walker left his senior prom (and his date) to perform with Supernaw.

"He was playing guitar for me," Supernaw said. "I told him what time to be back and he was late."

"He had my truck. He played that night for free to borrow my truck," Supernaw said.

While on the road, Supernaw said the hardest thing to deal with is missing his kids and "not being able to coach little league."

His son Philip, 4, appears in the video of his number one hit, "I Don't Call Him Daddy."

Supernaw, who writes his own videos, said he got the idea for the video after pulling a picture of his son on a pony out of his wallet.

Supernaw's second album, which he plans to call "Deep Thoughts From a Shallow Mind," will be out in June.

Singing brothers promoting Fiesta Texas boardwalk

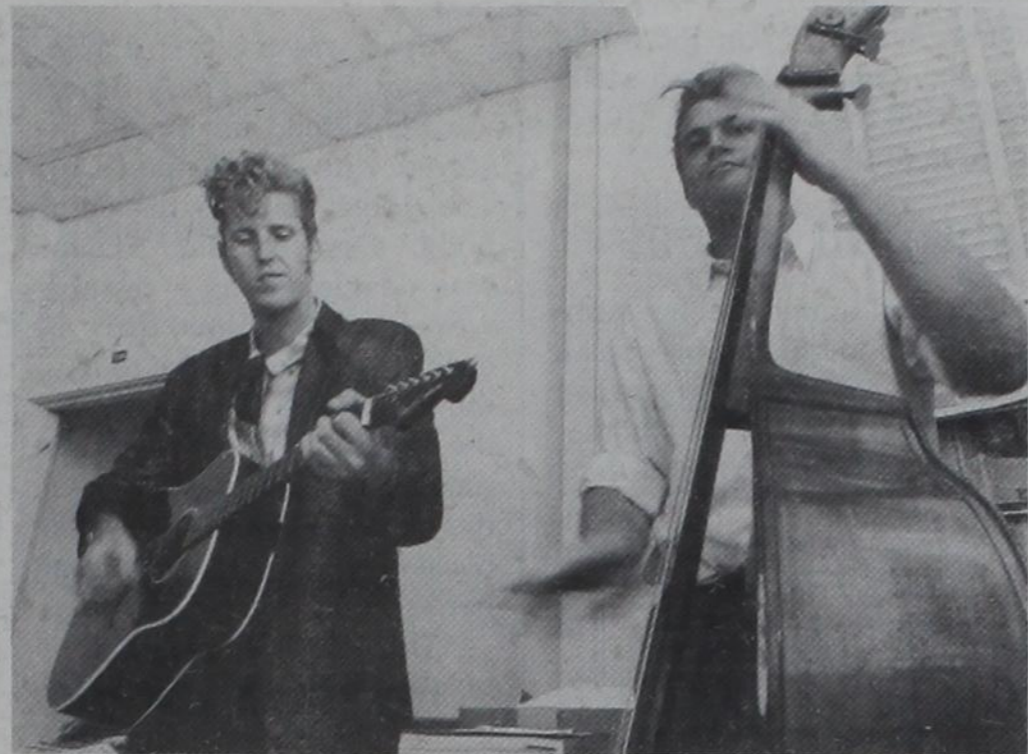

by LARA M. CAMPBELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Although San Antonio is 150 miles away from the nearest beach, visitors to the Alamo City will have a chance to walk down an authentic boardwalk in May.

Fiesta Texas will open "Fiesta Bay Boardwalk" by Memorial Day. To promote the new attraction, Fiesta Texas public relations is conducting a unique promotions campaign.

Two of the park's performers, along with public relations personnel, are traveling the state to perform for the news media.

Brothers Sean Castillo and Kris Castillo have been performing at Fiesta Texas for three years. Dressed in 1950s-style costumes, the brothers perform live songs including some originally produced by the late Buddy Holly. They have performed for local newspapers and on local radio and television stations.

Holly good time

WALTER GRANBERRY, THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Castillo brothers perform a Buddy Holly tune as part of a public relations campaign being conducted by Fiesta Texas.

Kris Castillo said the tour across Texas has been hectic, but fun.

Both from Lake Arrowhead, California, the brothers auditioned for the theme park in San Diego. Auditions are held across the country for Fiesta Texas and its sister park, Opryland.

While Opryland focuses on country music, Fiesta Texas highlights the Lone Star State.

"We try to showcase the culture and history of Texas," Sydney Purvis, public relations manager, said. "Many people do not know how many cultures have influenced Texas."

The theme park has sections dedicated to Texas' Hispanic, Western and German influences, along with a 50s section and the new boardwalk.

While Fiesta Texas does have rides, the park has been most noted for its live performances.

Campanas de America, recently rated the number one mariachi band in San Antonio, will perform in the Los Festivales section of the park.

Inside Track magazine named "Rockin' at Rockville High," a 50s show that has been described as "like American Graffiti in a high school gym," favorite theme park show for the second year in a row.

Sprint car driver ready for weekend action

by JAYSON BALES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Steve Beitler and the World of Outlaws are racing into Lubbock today faster than a West Texas whirlwind.

Beitler, a driver with the World of Outlaws sprint car racing sanctioning body, will be at the Hub City Speedway today and Saturday as part of the World of Outlaws tour stop in Lubbock.

The World of Outlaws is the richest and most often attended sprint car racing series in the world, and its teams will compete for an estimated purse of $9 million in 1994.

Beitler, a 35-year-old independent driver from Sedro Woolley, Wash., said he grew up watching his father race cars.

"I've been brought up around racing," Beitler said.

Beitler began his racing career in 1977, but he did not join the World of Outlaws until 1989.

As part of the World of Outlaws, Beitler finished among the top 15 drivers in 20 World of Outlaws "A" Features in 1993, he received the 1990 James International Art Most Improved Driver Award and he finished second in the 1989 Rookie of the Year balloting.

Beitler is one of the few World of Outlaws drivers who is not sponsored, and he manages, maintains and drives his own car.

"Sprint cars are the fastest, most challenging form of racing in the world," he said. "They are the fastest cars on dirt, bar none."

Making a comfortable living, staying safe and enjoying his job are his goals for racing, Beitler said.

Traveling across the United States and driving in more than 100 races per year requires mental toughness on the driver's part, but the World of Outlaws is a close-knit group, he said.

"The basic World of Outlaws teams are real tight," Beitler said. "This is sort of a family out here."

Beitler said he wants to remain involved in sprint car racing as a marketer or promoter once he ends his career as a driver.

"I like the feel (of racing)," Beitler said. "I like the competi-

Yankees score 18 runs on 19 hits to hand Rangers second straight defeat

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Gallego homered twice, Danny Tartabull drove in four runs and Bernie Williams hit a three-run homer Thursday as New York scored its most runs at Yankee Stadium in 39 years and routed the Texas Rangers 18-6.

New York, which had 19 hits — including six doubles — hadn't scored as many runs at home since a 19-1 victory against the Washington Senators on April 13, 1955. The last time the Yankees scored this many runs anywhere was a 18-5 victory at Minnesota on April 18, 1988.

Terry Mulholland, acquired from Philadelphia in the offseason, won in his Yankees' debut, allowing six runs and seven hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Five Texas pitchers walked nine and hit a batter. Kenny Rogers, the Rangers' leader in wins last year with 16, was chased after three-plus innings. He allowed eight earned runs and nine hits.

Wade Boggs had four hits for the second straight game: a double and three singles.

Will Clark's first-inning sacrifice fly put Texas ahead, but New York scored the next 12 runs.

Tartabull doubled home a run in the first and Mike Stanley hit an RBI groundout. Gallego opened the second with his first homer and Williams homered in the third to make it 6-1.

New York scored three times in the fourth on Boggs' RBI groundout and Tartabull's RBI single. Darren Oliver threw a run-scoring wild pitch in the fifth, and Stanley hit a two-run single.

Texas chased Mulholland in the sixth on Chris James' RBI double, Clark's two-run single and Juan Gonzalez's first home run.

New York got four in the bottom half on Boggs' RBI single, Mattingly's RBI double and Tartabull's two-run double.

Popularity of fencing continues to grow at Tech

by ARNI SRIBHEN
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

What would it be like to poke someone with 36 inches of cold, hard steel?

The Tech Fencing club knows how to do this, but does it in a specific way.

Fencing developed in the 16th century for French nobles to fight in a safe and courtly way and is available to anyone in the community through the club.

The club has around 10 consistent fencers but not all of them are novices. One such expert is law student Aaron Clements.

Clements, who fenced at Cal Tech for 2 years, not only fences epee (pronounced eh-peh) and sabre for the club, but also instructs some of the club members.

"Epee was the first dueling weapon, therefore only thrusts are permitted, and points are scored with the weapon's tip. The (target) area is the entire body," Clements said. "The foil was developed as a training weapon. It is lighter than the epee so you don't have to have the endurance or strength that the epee requires. It also taught trainees how to hit a specific area, the torso. Scoring can only take place from thrusts to the front, flanks or back of the torso."

"The sabre was originally a cavalry weapon. Therefore, it has rules that reflect its aggressive nature. On horseback, it was difficult to thrust a sword, so many horsemen used their blades to slice. Thus, in the sport slashing is allowed, but scoring can occur above the waist."

Other members of the club do not have the experience of Clements, but they do have the love of the sport.

"I joined because swashbuckler movies made it look romantic," member Sean Donahue said. "It's a unique sport unlike any other in the world."

One of the most interesting people in the club is foilist Vince Dimmick. As the only non-student member of the club, he said he fences purely for exercise and recreation.

"I was involved with the common sports like football and volleyball in high school, but this is the only sport that I fell in love with," said Dimmick. "Everyone should try it because it is much harder than it looks in the movies. We have lost people in the past because they don't realize how athletic it is."

This weekend the club will travel to Amarillo to participate in the Divisional Tournament, which is an individual competition. Next weekend, they will be at the Collegiate Team Tournament in Austin.

"I think we'll do good at Divisionals because we have good individual fencers," vice president Richard "Roo" Falbo said. "We're probably third out of the eight schools going to collegiate."

At a recent tournament at Tech, five of the six fencers placed in the top 16 in a field of 30.

The club encourages beginners to join in learning the art of fencing with them. The club meets on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7-9 p.m. and Saturdays from 3-6 p.m. in the wrestling room of the Student Recreation Center. For more information contact Falbo at 799-6187.

Raiders return to league play

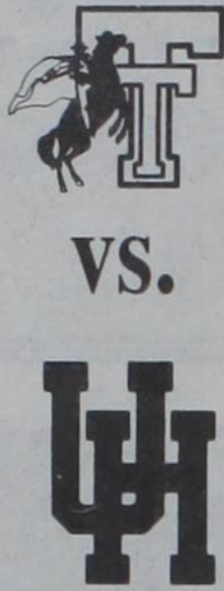

by TARA HEARLIHY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech baseball team is tied for second place in the Southwest Conference and begins the long haul of tough league opponents beginning with third place Houston at 7 p.m. today at Dan Law Field. "They're rattlesnakes as far as I'm concerned," Tech head coach Larry Hays said. "They have got a lot to play for like we do. They have already played Rice, Texas and A&M. Everyone that is looking at the league says they are the three best ones and they have that behind them. One of their biggest obstacles left on their schedule is us out here. They are coming in with the same approach we have, so it ought to be a pretty big battle. If we don't win the series, then all the things we've built up so far in the season won't mean a whole lot."

The Raiders are currently 28-11 and are 4-2 in conference play. The Cougars are holding to a 25-16, 4-5 mark.

"All we've done so far is put ourselves where we are still in it," Hays said. "Everything we need to get done is still ahead of us. This series is really big for us because we have four series left, two at home, and this is one of the two at home and we have got to win the series."

Ryan Nye will start Friday for the Raiders. Nye

Game: Houston Cougars vs. Texas Tech
Time: 7 p.m., Noon Date: Today, Saturday
Place: Dan Law Field
1994 record: Tech 28-11, 4-2
Houston 15-16, 4-5
Last Meeting: Tech won 4-3 on April 3, 1993
Series record: Houston leads 38-26
Radio/TV: KKAM-AM 1340, HSE (Cox Cable Channel 20)

leads the SWC with a 0.00 ERA in SWC play with an 1-1 record. Overall Nye has a 1.36 ERA and 80 strikeouts posting an 8-2 mark.

"They definitely have a good ball club," Nye said. "It is a conference game and we need to come out with full intensity. I try not to think about what kind of hitting team they've got. I just go out there and take it as another team and go right at them. I just know I've got to go out there and do my job to keep our team in it and keep them from scoring as much as possible."

The Cougars have a strong lineup and the key for the Raiders is getting their top of the order out, Hays said.

"They have three guys in the middle of the line-up that will stack up with anyone," he said. "It is going to be real important for our pitchers to go out and not have middle base runners who can do a lot of damage."

The Raiders are led offensively by second baseman Jason Totman who is hitting .404. First baseman Randy DuRoss leads the campaign with nine home runs and designated hitter Brandon Welch has eight.

"Offensively we have to get everything we can get," Hays said. "We can get in there and score some runs. We are not a home run team. The home runs have come on days when the wind is blowing out to left field. We were hitters on those days and I am glad to see that."

The Raiders make their first television appearance on Home Sports Entertainment while finishing up the Houston series with a doubleheader beginning at noon Saturday. Pitchers Jason Whittle and Travis Smith are expected to start.

Texas Relays next for Tech track teams

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Both Texas Tech track teams will try to sharpen their performances against Southwest Conference foes at the Texas Relays this weekend.

The Red Raider tracksters will face the same teams in the SWC Championships at Rice on April 23-24.

The Texas Relays is one of the largest regular season meets of the year for the Raiders, and Tech assistant coach Brad Pursley expects the competition level to be good.

"All of the conference teams will be there, plus a lot of strong non-conference teams," Pursley said.

For the men, Derryl "Mookie" Mitchell is expected to be back.

Mitchell has been hampered by a strained quadricep, but Pursley said he expects him to be ready.

Sprinter Jeff Johnson is also expected to be back at full speed for this week's competition.

"Mookie and Jeff were a little banged up, but I think they'll both be 100 percent this weekend," Pursley said. "That will help us in the sprint relays."

Pursley said overall the team is young but improving.

"We'll be O.K. in some areas, but we're so young that some things are a question mark," Pursley said.

The freshmen fared well in the indoor season and Pursley sees improvement on a weekly basis.

"That's typically the way it is with freshmen," Pursley explained. "You just don't always know how they will respond."

Pursley said he is expecting big things from the pole vaulting duo of Tim James and Jason Price this weekend.

"The vault is one event where we are really solid," he said. "In the collegiate division Tim should be one of the favorites."

Pursley said this is the first week that James has been totally healthy since the NCAA Indoor Championships, where James placed eighth.

Another Runnin' Raider to watch this weekend is freshman sprinter Dion Miller, who has already qualified automatically for the NCAA Championships in the 100-meter dash.

"This will be Dion's first big 100-meter race," Pursley said. "Mentally if he can focus on what he needs to do he should be alright."

Men netters to face Rice

With a Southwest Conference win under the belt, the Texas Tech men's tennis team faces Rice at 1:30 p.m. in Houston.

The No. 47-ranked Raiders (11-8, 1-3) won their first SWC match Wednesday against Baylor. Rice is No. 49 with a 9-7 overall and 2-2 conference record.

The Raiders will continue with a productive singles line-up starting with Juan Gutierrez, who is 23-13 on the year.

Klint Graf fills in the No. 2 spot while Ru Guerrero is in third.

Rounding out the rest of the line-up is Erick Guzman, Tal Roma and Gerard Orriols. Orriols has won five of his last seven matches.

The doubles teams will be decided on the day of the match, but will be led by No. 29 pair of Klint Graf and Ru Guerrero.

Women's tennis team goes for second SWC victory

The Texas Tech women's tennis team will have another chance at winning their second Southwest Conference match at 9 a.m. Saturday against Southern Methodist in Dallas at the Haggard Tennis Stadium.

The Raiders have not won two SWC matches since 1988 and are 14-9 for the season, 1-5 in conference play. The Mustangs have a 9-7 record and 2-4 in the SWC.

"We are hoping to pick up our second win," coach Kathy Vick said. "We really need this win going into the conference tournament. They are a team that we can definitely beat if we play up to our potential."

Christy Davis returns to the Tech lineup after a back injury. She will fill in the No. 3 spot.

Jennifer Brennan, who transferred from SMU, stays at the No. 1 seed with Lynne Jackson at No. 2. Sheri Gilreath will be in the No. 4 seed with Debbie Biswell and Erika Fisher following.

Vick is changing up the doubles combinations for the match. Brennan and Jackson continue to hold the No. 1 seed, but Biswell and Davis pair up at No. 2.

"With the injuries we have had, Debbie has been in there and done well for us," Vick said. "I think this will be our best combination now."

Gilreath and Fisher round out the doubles teams.

Chiefs grab Elliott, officials announce Casillas signing

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—The Kansas City Chiefs have signed former Dallas Cowboys kicker Lin Elliott and formally announced the signing of Cowboys free agent defensive tackle Tony Casillas. The Chiefs announced the moves on Wednesday.

Elliott scored 119 points for the Cowboys in 1992, making 24 of 35 field goals. That year, he kicked a team record 13 straight field goals. He attempted just four field goals last year, hitting two.

Elliott was released in September after he missed two field goals in loss to the Buffalo Bills.

Casillas signed a four-year contract for $6 million with the Chiefs on Tuesday as an unrestricted free agent.
