Military stocks troops with pills, morale

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP)—The U.S. military geared up for Haiti with flak jackets and malaria pills, expecting casualties from combat or disease.

The only three U.S. servicemen to die so far all took their own lives, and specialists are struggling to prevent further suicides.

Battalion chaplains and mental health professionals are sounding out the ranks for signs of stress and depression that could lead to another suicide among the 18,000 servicemen and women in Operation Uphold Democracy.

Commanders are also trying to build up morale by making available radio and TV broadcast, the occasional steak or day on a beach, and concerns next week by country-western stars The Gatlin Brothers.

Simpson judge bars media from court

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Overwhelmed by publicity so wide-ranging he's gotten news clippings from Tibet, O.J. Simpson's judge barred the media Thursday from part of jury selection.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito closed the part of voir dire in which prospective jurors will be asked whether they can still be impartial despite intensive coverage of the case. Reporters will be allowed back in the courtroom Wednesday when prospective jurors are quizzed about other matters.

Ito's ruling drew protests from First Amendment experts, many of whom initially thought he was barring the media from the remainder of jury selection.

Later, Ito sent a court spokeswoman to the media center to say he was misinterpreted and planned to ban reporters only from that part of jury selection in which prospective jurors are questioned about their exposure to media coverage of the case.

Pipelines burst into flames injuring 69

HOUSTON (AP) — Two pipelines beneath a roiling river burst Thursday, sending 100-foot flames of burning gasoline snaking more than a mile down the San Jacinto River. At least 69 people were injured.

"It looked like hell opened up on the water and the whole river was gasoline," said Mike Norman, who was on the bank trying to retrieve his sailboat when the explosion occurred.

Some 11,500 people were forced from their homes by heavy rain that began Sunday. Skies were clearing, the murky water had begun to recede in most areas, and some people were returning to their damaged homes when the pipeline broke east of Houston, sending smoke and flame hundreds of feet into the air. The flooding has claimed at least 15 lives.

The burning mixture wound 1 1/2 miles downstream, setting fire to homes and boats along the banks. Schools and businesses in the path of the smoke were evacuated.

Brady lauds campus voting program

BY AMY OSMULSKI
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech is a step closer to implementing Register Once, a program that would allow students to register to vote when they register for classes.

Student Association President Zach Brady and Geoff Wayne, SA executive director for national affairs, traveled to Washington Oct. 13, to support a campaign for Register Once legislation.

Brady, Wayne and members of "Lead...or Leave," the organization trying to implement Register Once, met with George Stephanopolous, an administrative adviser with the Clinton administration.

Brady and Wayne also attended a press conference with other college students on Capitol Hill to publicize the Register Once program.

The program would put a polling place on every campus and provide absentee voting, Brady said.

"Under the program, students will still be able to register in their home towns, and absentee ballots will be available for them on campus," he said.

The meeting was organized to try to put the program on the president's agenda and show him the great number of students who want this legislation, Wayne said.

"We decided before we worked on the program at a national level, we needed to get it through the state legislatures," he said.

Brady and Wayne took a petition with 1,500 Tech students' signatures with them to Washington.

"We were trying for 10 percent of the student population, but we only ended up with about 6 or 7 percent," Wayne said.

Tech is joining forces with students at the University of Texas-Austin and St. Edwards University to recruit other Texas colleges and universities to help push the program through the state legislature next spring, Wayne said.

Wayne was chosen as the Texas Register Once campaign chairman.

The SA will sponsor an active petition drive for the next two months and plans to register at least 25 percent of the student body, Wayne said.

Voting information

- Most college campuses lack polling locations.
- Polling locations are inaccessible and often in remote locations.
- College campuses are often divided into large numbers of precincts in order to divide power of the student vote.
- Voter registration materials are not systematically made available to students and voter registrars are often nonexistent or difficult to locate on campus.

Statistics:

- In the 1992 presidential election, 52.5 percent of young people in the 18-24 age group were registered to vote.
- 42.8 percent in the 18-24 registered age group voted.
- This is compared to the 75.3 percent of those in the 45-64 age group who were registered and 70 percent who voted.

Terrorists arrested in bombing

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — As anguished Israelis on Thursday buried their dead from the Tel Aviv bus bombing, authorities ordered sweeping arrests of suspected terrorists and sealed the autonomous Gaza Strip and occupied West Bank.

Facing public demands for a crackdown on militants in the wake of Wednesday's bombing, the government also ordered the demolition of the home of a Palestinian suspected in the suicide attack that killed 21 people.

The fledgling self-rule government in Gaza deplored the decision prevent Palestinians from going to work in Israel as collective punishment that could slow the peace process.

"This is an attempt to make the Palestinian people kneel down," said Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat.

Speaking at a ceremony for fallen soldiers Thursday evening, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin vowed Israel will outlive the Islamic fundamentalists who seek its destruction.

"To those who are trying to harm us, the kidnapers and gunmen and bombers: Israeli soldiers and security forces will find you sooner or later, and your fate will be bitter," Rabin said.

The government authorized more money for Shin Bet, the internal security service, charging it with a concerted effort to locate cells of the fundamentalist Hamas movement which claimed responsibility for the attacks.

It ordered the arrest of suspected militants and the use of "more efficient" interrogations, in the words of one official.

"We need to use other methods, which it's best not to talk about," said Housing Minister Binyamin Ben-Eliezer.

Israeli human rights groups have accused Israeli security forces of torturing Palestinian prisoners.

Ag Science calls animal mistreatment allegations 'absurd'

BY SANDY FULLER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources has rebuked claims of mistreatment of animals by two students who said they saw a pig's tail cut off with a pocket knife while visiting Texas Tech's animal farm in New Deal.

Lowell Schake, chairman of the department of animal science and food technology, called allegations of animal mistreatment "absurd."

Joe Pigott, a freshman psychology and art major from Lubbock, said he visited the farm in late September with a friend who declined to be identified.

"I saw firsthand some of the stuff that goes on out there," Pigott said. "I saw this guy who used a pocket knife to cut off this pig's tail."

He said the pig was screaming, squealing and crying.

"When I asked the guy why he had to do that, he said it was to keep them (the pigs) from biting their tails," Pigott said.

John McGlone, associate professor of animal science and director of Tech's Pork Industry Institute, said what Pigott probably saw was the docking of a baby pig's tail.

"It's a preventative measure," he said. "They will squeal and make an awful noise when you pick them up."

McGlone said it is necessary to dock pigs' tails to prevent them from chewing on each other's tails.

Over 95 percent of pigs in the United States have their tails docked, McGlone said.

He said the pigs are about 3 days old when the operation is performed, but no anesthesia is used because it is not necessary.

Mark Hellman, university veterinarian for 18 years, said scalpels are used to cut off the tails, not pocket knives.

"Many of these animal rights people are very misinformed," he said. "They like to take things they see and twist them around to fit their perspective."

Schake said the department must adhere to strict federal guidelines.

"All of the procedures we follow are under the guidance of the ACUC (Animal Care and Use Committee)," he said. "We protect animals out there."

The federal animal welfare act requires all institutions performing research on animals or using animals as teaching tools to have an ACUC, said Hellman, chairman of Tech's ACUC.

"The committee ensures that all of the animals are treated in a humane manner," Hellman said.

If pain is involved in any experiment, then the possibility of using anaesthesia is looked into.

Comprised of 13 members, the committee meets at least once a month. They must approve of any activities or research on animals that is to be performed, Hellman said.

"Animals have more privileges than the students here," Hellman said. "Most of the classrooms on campus don't fit the requirements of the environment that animals must live in."

Pigott said he also saw a plastic

Former hostage discusses his five-year captivity in Beirut

BY LINDA CARRIGER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Terry Waite spent about five years in a dark, tiled chamber in Iran, where he was beaten and interrogated by Islamic militants for information concerning the Iran-Contra affair.

Waite spoke about his experiences Thursday night at the University Center.

Waite said he was sent to Iran on behalf of the Anglican Church and Presbyterian Church in the United States to free Americans Terry Anderson and Tom Sutherland from the Shi'ites. Waite, himself, was captured by the Islamic militants, who thought he was a spy for the United States, he said.

Waite had been told by the group that the hostages were ill and may die, he said.

They told him if he was taken to meet with the hostages, he would not be captured, he said.

"I was caught," Waite said. "However, I said to myself, 'If they are telling me the truth and Terry Anderson dies and I've been given the option to see him and turned him down, what would that say about my belief in faith?' I was caught."

Waite was taken hostage by the group in 1987.

He said his captors kept him blindfolded with his hands and feet chained together and only let him out of the room for a daily 15-minute bathroom break.

Waite said he learned two valuable lessons during his captivity.

"I have learned how to convert loneliness to creative solitude, and I can testify that suffering need not destroy," Waite said.

Waite said he does not blame anyone for his capture, even though radio news that the United States was trading arms for hostages was probably the reason the group took him.

"I do not hold Col. (Oliver) North responsible for my captivity," he said. "I have no doubt whatsoever that he wanted the hostages released, and I have no doubt he worked hard to the very end, but there was no doubt he was upset about my captivity."

Though he did not blame North, he said he did want to know the truth from him.

At a tape-recorded meeting 18 months after he regained his freedom in 1991, Waite said he asked North if he had used him.

"He said something of great interest," Waite said. "He said, 'The American government uses people all the time.'"

Waite said he did not ask North to explain the comment.

"Was he referring to himself there or making a general statement?" Waite said.

Waite said he still negotiates the release of hostages.

Waite, who arrived about an hour late because of delayed flights, commended the half-capacity crowd for their patience.

Jeannine, you will be missed by all

Writing this is probably the hardest thing I have ever done. When I heard Jeannine McHaney had died, I didn't know how to react because I really don't deal with death very well. The only other person close to me that has ever died, before now, was the priest at my church. And I wasn't even that close to him. And I'm not going to run off and say that I was best friends with Jeannine, and we did everything together, because to be honest, it wasn't like that.

CASEY WESTENRIEDER Jeannine was a friend to me that could fill me full of confidence, give me advice and make me feel good every time I walked through her door.

Jeannine was someone who was easy to admire and like. No one else did more for women's athletics at Texas Tech than Jeannine McHaney.

Jeannine came to Tech in 1966 and built one of the strongest women's athletics programs in the country, from what was then merely an intramural program.

But everybody's heard that. That's the stuff you always read about Jeannine. What a lot of people don't know about Jeannine is the kind of person she was. And not just the kind of person she was to people like Marsha Sharp or Mike Jones. But to ordinary people like myself.

No, Jeannine and I were not best friends, but if I had a best friend at the Texas Tech athletic department, it was Jeannine.

She always was willing to sit down and comment for a newspaper story, but she was also just as happy, if not more happy, just to talk.

While I was a sports writer at The University Daily two years ago, no other person gave me more confidence in my writing than Jeannine. After the first time she thanked me for doing a good job on a story, I wrote all my stories hoping that she would read them and approve.

I found later she did approve after she gave me a letter of recommendation so strong I did not hand out a resume without including the letter.

Jeannine was the catalyst for a series of stories I wrote concerning gender equity. While talking to her, I realized the fight she had endured to put Texas Tech women's athletics on the map.

Soon after, I was lucky enough to witness Jeannine basking in one of her proudest moments — the final game of the 1993 Women's Final Four.

I believe that with that game, coach Sharp gave Jeannine one of the best gifts anyone could ever have given Jeannine — a National Championship women's athletics team at Texas Tech.

Last year, I was living in North Carolina when I learned Jeannine had cancer, again.

After I heard, I sat on my bed and cried. I thought about Jeannine and I cried so hard, I couldn't even tell my wife why I was crying.

If you knew Jeannine, you knew she didn't want you to feel sorry for her, so I wrote her a letter and made it sound like I didn't.

Earlier this year, I moved back to Lubbock, and one of the first things I did was visit Jeannine, and I'll be darned if that lady wasn't as spunky and peppy as ever. I felt better, as usual, after leaving her office.

I visited Jeannine last week for the last time. I had been worried about her because the doctors had found more cancer. Once again, I felt reassured Jeannine would be fighting it all the way.

"I'll beat this thing, don't you worry," she said.

She reminded me that we had been planning to go out to lunch or dinner when she was feeling better, and she sent me off feeling light-hearted and relieved.

I don't feel sorry for Jeannine anymore. She is no longer suffering, and that is good. I do feel sorry for Texas Tech because the loss of Jeannine McHaney is truly devastating.

The athletic department may be able to find someone to fill Jeannine's position, but they will never be able to find anyone to fill her shoes.

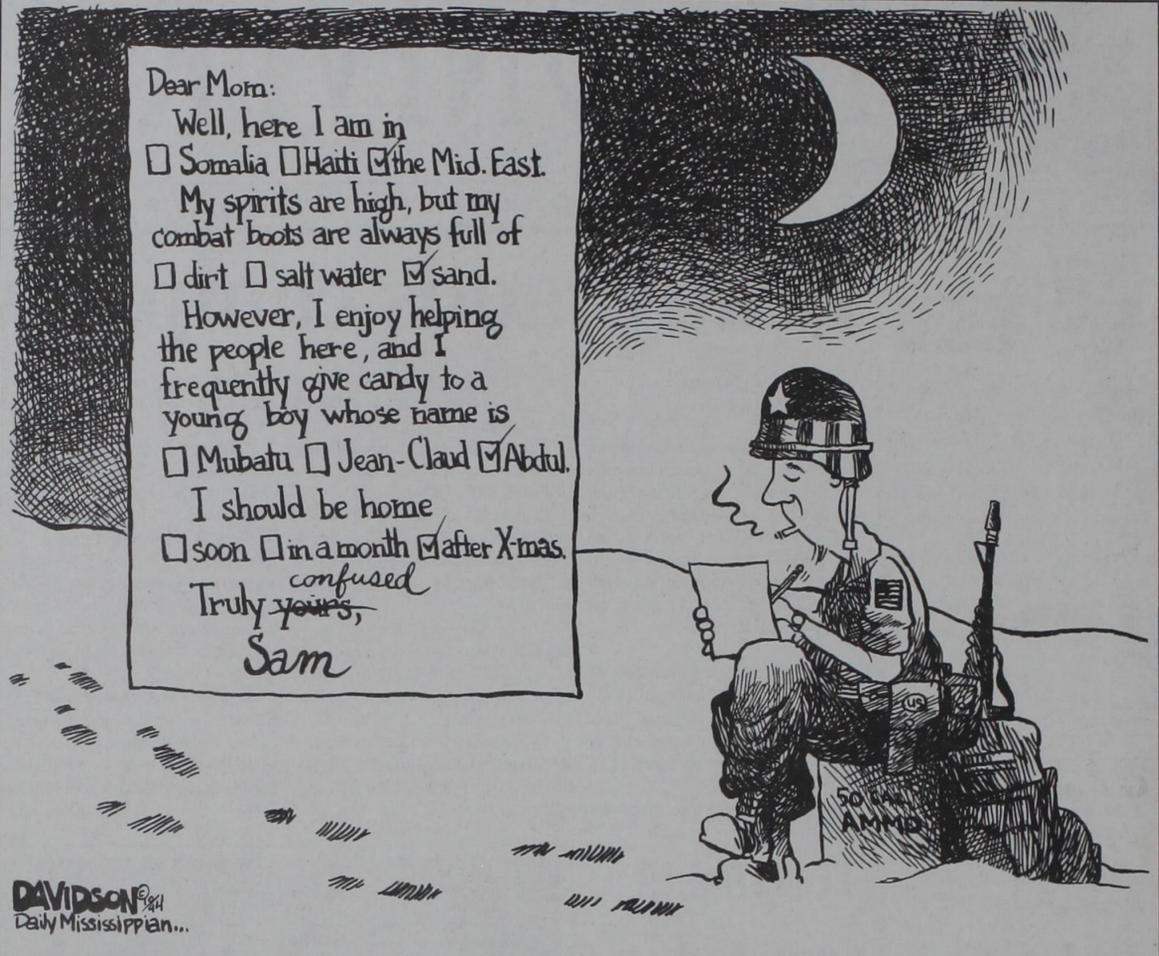

And, if Lubbock ever does get around to building a multipurpose arena, I feel it would be a travesty not to name it after Jeannine, a final tribute to all she has done for athletics in this city.

Whenever someone dies, the people left behind always wish they had done something or said something. Well, I wish I had been able to say one last thing to Jeannine:

"Jeannine, you are my friend and I will always admire you and love you for all you have done for me. No one has faced greater adversity and continued to fight more than you. If I ever am faced with the trials you have faced, I only hope I can be half as strong as you have been. I love you, and I will never forget you."

Goodbye Jeannine McHaney. You will be missed.

McCarthyism used against Lawless

To the editor: After reading President Lawless' letter and the stated grievance of the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Students, I find myself wondering what the problem actually is.

Is it about homosexuality or, for that matter, any sexual preference? I don't think so, as no reference was made in the infamous letter by Lawless, in his capacity as a school official, about sexual persuasion. It appears that he stated his personal opinion on the matter.

This is merely another situation in which a particular person is utilized by a special interest group in order to make an example to the general populace.

The GLBS appears to be more excited with the idea of using their collective political "muscle" in a show of force against Lawless than they are in achieving any form of equality. As a case in point, the GLBS is pursuing Lawless' immediate resignation. Why resignation?

Because of one stated opinion, a valuable member of the staff at Tech should resign? I think this is called overkill.

As for the Tech letterhead on the Marijuana less dangerous than alcohol

To the editor:

I write this letter to stir controversy on a subject other than what a politically correct paper keeps shoving down its readers' throats. I personally do not care to read about when is the proper time to become sexually active or with whom. These issues have been given too much press. They are moral issues that I hope every college student has already pondered and made decisions about. We have been informed, now let's go on.

Last week, The UD ran two articles simultaneously on the front page. One was an updated article concerning the Delta Sigma Phi member, Larry Ely, and the incident surrounding his tragic death. The other was on the resignation, for personal reasons, of IFC President Benji Nickens. Maybe the resignation was a result of being arrested for alleged possession of a "green leafy substance" resembling marijuana. These are two sad stories for any university to deal with.

In the Oct. 18 issue of The UD, toxicology reports indicate Ely's blood alcohol content level was above .20, over twice the legal limit. His family must deal with his death forever, his fraternity brothers may deal with it for a while, and the university as a whole will soon forget the latest tragedy over indulgence.

I am not out to condemn anybody, yet I want to remind the public that alcohol directly claims about 250,000 lives per year and hundreds of thousands indirectly. This is more lives in one year than were lost in the whole "Vietnam Conflict." The government believed the Vietnam conflict was morally justified. Lives were lost for no one's benefit except for our government and those closely associated with it. The government chooses to condone the consumption of alcohol (it is legal). Why wouldn't it? Since the government collects 21 percent of all alcohol sales throughout the country; again, a huge benefit to our precious government.

The other issue, being publicly and personally ridiculed for possession of marijuana, is one the government chooses to ignore. Since childhood, I was told to stay away from drugs. Nancy Reagan imbedded "Just Say No!" into everyone's minds (even Kristie Davis in the '80s, and Bush's drug czar found ways to spend 15 billion of our tax dollars to stifle the problem. I do believe drugs should be illegal, but I must object when the government chooses to call a plant grown from seed, dried and smoke, a controlled substance. We are all too young to remember, but cannabis, a.k.a. hemp, a.k.a. marijuana, was legal in America and all over the world until 1937. The term "marijuana" was coined by William Randolph Hearst and was denounced in his newspaper, a blatant act of yellow journalism.

Marijuana was the term given to the flower of the female hemp plant. This plant was said to be "the greatest plant known to mankind." There are numerous records of hemp use throughout history. The by-products from this plant include: oils for paint, cooking, fuel and medicinal aids; fiber for textiles (clothes), industry (rope and sails) and construction (beams and wall board); and flowers for medicine, relaxation and entertainment. All these are positive aspects, yet the government chose to make this plant illegal.

The government wants us to believe that marijuana should be categorized with the likes of LSD, cocaine, crack and various other chemical substances. The government does not, however, want us to know that marijuana has claimed no lives, is neither physically nor psychologically addictive and is less harmful than alcohol, cigarettes, caffeine and chemicals commonly found in many food products.

To conclude, realize that our government chooses to brand those associated with marijuana without cause or without intent to protect its citizens. Now knowing the facts, one should re-evaluate the issue concerning Benji Nickens and his unsubstantiated resignation due to laws which should not exist. The government should stop devoting our tax dollars to investigate, capture and incarcerate innocent people, and stop misinforming our whole country. DEA Administrative Judge Francis Young was quoted as saying, "Marijuana is the safest therapeutically-active substance known to man." For those of you who blame the UD for printing the facts, blame the government instead for creating the issue.

No chance for cloning in near future

To the editor: I would like to clarify a statement made by Kendra Casey on Oct. 14 in an editorial written about embryological research. Casey stated that sex, health and I.Q. can be determined before a baby is born. True, sex and some aspects of health (such as down syndrome) can be determined before a baby is born, but in NO WAY can the I.Q. of a fetus be determined. This idea is ridiculous. We do not have the kind of technology needed to test for something as complex as the I.Q. of a fetus. Please do not make ignorant statements like this without first learning the facts. It is misstatements like this that scare the common public into thinking that biological research is soon leading to the day when parents can pick and choose (clone) the features they want for their baby. Rest assured, our technological capabilities are nowhere near cloning the perfect human being.

ring around a cow with a plastic tube inserted into the cow.

The plastic ring Pigott referred to is a fistula, McGlone said. An opening is made surgically in the steer's rumen to attach the fistula, one compartment of a bovine's digestive system.

Researchers use the fistula to reach in and pull out partially digested food to evaluate it, he said.

"It's used to see if the feed stuff is partially digested and examine how far it's been broken down," McGlone said.

He said the steer, named Charlie, is not in any pain from the fistula he has had for more than five years.

"It's just like if you were to have a screw in your leg to fix a broken bone," he said. "It doesn't hurt him."

Pigott said he is a member of the Animal Rights Coalition but went out to the farm of his own volition.

"I did it out of pure motivation to satisfy my own personal curiosity," he said. "I, myself, don't value human life more than say, a rat's life."

He said he does not believe in any kind of animal testing or research.

Joy Wiggins, a junior elementary education major from San Antonio, is president of Tech's chapter of the Animal Rights Coalition. She said she has heard about possible animal cruelties at the farm, but she has not visited it.

"We'd like to go out there and see what's going on," she said. "But the people out there aren't very cooperative."

McGlone said the farm is open to anyone who wants to see it, and he would be happy to give a tour to any students, including ARC members.

"There's nothing that's off limits because we don't do anything that's secret," McGlone said.

The animal science department's objective is to disburse knowledge as widely as possible, he said.

"The general public is out of touch with what happens on farms," he said.

"We want everybody to know what goes on out there (in New Deal)."

Wiggins said she is against using animals for research in all cases.

"A lot of it is a waste of time and a waste of money," she said.

"I feel that these are God's creatures. We're here to protect animals, not to use and abuse them."

Hellman said it was the ACUC's responsibility to oversee the animals at Tech, and that it did not make sense to mistreat any animals.

"A stressed animal is not good," Hellman said. "It's not practical for research."

Senate discusses safe sex brochure

BY AMY OSMULSKI
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Availability of brochures in the Dean of Students Office, including "Better Sex: Healthy Sex," has been investigated by the Texas Tech Student Senate.

The "Better Sex: Healthy Sex" brochure, which was available in the Dean of Students Office, came under fire when members of the senate became concerned that the brochure promoted sex, and did not follow AIDS awareness guidelines, Russell Thomason, a sophomore business major from Lubbock, previously told The University Daily.

The senate passed a resolution Oct. 7 to investigate why the brochure was available in the Dean of Students Office.

Rash Weerasinghe, a member of the Texas Tech Student Senate student services committee, said he talked to Jo Hutcherson, assistant dean of students, and she said anyone could put information in the Dean of Students Office. If the dean of students does not approve of it, he can remove it, Weerasinghe said.

Michael Shonrock, dean of students, said his office periodically receives information from other departments and the Lubbock community.

He said he leaves availability of brochures to the discretion of his staff, and if they have a question, they come to him.

"It's a choice whether or not we keep the materials, and it's a choice whether or not a person chooses to look through it," Shonrock said.

A non-profit organization supplied the "Better Sex: Safe Sex" brochures, and they were not funded by Tech in any way, he said.

He said the "Better Sex" does not refer to the physical aspect of sex, but to the psychological aspect.

"It just means that after sex, you will know you did not affect yourself or your partner," Weerasinghe said.

The Dean of Students Office received 100 to 150 of the free brochures and other brochures with similar information are available at Thompson Hall, Liz Toombs, assistant to the dean of students, previously told The UD.

In other matters, James Dickey, Tech head basketball coach, spoke to the senate about increasing fan support this year at basketball games.

"Tech has a great team this year, and the only missing ingredient is a great crowd," Dickey said.

Dickey said if Tech does not have a new arena in two years, it will have the oldest arena in the Big 12 conference.

The senate also approved resolutions honoring Jeannine McHaney and James G. Allen. McHaney and Allen died last weekend.

Tech NAFTA seminar to discuss effects of treaty

BY TERRI LOWRANCE
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The North American Free Trade Agreement will be the focus of a seminar hosted today by the Texas Tech chapter of the International Association for Financial Planning and the College of Human Sciences.

"The focus will be how NAFTA works, and what the treaty means for Texas and Mexico and how it affects their relationship," said Jerry Mason, associate professor of financial planning in the College of Human Sciences.

David Gould, senior economist in the department of international economics at the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, is slated as the guest speaker.

Gould will explain NAFTA's impact on Mexico, describe what Americans can expect and discuss aspects of the treaty.

Gould will answer questions at anytime during the session.

"Gould is highly regarded on both sides of the border," said John Woodward, a graduate research assistant in the department of merchandising, environmental design and consumer economics in the College of Human Sciences.

NAFTA Seminar

Date: today
Time: 2-4 p.m.
Where: Human sciences building, room 169
Cost: free

"He is a true expert."

Gould was invited by the Bank of Mexico, Mexico's equivalent of the U.S. Federal Reserve Bank, to advise and help imple-

"It is an opportunity for faculty, staff members and students to ask questions about NAFTA."

Mason and Woodward agree that NAFTA probably will improve living conditions in Mexico and create a significant decrease in the flow of illegal immigration.

"The treaty will have both economical and political advantages," Woodward said.

Mason said he wants the seminar to create an increased understanding of how NAFTA relates to Texas.

"Those attending should also develop an understanding of the pros and cons of the agreement," he said.

"This agreement is long overdue," Woodward said.

Hutchison receives farm organizations' endorsement

BY JONATHAN HARRIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, received a boost in her reelection bid with an endorsement from the Texas Farm Bureau Friends of Agriculture Fund Thursday.

Hutchison was unable to attend a press conference concerning the endorsement at the Texas Cotton Association in Lubbock Thursday morning because of an illness.

Congressman Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, accepted the endorsement on Hutchison's behalf.

Members of the Agricultural Advisory Committee, Texas Cotton Association, Cotton Seed Crushers, Texas Cotton Ginners, Texas Cattle Feeders Association, Texas Southwest Cattle Raisers Association and Texas Farm Bureau said they would support Hutchison in the November election.

Private property rights was the main issue of discussion among the agricultural groups.

"We are going to be in for a tremendous battle in 1995 about private property rights," Combest said.

Hutchison said in a statement released from her home that property rights is vital to the United States and to U.S. citizens.

Jane Stinnet, president of the Texas Cotton Association, said the association endorses Hutchison in her campaign for re-election because she knows and understands the cotton industry.

"We believe in her and are fully confident she will do what is right for Texas," she said.

Tony Williams, executive vice president of the Texas Cotton Ginners, said they are pleased to give their endorsement to Hutchison.

"We believe she understands the cotton ginner's business needs and will be able to keep small businesses operating," Williams said. "That is important to all of us as taxpayers and as citizens of this great state."

Hutchison said she is proud to have the groups' support.

Judge orders indictment refiled

BRYAN (AP) — A judge has ordered Brazos County prosecutors to refile an indictment against former Texas A&M Vice President Robert Smith.

Smith, who served as A&M's vice president for finance and administration before being reassigned as executive director of special operations, was indicted in June on a misdemeanor charge of using his public office to solicit gifts.

Smith, a 30-year employee at A&M, maintains he is innocent. On Wednesday, visiting State District Judge Oliver Kitzman ordered Brazos County District Attorney Bill Turner to rewrite the indictment against Smith.

He was asked to provide more details of the case.

Turner was expected to file the rewritten indictment on Thursday, according to officials in his office.

"I thought there needed to be greater specificity," Kitzman said.

"The record will be clearer at trial and the case will be easier to present for both sides if the pleadings are corrected."

Men indicted for racist rampage

FORT WORTH (AP) — A federal grand jury indicted three men Thursday on charges that they conducted a racist rampage against black people on the streets of downtown Fort Worth last year.

Benjames Kila, 24, Mark Richard Norris, 32, and Craig Arthur Vedder, 26, were charged with conspiring to interfere with free use of public streets.

Six white men from a Fort Worth halfway house went on a rampage Aug. 19, 1993, knocking one black man unconscious and harassing several others, police said.

Kila, Norris and Vedder were three of those suspects, Assistant U.S. Attorney Paul Gartner.

He declined to comment on why the other three men were not indicted.

The incident began at a busy downtown bus stop.

A group of several white men yelled racial slurs and began knocking the hats from the heads of black people.

They also were purposely bumping into them.

Gary Dan Ali of Fort Worth was waiting for the bus when he noticed what he called harassment.

"I walked away and the dude grabs me and throws me to the ground," Ali said.

"Next thing I know I'm sitting on a concrete block and waiting for the ambulance."

Police used riot batons to subdue two of the men, who became belligerent during their arrest, according to a police report.

The other four were arrested without incident.

Ali was treated at John Peter Smith Hospital and released.

Five of the men had been released from prison shortly before after serving time for convictions ranging from attempted murder to burglary.

Police said the six were residents of a halfway house in east Fort Worth.

At the time, police said the crimes could not be prosecuted under a new state hate crimes act.

The new law did not take effect until Sept. 1, 1993, officials said.

So the case was turned over to federal prosecutors, Gartner said.

Standards, prices to be raised for child care centers

AUSTIN (AP) — A state panel has adopted increased minimum standards for day-care centers that could raise the cost of day-care service on a statewide average to about $4.32 per week, according to studies.

The standards adopted Thursday by Texas Board of Protective and Regulatory Services had been under study for more than three years.

Currently, Texas ranks near the bottom of states in standards for licensed day-care centers. Supporters of the increased standards have said the increased cost is worth it to improve the quality of child care.

Council approves funding for STAR program

BY LINDA CARRIGER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Lubbock Mayor David Langston locked the city in a plan to send delinquent juveniles to a campus "boot camp" by signing an interlocal agreement between the city, county and Lubbock Independent School District during a City Council meeting Thursday.

The agreement states that the three entities will implement and fund the Specialized Treatment and Rehabilitation (STAR) program for local juveniles.

The council previously approved $75,000 for STAR in the 1994-95 fiscal budget and LISD will provide the other $75,000 needed to implement the $150,000 project, councilman Ty Cooke said.

The county will repay the city and school districts for the costs if they receive a federal grant for the project.

Cooke said the city is involved in the project because they believe it will deter youth from being violent and unruly in school.

"I hope it serves as a deterrent because someone has to really not be thinking to want to be a part of it (the program)," Cooke said.

The STAR program, modeled after a similar program in Conroe, sends 13- to 16-year-olds who are in danger of being expelled from the local school system to Project Intercept, where they become part of STAR.

WE WANT THEM TO BE TIRED, HAVE THEIR LEGS SORE, AND WHEN THEY GET BACK, THEY'LL TELL ALL THEIR FRIENDS THEY DON'T WANT TO DO THAT.

John Washington
administrative assistant

Project Intercept is a LISD school which handles disruptive students for a short period of time until the student's behavior has adjusted to acceptable levels for a regular classroom, Project Intercept principal Bob Wood said.

LISD officials have expelled four students this year, LISD records state. Last year, LISD records show 125 students were expelled.

"The bottom line is, it's another step in lieu of getting expelled," said John Washington, the superintendent's administrative assistant.

Parents must form an agreement with county judges stating their children will go to Project Intercept at 5 a.m. and perform calisthenics for drill sergeants until 8 a.m., at which time they will be shipped back to their regular schools, Washington said.

After school is out at 3:30 p.m., STAR students will go to Project Intercept again and will perform more drills and exercises until 8 p.m., he said.

On the weekends, students will perform community service as part of STAR, he said.

If parents violate their agreement with the county, a judge may jail them for up to 30 days, Washington said.

The boot camp will last about 12 weeks and participants will be required to wear purple T-shirts and cut their hair short, Washington said. A buzz cut will be required for boys and a shoulder-length cut for girls, he said.

Washington said LISD is looking for three ex-U.S. Army or ex-U.S. Marine sergeants to command the boot camp, but no one has yet been hired for the positions.

Drill sergeants will be on duty 24 hours a day to handle STAR participants, Washington said.

If the boot camp does not stop the student from being disruptive in regular classes, the student will be sent to a real military boot camp in El Paso for two or three days, Washington said.

"We want them to be tired, have their legs sore, and when they get back, they'll tell all their friends they don't want to do that," he said. "There's a lot of psychology to it."

Center promotes positive health options

BY SUSAN OSBORNE
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Physical and emotional well-being may be interconnected, and the Fitness and Wellness Center in the Student Recreation Center encourages students to achieve their highest health potential.

"Students can gain fitness and overall well-being from all of our dimensions," said Betty Blanton, assistant director of recreational sports in the rec center.

The center is located on the lower level of the rec center, north of the center's stairs.

The Fitness and Wellness Center opened in 1991 and was formerly a retail sports shop.

Wellness includes more than just exercise, Blanton said.

Maintaining a positive outlook on all parts of life and being sensitive to environments also promotes wellness, she said.

The center also promotes proper nutrition, stress management and healthy relationships, Blanton said.

She said there are common myths about fitness, and the center wants to replace those with facts.

"You don't have to be body-perfect to come in the rec," she said.

"We want people to be happy and healthy with their own body."

Exercise programs can be arranged and exercise logging can calculate different types of exercise and indicate calories burned for them, she said.

Rec center personnel can help students cope with stress and offer stress-relieving solutions, rather than alcohol and drugs, she said.

"The Fitness and Wellness Center gives students a better overall understanding of what fitness and wellness is and can show them how to better improve their lives," said Stefan Alsop, a rec center student assistant and a senior corporate fitness major from Sugar Land.

Health screenings are conducted throughout each semester at the center.

Screenings include cholesterol, glucose, glaucoma and blood pressure screenings.

"People are becoming more aware of their health, and realizing they are each responsible for it," Blanton said.

Health-risk screening asks 100 questions on the individual's health and helps her or she improve it, she said.

"Studies show 55 percent of deaths are behavior-related," Blanton said.

THE SERIES

For only the third time since 1979, Texas Tech will not be opening the league race against Baylor. Starting with the '79 encounter, the Bears ran rampant, winning 11 of 15 meetings between the two schools. But with the game delayed past the SWC opener, the Raiders have fared a little better. Tech opened the 1990 SWC race with Houston (the game was moved to the front of the schedule in order to be televised by ESPN) and then lost 21-15 to Baylor but beat the Bears 31-24 late in the '91 campaign. Overall, Baylor leads the series 31-20-1 and clings to an 18-16 advantage in conference matchups. In games played in Lubbock, Tech is ahead 15-14 and in SWC games in Jones Stadium Tech leads 11-8.

TWO YEARS AGO IN LUBBOCK: Texas Tech inflicted Baylor's first road loss in three years with a one-sided 36-17 victory.

SPIKE'S THOUGHTS

"We must continue to improve if we are going to have any kind of chance to finish strong. Our guys did a good job of that during the off week. We're looking forward to getting back home after a couple of tough road games."

"I think we probably played a little over our heads early and when you do that your expectation level goes up and it makes it a lot more difficult when you lose some of those football games. We played about as well as we could play against A&M and Oklahoma so you start talking about how you really got it going. It will be hard for us to win every Saturday because we are relying on so many young people. We do feel, though, the development of our young players has been real good to this stage of the game.

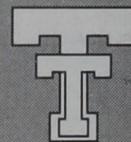

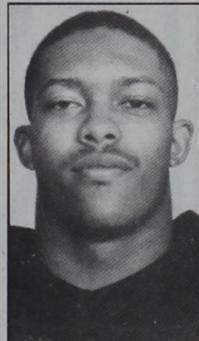

Spike Dykes has compiled an overall mark of 43-42-1 and is 30-24-1 in Southwest Conference games. He is 3-4 against the Bears.

THE SCOUT REPORT

RED RAIDERS

With a number of hands in the training room, the Red Raiders, virtually injury free all year, picked a good time for an open date. Special teams standout Allen Wallace should be back after missing the past two games with a bruised shoulder. Quarterback Zebbie Lethridge sat out much of the open date while recovering from a strain of the left sternoclavicular bone (where the collarbone and the sternum meet) but he should be ready to play against Baylor. Wide receiver/kick returner Matt DuBuc likely will miss the game with a knee sprain and cornerback Tony Wilson is questionable with quad bruise.

BEARS

The Bears have jumped out of the blocks quickly this season, thanks to a true freshman quarterback and score-happy defensive and special team units. Jeff Watson is a leading candidate for the league's Offensive Newcomer of the Year honor. In the first seven games, he lead Baylor on 23 scoring drives. He's getting help in the scoring column from unusual places. BU has scored seven non-offensive touchdowns and two safeties this year.

ZZ Top hits Hub City

BY TARA McQUEEN
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Three young men from the Houston area met more than 25 years ago to form ZZ Top, one of the top-grossing headline acts in rock 'n' roll history.

ZZ Top, with the band Jackyl, will perform at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

In a telephone interview, ZZ Top's publicist, Elizabeth Freund, said guitarist Billy Gibbons was part of the band the Moving Sidewalks when he met drummer Frank Beard. Beard introduced Gibbons to bassist Dusty Hill and together they formed ZZ Top.

"There are a million rumors about where they got their name," Freund said. "They wanted a name to evoke bluesiness, like B.B. King.

"Some say they got their name from a top cigarette rolling paper," she said. "Another story is that the band was driving past a barn with two open doors that each formed a Z, so the name ZZ Top was born."

Synonymous with the band name are the long beards worn by Gibbons and Hill.

"The band took a year-long vacation and Dusty and Billy arrived back

THEY SWITCHED OVER TO MEXICAN RADIO BECAUSE THEY PLAYED A LOT MORE ROCK 'N' ROLL.

Elizabeth Freund

with beards," Freund said. "Neither one knew the other was letting his beard grow, so they just kept them.

Freund said they trim their beards but have never cut them off.

"Frank Beard is the only one who doesn't have a beard," she said.

The most unusual characteristics about the band is their unique sound and their personal eccentricities, Freund said.

"After two chords everyone recognizes it as ZZ Top," she said. "They write all their own music and lyrics. They love to design cars, race cars and ride motorcycles."

Freund said the band members are known for the cars they design and create, such as an altered Cadillac they call Cadzzilla.

"They have also re-designed Harley Davidson motorcycles calling them Hogzillas," Freund said. "Billy just designed a Harley called ZZ Funk 1."

Freund said the band members incorporate their love of machines into creating their sets.

"During one tour they used the dashboard of their now famous little red Eliminator car," Freund said. "They were all involved, and they brainstormed to come up with stage sets and production for this year's Antenna Tour.

"They were all three heavily influenced by over the border radio," she said. "They switched over to Mexican radio because they played a lot more rock 'n' roll."

Freund said the band's uniqueness has been the key element of its success.

"They went against the grain for 25 years," Freund said. "Trends have come and gone, but they remain strong."

Singer records new song after extramarital affair causes fall from grace

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Gospel star Michael English is picking himself up after an extramarital affair led to his fall from grace.

English has recorded "Healing," a duet with Wynonna that was shipped to adult contemporary radio stations this week. He is also working on a mainstream album to be released by Curb Records.

English left Christian music in May, admitting he fathered a baby out of wedlock with another married singer. He returned his Dove Awards, including artist of the year. Days later, the unmarried Wynonna announced that she, too, was expecting a baby and voiced her support for English.

Jackyl shoves way into town

'Kings of Politically Incorrect' plan night of blood, sweat

BY RAZOR DOBBS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Blowing in with the aroma of the East wind will be a chain saw packing "red necked punk" named Jesse James Dupree and his rock 'n' roll gang, Jackyl.

Jackyl's new album "Push Comes to Shove" is the follow-up to its 1992 platinum debut "Jackyl."

"1994 is the year of the Jackyl," Dupree said. "We're coming out swinging harder, heavier, louder and stronger."

"If you're not sweating and bleeding, you ain't going all out."

Dupree's on-stage lumberjack chain saw maneuvers have taken their toll. Since beginning the band, Dupree, has acquired a total of 22 stitches. One accident nearly cost him his thumb.

"At the point of 100 stitches, I figure I'll throw a party and quit," Dupree said.

Despite the sacrificial carnage Dupree has gone through, he said he has no plans of leaving his chain saw back on the farm.

"You're damn right we put the chain saw on the second album," Dupree said. "What has a more definitive sound for rock and roll than a chain saw?"

"Nothing can get up to what that

Jackyl

Johnson Red 455 just naturally has." The music Jackyl puts out may not be everyday dinner music.

The band has yet to record a ballad on either of their albums, but it does have its share of "love songs" like

"She Loves My Cock" and "I Could Never Touch You Like You Do."

"What we do is not the hip thing right now, but there are still thousands of people who come out and watch us play," Dupree said. "We can't change what we are about because this is what we do, and we will take it for better or for worse."

Jackyl does not fit into any particular class of rock and roll, nor does it try.

With songs like "Dixieland," "Back off Brother" and "Back Down in the Dirt," audiences may consider them a southern blues, heavy metal mud pie.

"The (musical) trend of what people get into always changes," Dupree said. "In colleges the word is that if you play alternative music you can't get arrested on campus. We're now what you would call the alternative."

The self-proclaimed "Kings of the Politically Incorrect" take their music and stage performance to the limit Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum with songs about sex and drugs and a stage show which includes Dupree baring his butt and shooting a 12-gauge shot gun.

"Politically correct sucks," Dupree said. "The world has gotten overly sensitive...and it makes me want to f---ing puke."

"If you go through life being that politically correct and uptight, you will eventually snap and go into a post office and shoot everybody," he said. "So lighten the f--- up and get ready to have some fun because we are coming to town."

Proposal causes confusion

WOODDALE, Ill. (AP)—Special note to Teri: If you don't have a ring yet, it wasn't YOUR Bob proposing marriage on that billboard.

Bob Bornack's proposal on a sign did the trick with his Teri — Teri Ungar — but left more than 10 other Teris wondering whether it was their Bob who popped the question.

"I talked to one Teri who called in a total panic because she's dating two Bobs," Mike Richards, who works for the billboard company, said. "She didn't know which one might be proposing and she had to know who to answer."

Local concert series begins

BY CANDIDA JOHNSON
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The first concert of the Llano Chamber Music Series begins Sunday at 8 p.m. at the Godbold Cultural Center.

The concert, which includes music by Bach, Beethoven, Debussy and Saint-Saens, features violinist George Edward Stelluto and pianist Kevin Purrone.

Stelluto, who holds two master's degrees from Yale University School of Music, has conducted professional orchestras in Connecticut, Oregon, Minnesota and Pennsylvania.

Stelluto said the eight-concert series was founded with the intention of serving the cultural and educational community of Lubbock.

Texas Tech School of Music and other departments at Tech will have the opportunity to have discussions with the musicians.

"Performing arts organizations often fail to take full advantage of the opportunities presented by a visit from a fine musician," Stelluto said.

"Usually, the performer comes to town the evening before a concert, does a few interviews, plays a concert and leaves.

"Even if the concert is fantastic, the most we get is a single-lasting impression from the experience with no real long-term impact on the community's cultural development."

Stelluto said the Navy Trombone Quartet from Washington, D.C., will perform an interesting concert during the series.

The series also will feature a collaborative effort between Lubbock Symphony principal clarinetist Robert Walzel and visiting violinist Jennifer John.

It will include a 20th century concert with a work titled "Contrasts" by Bela Bartok.

Other concerts will feature German violinist Annette-Barbara Vogel and William Westney.

In March, which is "Women in the Arts Month" at the Godbold Center, the series will feature a concert by women composers, including Tech faculty members.

For ticket information, students may call the Godbold Cultural Center at 741-1953.

'Addams Family' actor slips into coma after stroke

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Raul Julia slipped into a coma Thursday, four days after he suffered a stroke, his agent said.

Julia, the versatile star of films from "Kiss of the Spider Woman" to "The Addams Family," remained in an unidentified Manhattan hospital, agent Jeff Hunter said.

The 54-year-old took a turn for the worse after his condition was listed as guarded a day earlier, Hunter said in a statement issued by Cynthia Parsons of the William Morris Agency.

On Tuesday, the agent had said doctors were optimistic about the actor's recovery.

Julia's greatest Hollywood success has been opposite other actors — particularly his role as a South American political prisoner in "Kiss of the Spider Woman."

William Hurt won the 1985 Academy Award for best actor for his role in the film.

Julia's other co-starring credits include appearances with Richard Dreyfuss in "Moon Over Parador," Harrison Ford in "Presumed Innocent," Clint Eastwood in "The Rookie" and Robert Redford in "Havana."

Julia's first prominent roles came at Joseph Papp's New York Shakespeare Festival in the late 1960s.

He earned Tony Award nominations for his roles on Broadway in "Nine," "Threepenny Opera," "Where's Charley?" and "Two Gentlemen of Verona."

Anchor Deborah Norville moves to 'Inside Edition'

NEW YORK (AP) — Deborah Norville has signed on with "Inside Edition" to take over as anchor of the syndicated news magazine next year.

"This will give me a chance to continue working on my career, but in an avenue that will give me more control over my schedule, and let me be less of a guilt-ridden mom," the former co-anchor at NBC's "Today" show said Thursday.

She and her husband, businessman Karl Wellner, are expecting their second child in December.

She plans to start work at "Inside Edition" by March.

She succeeds Bill O'Reilly, who is leaving after his contract is up in the show's current season, its seventh.

"I've tried very hard to represent the broadcast with honesty and integrity. I hope I have succeeded," O'Reilly said. Asked if he had any advice for Norville, O'Reilly replied, "Read up on O.J. Simpson."

Norville became a news anchor at NBC's "Today" show in 1989. She succeeded co-anchor Jane Pauley in 1990 but failed to attain her popularity.

Raiders look to improve chances for bowl game

BY BRYAN ADAMS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Last year Texas Tech followed two disappointing non-conference losses on the road by losing to Baylor and digging what seemed to be an even deeper hole.

In this year's contest, which is at 1 p.m. Saturday at Jones Stadium, Tech takes on Baylor after losing two road games in a row to Texas A&M and Rice.

Head coach Spike Dykes said Zebbie Lethridge, who injured his shoulder in the first quarter against Rice, will return at quarterback for the Raiders. Dykes stressed the importance of the game.

"The last three weeks (of the season) don't mean much if you don't go out and do well (in) the next two weeks," head coach Spike Dykes said. "It's the same old deal. The most important game is the game you're playing that week. I know it's a cliché, but there's a lot of truth in that."

After two weeks on the road and an off-week, the Red Raiders return home. Baylor has a 32-19-1 series advantage over the Red Raiders, including wins in 11 of the last 15 games, but Tech won the last Bear visit 36-17 in 1992.

"You can't put much weight into that," said sophomore wide receiver Field Scovell. "Any team can win on any given Saturday. It doesn't matter where we play. As long as we go out and play as hard as we can we've got a chance to win."

Baylor head coach Chuck Reedy is in his second season as head coach. He has a 1-0 lifetime record against Tech.

Last year in Waco, Tech saw a victory slip away after two turnovers, and the defense's inability to stop Baylor's ground game.

"They've got some good running backs," said junior middle linebacker Zach Thomas. "We've played good running backs all year with Nebraska, Oklahoma and A&M. We just got to take their running backs out of the game."

Baylor comes into Saturday's game with the most yards rushing per game in the conference.

Before they played Texas A&M's seventh ranked rushing defense last week in College Station, the Bears were ranked No. 1 in the nation running the ball.

There is not one dominating running back, instead the Bears distribute the ball equally to four backs.

"Mainly we have to key on the ones in the game at that time," Thomas said. "Once we get longer into the game, the game will get harder."

Baylor is not the only Southwest Conference team with a freshman at quarterback.

Jeff Watson, a product of College Station's A&M Consolidated High, is a possible candidate for Newcomer of the Year.

Watson has led Baylor to a 5-2 season, so far, and makes his first trip to Lubbock as a Bear.

He has thrown for more than a 1,000 yards this season and eight touchdowns in his freshman season.

Breaking out

Texas Tech running back Byron Hanspard breaks away from two Rice defensive players during Tech's loss to the Owls. Hanspard and the Red Raiders take away from Baylor at 1 p.m. Saturday in Jones Stadium.

Tech spikers look to rebound against Rice

BY JESSE MALDONADO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech volleyball team returns to the Hub City for its last Southwest Conference home match against Rice at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Student Recreation Center.

The Red Raiders come back home after losing to Texas A&M Wednesday night in three games. The loss dropped the Raiders to 11-10 overall and 3-3 in the SWC. Rice enters tonight's match with a 7-12 overall record and 0-5 SWC record.

The Raiders lead the overall series against the Owls 22-7, with Tech winning the last 13 matches.

"Sometimes it's easy to overlook (the Owls) when you look at their record," head coach Mike Jones said. "They've played some real tough matches, and they've played them close. They also have a great number of good players that they've had in the past. You really can't overlook them, especially when they have a player like Sammy Waldron."

Waldron is on pace for all-American honors as she leads the team with a .316 hitting percentage.

She also leads the Owls in several other categories accumulating 290 kills, 167 digs and 43 total blocks. This week Waldron was named SWC Player of the Week.

"You have to be extra careful that you don't overlook them and think it's an automatic win because I don't think it is," Jones said.

The Raiders are currently third in the SWC, tied with Texas A&M.

"We're the kind of team that for us to win, we have to have good ball control," Jones said. "We're probably the smallest team in the conference. Physically we're not as big as the other teams."

For us to be successful, we have to pass and dig the ball to where the setter is, so we can let Ginger (Carter) have her options. We just have to keep on improving in that area."

Against the Aggies Wednesday night, the Raiders' passing game struggled, totaling 30 kills to A&M's 50.

Coach's son to start for Cougars

HOUSTON (AP) — Clay Helton probably will start at quarterback for Houston Saturday against Texas Christian because of an injury to Chad O'Shea, the starter for the Cougars' sole victory this season.

O'Shea started in last week's 39-33 victory over Southern Methodist, but fractured a bone in his non-throwing hand.

"As it stands now, Clay will be the starter," Houston coach Kim Helton said. "Chad O'Shea's hand is a little better, but it still hurts him."

Team prepares for final home game

BY JARED PARCELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech women's soccer team returns home this weekend for its final home game of the season, a 1 p.m. Sunday match at R.P. Fuller Track Stadium with New Mexico State.

The team has compiled a 4-1-1 record at R. P. Fuller Track Stadium, and an overall record of 7-3-1. A victory Sunday will guarantee the first-year club a winning record. NMSU enters the contest with a record of 2-2-1.

The Red Raiders are entering the match off a tournament title at the College of the Southwest Challenge last weekend. There, the team downed CSW 5-0 and Texas El-Paso 4-0 to take home the trophy. NMSU finished fourth after falling to UTEP in the first round and CSW in the third-place match.

The coaching staff was able to scout ahead for its NMSU match. Head coach Diane Nichols said New Mexico State is a quick team that runs a 4-4-2 attack, which is similar to Tech. In addition to their speed, Nichols said their goalkeeper is a strong position on their team.

"She is a good goalkeeper who made great saves," Nichols said. "She is not afraid to come off her (goal) line."

Nichols said their midfielders are an important part of their team.

Tech is led by sophomore midfielder Kristi Patterson, who is second on the team with six goals and leads everyone with seven assists. Senior forward Amy Holtman is the leading scorer, with seven, and has added two assists. Three of her seven goals have come on penalty kicks. Freshman forward Dana West has scored a goal in three consecutive games, and since her return, has four goals and one assist in seven games.

To be successful Nichols said the team will try to play more balls over the top.

"We have been working on our midfielder build-up and our passing," Nichols said. "We will work on our shooting on Saturday."

The team, Nichols said, is at full strength with freshman forward Laurie Perry coming back after missing practice all week with a sprained ankle.

Freshman goalkeeper Melissa Keys has allowed 10 goals in Tech's 11 games while stopping 58 shots by the opponent. All seven of Tech's victories have been shutouts.

Keys has combined with senior goalkeeper Cindy Frost on several shutouts.

Frost has seen action in five matches and has stopped two shots while not allowing a goal. Junior transfer Stephanie Carter has played in four matches, saving nine shots and letting one slip into the net.

Nichols said she will return to workouts Thursday after missing several days with a neck injury.

Team prepares for tournament

The Texas Tech men's tennis team will compete in the Rolex Championship Tournament this weekend in Fort Worth.

Klint Graf, Erick Guzman, Dieter Schwendinger, Marcello Borelli, Pablo Cordova and freshman Tylir Jimenez traveled to the tournament Thursday.

Siegel said sophomore Gerard Orriols will not make the trip because of a sprained ankle.

Hockey player files claim for unemployment benefits

Anaheim defenseman Don McSween has filed an unemployment claim, becoming the first NHL player known to take advantage of California law allowing benefits to locked-out employees.

McSween, who made $30,000-$50,000 a year in the minors before joining the Ducks last season, was scheduled to earn $300,000 this season.

He would be eligible for the maximum benefit of $230 a week for up to 26 weeks.

"It's not that much, but more or less it makes a statement," he said. "For a guy like me, any little bit helps."

Some NHL players returned to the ice in Finland.

Esa Tikkanen of the St. Louis Blues is leading Helsinki IFK to a 3-2 victory over Jokerit, featuring Los Angeles' Jari Kurri and Winnipeg Jets' Teemu Selanne.

Chicago's Christian Ruutu left. While on the ice he was hit by a stick in the face six minutes into the game.

Ruutu, who played for Jokerit, lost three teeth and needed more than 10 stitches in his face.

Toronto Maple Leafs' Mats Sundin was cleared to play in the Swedish League.

All 24 players of the Djurgarden club voted in favor of Sundin returning to the Stockholm team during the lockout.

Turkeys present difficult challenge for any hunter

RAZOR DOBBS

No, I won't get my turkey at Albertson's or H.E.B. but, rather, at Mother Nature's do-it-yourself supermarket where the food is truly respected because you hunt and kill it yourself. The wild turkey, is considered one of the toughest animals to hunt.

These birds are more aware of their surroundings than the president's secret service men. If JFK would have had these birds in Dallas, things may have been different, seriously. You see, the wild turkey has hearing and eyesight of astronomical proportions putting any predator, especially man, up for a mother of a challenge if they want to try and take them home for dinner.

A wild turkey's peripheral vision allows it to detect the slightest move or alien object. I like to call them the six million dollar drum stick. With all of their wit, I do not know whether to hate them or hug them. Regardless, they can make any hunter look like a "turkey" in a blink of an eye. Just ask me. Last year they left me drooling more than twice.

To successfully take one of these bionic birds, you must carefully choose your predator paraphernalia i.e. your hunting attire. Let's start off with camouflage. When you hunt the white tail deer, which are color blind animals, your camouflage is basically only good for breaking up your silhouette.

In my opinion, color here is not as important as the design of the print. Many hunters will disagree with me, but when you hunt the wild turkey color is a major factor.

You should choose your camouflage by the density and color of the vegetation you will be hunting in. Yes, this is common sense, but I have seen many hunters make themselves stick out like a hooker in church because of their alien camouflage.

When you are buying camouflage clothing, fashion is not an issue, so what looks good hanging on the rack may not do the job in the field.

Always keep in mind that the wild turkey has acute hearing, so make sure your clothing and your killing tool of choice is quiet. I stand clear of any clothing that is not soft because soft equals a more promising kill opportunity. Rough material, like polyester and other cheap fabric, is a serious no-no. You might as well be wearing velcro or sandpaper for clothing because every move you make is equivalent to sending a bullhorn message to a wild turkey that you have plans for him Nov. 24th.

Even though you are camouflaged and your equipment is silent, your chances of taking a wild turkey to the grill is still slim. One of the most vital aspects of turkey hunting is being still. It is hard for me to sit still for five seconds, but when it comes to hunting, I can be a statue at the drop of a hat. You see, all prey animals react in a defensive measure to unfamiliar movement, thus, will get the hell out of the area when something is not right. I recommend hunting from a substantially high stand or a dark ground blind. Hunting from these will aid you in not being detected by sight. If you are going to hunt from a more open local, then I suggest you camouflage yourself from head to toe and turn to stone.

Hunting the wild turkey is an incredible adventure which every hunter should experience. Do all of us a favor, and turn in the viking trash mags that rape our game laws. It's mutiny on our bounty.

Razor Dobbs is a senior agricultural communications major from Kerrville.

Colorado State remains undefeated

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Horns helmets with the hifty gold rams' horns are suddenly hot, and green and gold are the colors a la mode.

Hats are booked. Fans arrive early and stay late at Hughes Stadium. And the traffic ...

What's going on at Ag U?

For years, Colorado State was the dowdy cousin in Colorado's football pantheon. There were the Broncos and the Colorado Buffs, and Air Force had its service academy aura.

Colorado State always seemed to be the kid with the muddy boots and the cowlick. Even though the Aggies became the Rams in 1957 when Colorado Agricultural and Mechanical College became Colorado State, the old nickname stuck. Maybe it's the big "A" whitewashed on the hillside above Hughes Stadium.

It's amazing what a 7-0 record and a No. 12 ranking can do.

Player to Watch

Senior wideout Ben Bronson is putting together a fine season despite playing for a running team.

For the season the Jasper product has caught 20 passes for 365 yards and two touchdowns, establishing himself as one of quarterback Jeff Watson's favorite targets. A threat to score every time he touches the ball, Bronson has scored three different ways this season: a 11-yard touchdown run, a 12-yard touchdown catch and a 98-yard kickoff return.

QUARTERBACKS:

This will be a match-up of two of the conference's top young signal callers. Zebbie Lethridge will start at quarterback for the Red Raiders, and Jeff Watson will start for the Bears. Watson, a true freshman, is the leading passer in the conference, and Lethridge is Tech's offensive spark.

RUNNING BACKS:

The Bears are deep at tailback with Kalief Muhammad, Brandell Jackson and freshman Jerod Douglas. All three will see playing time, and they should run the ball effectively. Tech's rushing attack struggled against A&M and improved slightly against Rice.

RECEIVERS:

Tech fans never really know who'll start at the two wideout slots, but any of the six receivers who play regularly are capable of making plays. Baylor's Ben Bronson and John Stanley are Watson's prime targets. Bronson is a speedster who is capable of scoring every time he touches the ball. Stanley has caught five touchdowns.

DEFENSIVE LINE:

Baylor lost nose tackle Steve Strahan to a hamstring injury last week, so look for Tech to double up on Scotty Lewis who leads the Bears in tackles for losses. Tech's defensive line is playing better and better. Jabbar Thomas had an excellent game against Rice. He and Byron Wright lead the defense in sacks.

LINEBACKERS:

Tech Linebackers Shawn Banks, Zach Thomas and Robert Johnson all make big plays when called upon. Marcus Coleman has returned interceptions for touchdowns each of the last two games setting the conference career record. Baylor's LaCurtis Jones is the Bears' leading tackler with 86.

DEFENSIVE BACKS:

Baylor excels at taking the ball away, but its leader Adrian Robinson is questionable with a knee strain. Filling in for Robinson will be true freshman Nikia Codie, who was a top recruit. Tech is led by safety Bart Thomas veteran cornerbacks Cat Adams and Shawn Hurd.

SPECIAL TEAMS:

Baylor kicker Jarvis Van Dyke has yet to miss a PAT in his career. However he has missed four field goals from inside 40 yards. Tech kicker Jon Davis has had a week to heal his ailing groin. Last week the Tech specialty unit failed, look for them to redeem themselves.

Around the SWC

BRYAN ADAMS

(Baylor 5-2/2-1 @ Texas Tech 2-4/1-2) Texas Tech was finally brought down out of the clouds when it lost to Rice. All that talk about Tech being good because it stayed close to Oklahoma and Texas A&M boils down to one thing. A loss is a loss, and the Raiders have a losing record. Baylor has a 32-19-1 series advantage over the Raiders and being at home isn't going to help Tech. Since 1980 the Raiders have lost five of seven games at home against the Bears. The Red Raiders have potential for the future, but at present, I'm ready for basketball season. The Red Raiders' chances for the Cotton Bowl this season are as probable as the Tampa Bay Buccaneers winning the Super Bowl. Baylor is favored by one, but they ought to easily cover. [Baylor 21, Texas Tech 10]

(Rice 3-2/2-0 @ No. 7 Texas A&M 6-0/3-0) Rice is on top of the SWC for the first time since I can remember. After this season, nobody will remember they were even there. A&M is for real, and Rice is living in fantasyland. They might have beat Tech and Texas, but knowing Rice, they'll probably lose to SMU or TCU, not to mention A&M and Baylor (unless it rains at all those games, in which case they'll finish undefeated in the conference). I wish when the SWC got rid of Arkansas it included Coach Hatfield never returning. Twenty points is a little too much for A&M to give, considering Rice hangs on to the ball longer and tighter than an alcoholic hangs on to his beer. [Texas A&M 28, Rice 14]

(SMU 1-6/0-2 @ No. 13 Texas 4-2/1-1) Way to go Texas. Lose to Rice and screw everything up, why don't you. We are trying to gain credibility as a conference, and right now a future WAC-ky team is at the top of our conference. SMU just plain sucks. Anybody who loses to Houston should get the death penalty. Texas head coach John Mackovic will probably be pumping gas next year if he doesn't win big this weekend. [Texas 32, SMU 10]

(TCU 3-3/0-2 @ Houston 1-5/1-1) Understatement of the year is the Dallas Morning News saying there is no line because Houston isn't competitive. This will be a game of no defense. [TCU 45, Houston 30]

Mondesi named NL Rookie of the Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Outfielder Raul Mondesi unanimously won the NL rookie of the year award Thursday, the third straight Los Angeles winner of an honor the Dodgers have dominated since its inception. The Dodgers have had the top rookie 14 times since Jackie Robinson won the initial award in 1947. No other NL team has won more than six.
