Iraq halts retreat from Kuwait border

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some Iraqi Republican Guard units that had been heading away from the Kuwait border halted their retreat Thursday, prompting the Pentagon to rethink a hold it had put on the flow of U.S. troops to the Persian Gulf, senior U.S. military officials said.

"We don't like what we are seeing.... They are clearly south of where we would like them to be," a senior military official told reporters at the Pentagon.

A decision earlier Thursday by Gen. J.H. Binford Peay to slow the fast-paced flow of U.S. forces into the Gulf region will be under discussion, the official added. Peay is head of the Central Command and in charge of the Gulf deployment.

"The whole process of when and what flows is being reviewed," the Pentagon official said of the U.S. troop movement.

"This looks as if it is another possible test of our resolve," said a senior Pentagon official traveling with U.S. Defense Secretary William Perry in Jiddah, Saudi Arabia.

Coors recalls cases, discovers bacteria

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — About 150,000 cases of Coors beer has been pulled off of shelves in Denver and the Dallas-Fort Worth area after a bacteria that sometimes occurs in canned and bottled foods was discovered in two batches of brew, company officials said Thursday.

Hugo Patino, Coors' vice president of research development and quality assurance, said Thursday the company is in the process of identifying where the batches have gone nationwide. He said Coors currently has about 5 million cases of beer on the national beer market.

The spoiled beer, which is thicker than normal and is cloudy, represents about 3 percent of Coors' total beer stocked with retailers and distributors, he said.

Patino emphasized that the bacteria found does not pose a health hazard, and is "naturally occurring" in certain canned and bottled foods, such as pickles.

Court denies appeal of apartment company

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court has denied the appeal of an apartment management company that was accused of negligence by a woman who was raped by a man police say entered her apartment through a broken glass door.

The court on Wednesday, without comment, rejected the appeal of JTM Inc., which managed the Lakeview Gardens Apartments in Lewisville when the woman was raped March 30, 1991.

The woman, described in court records as in her late 60s when the assault occurred, had told the apartment operators twice that her sliding glass door was not closing properly.

The door never was repaired, court records said. Police said the attacker probably entered the apartment through that door.

Board discusses ticket increase

BY JONATHAN HARRIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech Board of Regents met Thursday to discuss upgrading the cost of Tech men's and women's basketball game ticket prices and to establish a new degree in the department of range and wildlife.

The board also deliberated establishing academic status for Tech librarians and archivists.

Tech Athletic Director Bob Bockrath said the athletic department decided to raise basketball game ticket prices because of the need to maximize its revenue in all of Tech's sports.

"There are several ways to maximize the revenues," he said. "One way is to raise the cost of admission."

Bockrath said he thought ticket prices were low and decided to increase them.

"It was important to bring the ticket prices for both teams in parity with one another," he said. "Trying to bring this parity together, there was a larger increase in the women ticket prices."

The proposed ticket increase will raise the price for both men's and women's basketball games to $7, $9 and $10.

Bockrath said if the board does not approve the ticket price increase, the athletic department will have to refund money to people who have already purchased tickets.

"I did not realize the board needed to authorize any ticket increases," Bockrath said. "I was advised by the president's office to bring this issue in front of the board for approval."

Bockrath said Tech has an 85 percent basketball game ticket renewal rate this year.

The board also was asked to consider a proposed new degree course program through the department of range and wildlife.

The program would be developed through a combination of existing courses, including specialized areas such as technical environmental skills, water management, land management and animal population management.

Donald Haragan, Tech vice president and provost, said the program would not require extra funding or resources.

Current Tech faculty could be used to implement the program, Haragan said.

The board also discussed allowing full-time librarians and archivists to participate in research and to receive the same benefits as Tech faculty members.

"If the motion is passed, librarians would be able to participate in procedures much like faculty," Haragan said.

Shonrock holds off on inquiry

The Dean of Students Office will not take any action against Benji Nickens until they have reviewed official police reports, Dean of Students Michael Shonrock said.

Nickens, former president of the Texas Tech Interfraternity Council, was arrested Saturday for the possession of less than two ounces of marijuana, a Lubbock Police Department report stated.

Nickens resigned from his leadership position Wednesday night.

The University Police Department acts as a liaison between Texas Tech and the LPD and will provide the Dean of Student's Office with information, Shonrock said.

Shonrock said once his office receives the report, and if it suggests violation of the Tech Code of Student Conduct, the office will begin its own investigation.

"If it has to do with a campus group or organization, my office usually handles it," he said. "For individual students, depending on what happened, the police department handles it first."

The Code of Student Conduct states anyone found in violation will be subject to disciplinary action and/or suspension from the university.

The Lubbock District Attorney's office has not yet received a report from any law enforcement agency, said David Duncan, assistant district attorney for Lubbock County.

If the DA's office does receive a report, it will conduct its own investigation, Duncan said.

"We will review the police report to see if there are elements of an offense and proper evidence," he said.

Jake West, former executive vice president of the IFC, is now serving as interim president, said Patricia Honacki, assistant dean of students.

Return of Ely's car to Lubbock not subject of investigation

BY LINDA CARRIGER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Deputies are not investigating information that Larry Ely's car was driven back to Lubbock by one of his Sigma Delta Phi fraternity brothers, said Randall County Sheriff's Department Lt. Roger Short.

Ely, a 24-year-old Texas Tech student, died of a broken neck after falling from a cliff near the Yucca Flats campground adjacent to Palo Duro Canyon.

"If he was intoxicated, it wouldn't have been unusual for someone to drive his car back and think he was with someone else," Short said. "We're not too concerned with the fact the car was driven back."

Randall County Justice of the Peace E. Jay Hail said preliminary toxicology reports indicate Ely's blood-alcohol level exceeded Texas mandates.

"We are definitely satisfied he was legally drunk," Hail said.

A final toxicology report will be available to investigators today or Monday, Hail said.

Short said if investigators discover minors had been drinking during the camping trip, they would not press charges against the minors.

"We'd have to catch them in the act before we'd do anything," he said.

Short said he has not read the affidavits given by Ely's fraternity brothers and said he does not know if minors were drinking at the campsite.

Patti Honacki, Tech's assistant dean of students, said if RCSD reports that minors were drinking at the site, university officials will consider disciplinary actions against the minors.

"If there has been a violation of the Student Code of Conduct, the university will take action," Honacki said.

Honacki said, if a violation has occurred, the Dean of Students Office will consider each case individually.

Tony Smercina, executive director of Delta Sigma Phi, said the national organization is investigating the Tech chapter's involvement in the incident.

"What we will do is look at all fraternity policies and see how they were adhered to," Smercina said.

Smercina said the national organization has not found the local chapter at fault.

Farmers, ranchers from around world close Farmer-Stockman Show

BY SANDY FULLER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Crops, tractors and irrigation equipment lined the avenues of the Lubbock City Farms Thursday as farmers and ranchers gathered for the final day of the Farmer-Stockman Show.

Located on 800 acres of farmland, the three-day show featured about 400 exhibitors showcasing their agricultural products, as well as farmers harvesting their crops surrounding the show tents.

In its second year, the working outdoor-farm show is the only one of its kind in Texas and one of the few in the United States.

Farmers and ranchers from the United States and Europe attended the show to view the newest farm machinery, seed fertilizer, pesticides, buildings, livestock equipment and irrigation equipment.

Trisha Rowland, Farmer-Stockman show secretary, said attendance figures were unavailable, although there were 25 percent more exhibitors this year.

Texas Tech exhibits at the show displayed the agricultural research projects of faculty and students in the College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources.

The Texas Tech Beef Center showcased two purebred Angus cattle and one calf from the Tech farm at New Deal. The farm boasts 40 purebred Angus cattle, which provide students opportunities for teaching and research.

Three sheep, representing the department's research in double muscling, were on display. An exhibit on callipygee, or muscle hypertrophy, showed viewers how Tech's research in the hindquarters of sheep has led to the discovery that callipygee genes create more muscle mass and leaner sheep.

Exhibits also showcased Tech's outdoor pig farm and the Texas Tech Horse Center.

The Masked Rider, Amy Smart, and interim mascot Hoot Owl, also participated in show activities. Smart, a senior animal science major, said the show was a great opportunity to promote Tech and its agricultural college.

"The show's been great," Smart said. "I've been riding the horse around the show and showing him off to people."

She said many people came in Tech's tent to see the animals on display and ask questions about Tech's programs.

The show is a great benefit to all agriculturists, especially to people from foreign countries, Smart said.

"The U.S. is more advanced than many other countries in agriculture," she said. "There is so much new technology out there, and the U.S. is a leader in that."

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service displayed the Agriculture Information Highway, a network of computers that feature on-line services of interest to farmers and ranchers.

Jim Segers, an extension agent from College Station, said farmers can receive weather updates and forecasts from their home computers.

Research causes new debate with embryo experiments

KENDRA CASEY

As the National Institutes of Health gear up to begin federally funded research on embryos, perhaps they too should invest a little of that hard-lobbed money in bullet-proof vests.

Embryological research has long been a source of controversy between those who stake claim on the American moral conscience and those in pursuit of scientific knowledge.

Genetics research has opened up the possibility for parents-to-be to determine the sex of their children, the health of their children, the IQ of their children and much more—long before the actual birth of their children.

It's the kind of research that has fundamentalists running scared with the fear of gender-based infanticide and a radical take-over of society by a population of clones and half-animal, half-human creatures.

And while some of those fears might be legitimate concerns, they have become more considerable now that the NIH has taken a more serious approach to obtaining federal research monies.

NIH leaders, in refutation of claims that embryo research is reminiscent of scenes from Aldous Huxley's "Brave New World," say such research could revolutionize cancer research and, if nothing else, shed light on some of the mysteries of fertility or, rather, infertility.

But such medical advances fall on deaf ears when those ears belong to pro-lifers, and the ethical dilemma seems to become more intense with talk of the research moving from an exclusively private arena to the labs of the federally funded.

The longstanding argument that embryonic matter is deserving of the same human rights as fully-developed human beings could stunt genetics research growth when the funding issue reaches Congress.

But the NIH has done as good a job at the lobbying tables as at the lab tables when it comes to genetics embryo research, addressing ethical concerns far to the right of middle ground.

At the top of the research no-no list is the exclusion of cells obtained from post-abortion matter, cells from embryos more than 14-days old, research to be used in sex selection and the transfer of human embryos to non-human animals.

It's a responsible approach to a tricky situation. So when it comes time for lawmakers on the hill to put their two-cents worth in, can we expect the same responsible actions?

Maybe. Because when faced with the possibility that by giving an inch in the where-does-life-begin argument to gain a mile in life-saving medical advancements, it's hard to imagine the proposal facing any roadblocks.

But maybe not. Because pro-lifers have proven that the sanctity of human life that already exists isn't as important as that which one day might be human life.

So research, too, is trapped in the social debate of abortion rights.

Let's just hope snipers don't start hanging out in front of federally funded research labs waiting for unsuspecting victims.

God says homosexuality is wrong

To the editor:
 This letter is in response to the multitude of stories and letters concerning homosexuality that have covered the pages of The UD the last few weeks. Homosexuality is an issue that deserves coverage in the press, but I know that I speak on behalf of many Tech students when I say enough is enough! Being gay or lesbian is a matter of personal preference, and those who are homosexual deserve not to be persecuted, but I do not think it is right for a college newspaper to promote or glorify homosexuality. Why? Because it is wrong. It is not wrong because I say so, or because Tech President Robert Lawless says so or because Dan Quayle says so. It is wrong because it goes against the very word of God. God's plan for natural sexual relationships is his ideal for his creation. In Romans 2:25, it states, "They exchanged the truth of God for a lie, and worshipped and served things created, rather than the Creator... Because of this, God gave them over to shameful lusts. Even their women exchanged natural relations for unnatural ones. In the same way the men also abandoned natural relations with women and were inflamed with lust for one another. Men committed indecent acts with other men, and received in themselves the due penalty of their perversion."

Homosexuality is just another symptom of the degradation of human society. We have become more Godless as a society, and have become more and more concerned with ourselves, our rights, our desires, our freedoms. We feel more and more that we should be able to do as we please, and be responsible to no one. We have almost become our own gods. So the questions we have to ask ourselves are these: Do we want to teach our children about homosexuality, premarital sex, and murder? Or do we want to teach our children to be responsible, not just to society, but to our Creator? Do we want to call people courageous for coming out and saying that they gave in to their sinful desires? Or do we want to call people courageous for seeking help in overcoming their desires? A press that pats people on the back for "coming out of the closet" is not conducive to the betterment of our society. What we should be trying to do is help these people "clean up the closet." For homosexuality is a desire of the world, and as it says in 1 John 2:17, "The world and its desires pass away, but the person who does the will of God lives forever." I can only hope The University Daily is responsible enough to print a letter with a Christian point of view.

Myths abound regarding homosexuality

To the editor:
 I understand the purpose of National Coming Out Day was to educate the heterosexuals as to the gay lifestyle and to dispel some of the more popular myths. What about some of the myths in the gay community found in Tuesday's UD?
 Myth 1: All gays can tell the sexual orientation of another person just by looking at them ("gaydar"). I do not believe in ESP. Mistakes like these happen all the time, and I have personal knowledge of such mistakes. Greg Smith correctly stated that, "Most gays you wouldn't know unless they wanted you to know."
 Myth 2: Gays only find other gays attractive. Burba stated, "Heterosexuals, shouldn't flatter themselves." Do you expect me to believe that you approach people to find out their sexual orientation before you decide if they are physically attractive to you? You can't know ahead of time (see Myth 1), unless you trust rumors which can be embarrassing.
 Myth 3: Homosexuality is not a choice. This is not so much a myth, but an inaccuracy. Both Graskey and Burba agreed, "being homosexual is not a choice." Most people fail to separate the sexual attraction from the sexual actions. No one can help what they like. Some people like Coke, some people Pepsi, some like high places, some don't. Again, Smith's column correctly identifies this difference. According to him, the first stage "self acknowledgment... admitting to oneself his or her sexual orientation." The second stage is "self-acceptance." (You didn't elaborate much here, so please correct me if I have misunderstood you.) At this stage, a person must DECIDE whether to act on the discoveries made in stage one, or "marry someone of the opposite sex just to prove to themselves what they know deep down isn't true." There are other options which I will not go into here. This is a decision whether it is conscious or not. It is easy to find unseen, unchangeable causes for FEELINGS. It is more difficult to take responsibility for ACTIONS.
 Myth 4: Everyone who disagrees with homosexuality is homophobic. First of all, "homophobic" means literally "fear of sameness." It is possible to disagree with homosexuality on moral grounds and still work with and befriend gays. Using "homophobic" to describe someone or a group immediately puts them on the defensive and leaves little room for productive dialogue.
 The sooner these myths, along with others, are dispelled, the sooner the tension between groups will ease, and we can move on to more important issues. Private sexual practices are no one else's business, and condemning someone for them is wrong. Please note that my sexual orientation is not mentioned here. It is none of your business.

Lawless speaks for many Techsans

To the editor:
 For the past two weeks, there have been many letters to the editor written by a very small number of homosexuals declaring that the letter written by Tech President Robert Lawless was unfair and that he should resign. I went through the University Center Tuesday out of curiosity to see what kind of response Coming Out Day would receive. As I suspected, there were very few people walking around with arm bands. There were, however, a very large number who paid it little or no attention. This led me to question the statistic offered last week that one in 10 people in America are gay or lesbian. Time magazine in their Oct. 17 issue reported on the largest sex study since the Kinsey report done by the University of Chicago offered a more realistic statistic on how many people are really gay/lesbian in America. They found that only 2.7 percent of men and 1.3 percent of women report that they had homosexual sex in the past year. The study admits that some people might have withheld information. While it might not be perfect, it is the most comprehensive and scientifically sound study ever done.
 Lawless did nothing to violate the civil rights of this small group of people. He has, however, done quite a bit for a very large group of Texas Techsans.
 Thanks, Dr. Lawless.

'The Letter' results in resignation request

To the editor:
 The just plain wrongness of Robert Lawless' homophobic statements should not be obscured by tangential issues such as privacy, professionalism, the use of university stationary, etc. The simple fact remains: The bigotry expressed in that document is appalling.
 Everyone, of course, is entitled to an opinion. Very few people, however, are qualified to preside over the education of thousands of students. Lawless is apparently not one of those

Chick-fil-A celebrates grand opening in University Center

BY AMY OSMULSKI
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech and Chick-fil-A officials gathered in the University Center Thursday morning for Chick-fil-A's grand opening activities.

"Texas Tech now has the 44th Chick-fil-A store on college campuses, and we are delighted to have one of the top, fast-growing, brand-name fast food restaurants here," said Tom Razez, associate director of Tech's Housing and Dining Services.

Razez thanked Jim Burkhalter, director of Housing and Dining Services, Robert Ewalt, vice president for student affairs, and Robert Lawless, president of Texas Tech, for their support and help in bringing Chick-fil-A to Tech.

Activities included remarks from other officials, a ribbon-cutting ceremony, a first-bite ceremony and a visit from the Chick-fil-A mascot, Doodles.

"We have had such a good store in the South Plains Mall, and we are really tickled to be here at Texas Tech," said Barry White, manager of Chick-fil-A business development.

White said the only complaint he has heard from Lubbock customers is that Chick-fil-A needs to be more accessible.

"We wanted to make Chick-fil-A as convenient as possible for everyone, and we hope to expand even more in the Lubbock area," he said.

The combination of Tech and Chick-fil-A is a good business partnership where everyone wins, White said.

"I think this is going to turn out to be a wonderful thing, and I bet we are going to be here for many years," he said. Chick-fil-A offers a scholarship program to employed students, said Don Perry, public relations specialist with Chick-Fil-A, Inc.

The program has awarded more than $9,500 scholarships in the past 20 years, Perry said.

The total amount awarded in scholarships will surpass $10 million in 1994, Perry said.

To qualify for a Chick-fil-A scholarship, an employee must have worked for at least two years and average 20 hours per work week.

The student must also receive a recommendation from his or her manager, he said.

Task force committee results to be released by end of fall semester

BY JONATHAN HARRIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Results from a task force committee assigned to study Texas Tech's faculty productivity will be ready by the end of the semester, said Tech Vice President and Provost Donald Haragan.

The task force committee consists of 13 members of Tech's colleges and the law school.

"The primary purpose for the task force is to come up with some innovative strategic planning that will enable us to essentially accomplish the mission, despite the fact that our resources are declining," Haragan said.

Haragan said he asked the committee to investigate productivity at Tech to maintain and enhance the magnitude and quality of faculty output.

"We asked the committee to consider the teaching mission and the research mission," he said. "We also need to look at other things we can do, such as new ways to organize, policies we can establish and other possibilities that we could consider to try to maintain the productivity of the academic units with fewer resources."

He also said the committee is allowed flexibility to recommend changes in any area it feels will help in assessing productivity problems. The university has lost many faculty members in the last year, Haragan said.

"This problem becomes more difficult, and we have limited options," he said. "We can either teach larger classes or have faculty teach more classes."

Haragan said neither of the options are good because large class size causes course quality to suffer. He also said faculty is busy with other things, such as research.

John Burns, chairman of biological sciences, said the committee's research has been slow.

Tobacco chiefs upset over anti-smoking ads

NEW YORK (AP) — Threatened with a libel suit by the chairman of R.J. Reynolds, three California TV stations have pulled an anti-smoking ad containing news footage of the nation's tobacco chiefs swearing before Congress that they believe nicotine is not addictive.

A lawyer for James W. Johnston, the R.J. Reynolds chairman, said the ad makes it sound as if Johnston was lying to Congress. The lawyer demanded in a letter to California TV stations and to the state Health Services Department that the ad be pulled immediately.

The ad features footage of Johnston saying, "Cigarettes and nicotine clearly do not meet the classic definitions of addiction." Three other tobacco executives are also shown saying they don't believe nicotine is addictive. As they testify, the questioner's reminder that they are "under oath" echoes over and over. An announcer follows, saying, "Now the tobacco industry is trying to tell us that secondhand smoke isn't dangerous." Viewers are then asked: "Do they think we're stupid?"

S. Kimberly Belshe, director of the Health Services Department, which produced the ad, said, "We stand by our ads, and we deny any allegation of defamation. We are extremely troubled by what I have characterized as strong-arm tactics to discourage local TV stations from running these spots." The intent of the ad "is not to libel an individual, but to speak to the credibility of the industry," she said.

Council ponders arena placement

BY LINDA CARRIGER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Leaders question connecting arena to Civic Center

City officials discussed possible configurations of the city's proposed multipurpose arena during a Lubbock City Council work session Thursday.

Council members decided in September to place the arena on the north parking lot across from the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center if voters approve a sales tax increase in January.

Robert Massengale, assistant city manager, said the arena could have a north-south access or an east-west access.

He also said the arena could be connected to the Civic Center by a concourse in which case the two facilities would share a common lobby, he said.

Councilman Randy Neugebauer said he originally liked the idea of connecting the Civic Center and the new arena, but said he now does not think a connection would be feasible.

"I had originally thought I would like it connected to the Civic Center, but there was a logistics problem that it would be taller than the Civic Center," Neugebauer said.

"Attached, it would have to be sunk into the ground," he said.

Neugebauer said keeping the arena and the Civic Center separate would create green spaces between the buildings and make parking less complicated.

Massengale said an arena attached to the Civic Center would cost the most, and an arena built below ground level would cost less.

"The least expensive has a facility that is partially below grade, meaning that if you walked in at ground level you'd be half way up the seats," he said. He said the average cost of the facility is about $48 million, and said the arena would seat about 13,000 to 15,000 people.

Also during Thursday's meeting, council members read the ordinance that will call a sales tax election Jan. 21.

The ordinance states that the sales tax will be split up to serve two purposes, Massengale said.

Three-eighths of a cent sales tax would fund the multipurpose arena and the Economic Development Corporation, and one-eighth of a cent would reduce property taxes, Massengale said.

Candidate criticizes political foe

BY LINDA CARRIGER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Craig Tounget berated his opponent, Republican Rep. Delwin Jones, for missing 81 votes during the last Texas legislative session.

During a press conference Thursday, Tounget said that Jones' voting record shows he does not belong in the office.

"Our state representative is there every day and simply is not representing us way too many parts of the time," Tounget said. "He wants the position but is no longer willing to do the job."

Tounget said there are only two reasons for a representative not to vote on a bill.

"One, you don't know what's going on or he's afraid of who he's going to make mad, and neither one of those are good reasons," he said.

Tounget said Jones has missed votes concerning the Insurance Reform Act and the Education Bill.

"I can find no pattern on to what he votes on and doesn't vote on," Tounget said. "I think he just doesn't take the effort."

Scott Mann, the Lubbock County Republican chairman, said Jones may have chosen only to vote on bills which affected local constituents or may have been in committee meetings during votes.

"He missed two critical votes out of all the votes taken out on the floor," Mann said.

"When you are a committee chair, as Mr. Jones is, it's understandable."

Tounget said he may not be able to vote 100 percent of the time if he is elected to the post, but said if he is in the capitol building, he will cast a vote. Jones has been at the capitol building every day during the legislative session, Tounget and Mann said.

Farmers search for new ideas at show

For instance, if a storm is on the way, a farmer will know how much time he has to finish harvesting his crops before the storm hits, he said.

"To remain competitive, a farmer has to become more technologically advanced," Segers said. "Many farmers already have computers to keep track of accounting and other agricultural aspects."

Walter Verkamp, an Adalou

farmer, said he thought the show was a great opportunity to see new farming technologies.

"I've come out to see what new products are out on the market," he said.

"I feel like I'm going to go away with a lot of good information," Verkamp said.

Day travels to New York to dispel racial myths

BY CANDIDA JOHNSON
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

In an attempt to dispel some of the myths about black men in today's society, Patrick Day, with five other black men, was flown to New York to be interviewed by the New York Times magazine.

Day, Texas Tech Multicultural Services Center coordinator, said second-hand information about black men has led to many unsupported ideas. The six men, representing a wide spectrum of backgrounds, were part of a round-table discussion about black men in America.

Men attending included: Hue Price, president of the Urban League; Joe Marshall of the Omega Boys Club and a talk show host in San Francisco; Ken Hamblin, a conservative talk show host in Denver; William Julius Wilson, author and professor of sociology at the University of Chicago; and film maker John Singleton.

"I feel honored to have my name mentioned in the same sentence with the likes of these men," Day said. "To be able to sit down and have an intellectual conversation with them was unbelievable.

"I was surprised to see that these men we've all read about and put up on a pedestal were just plain, down-to-earth brothers."

The men were brought together to discuss various issues facing black men and the black experience in America.

"We discussed the state of black men today, where responsibility lies, our relationships with our families, employment and issues on that line," Day said. "It was about a two-hour discussion, and it did get heated at certain points."

Day said he felt the differences were a matter of professional and academic background, as well as differences in age.

"We disagreed on some things, but the general consensus was a genuine concern for the state of African-American men," he said.

Day said he felt the New York Times should be commended for having the courage to gather a group of black men together for something positive. "Society has taught us that if black people get together in a group, it's something negative, or there will be a negative outcome," he said. "This round-table discussion was something positive involving black men that the whole world needs to see."

Day said he contributed the hypersensitivity of black people gathering to slavery.

"People don't want to talk about slavery, but this all goes back to the splitting of African tribes and the splitting of families during slavery," he said. "In order for us to get out of the state we are in, we have to start at home.

"This means us taking action and us talking about our own experiences instead of some created reality that someone wrote as to how they perceive the black man to be," Day said. "The perceived idea is that we are all dope pushing, hypersexual beings."

Through the round-table discussion and the upcoming article, Day said he hopes people will realize that most black men are law-abiding citizens.

Day said the article will be released in early November.

Tech looks to rebound against Bobcats

Over the top Nick de la Torre: The University Daily
Texas Tech setter Ginger Carter, a senior from Arlington, sets up one of her hitters during Tech's three-game loss to Texas Wednesday night. Tech will look to avenge last season's loss to Southwest Texas State at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Student Recreation Center.

Game: Southwest Texas State Bobcats vs. Texas Tech

Time: 2 p.m. Date: Saturday

Place: Tech Student Recreation Center

1993-94 record: Tech 10-9, 3-2 SW Texas 12-9

Last Meeting: SW Texas won in three games Nov. 11, 1993 in San Marcos.

Series record: Tech leads 12-2

BY JESSE MALDONADO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

After completing the first part of the Southwest Conference schedule, the Texas Tech volleyball team is looking for a strong finish in hopes of post-season play.

The key to achieve the goal of post-season play for the Red Raiders will be to confront the remainder of their schedule.

Non-conference opponent Southwest Texas State (12-9 overall, 3-2 Southland) will be in Lubbock for a match at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Student Recreation Center. Admission is free to students showing a Tech identification card.

The history between the Raiders and the Bobcats is a fairly new one, with the Raiders having the advantage 12-2. Under head coach Mike Jones, the Raiders have the advantage 5-1.

"I think all of our non-conference matches are important," Jones said. "We need to play as well as we can and get as many victories as we can, because if you're talking about post-season play, you need to get as close to 20 victories as possible."

"You certainly don't need to lose to teams that may or may not be ranked lower than you are."

Two key SWC home losses to Houston and Texas have the Raiders struggling up to now with an overall record of 10-9 and 3-2 in SWC play.

Both the Raiders and Bobcats have faced five common opponents this season: Texas, Rice, Baylor, Texas-El Paso and Texas-Arlington.

The Bobcats have fared well against SWC opponents, losing to Texas in four games, splitting matches with Baylor and going five games against the Owls.

"They're similar, in a lot of ways, to us," Jones said. "They're a feisty and scrappy team. They play good defense, and they're also a team that doesn't quit. They keep playing hard all the time. They're very well-balanced, and they play very tough."

Even though Southwest Texas State doesn't carry any marquee players, they still present somewhat of a threat in the frontcourt area, according to Jones.

"They can bang the ball and put it away," Jones said. "They're by no means an easy match."

Leading the way for the team that day was senior forward Amy Holtman who scored twice. The team was shut out in the first half, after taking 22 shots.

Head coach Diane Nichols expressed concern over the amount of shots taken and the few goals scored.

"We were discouraged at the score because of the numerous opportunities," Nichols said. "It was a very physical game, as well. We are going to play a good team, and we are looking to jump out ahead early and stay there."

Leading the way for the Red Raiders will be Holtman, who has six goals and two assists for a total of 14 points, and sophomore midfielder Kristi Patterson, who has contributed five goals and four assists for 14 points.

Patterson and freshmen midfielders Raney Terrell and Julie Clement are the only three players to see action in all nine games this season.

Freshman goalkeeper Melissa Keys will mind the goal, having recorded five shutout victories.

She has stopped 52 shots by the opponent, allowing 10 goals. She has recorded shutouts against two opponents in the tournament, CWS and UTA Nov. 9.

Tech soccer team to compete in first tourney

BY JARED PARCELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech women's soccer team will face an experience that many of the players have not experienced since playing at the club or high school levels — tournament play.

The Red Raiders, 5-3-1 on the year, travel to Hobbs, N.M., to compete in the College of the Southwest Tournament this weekend. The team opens against the College of the Southwest Saturday, and is scheduled to take on either Texas-El Paso or New Mexico State Sunday.

Tech's first match is scheduled for 10 a.m. Central time.

The losers of the first-round games will square off in a consolation match Sunday at noon, and the winners battle at 2 p.m.

The team already has defeated CWS and UTEP earlier this season.

On Sept. 17, the Red Raiders downed the CWS Lady Mustangs 3-0. In that game, the team hit on three of 49 shots on goal.

Leading the way for the team that day was senior forward Amy Holtman who scored twice. The team was shut out in the first half, after taking 22 shots.

Head coach Diane Nichols expressed concern over the amount of shots taken and the few goals scored.

"We were discouraged at the score because of the numerous opportunities," Nichols said. "It was a very physical game, as well. We are going to play a good team, and we are looking to jump out ahead early and stay there."

Leading the way for the Red Raiders will be Holtman, who has six goals and two assists for a total of 14 points, and sophomore midfielder Kristi Patterson, who has contributed five goals and four assists for 14 points.

Patterson and freshmen midfielders Raney Terrell and Julie Clement are the only three players to see action in all nine games this season.

Freshman goalkeeper Melissa Keys will mind the goal, having recorded five shutout victories.

She has stopped 52 shots by the opponent, allowing 10 goals. She has recorded shutouts against two opponents in the tournament, CWS and UTEP.

Nichols, Patterson and Keys said they would prefer to play UTEP in the second round.

"I would prefer to play UTEP," Patterson said. "I would like to see New Mexico State before playing them."

Nichols said UTEP and New Mexico are two evenly matched teams. "They are pretty equal teams," Nichols said. "They have tied one match, and New Mexico State has won once by a goal."

"We know a little about UTEP, and we have an opportunity to play New Mexico State on Sunday, Oct. 23."

Nichols also said UTEP is different than other opponents because it is faster than most teams.

Patterson said the team has been doing general preparation for the tournament with a lot of running and continuous conditioning drills.

"We have also worked on switching the ball," Patterson said. "Also, we have worked on building up the attack in the backfield and pushing the ball forward."

Keys said the keepers have worked on the same drills, except for one variation.

"Coach (Barbara) Chura worked on break-aways with us this week," Keys said. "We haven't practiced that before."

Patterson and Keys stressed the determinants for having a successful weekend.

"For us to win, we need to come out and win the air balls and the 50/50 balls," Patterson said.

For Keys, recording two more shutouts will take an all-around effort from the defense, she said.

"It (a shutout) depends on how the defense plays," Keys said. "If they do their part, I'll be there to do mine."

Tech comes into the weekend less than a week after playing its best game of the year, a 3-1 loss to Texas A&M.

"We are coming off a good game with Texas A&M and are looking to build off that game," Patterson said.

Keys said she believes the coaches have confidence in the team following the A&M match and heading into the weekend.

"I know they see good things in this team," Keys said.

Tech golfer prepares for pros

BY BRYAN ADAMS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Bryan Novoa will try to join the Professional Golfers Association in three years, but until then, Novoa is the focal point of the Texas Tech men's golf team.

Novoa finished in a tie for fourth place at The Woodlands Intergoliate, Tech's first tournament of the fall, but said as a team Tech could have played a lot better.

"The Woodlands was very disappointing," Novoa said. "We didn't play well at all as a team."

Novoa is usually the favorite to play the No. 1 spot at Tech tournaments this season.

"My job is just to play golf to the best of my ability," Novoa said. "Some days are better than others. I just need to always practice and play hard."

Novoa transferred from Texas-San Antonio two years ago and has quickly taken a leadership role for the Raiders on the course.

"I came to Tech because everybody told me not to," Novoa said. "I liked the fact that Tech was so far away from home. I like it here a lot. Being here I've learned there are more things to life than just golf. Specifically beautiful women and having fun."

Since transferring from UTSA, Novoa has played in 12 events, including the one tournament this fall. After the fall of 1993, Tech was situated in fourth place in its region.

After the spring season, Tech dropped to ninth and missed going to the NCAA regional as a team by a few strokes.

"I think it was the best thing for us," Novoa said. "It was a big wake-up call for us. When something like that happens to us, we will do everything possible to make sure it won't happen again."

Novoa, a product of Laredo Nixon High School, finished second in the Class 5A state tournament as a senior and fifth as a junior.

"The main difference from college and high school is the level of competition," Novoa said. "Playing in high school doesn't prepare you for playing in college, but playing in college is preparing me for when I go pro. There are many good players in college. It's just a privilege to be playing."

Playing in tournaments means Tech golfers often miss a lot of class. Novoa said free time is spent either studying or on the links.

"Right now I'm just getting caught up in school," Novoa said. "I'm preparing for our next tournament in my free time by working on my short game. One thing I could have done better (at the Woodlands) was putting."

For a guy whose favorite player is Chi-Chi Rodriguez, it's no surprise Novoa takes his golf very seriously.

"I love the game because it's so hard," Novoa said. "I think it's the hardest game in the world. I don't like the notoriety."

"If you want to be good, you can be. You just have to practice. My mental game is my strength. I think my way around the course," he said.

With one area course under reconstruction, the golf team has one less facility to practice on. Novoa said that not having that course really doesn't hurt his game.

"There are ways around those inconveniences," Novoa said. "We don't have the facilities other schools have. Lubbock Country Club has a great driving range. When I need to practice, I just go to a field about a mile from my house and practice hitting for hours."

Novoa and the Raiders' next challenge is the New Mexico State University Coca-Cola Tournament Oct. 21-22 in Las Cruces, N.M.

"I think we're a solid team," Novoa said. "We need to play well first and let our golf do the talking."

Mediator expected to step up to plate

NEW YORK (AP) — W.J. Usery, who mediated the coal miners' strike last year, will be asked to mediate the baseball strike by President Clinton, government and baseball sources said Thursday.

Usery, 70, will be named today at the White House, the sources said. He was a labor secretary in the Ford Administration and head of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service under Presidents Nixon and Ford.

"I have no comment. I've heard it rumored," Usery said Thursday night from his home in Arlington, Va. "I've been talking on and off with people."

Management negotiator Richard Ravitch and union head Donald Fehr refused to comment. Both parties would have to agree to accept Usery.

Acting commissioner Bud Selig was to be at Clinton's announcement in Washington, a baseball source said. Fehr hadn't yet decided whether to attend, another baseball source said. "I hope something happens to bring us to the table next week," said Boston Red Sox Chief Executive Officer John Harrington, who said he had heard rumors a new mediator would enter the talks.

In 1974, Usery mediated an end to a preseason NFL strike. He spent Thursday in Moline, Ill., at contract talks between Deere & Co. and the United Auto Workers, who have been working without an agreement for a week. He is known for long negotiating sessions and prodding the parties.

"He cajoled, he yelled, but the most important thing, Bill Usery refused to throw in the towel," Thomas Hoffman, a spokesman for the coal operators, said last year.

Tech runners look to improve at A&M

Two weeks before hosting the Southwest Conference Championships, the Texas Tech men's and women's cross country teams will be in College Station for the Texas A&M Invitational Saturday. The women's race is scheduled to begin at 10:10 a.m., with the men's race to follow at 10:40 a.m.

This meet is important for the women's team as it will be a chance to compete against the teams directly ahead of them in the District VI poll. Tech is ranked 10th in this group of teams for the third straight week. The women will be competing with Rice, Texas, SMU, Texas-Arlington, Texas San Antonio, McNeese State, Southwest Texas State, North Texas and Northwestern State of Louisiana.

Tennis team hosts quadrangular meet

The Texas Tech women's tennis team will host a quadrangular tournament today and Saturday at the Lubbock Municipal Tennis Center. The tournament will include teams from Northern Arizona, Northeast Louisiana and North Texas.

Tech will play a full match with Northeast Louisiana at noon today. The Red Raiders also will play singles with Northern Arizona at 4:30 p.m. Saturday the Red Raiders will conclude the match with Northern Arizona playing doubles at 9:30 a.m. before playing another full match with North Texas at 11 a.m.

Assistant coach files bankruptcy

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Penguins assistant coach Bryan Trotter has filed for Chapter 7 protection under the U.S. bankruptcy code. In documents filed Tuesday in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Pittsburgh, Trotter, a former player for the Penguins and New York Islanders, listed assets of $141,629 and debts of $9.5 million to 23 creditors.

Under Chapter 7, a filer's assets are sold by the court to pay off creditors. Some of those owed invested in Trotter's ice-rink business in Port Washington, N.Y. The business, BT Skating Corp., entered foreclosure this year by a New York bank and is in receivership. Trotter, 38, played on six Stanley Cup championship teams with the Islanders and Penguins.

NHL vice president extends hockey deadline to Nov. 1

ST. LOUIS (AP) — National Hockey League vice President Brian Burke on Thursday softened the league's stance somewhat, extending the deadline to Nov. 1 for playing the entire 84-game schedule.

Commissioner Gary Bettman has said the league would have to start its season no later than Saturday for that to happen. Such an arrangement would involve some cramming.

Sixty-nine games have been postponed, with six more set for Friday and 10 on Saturday, and Burke said the league can't extend the season into July because of various arena commitments.

Burke, making the first stop in a mini-tour of various NHL cities, said there's no alternative plan in place yet. "We don't have a Plan B," he said. "We had hoped to have a deal in place by the 15th. At some point, we're going to have to look at a reduced schedule."

There's no chance for the NHL's first deadline being met. The sides haven't met since Tuesday, when the owners rejected the players' latest contract proposal, and no new talks have been set.

"We've resigned ourselves to the fact it's going to be a lengthy lock-out," union spokesman Steve MacAllister said. "Right now, all is quiet. Nothing is happening."

Although Bettman and union head Bob Goodenow have agreed to keep the lines of communication open, Burke, the NHL's director of hockey operations, said it was "intolerable and inexcusable" that negotiations weren't ongoing.

He said the league would make the next move and call for another session early next week.

Although Bettman said Tuesday that the season would not begin without a collective bargaining agreement, Burke indicated that the league would be flexible on many other items of contention.

"We don't need a knockout victory here," Burke said. "If we wanted a knockout, we should have mailed these guys the NFL collective bargaining agreement and said, 'Call us when you're ready to talk.'"

What baseball strike?

Texas Tech reserve catcher Logan Miller pops up during the annual Red-Black series. Assistant Coach Greg Evans' Black squad came from two games down to defeat fellow assistant Frank Anderson's Red team 3-2 on Sergio Martinez' home run in the bottom of the 10th inning Thursday.

JEREMY CHESNUTT: THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Home run gives Black team series win

BY JARED PARCELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Black Team third baseman Sergio Martinez gave his squad a 3-2 Red-Black series victory when he homered over the right field wall in the bottom of the 10th inning, lifting the Black Team over the Red Team 7-6.

It was his second hit and second RBI of the game.

The two teams came into the finale tied at two games apiece. Frank Anderson's Red Team had captured the first two games 7-6 and 2-1. Greg Evans' Black Team responded by winning games three and four by the scores of 3-2 and 8-6, respectively.

Martinez finished the series hitting .286 (6 for 21) with four runs batted in.

The last game featured the same starters as game one — Matt Miller for the Red Team and Travis Smith for the Black Team. Smith was looking to avenge his game one loss to Miller.

The game was scoreless until the bottom of the fifth inning when the Black Team took a 1-0 lead. Right fielder Scott Morris led off the inning with a walk and moved to third on a well executed hit-and-run by the hero Martinez. First baseman Randy DuRoss laid down a sacrifice bunt to drive in Morris. DuRoss ended the series with two RBIs.

The Red Team responded with three runs in the top half of the sixth inning with the big blow coming on center fielder Brandon Welch's double over the head of Morris in right. Second baseman Jason Totman, who reached on shortstop Deon Ruecker's error and moved to second on a ground out, came around to score.

Evans' team added a run in the bottom half of the inning. Centerfielder Marshall Bennett led off with a walk and promptly stole second and third, his third and fourth of the series. Second baseman Clint Roddy drove Bennett home with a sacrifice fly to center.

Anderson's team tried to run away with the game in the next inning, but ended up scoring only one run on no hits.

After Smith walked shortstop Dominic Hernandez and left fielder Scott Pfeifer to lead off the inning, he was replaced by Kirk Ulrich. Ulrich came in and walked Totman to load the bases. Catcher Dave Lindstrom grounded out to score Hernandez.

The Black Team would not die and came back to take the lead in the bottom of the seventh. The damage came after Miller was pulled after pitching 6 and 1/3 innings, allowing five earned runs on five hits, four walks and two strike outs. He left after allowing a double to Ruecker. Jim Eisenlohr came in to put out the flame, but added fuel to it. He threw two wild pitches to Bennett that allowed Ruecker to score the go-ahead run. The Black Team led 5-4.

After the Red Team took the lead in the eighth, Welch scored Totman on a single to left field. Totman tied the score when he drove in Pfeifer with a single to right center.

The Black Team, trailing 6-5 into the ninth, tied the game. DuRoss led off with a walk and stole second. A wild pitch by Steve Plunkett, who replaced Eisenlohr, moved him to third. Bennett's sacrifice fly to center scored DuRoss and sent the game into extra frames for the second consecutive day. Totman hit a two-run shot on Wednesday to send that game into extra innings.

The Red Team was unable to score in its half, and it looked like the Black Team was going to go quietly. Mike McCreary, pinch hitting for Morris, grounded out. Left fielder Marcus McCain flew out to right.

Martinez followed with his game winning heroics to end a Red-Black Series that took the baseball strike off some people's minds.

"We were able to see everybody in different positions," head coach Larry Hays said. "The pitching was good and the defense was good at some positions. Hopefully we can have a good club out of these two competitive teams."

Fans sue Jones about stadium parking

DALLAS (AP) — Attorneys for thousands of Dallas Cowboys' season ticket holders filed suit Thursday against team owner Jerry Jones and other defendants over withholding parking passes on sale of some seat options. The season ticket holders, who also own Blue Lot parking passes at Texas Stadium sued over a policy change prohibiting transfer of the passes upon seat sales.

AN OPEN LETTER TO TEXAS TECH...

Recently, you have seen a dramatic reduction in our retail prices. Our new everyday low prices have been well received by everyone except the competition.

As Texas Tech graduates, Scholarship Donors and an employer of many Tech students, we realize the importance of making ends meet. Other stores claim allegiance to the Tech community in their advertising. Unfortunately, they have never addressed the issue of their responsibility to be price competitive. They depend on their prime locations and gaudy signs to lure unsuspecting customers to their businesses. Flags, banners and flashing lights are no guarantee of low prices.

For 34 years, Crossed Keys has given our customers great pricing, unbeatable service and a wide selection. Other stores have offered only high prices and a limited selection.

Case in point: In the last 30 days, three major brewers have announced PRICE REDUCTIONS. Crossed Keys immediately passed these savings on to you, while the competition did nothing. After seeing their business fall, they reluctantly lowered a few prices.

Following our lead has become a consistent fact of life, as other stores copy everything we do. Imitation is the most sincere form of flattery, and customers everywhere save money. Don't be fooled into thinking lower prices were their idea.

As an independent family enterprise, we appreciate your business and loyalty. Wherever you shop this weekend, remember that low prices were brought to you by Crossed Keys.

Have a great weekend.

P.S. It would be nice of our competitors to lower beer prices on Sunday ... WOULDN'T IT?
