Mediator plans peace talks after assassination

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A Roman Catholic mediator said he was making plans Tuesday to relaunch peace talks with armed Indians in southern Mexico, calling the next round crucial to pacifying their insurgency.

Bishop Samuel Ruiz did not specify a date for resuming talks, but said he was sending a letter to the Zapatista National Liberation Army proposing the site be in the buffer zone between the rebels and the army in Chiapas.

"I'm hoping for something spectacular," Ruiz told reporters in San Cristobal de Las Casas, when asked if he was optimistic of progress in the talks to end the rebellion in the southernmost state.

The New Year's uprising led to fighting with the army that claimed at least 145 lives before a mid-January truce.

Subsequent peace talks broke down after the March 23 killing of the ruling party's presidential candidate, Luis Donaldo Colosio, in Tijuana.

Ruiz said he did not expect a peace would be signed in the coming round, but that important advances could nonetheless be made.

At least 18 masked Indian guerrillas held 10 days of conversations in the cathedral of San Cristobal de Las Casas in early March. But the bishop said only three or four rebels would take part in the coming round.

Key to restarting the talks was Monday's release of 16 prisoners from a Chiapas penitentiary who rebel leaders said were falsely arrested on suspicion of being Zapatistas.

The guerrilla spokesman, Subcomandante Marcos, had called those arrests a major obstacle to peace.

"Thank you, Subcomandante Marcos, for telling the truth that we are not Zapatistas," said Eli Gomez Ruiz, as he walked free of a prison near the Chiapas state capital of Tuxtla Gutierrez.

Urgent calls to restart the peace process arose last week amid escalating tension by the rebels seized thousands of acres (hectares) of lands contested by local ranchers.

President Carlos Salinas de Gortari planned a meeting later

Tuesday with a group of 40 Chiapas ranchers, who arrived in the capital demanding that the government oust the peasant squatters.

"We've come to ask Salinas a favor! Please help us expel these people from our lands!" said rancher Jorge Constantino Kanter in a plea published by a capital newspaper, La Jornada.

The ranchers blasted local press reports accusing them of arming paramilitary groups known as "White Guards," or Guardias Blancas, but warned they would defend themselves if the land crisis escalates.

"We small landowners have not renounced, nor will we ever renounce, our sacred and legitimate right to defend ourselves," said Jesus Gonzalez Gortazar, a national leader of rural landowners.

Several peasant leaders have been killed in Chiapas land disputes since Jan. 1.

And, a soldier at Chiapas army roadblock was slain by a civilian gunman Friday in what officials called an attempt to provoke new violence.

Richards criticized for appointment

AUSTIN (AP) — George W. Bush's gubernatorial campaign is blasting Gov. Ann Richards after the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse voted to hire as head of the agency a man convicted of a felony a decade ago.

Cindy Rugeley, a spokeswoman for the Democratic governor, said the Republican candidate should be ashamed of such criticism toward Ben Bynum, whom she described as a recovering alcoholic who has rebuilt his life.

The commission voted 5-4 last week to hire Bynum, a former Potter County judge who was convicted 10 years ago of misapplying public funds.

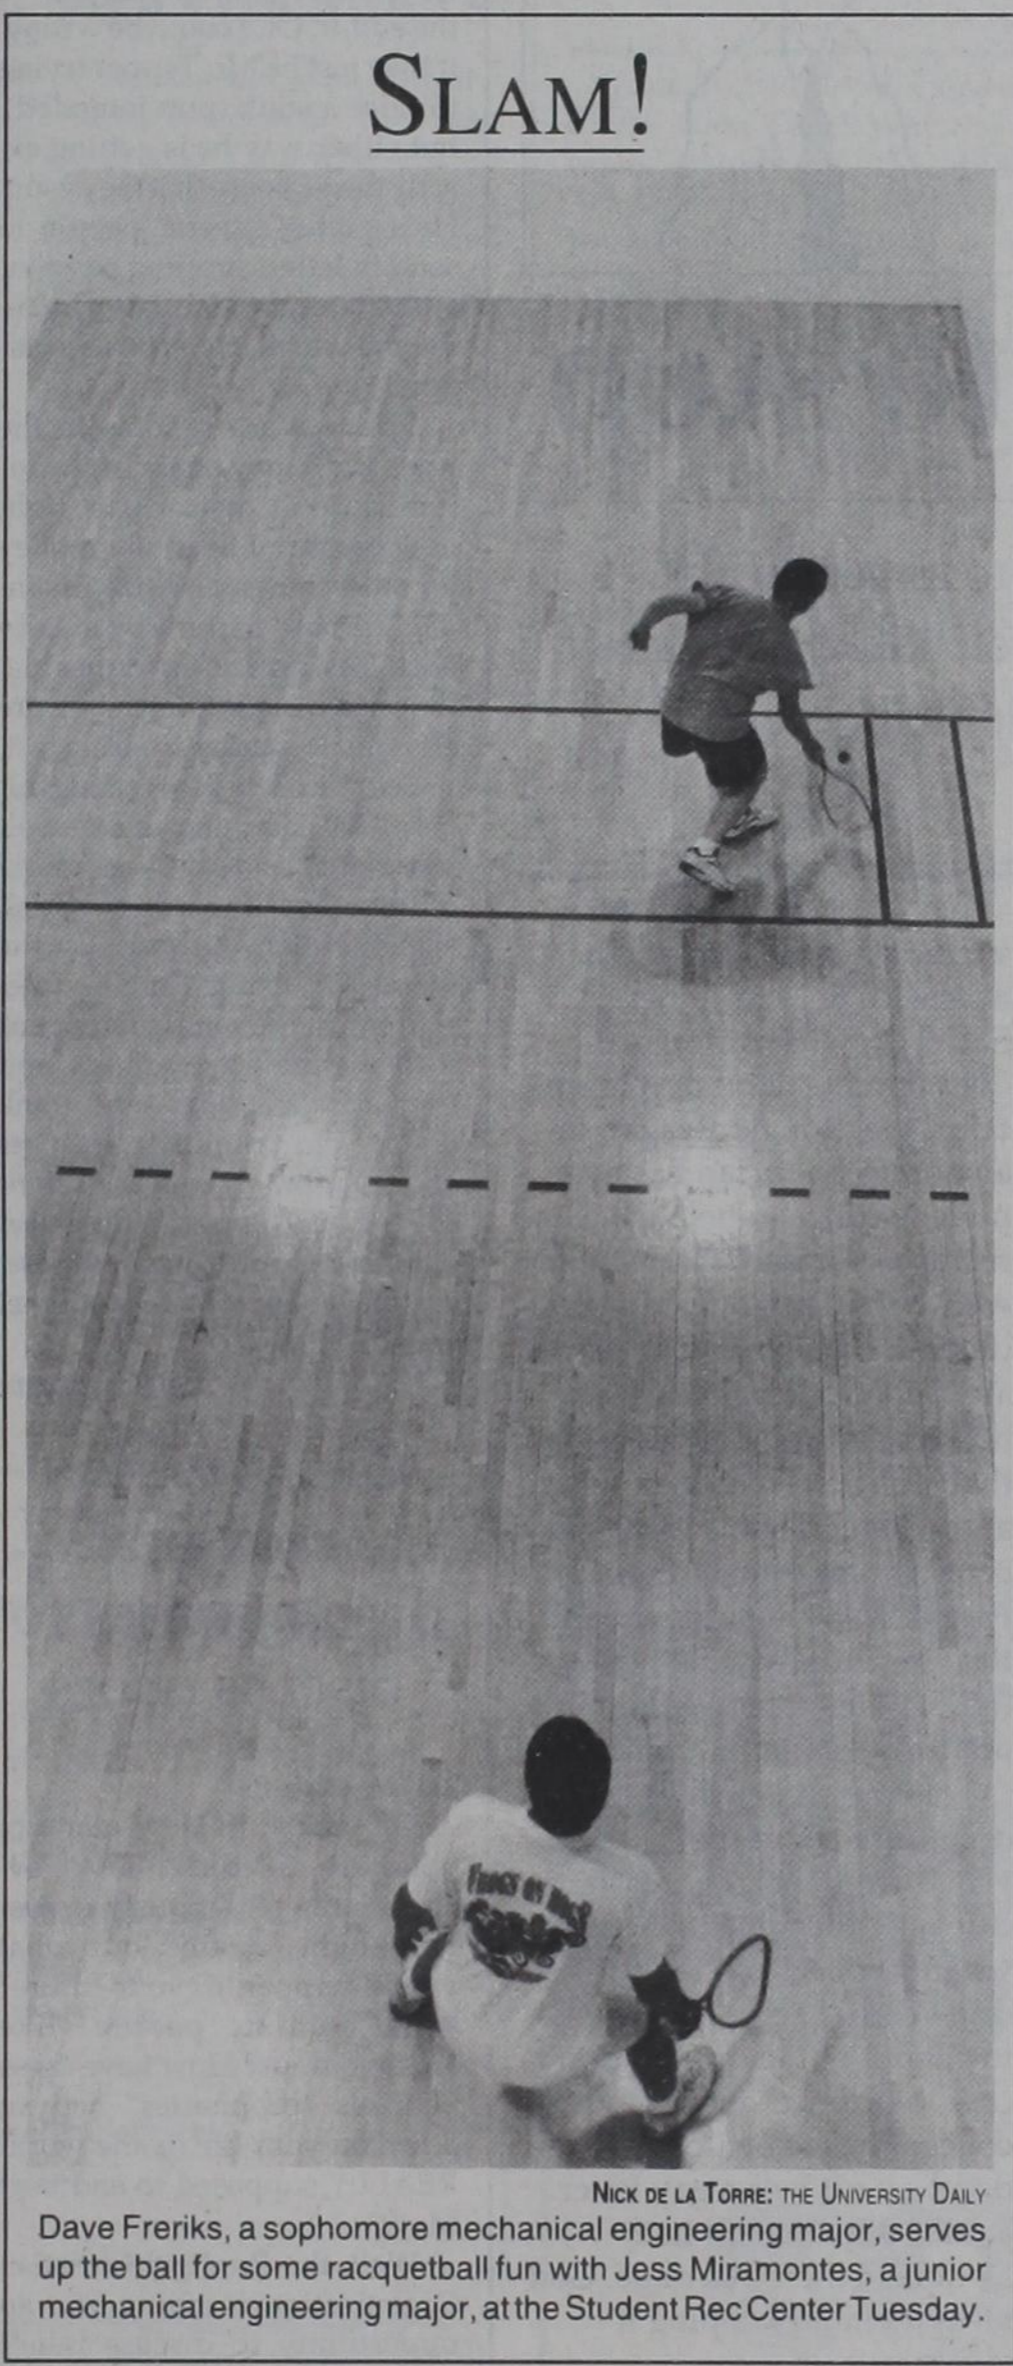

Bynum served 10 years' probation for misusing funds that belonged to a committee promoting a bond issue to build an Amarillo courthouse. He was accused of cashing about $2,000 in checks designated for the committee without keeping accurate records.

Four of the five Alcohol and Drug Abuse commissioners who voted to hire Bynum were appointed by Richards. Three of the four who voted against him also were appointed by Richards.

"Gov. Richards has some explaining to do," Bush campaign press secretary Deborah Burston-Wade said Monday. "How in the world would she put a convicted felon in charge as executive director of a major state agency where he'll oversee taxpayer monies?"

Rugeley said, "Ben Bynum is a recovering alcoholic who acknowledged his problem, took steps to deal with it and got his life back in order. He is a role model for a lot of other people with drug and alcohol abuse problems."

Richards also is a recovering alcoholic.

Juvenile arrested for Monday shooting of Tech student

Victim remains in critical condition

by JENNIFER GOOCH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A 16-year-old black juvenile was arrested late Monday night in connection with the shooting of Texas Tech student Terry Berridge Monday afternoon.

Lubbock Police Department officials said Berridge chased a young male from DFC Cycles and Fitness, 3501 50th St., after the juvenile allegedly stole a bicycle from the store.

Berridge has been an employee of the bicycle shop for about six months.

Officials said Berridge caught up to the youth as he tried to scale a fence.

The youth then dropped the bike and shot Berridge at close range in the face.

Berridge was in critical condition late Tuesday.

Berridge's roommate, an employee of DFC Cycles and Fitness, said Tuesday that Berridge was not aware of what happened to him.

He said the police found the .38-caliber gun used to shoot Berridge and said a bullet that matched the gun was removed from Berridge Tuesday morning.

His roommate said the police matched the juvenile's fingerprints to the bike that he allegedly attempted to steal.

He said Berridge can see and hear, but cannot talk.

"He's alive and he's kicking and by no means dead," his roommate said.

EnviroSmart volunteers needed to clean up area waste

Training program prepares students to meet with public

by LESLIE WEEKS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech students interested in preserving the environment may volunteer for a new program sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"The EnviroSmart Volunteer Program is a program that we are trying to implement in Lubbock County," County Extension Agent Mark Brown said. "It will be one of the first of its kind across the state."

Brown said EnviroSmart volunteers will help with educational programs in the areas of waste disposal, recycling, composting and waste reduction.

Volunteers also will be required to answer telephone inquiries, to help with demonstrations and to give various presentations to civic groups.

"Hopefully, they will be able to help us distribute this information," Brown said.

Students interested in the program do not have to be environmental experts, Brown said.

"We provide 25 hours of training," he said. "This intensive training should prepare a person to get out and meet the public and have a good technical background."

Brown said volunteers will receive information about meeting with civic organizations in an effective manner and about handling clientele contacts.

He said volunteers will be asked to complete 50 hours of community service after receiving the training.

The EnviroSmart Program, which is conducted in conjunction with Lubbock Waste Watch, is important because of legislation that is being enacted concerning waste reduction, Brown said.

"The statewide goal is to reduce by 40 percent the solid waste stream that is being produced and is going into our sanitary landfills," he said.

Brown said the program provides a needed service to the community.

"It would be a way to help reduce environmental problems," he said.

"I also think it would be a good experience from the standpoint of meeting the public and working with various civic organizations and groups."

The deadline for the program is 5 p.m. Thursday.

Students interested in volunteering for the EnviroSmart Program may contact Brown at 767-1190.

Civil lawsuit awards King $3.8 million in compensation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The jury in Rodney King's civil lawsuit awarded him $3.8 million in compensatory damages from the city of Los Angeles on Tuesday for his 1991 police beating.

The award was significantly below the $15 million sought by King's lawyers but well above the $800,000 the city said was a fair sum.

King was not present in the courtroom for the reading of the jury's verdict, which came on the fourth day of deliberations.

Compensatory damages are intended to pay for King's losses. Only the city was liable for compensatory damages.

A second phase of the trial will determine punitive damages.

There will be 14 defendants in the second phase. They include the officers who beat King as well as officers who stood by at the scene.

The civil trial was the third courtroom action following the March 3, 1991, beating that focused national attention on police brutality.

Women's Reality

Female condom offers one more option for contraception

by CHRISTY EVERETT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Women may no longer be at the whim of their sexual partner for providing protection against pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases.

The Reality female condom now is available at Student Health Services in Thompson Hall.

The product information packet included with the condom describes Reality as "a soft, loose-fitting plastic pouch that lines the vagina."

The condoms can be purchased at Student Health's pharmacy in packages of three for $4.50. The Reality female condom is not considered to be as effective as the male condom, said Robin Brewton, health education coordinator for Student Health Services.

The product is made by Wisconsin Pharamcal, and the product information states that the pregnancy rate for one year using the Reality condom as the only protection every time is 26 percent.

The pregnancy rate for one year while using the male condom is 15 percent. The pregnancy rate for individuals who engage in unprotected sex is listed at 85 percent.

"It has a high failure rate," Brewton said. "I would recommend that students investigate it. But because of the high pregnancy rate, use it only with a back-up method, such as a spermicide or a sponge."

She said the female condom has not been popular with students, and said it mainly is being marketed by the company to older women in monogamous relationships because of the way it must be used.

"It is very cumbersome," Brewton said. "Women will have to be very comfortable with their body to be able to use it correctly."

Brewton said the company does claim that the Reality female condom is effective for prevention of sexually transmitted diseases.

She said she believes the female condom will be unappealing to female students because it is harder to use than a male condom or a sponge.

"It will be a good way for a woman to have protection when her partner refuses," Brewton said. "This is protection for her."

Student Health Services began offering the product in early March when it was first available to family planning organizations. The product is being released to retail pharmacies.

"We try to offer as many contraceptive choices to students as possible," Brewton said.

Readers Write

LETTERS POLICY: Letters to the editor are accepted for publication on the VIEWPOINTS page. All letters MUST be no longer than two, typed, double-spaced pages. Unsigned letters will not be published. Letters must be submitted in person or by mail with picture identification and a telephone number. Letters are printed at the editor's discretion, and the editor reserves the right to edit letters for length, libelous material, spelling and vulgarity. The University Daily does not discriminate because of race, creed, national origin, age, sex or disability.

TRY LAUGHING AT YOURSELF

To the editor:
What's going on here is so obvious it's pathetic. The UD has had some terribly interesting controversies on the ViewPoints page in recent weeks, and they wish to continue with all the fun they (and the rest of us) are having by reading people's impassioned letters.

But this sandals thing has no meat to it. It is a ridiculous attempt by The UD staff and a guest columnist with whom they have had a long-standing relationship to generate letters to the editor. Or, I could be wrong, it may just be Mr. Tepper trying to raise a stink (pun intended), but either way he is getting exactly the response that they want. He's gotten several people to send in letters arguing passionately about a trivial matter, making them look trivial by association.

I have worn sandals in the past, and I may again in the future. I don't own a pair right now because I need my money for other things, and size 15 sandals are hard to come by in Lubbock. Yes, my feet are rather big, especially considering they are effeminate, sandal-wearing feet.

See that? Self-deprecating humor. Try laughing at yourself more often, and save your moral outrage for important issues, such as Hitler youth who use the words "Hispanic" and "crime-ridden" in the same sentence as if they were synonymous, and immature frat-boys who think it's cool to criminally trespass and then brag about it in their college newspaper. With issues out there as outrageous as these, arguing about footwear is a real waste of time.

ORGANIZATION PROVIDES OPPORTUNITIES TO DISCUSS ISSUES

To the editor:

OK, admit it. How many of you have called the "Live Psychic Hotline," seriously or just for laughs, to find out what would happen in your future? What about people like Nostradamus? How have these people's "prophecies" had an affect on your life (is the world REALLY supposed to end next May)?

Well, the Prodigal Christian Organization is giving you an opportunity to discuss issues such as prophecy, Revelation, the anti-Christ, and any other questions or comments you might have about the end of the world. Let's find out what the real truth is on these matters! We will be holding our final forum this semester on these issues, which we will address from a Christian and Biblical standpoint.

The forum will be this Thursday, April 21, from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. in Holden Hall room 75. If you have any questions, call Ben at 799-1958 or Kurt at 798-7148.

Please come and discuss with us these issues that may affect the rest of your life (no matter how much longer anyone says that might be).

HISTORY OF SANDALS

To the editor:

I would like to address this letter to Mr. Carl Tepper in response to his article, No Stupid Shoes Allowed: Sandals Are For Girls. For your information, Mr. Tepper, men have been wearing sandals for centuries upon centuries for various reasons. And, would you believe they weren't all hippies and junkies?

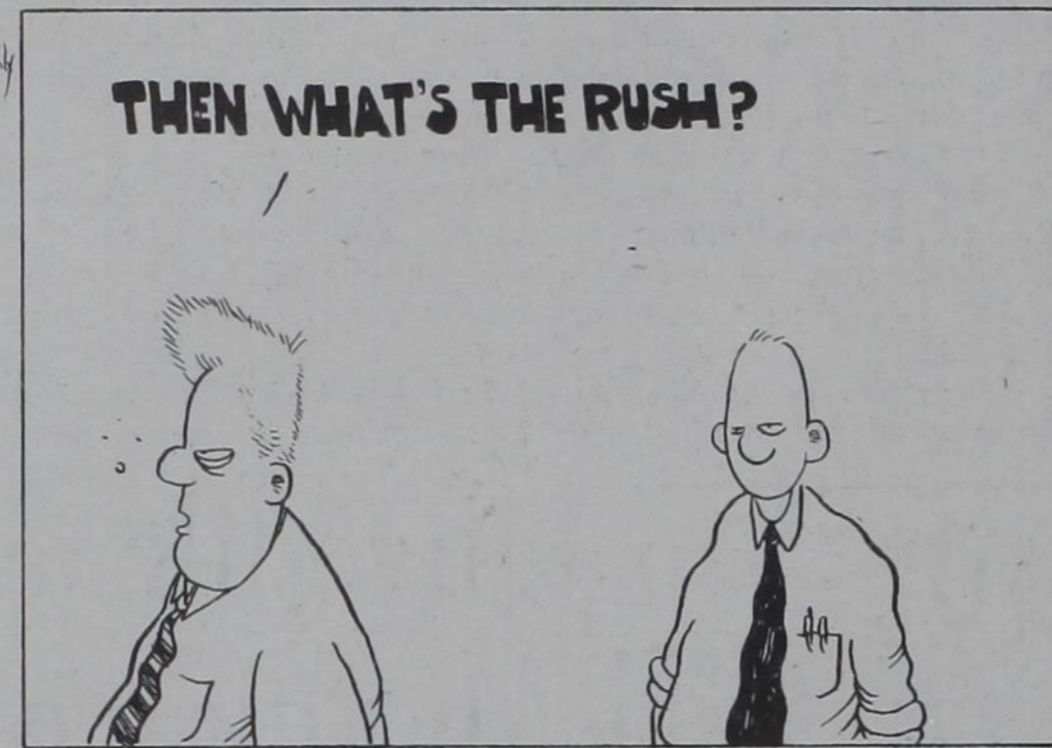

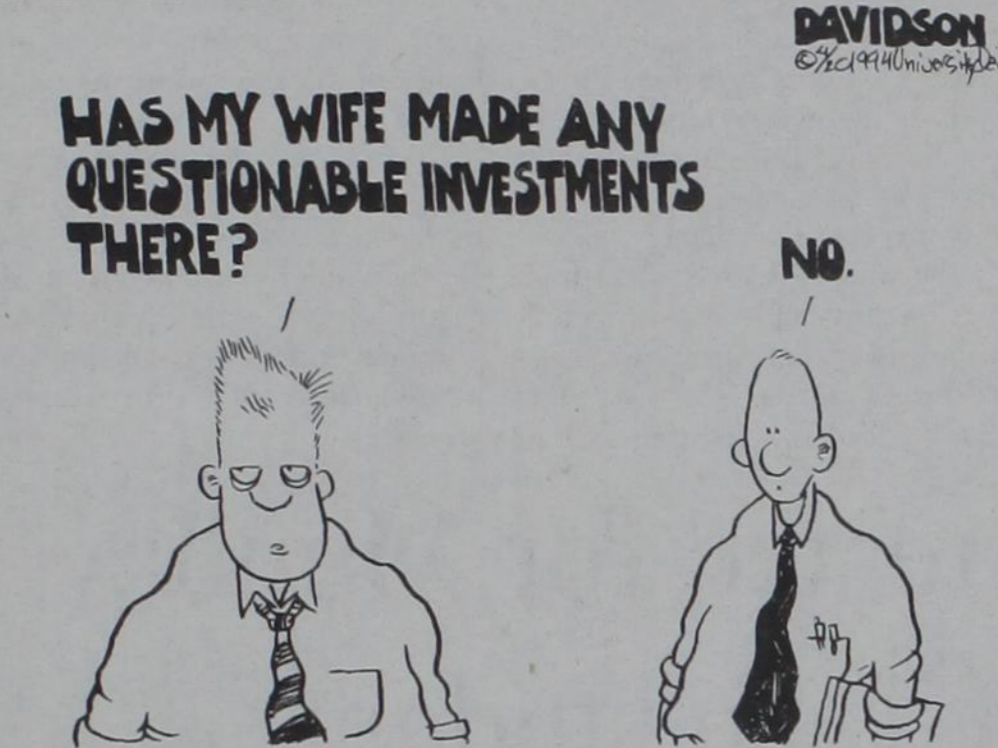

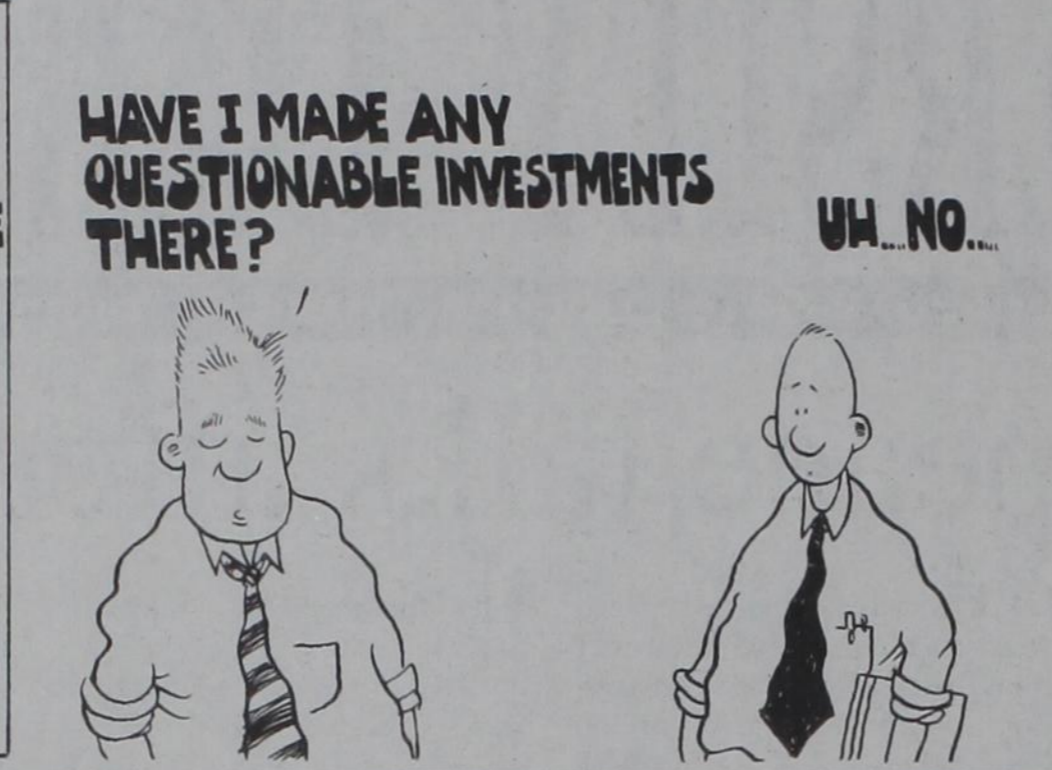

You may not know this, but sandals are made for a purpose other than just fashion. Sandals are made to allow the foot to breathe. It is simply not healthy to constantly enclose the foot in an apparatus that traps heat and moisture. Sandals allow air to circulate around the foot, therefore providing a healthy environment for the skin. Not to mention the fact that, specifically, Birkenstock and Vasque sandals are made to allow your toes to spread out the way they were meant to, instead of cramping them together in the confining toe box of a "normal" shoe. As a matter of fact, it is also much more comfortable (Oh no! I said that word!) to have a little ventilation on the tootsies during the scorching summers West Texas is so famous for. We bare the skin on our arms, legs and torsos, so why not on the feet? But I forget—men are supposed to be tough—take the heat as it were. That's a crock! Men have the same right to be comfortable as women. Just what is it that you're afraid of, anyway?

You may feel that sandals are a fad, but isn't that also true of most everything we wear? Why don't you go look in your closet. What do you see? Any Cole Haan, Dexter or Red Wings? How about Polo, Pepe or Girbaud? If so, you're just as much a sell out as the rest of us. You know, even jeans started out as a fad.

As for your statement "...I don't mind girls in sandals." Thank you for your approval. It's a weight off my shoulders to know that I can wear my Birkenstocks without the constant worry that Carl Tepper will look at them with disapproval.

Are you aware that that statement seems a bit on the sexist side? The definition of sandal, per Oxford, is "light shoe with straps or thongs." But you know, for the life of me, I couldn't find where the sandal was localized to the female gender. So why don't you keep your self righteous, labeling opinions to yourself, or express them to someone who really cares. Save The UD's ink for something more newsworthy, such as the Kitchen Club drink specials.

Clinton bashing needs to stop

KENNETH BOBO
President Clinton said it best when he said to a room full of journalists "It's two days until April 15, and most of you have spent more time on my taxes than your own."

NEWS FLASH! Bill Clinton won the election! He is the President of the United States. I say this to the Republican Party and all other Clinton bashers out there.

I must state that I don't agree with several of the administration's policies and actions. However, I can disagree with him based on issues and ideology without delving into his personal life and his family. As president you must subject yourself to the scrutiny of the media. Your every move is an issue of national security. I'm reminded of the time there was a detailed diagram of President Reagan's colon on every station when he had to undergo surgery.

But Clinton bashers have attacked the president and the First Family with such a venomous zeal that I'm sure it must affect the efficiency of the administration. The time to attack, I'd say, was during the campaign. Obviously they failed.

The disrespect hailed upon the president is a disgrace. Granted he has a few sketchy events in his first year and a half but some things are not his doing. Critics led by Bob Dole and Rush Limbaugh have blamed him for everything short of causing the great flood last year to starting the earthquake in California. Limbaugh stated that the helicopter tragedy in the Persian Gulf was a result of a lack of morale and distrust in the commander-in-chief. Yeah, I guess that pilot had a copy of the Clinton Tax Plan and the Health Care Bill in the cockpit.

There are several hot spots in the world. We have troops in Korea, Bosnia, Somalia, Iraq and Germany among other places. Clinton inherited all of these things. The last thing the president needs are people criticizing his financial dealings or whether or not he dodged the draft. Save that for 1996.

Clinton bashers seem to forget the 280 American troops that were killed as result of the Reagan administration's indecision in Lebanon.

They also seem to forget that President Bush coordinated Desert Storm from his golf course at his Maine mansion.

The president has the most important and difficult job in the world. His goal is not to hurt or defame the country. I have respect for any man who speaks with conviction and believes in himself even if I strongly object to his principles. Clinton inherited a sluggish economy, a horrible crime problem and several small skirmishes throughout the world. He has to set policy based on his personal convictions and ideology. That ideology is his belief in a strong central government and interest in the common man. He believes that as Americans we are entitled to Health Care and opportunity provided by the government.

This ideology is opposite to the ideology of the Republican Party and the right. Unfortunately, Clinton bashers are dogmatic in their opposition.

Clinton bashers seem to forget the 280 American troops that were killed as result of the Reagan administration's indecision in Lebanon.

I'm convinced the right wingers will childishly disagree with the administration on every subject just out of spite. The Republican response to all of Clinton's ideas is usually childishly interpreted as saying, "everything that guy just said is bull." Think, if you were to use their manner of arguing points in a political science paper you would fail miserably.

Then there is Mrs. Clinton. She was thrown into the public eye and she must except the highs and lows. But Limbaugh robots and the minority party in Congress have tried everything they can to make her out to be Lady McBeth. They attack her credibility and intentions as if she and her husband wish to take this supposedly great country, to "hell in a hand basket." She has not asked to be the model all woman should strive to be. However, I believe a woman or a man could do a lot worse than follow in her path. She is in fact a mother and an accomplished attorney who served on several boards for several companies. And personally, I'm looking for the woman who can turn a $1,000 investment into a $100,000. If a fat cat lobbyist does this he is considered a shrewd businessman. When she does it she is considered simply a shrew. Her critics believe she accomplished this success based on her marriage.

If she achieved any of her success in Arkansas or wherever with help from her husband, what difference does it make. You don't think Bob Dole, Ronald Reagan or any other politician has ever pulled strings to help a relative or friend? If my wife were president, mayor or dog catcher, I'd be trying to reap any benefits possible — it's human nature. Politics is just that: politics. Who gets what and where. That is what this country was founded on. Face it. Why should we hold the First Family to a higher moral plane than we hold any other American family?

I feel no shame in saying I don't care about the Whitewater incident. I don't care about his visit to Russia when he was in college. I don't care if he pulled strings to get out of the draft. I don't care if he once smoked pot in college (he is not alone). I don't care if he's a gay lover. And if Bill and Hill had trouble in their marriage, God bless them for keeping it together.

I want safe streets, a strong economy and faith in the United States of America so I and my children can reach our full potential. Let's get more focused on issues, and less on sandals and gossip.

Tech's parking woes persist

by JAYSON BALES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Parking problems on the Texas Tech campus can make students' wallets a little lighter and the wrecker service much richer.

Nan Hutson, division secretary for educational psychology and leadership at Tech, said there is a problem with students parking in reserved spaces for faculty and staff members.

Hutson said she parks in the reserved lot between the University Center and the administration building.

"It creates a huge problem for those of us who park on this lot," Hutson said. "We have a tremendous problem with it because we're close to the UC, we're close to the Bursar's Office and we're close to the bookstore."

Students who park in reserved places not only create problems for faculty and staff members, but for themselves as well because of towing, she said.

Students should be made aware of the problem because they are causing problems for everyone, Hutson said.

Tech Traffic and Parking Control officials respond well to the parking problem, but they are often busy with other assignments on campus, she said.

"They have just worked with us beautifully, but there are many days when they are working with people who are already mis-parked," Hutson said.

Tech Traffic and Parking Enforcement Supervisor Denise Lieb said her department receives about 70 complaints each week about cars parked in reserved spaces.

A traffic and parking control attendant always is dispatched to the scene whenever a call is received about someone parked illegally in a reserved space, Lieb said.

If the car is still parked in the space illegally, a citation is issued and a wrecker is called, she said.

If the car owner arrives before the car is towed, a discounted fee may be paid to the wrecker driver to keep the car from being impounded, Lieb said.

"Approximately 30 vehicles are actually impounded on a weekly basis," she said. "We try not to tow vehicles if there is any other option. However, reserved areas are just that — reserved. This is the instance in which most vehicles are towed."

Bill Dean, Tech's Ex-Students Association director and a mass communications professor, said he has not had a problem with students parking in his reserved space.

"I really don't know whether it is a problem or not," Dean said. "It could be."

Entry station booths and the risk of getting your car impounded should help deter students from parking in reserved spaces, he said.

New business organization receives charter, seeks members

by MEGAN CLARK
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A new business organization at Texas Tech is looking for support from students and faculty members to increase membership and to fund activities.

Phi Beta Lambda, the college level of Future Business Leaders of America, was chartered at Tech in February, but only eight members have pledged membership this semester.

"I've been trying since the fall of 1992-93 to try and charter this organization here at Tech," said Terrie Lagardo, a senior occupational therapy major from El Paso. "We've been going this whole year as an organization here at Tech, but we weren't given our charter until February."

Phi Beta Lambda is a national organization, and membership is open for any student if they are enrolled in a business class at Tech.

"I think organizations like this one will help students understand what the business world is like and how they will have to come into contact with it," she said.

Lagardo said the reason she wanted to charter Phi Beta Lambda at Tech was because she had a good experience with FBLA in high school and wanted students to gain an awareness about the business world.

"It took us so long to get chartered and we don't have a lot of support yet," she said. "We tried to do a lot of activities this year and couldn't get a lot of funding or support for a lot of things."

Lagardo said Phi Beta Lambda originally planned to take a trip to USAA Insurance Company in San Antonio this semester, but did not have enough funds.

"We're struggling because we don't have a lot of support within the campus right now and we're trying to fulfill our main purpose of making students aware of the business world," she said.

The chapter will have a membership drive this spring in area high schools, and it is planning a small conference for FBLA students during the fall.

During a state competition, the Tech chapter was officially recognized and received awards.

History doctoral student invited to West Point

by JENNIFER GILBERT
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech history doctoral candidate Blake Dunnavent was accepted to study at the U.S. Military Academy in June to enhance his American military history career.

Dunnavent said 30 people are selected each year, and said few doctoral students have ever been selected.

"This is a big deal for Texas Tech," he said.

He said West Point began the annual summer workshop in the late 1960s and that, in the beginning, only military personnel were chosen.

"From 1986 until 1993, 99 percent of the recipients were primarily from the civilian sector," Dunnavent said. "This will not provide me with any form of accreditation at Tech, but it looks extremely good on your vita."

Dunnavent said this is a prestigious honor, and said some professors wait a career to be able to attend the summer workshop.

"This will really aid in my pursuit of teaching American military history," Dunnavent said.

Dunnavent obtained sponsorship from the Tech history department and sent his application through a selection process in West Point, N.Y.

"We're also going to tour some Civil War battle sites," Dunnavent said. "It's going to be an intense U.S. military history survey course."

He said battle sites he will visit include Gettysburg, Saratoga and Antietam.

James Reckner, associate history professor, said he attended the summer workshop in 1991, and said there was only one doctoral candidate in attendance.

"This is quite an honor," he said. "He (Dunnavent) produced a very good master's thesis on the Vietnam War."

Reckner said Dunnavent has been teaching at Lubbock Christian University for about a year and one-half, and said the summer opportunity can help his career.

"This gives him the opportunity to interact with great leading military historians in the field," Reckner said.

He also said former President Gen. Dwight Eisenhower's grandson, David, spoke during the 1991 workshop.

"In the afternoons, there were distinguished people from all over the country and from overseas that were invited to come and speak about their expertise," Reckner said. "This will greatly enrich (Dunnavent's) military history knowledge."

'Energetic' volunteers needed to work with youth

Interested Tech students invited to attend meeting with VISTA representatives

by NY LYNN NICHOLS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Representatives from Volunteers in Service to America will be at Texas Tech's University Center Thursday to advise interested students about volunteering.

"There are going to be two representatives from two different VISTAs that currently go on in Lubbock," said Amy Taylor, student assistant project supervisor at the UC. "One is with the Girl Scouts and one is with the Lubbock Health Department.

"There will be a third there who is a VISTA volunteer," she said. "Those people will be available to students interested."

A meeting will be at 3:30 p.m. in the UC's Mesa Room, and the representatives will discuss how to get involved in VISTA and what VISTAs do.

The Girl Scouts need VISTAs for their Teen Mom Camp and Girl Scout day camps.

"We are looking for any energetic volunteer who likes to work with children," said Tamara King, a VISTA volunteer for the Caprock Girl Scout Council. "We are working with at-risk youth. We are encouraging prevention programs for drug abuse and teenage pregnancy prevention."

The Health Department also is looking for volunteers.

"They need people to do door-to-door volunteering," Taylor said. "They have seven people who are actively volunteering."

Taylor said being a VISTA is a big commitment that requires more than just a few hours a week.

"A VISTA is someone who is committed to promoting change in a community," she said.

VISTAs must be at least 18 years old.

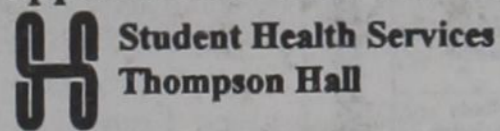

Those interested in getting involved with the VISTA program but cannot attend the meeting should call 742-3621 or go to the UC Activities Office.

Jackopierce to celebrate album debut at Depot

by MICHELLE ELIZARDO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

It's a love/hate thing with touring. I love to do it but you have to pay lots of prices.

Jack O'Neill

Though the two musicians who make up Jackopierce say they feel stardom breathing down their necks, they prefer hanging out with friends — when they are not touring.

Since signing with A&M records, Jackopierce's musical career has skyrocketed and has given the duo a chance to open for top acts like Soul Asylum.

"This is a dream come true so far, and if it ended today, it would be all right," said member Jack O'Neill.

Jackopierce will be in Lubbock at 10 p.m. today at the Depot Warehouse celebrating the Tuesday release of the acoustic duo's new album, "Bringing on the Weather."

The album's producer and engineer, T Bone Burnett and Glyn Johns, have worked with other artists such as Los Lobos and the Rolling Stones.

"This is the strongest, toughest record we have released," said member Cary Pierce. "It has lasting power."

Currently Jackopierce is touring coast to coast and will continue touring for most of the year.

"It's a love/hate thing with touring. I love to do it but you have to pay lots of prices," O'Neill said. "Yet it is the only reason we have gotten where we are today."

O'Neill adds that touring is a curious thing because "you never know what day or time it is."

Since the two have recently graduated from Southern Methodist University, they say they appeal to college crowds.

"It is cool to play college crowds because we are similar in age group and we fit in better with them than any other crowd," Pierce said. "And yet, we still have a gamut of people from different age groups coming to the shows."

O'Neill and Pierce are not looking to add members to the band, but they are looking to incorporate musicians into the stage show.

"We are not looking to start a band, but someone (musician) to come join us on stage," Pierce said.

Monday, O'Neill and Pierce were resting with friends before they had to go back on tour.

"I don't like leaving Dallas and seeing my friends so rarely," O'Neill said.

Jackopierce said they are excited to play in Lubbock because Lubbock crowds are appreciative.

Unplugged

Cary Pierce, left, and Jack O'Neill, members of Dallas-based acoustic band Jackopierce, will perform at 10 p.m. today at the Depot Warehouse. Doors open at 8 p.m.

"The first time we played at Lubbock was one of the best shows ever," O'Neill said. "They are very appreciative out there and glad you come out — we always have a good time in Lubbock."

The "good times" are scheduled to start at 4 p.m. today at University Records where Jackopierce will be signing autographs and playing music from the new album.

Tickets for the show at the Depot Warehouse cost $9 in advance at Ralph's Records and University Records, or $11 at the door.

Total Yodel Contest looking for participants, offering Alpine vacation

by LARA M. CAMPBELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Over the years companies across the United States have put on some strange promotional stunts, trying to get their product off the shelves and into the homes of America.

Now in a unique promotional campaign, Americans nationwide will have a chance to yodel their way to the Swiss Alps.

Through April 30, by dialing 1-800-94-Alpine, people can yodel a recorded message in an attempt to win Care-Free Sugarless Gum's "Total Yodel Contest."

Contestants will have 60 seconds to give their name, address, phone number and best yodel. The first 100,000 yodelers to respond will be in the running for the Alpine vacation. One winner will be announced.

There are no specifications for the contest. Hunter Macfarlane, product manager for Care-Free, said any yodel from standard to outrageous will be welcome.

"We want callers to have fun with this contest," Macfarlane said. "They should yodel like they've never yodeled before and feel free to add humor to their yodels. We don't want just serious yodels."

While yodeling may not be the most popular form of music in the United States, many famous Americans have yodeled in their time.

Frank Zappa, the father of underground rock, incorporated yodeling into his hard-driving, complex musical form.

Former Texas Tech student John Denver yodels on his album "Windsong," and Julie Andrews in the Oscar winning "The Sound of Music" broke out into a yodel in the musical number "The Lonely Goatherd."

Leon Thomas, jazz artist and Gene Autry, actor, are others who have been known to yodel.

Streisand ticket scalpers face suit

NEW YORK (AP) — Two New Jersey ticket brokers are being sued for allegedly scalping Barbra Streisand tickets.

Attorney General G. Oliver Koppell filed suit Monday, saying the brokers charged $325 each for two tickets worth $125 apiece. The most the tickets could be legally resold for is $137.50, or 10 percent of the face value, he said.

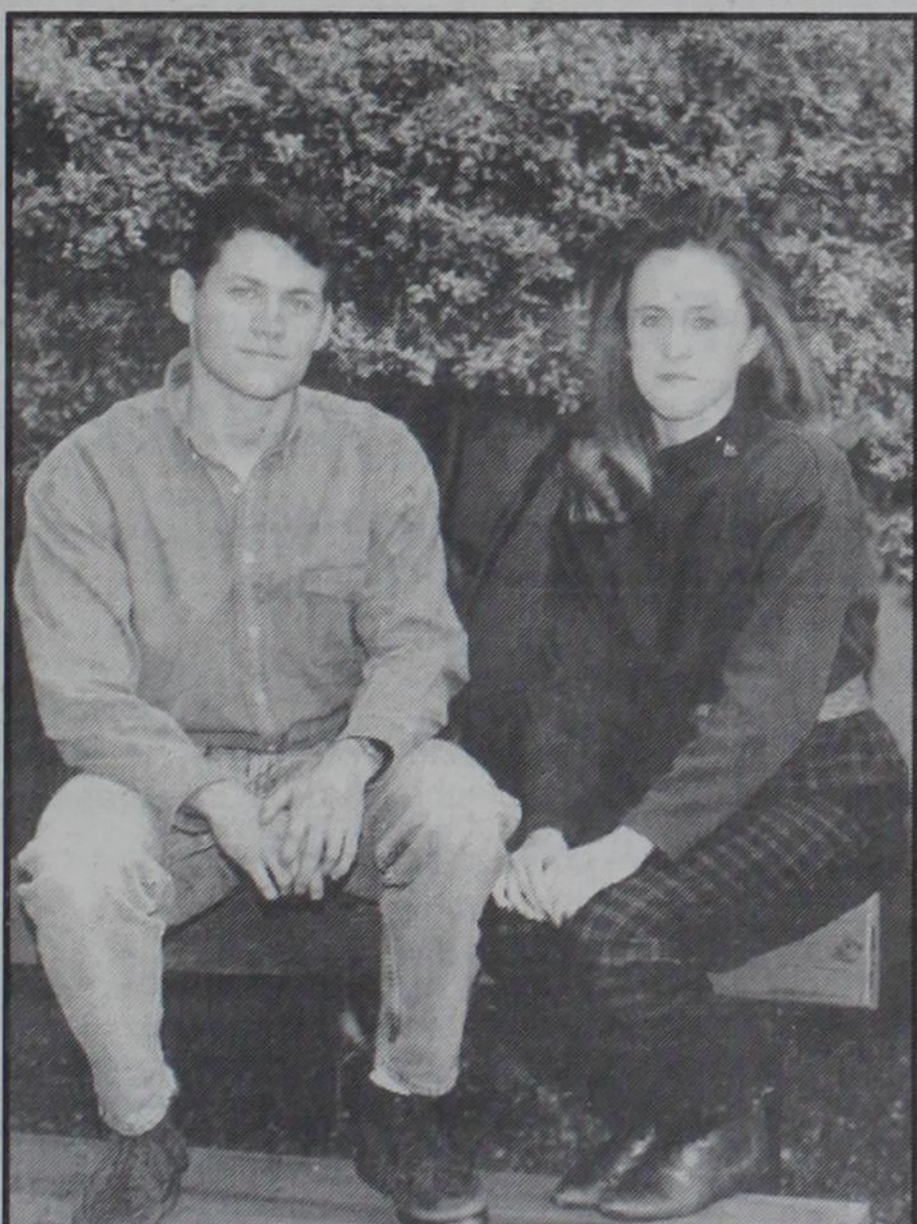

"This is gouging," Koppell said. "This is not legitimate commerce."

The lawsuit names Richard Birnbach of The Ticket Box and T-Box and William Vlasick of A&B Services and N.Y. Theatre Tickets. Calls to those outlets were answered by people who said they could only take ticket orders.

Streisand's June 26 concert at Madison Square Garden has given Koppell a headache. Streisand is going on tour for the first time in more than two decades.

"We have been overwhelmed with complaints from consumers," he said. "The public is outraged. Some of them stand on line for hours and then can't get tickets. We suspect there is massive diversion of tickets to scalpers."

FACTS AND FACES OF THE U.P.

Donald Clancy, a senior chemical engineering student, enjoys living at the U.P. Donald said, "I live right next to campus, my engineering classes are only a five-minute walk away. I really enjoy the people at the University Plaza. There is a mature atmosphere here and I'm finding it very easy to make lots of friends."

Kimberly Johnson enjoys the fact that "The University Plaza provides all of the comforts and convenience to make college life easier. It is the 'Home Away From Home' for college students."

Jennifer Wilder describes the U.P. as a place with "privacy and coed living." She loves not having to cook, not having to pay bills and basically no maintenance to worry about.

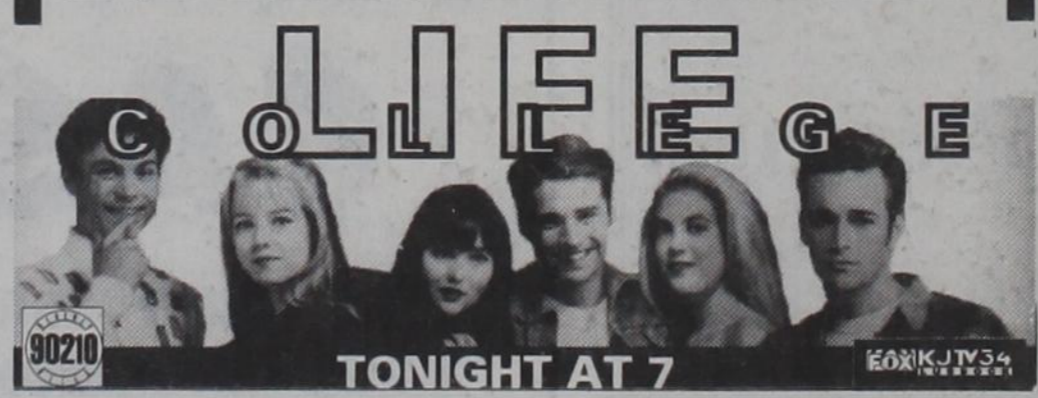

Drew Gosner says that "at the U.P. you are treated more like an adult."

One of the things Chad Patterson says he likes about life at the U.P. is the "friendly staff that really go out of their way to help you."

Kenneth Williams enjoys the fact that the "quiet floors are quiet" and he likes to meet other graduate and law students.

Ruecker first baseball signee for Tech

The Texas Tech baseball team signed its first player of the spring to a letter of intent Tuesday. Shortstop Dion Ruecker plans to attend Tech next season coming from Green River Community College in Auburn, Wash. He is a 5-10, 182-pound sophomore originally from Vancouver, Wash.

"We're excited about being able to sign Dion to join our program," Tech head coach Larry Hays said. "He's the type of player we want in our program because he has solid skills both as a hitter and as a defensive player. "He's played in an outstanding junior college program the last two years under a coach who is familiar with our program. We couldn't be happier about being able to sign Dion to play for us." The coach at Green River is former Raider third baseman Dan Spencer who encouraged Ruecker to attend Tech. Ruecker is hitting .360 in the first 13 games of the season with two home runs, 19 RBI and six stolen bases.

Last season with the Gators, he led the Northwest Athletic Association of Community Colleges with 10 home runs and 57 RBI. At Battle Ground High School, Ruecker was an all-state candidate at shortstop. He was also all-state in football as a defensive back.

Totman chosen as SWC Player of Week

Texas Tech second baseman Jason Totman was awarded Southwest Conference Player of the Week. Totman is a junior college transfer from Butler County Community College in Butler, Kan. Totman hit .556 in five games last week, which included two wins against Texas A&M Saturday at Dan Law Field. He went 10 for 18 from the plate, scoring seven runs and had seven RBI. He also is the league leader in hitting with a .422 average.

THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech volleyball coaching staff swarmed on California and returned with two recruits. Misty Cromwell signed with the Raiders earlier this year as the first Tech signee. She comes from Eisenhower High School in Rialto, Calif.

Jones said. "She has played only a couple of years. She is a very good athlete and has a lot of potential. She is very focused." The Raiders also signed Jennifer Pavley from Agoura, Calif. She is currently attending Agoura High School. "She is the kind of player that is a winner," Jones said. "She knows the game very well. She is a very good volleyball player. I think she can make an impact here pretty quick. She is not big, but never gives up or quits. She will bring a winning attitude to the team."

Lubbock. It impressed the club coach. She screens everything and if she doesn't like a team the kids have no opportunity to go there. It is one of the top clubs in the country.

Pavley played setter for the club team after moving from middle blocker. Jones said she will be an outside hitter for the Raiders. "We moved Jackie Bode and wanted to get four outside hitters. It is a nice addition," he said. Jones said he attempted to recruit Texas players, but was unsuccessful. "We tried to recruit in Texas," he said. "But this is the way things turned out. We lost a couple to Texas and Kentucky. They were good players, but I am happy they way things worked. Both of the recruits we have, have good attitudes and are hard workers and can help the team."

Stars hope to hang on blue-collar style in playoffs

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Stars have taken the opener of their first-round Stanley Cup playoff series by maintaining their blue-collar style.

If the St. Louis Blues hope to even the series in game two Wednesday night at 7:30 in Reunion Arena, they'll need more contributions from their stars.

The Stars captured the first game, 5-3, behind no-names like forwards Brent Gilchrist and goalie Darcy Wakaluk.

Gilchrist scored two second-period goals, Klatt added a key third-period tally and Wakaluk turned aside 33 shots.

Meanwhile, the Blues' superstars were held in check. Brett Hull scored a third-period goal, but Dallas was able to penetrate goalie Curtis Joseph.

"We understand who we are and what we do well," Stars coach Bob Gainey said. "We understand there are other teams that are, quote, more talented than we are, but on any night, we seem to be able to beat more talented teams by working hard."

Club Sports

Lacrosse
The Texas Tech lacrosse club defeated Baylor 16-5 last weekend. High scorers for Tech were Ed Kammerer, Mike Mullins and Geoff Arentz. The defense was led by Chase Bales, Mike Gruver, Steve Burrow and goalie Jason Celaya. The club finished the season undefeated in division play. The club will travel to Houston to compete in the South West Lacrosse Association's playoffs and championships. For more information contact Jess Cramer at 747-9610.
