Iran bombs Kurdish base in second attack

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iran sent jet fighters to bomb an Iranian Kurdish base in northern Iraq on Wednesday, the second attack reported this week on dissidents operating from Iraq.

At least one person was killed and three were wounded in the raid on the Iranian Kurdish base. It was the latest Iranian incursion into the no-fly zone the West set up in northern Iraq to protect Kurdish dissidents from Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

The air raid was the first this year on Iranian opposition bases in Iraq, but there have been others against Iranian Kurds and other opponents since Tehran and Baghdad ended eight years of war with a 1988 truce.

Wednesday's air strike was unlikely to draw Iraqi retaliation because both Baghdad and Tehran have been fighting their Kurdish minorities, which have sought autonomy for decades.

Father shoots, kills child playing prank

WEST MONROE, La. (AP) — Matilda Kaye Crabtree was a generation too late to play that kind of prank on her parents.

It used to be, people around these parts weren't so nervous about crime, and there weren't as many handguns. Doors could stay unlocked at night, and keys might get left in car ignition switches. Not anymore.

"More than crime itself, it's the fear of crime," said West Monroe Police Maj. Pat Kelly. The town of 15,000 people had eight burglaries in the past month. Matilda and a friend hid in a closet early Sunday as her parents returned home, bumping the walls and making noise as a joke.

Her father, Robert Crabtree, grabbed his .357-caliber pistol.

"He was nervous, scared, believing a burglar was in there," said Maj. Michael Worley of the Ouachita Parish Sheriff's office.

Matilda jumped out and shouted "Boo." Crabtree pulled the trigger.

The 14-year-old girl was buried Tuesday.

It's not the first such tragedy of fright combining with mistaken identity in the region.

A&M official on trial for wife's expenses

BRYAN (AP) — A Texas A&M official testified Wednesday that he reimbursed a bookstore for some of his wife's expenses over four years even though there was no hint that her travel with him violated any university policies.

Robert Smith, formerly vice president for finance and administration, is accused of solicitation of a gift to a public servant from someone under his control.

As a result of an investigation into the university's dealings with Barnes & Noble Bookstores, Inc., Smith was demoted to director of special operations.

After almost four hours of testimony by Smith, the defense rested. Jury deliberations are expected Thursday after final arguments. If convicted of the Class A misdemeanor, Smith could be sentenced to up to a year in jail and fined up to $3,000.

City garners 51 percent of voters

BY LINDA CARRIGER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Voter turnout Tuesday fell inside Lubbock County Clerk Ann Davidson's predictions.

Davidson predicted 50,000 to 60,000 registered voters would cast ballots election day, she said. About 57,000 people, or 51 percent of registered Lubbock voters, cast votes, she said.

Davidson said she derived the prediction from the 1990 Ann Richards-

Clayton Williams governor's race. The race was filled with mudslinging, she said.

"People were getting disgusted with it, so when it got down to the wire, about 53,000 voted for that election," she said. "This election had more interest, as well as both (candidates) had positive concepts, and I thought it (voter turnout) would be better than that."

Fifty-two percent of registered voters cast ballots statewide, Davidson said.

Republican George W. Bush snatched the gubernatorial bid from Democratic incumbent Ann Richards Tuesday.

College Republican president Robert Beach said the Republican Party encouraged party members to make it to the polls to elect Bush.

"We only lost one countywide election. That will tell you that we did a good job getting people out," Beach said.

Garrett McKinnon, a senior journalism major from Littlefield, said he voted for Bush in Tuesday's elections to establish a moral code in Texas.

"As an administrator Ann Richards was good, but as for a moral leader, I think George Bush can do that," McKinnon said.

"I think that a conservative governor is going to do the moral things that I think Texas needs," he said.

McKinnon said he was impressed with Bush's anti-abortion stance and was displeased with Richards for allowing educators to teach sex education in kindergarten classes.

Yolanda Clark, a local Democrat, blamed Richards' loss on low Democratic turnout at the polls.

"Our voters just didn't get out," Clark said. "I don't think people really understood the closeness of the race."

Other Democrats said Bush's lead was not unexpected.

"I think Richards would have done a good job," said Ashley Houston, a senior Spanish major from Philadelphia, "but everybody knows that Texas is a predominantly Republican state, and it obviously shows in Bush's win."

UBS opens blood bank for donors

BY SUSAN OSBORNE
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

United Blood Services of Lubbock has reopened its doors to accept blood from the community under a new management team.

"Our donor services team has been through an intensive education and training program," said Morris Dixon, UBS regional vice president. "As we resume collections at the blood center, we'll start slow, with careful review every step of the way."

The Food and Drug Administration suspended the center's license June 6. Improper safeguards concerning donor suitability and a lack of documentation of adverse donor reactions were cited as reasons for suspension, according to information released by the FDA.

Cheryl Keefer, UBS community relations director, said the center is undergoing a rebuilding process and has been training extensively.

"Some former employees were retained, and we have hired new personnel," she said. "We have been training them for the last two months."

UBS officially opened its doors Monday, but has limited publicity.

"We want to make sure things are in control," Keefer said.

UBS Executive Director Dennis Cleveland said donors need to contact the center before coming in to donate.

"We'll be working on a limited schedule the first few weeks, so we are asking donors to make appointments or wait for us to call them," Cleveland said.

Prior to relicensing, the center was able to collect autologous blood donations, which involves a person pre-depositing their own blood for future surgery, he said.

Center officials hope to resume normal blood drives soon, Cleveland said.

"If everything is on-track, in terms of quality and compliance, we hope to resume our blood drives after Jan. 1," he said.

Lubbock UBS is the largest supplier of blood in the South Plains area and has worked with Texas Tech organizations in planning blood drives, he said.

Chitwood/Weymouth Hall Complex Director Mike Krenz said Chitwood/Weymouth has participated in blood drives each year and hopes to conduct others soon.

"We plan on resuming our blood drives," he said. "Our pattern is to do some every semester."

Keefer said more than 20 donors had blood processed Tuesday afternoon. Twenty-one donors visited the center Monday. The new UBS management team hopes for a steady transition, Keefer said.

"We want things to move smoothly," she said. "We want to have time for our donors."

The center will be open 9 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Newly elected may be asset to Reese

BY LINDA CARRIGER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The three Republican congressmen who secured seats in national legislative bodies during the general election Tuesday will be an asset for Reese Air Force Base retention efforts, Lubbock officials said.

Kay Bailey Hutchison won her senatorial re-election bid, and newly elected Mac Thornberry and incumbent Larry Combest took two U.S. representative slots in districts 13 and 19, respectively.

Though members involved with the Base Realignment and Closure Commission have said the closure process will not be influenced by political agendas or affiliations, Lubbock City Councilman Randy Neugebauer said politics became an issue.

"It's hard to take politics out of anything that has to do with Washington (D.C.)," Neugebauer said. "If it gets down, and it's really, really close and they're looking at two or three bases, you look at what kind of relationship that community, district, state has in Washington."

Mayor David Langston said Congress' transformation to predominantly Republican membership will bolster support for Republican representatives.

"In my view it can't do anything but help us," Langston said. "The ultimate decision is going to be made by Congress."

When Congress reconvenes in January, the House will have 229 Republican members and 205 Democratic members, the Associated Press reported. Currently the House has 178 Republicans and 256 Democrats, the AP reported.

Lubbock City Manager Bob Cass said the increase will help Combest.

"I've always felt that Mr. Combest was an extremely effective player for us, but I think he will be more so now," Cass said.

Currently, there are 56 Democrats in the Senate and 44 Republicans, AP reports stated.

In January, there will be 48 Democrats and 52 Republicans in the Senate, reports stated.

Cass said it was important for retention efforts to keep Hutchison in the Senate.

Her seat on the Arms Services Committee will help Lubbock officials keep tabs on the BRAC process, Cass said.

Both Langston and Cass said they are not sure politics will affect the closure commission.

"I would not think the Pentagon machine is seriously going to change the way they're going to approach the BRAC process," Cass said.

The city hired Chris Lehman as a base closure consultant to help keep Reese Air Force Base off the closure list.

Cass said Lehman has not commented on how Republican representation will affect the city's retention efforts.

Reese is competing against Columbus Air Force Base in Mississippi, Laughlin Air Force Base in Del Rio and Vance Air Force Base in Enid, Okla., Lehman previously said.

Graduate School dean resigns to teach, research

BY LISA RAY
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Texas Tech's Graduate School may be undergoing structural changes within the next year because of the resignation of Dean Clyde Hendrick.

Hendrick announced his resignation six weeks ago during a Graduate Council meeting for faculty members. He said he wants to step down from his administrative position as dean and into Tech classrooms to continue researching and teaching psychology.

As dean of the Graduate School, Hendrick said he has served as chairman of the Graduate Council on policies, has been a member of the Provost Council and has served on dissertation committees. He also oversees admissions and other Graduate School employees, he said.

Two objectives have been set by Graduate School officials in response to Hendrick's resignation, including a determination of any changes that need to be made and the organization of a committee to select a replacement for Hendrick.

"Almost every time a dean steps down, a fiscal evaluation is done," said Marijane Davis, assistant dean of the Graduate School. "They look at it and see if there is a better way or more fiscal way the office can operate."

Vice President and Provost Don Haragan was on vacation and not available for comment regarding Hendrick's resignation.

Vice Provost for Academic Affairs Len Ainsworth was part of the search committee in 1984 that led to

Hendrick

- Tech Graduate School Dean Clyde Hendrick has announced his resignation.
- He plans to step down to continue his work teaching psychology and researching.

Hendrick's appointment. Ainsworth said Haragan will establish a council to review the organization of the Graduate School.

"The Graduate School may be combined with a research school, it could just remain a graduate school like it is or it could be disseminated throughout the other colleges," Ainsworth said.

The committee chosen by Haragan will have until midnight Aug. 31 to make organizational revisions to the school and to choose a new dean.

"If research and graduate affairs would combine, they would rest under one vice president, and the committee would then have to hire a vice president for research who would also be the dean of graduate affairs," Hendrick said.

Tech's Graduate School admits students to degree programs, and research services use faculty members to train students.

"They (dean supervisors) like to consolidate schools that do much of the same thing," Davis said. A nationwide search will be conducted through advertisements in national newsletters and the Chronicle for Higher Education.

Readers Ask

Q: I saw the play "Oleana." When a person inquires about your personal life and you don't want to answer them, but they push it and you finally concede and give them a little bit, can that be considered sexual harassment?

A: Sexual harassment includes a very broad realm of issues. Your question doesn't tell me if you are a student, faculty or staff member at Tech and under what circumstances the inquiry was made. First, let me define sexual harassment as printed in the university's "Sexual Harassment" brochure found in the Dean of Students Office. "Sexual harassment includes, but is not limited to, unwelcome behavior such as sexual advances, requests for sexual favors and verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature." Many times, our perceptions define whether a statement or comment could be construed as sexual harassment. You don't have to reveal anything you don't feel comfortable sharing. Consider this... you might have said, "I'm not comfortable discussing this." If an inquiry seems inappropriate or makes you feel uncomfortable, then you should say so. A student who has concerns, questions or complaints about sexual harassment should visit with the Dean of Students Office. An employee can take their concerns to the Affirmative Action Office on campus. All people have a right to an education and work environment that is free of bias, intimidation or hostility.

Q: Why don't y'all ever do anything on the health benefits of vegetarianism?

A: Glad you asked... the Fitness/Wellness Center at the Student Recreation Center frequently plans health-related events regarding food preparation and healthy eating. Today, the center will be sponsoring a program titled, "Getting to the Meat of the Matter," which will focus on selecting lower fat meats and using low fat cooking methods. While this program is certainly not appropriate for those on a vegetarian diet, many of the programs at the Fitness/Wellness Center are. Recent examples include a program in September on healthy snacking, the supermarket tour conducted in October and the Lotsa Pasta program that is offered each semester. Events scheduled for the spring semester include: Healthy Snacking on Feb. 17, Vegetarian Eating on Feb. 21, Lotsa Pasta on March 2 and Nutritious Brown-Bagging in April. Pick up a Fitness/Wellness Center brochure and watch for these and other events.

Vegetarianism is a complex concept which people choose for many reasons, some being economic, religious, ethnic or health. There are three different types of vegetarian diets. A lacto-ovo-vegetarian diet includes plant foods, eggs and dairy products, but excludes meat, poultry and fish. A strict vegetarian diet includes only foods from plant sources and excludes all foods of animal origin. Protein in a lacto-ovo-vegetarian diet is supplied mainly from dairy products, eggs and legumes. In the strict vegetarian diet, legumes, grains, soy milk and meat substitutes supply most of the protein.

Although there are certain health benefits to vegetarianism, it's not automatically a "healthy" choice. Lacto-ovo and lacto-vegetarians often consume high levels of dairy products that contain much fat and cholesterol unless low-fat dairy products are a consistent choice in food selection. Strict vegetarians often fail to consume adequate proteins, unless their food selections are carefully planned. So... the first step in becoming a vegetarian is to work with a dietician to design a meal plan suited to your lifestyle, as well as to familiarize you with food combinations that provide essential nutrients. There's also many books on the market about this subject.

Q: What happens if you don't get enough fat in your diet?

A: You end up looking like Christy Brinkley? Nah — just kidding. Nowadays, almost everyone has heard about the "evils" of fat in the diet. The typical American consumes a diet that may consist of up to 40 percent of calories coming from fat — a level that is considered too high. Respected medical organizations indicate that a diet with 30 percent or less calories coming from fat is best and, yes, you can reduce your fat intake too much.

It's important to remember that fat is an essential nutrient. Two fats that are essential are linoleic acid and linolenic acid. Our total need for these acids is small, however, and can be met by a minimum of 7 to 10 grams of fat per day. Deficiencies are rare and generally only occur in cases of medical conditions that severely affect fat intake or fat absorption. Some medically administered diets using liquid formulas with little or no fat have resulted in deficiencies. Linoleic acid deficiency can cause scaly skin lesions, while symptoms of linolenic acid deficiency include blurred vision and numbness or pain in the legs.

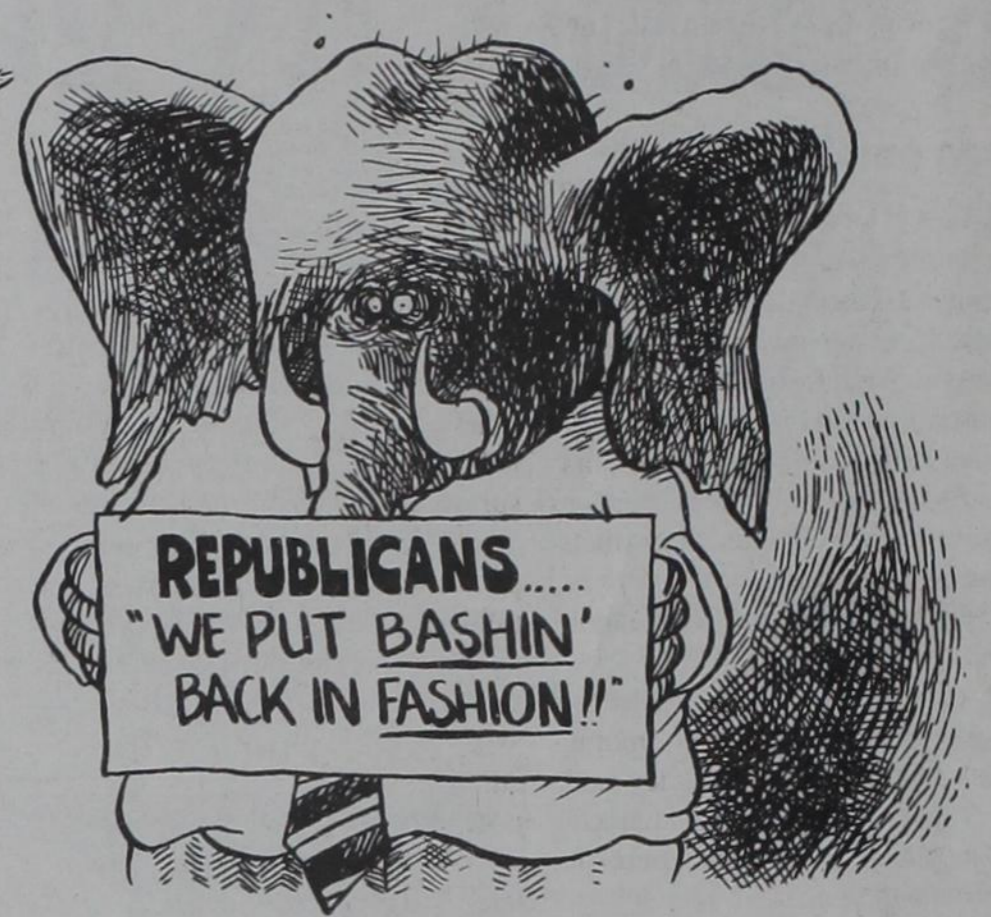

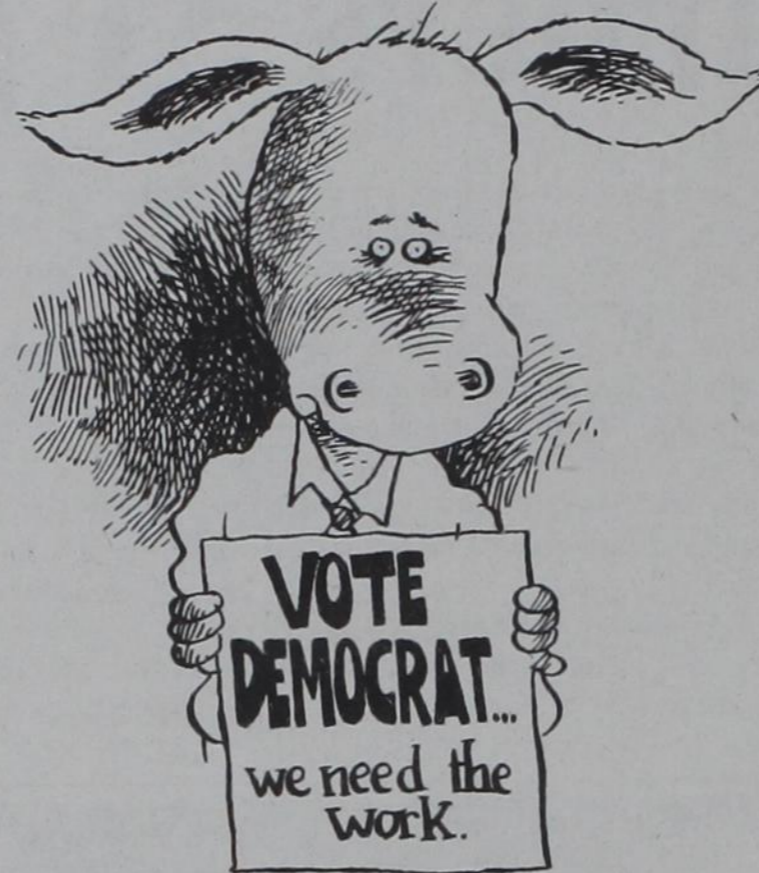

Fat also is an important source of vitamins — A, D, E and K.

Readers Ask is the result of a collaborative effort between The UD, Tech's Personal Safety Committee and Student Health Services. While we appreciate all questions submitted, our expert respondents are geared toward health- and safety-related issues. As many questions as possible will be answered as time and space allow, but preference will be given to those regarding health and safety.

Elections not fair without write-ins

To the editor:
 The first words of Article 1, Section 2 of the Constitution state: "The House of Representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the People..." My question is: How did the people choose Larry Combest for another two-year term in the House of Representatives? Was there a choice? Since voting procedures prohibit a write-in candidate, and he was the only candidate eligible Nov. 8, I fail to see the choice. I realize other offices and seats only had one candidate, but this election for the House seat of District 19 seems to directly contradict the Constitution. Combest will probably have an opponent sometime in the future, but are the people in District 19 really guaranteed the opportunity to choose someone else for the House seat sometime in the future? The Constitution guarantees the public's right to vote in the elections. However, are the public's rights to fair elections guaranteed? If Phil Gramm's opponent in 1996 makes a clerical error in the procedure to have his name put on the ballot, and Phil

Gramm becomes the only eligible candidate with no possibility of a write-in candidate, Texas would face a Constitutional crisis. All national elections with only one ballot name should allow a write-in candidate as a matter of Constitutional law. Also, the public deserves the opportunity to write-in candidates in other national elections to avoid a forced vote for someone undesirable.

Good riddance, Democrats

To the editor:
 After watching Lubbock's Democratic Party Chairman Mark Harmon on KLBK-TV Tuesday night, one basic truth came to mind. Victory for not only Texas, but for the entire country.

Yes, Harmon's feeble attempts in The University Daily to "appeal to voter intellect" using classic liberal commentary have failed miserably. To begin, let me correct Harmon's notion of voter intellect. The people across this nation have portrayed their intellect by ousting liberals such as Cuomo, Rostenkowski and, most importantly, Ann Richards. This country has displayed that they are tired of big government, high taxes, increased spending and, most of all, blatant liberal lies. Thus, Harmon and the rest of the country have witnessed the rebirth of our state and nation with the recent elections. Another idea of interest in Harmon's "farewell address" Tuesday stated that "nothing in politics is permanent." Without doubt this was the most brilliant point ever pronounced by Harmon. He exhibited an actual truth which is very rare for liberal Democrats. Harmon's truth can be seen, but patience is needed as it will take place in two years. Yes, the Democrats have two years before the president and her husband are part of Harmon's truth that "nothing in politics is permanent."

So, as I stated in early September, Harmon and the Democratic Party have plenty of time to prepare for the next elections. They can invite people to call the stumbling Democratic Party as much as they wish, but come '96 we will once again see intellect prevail.

Buckley discusses Clinton, state elections

BY SANDY FULLER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Speaking to a standing-room only crowd, national conservative political figure William F. Buckley Jr. said the newly elected, Republican-dominated Congress will have to act on important issues such as crime, illegal immigration and welfare if it wants to survive.

More than 200 people attended Buckley's commentary, "Reflections on Current Contentions," at 9 a.m. Wednesday in the business administration building.

Buckley fielded about a dozen political questions from students for an hour.

Buckley, who is considered a right-wing Republican, said besides Texas businessman Ross Perot, only God could have helped President Clinton keep a viable presidency.

Buckley said there are three major reasons why Clinton appears to be a failing president with the American people.

"One, he was voted in as a moderate Democrat," he said.

Then Clinton moved to the left after he took office by promoting national health care, Buckley said.

"Secondly, I think the character issue is beginning to hurt him," he said.

He cited the "but I didn't inhale (marijuana)" issue, the Gennifer Flowers scandal and the $100,000 profit made in speculative trading as issues that have affected the Clinton administration.

"Little by little, I think, over the past couple of years, people have felt that he wasn't all that much on level as a character," he said.

The third reason he said he believes Clinton is doing poorly as president is because he is ubiquitous.

"It is impossible to turn on a television and not see him," Buckley said. "And he is always moralizing."

He said the new Republican Congress will most likely misstep by doing nothing.

"If it mobilizes and endorses and passes critical measures that are going to be appealing, relating to important issues — crime, illiteracy, immigration, welfare — and they don't get to it because of vetoes, then they can survive," he said.

However, if the new Congress simply does not get around to acting on those measures, it will anger many people two years from now, Buckley said.

Buckley also is the founder and editor of the conservative journal National Review.

In 1966 he began hosting his weekly television show "Firing Line."

ward Heath have also appeared on Buckley's television show.

Buckley's visit was sponsored by the Chief Executives' Roundtable, a support organization of the College of Business Administration.

Committee plans programs throughout Diversity Month

BY AMY OSMULSKI
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

November will serve as Diversity Month at Texas Tech with student and faculty programs sponsored by the Student Affairs Staff Development Committee.

The committee has prepared a series of presentations to inform faculty and students of on-campus diversity.

Rebecca Owens, committee chairwoman and Programs for Academic Support Services Learning Center director, said the committee reviewed different issues they believed were important on campus.

"We tried to include a number of different issues, like gender, racism and sexual identity," Owens said.

The programs are specifically aimed at continuing education and staff development, she said. Interested students are encouraged to attend, she said.

"Diversity Awareness: Taking the First Step," will be presented from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. today in the University Center Green Room.

Tom Weis, associate director of recreational sports, will conduct the program.

"I am going to talk about the misinformation people have on other ethnic groups, the pride people should take in their own group and the baggage we carry that we need to get rid of," Weis said.

Faculty Senate discusses parking

BY JONATHAN HARRIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Increasing the number of on-campus reserved parking spaces, and discussion of Texas Tech's Honors program and international students was the focus of Wednesday's Faculty Senate meeting.

Jerry Ramsey, associate vice president for operations, said traffic and parking is reviewing an increase in reserved parking prices for next year.

"We are looking to raise the prices to $125 from $90," Ramsey said. "The price increase will help better keep the roads and parking lots maintained."

Two alternative options to the parking increases are available, he said.

"We can increase the price in a one-time deal, or we can increase the price over the next few years by 10 percent," he said.

The senate voted to take the matter to a committee to discuss the issue.

Gary Bell, director of the Tech Honors program, said the program has received the largest response this semester than ever before.

"The Honors program has received an increase of 27 percent from last year," Bell said.

GRE en route to complete computerization

BY TERRI LOWRANCE
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The February 1995 administration of the Graduate Record Exam has been removed as the first step to eliminate the paper and pencil version of the exam by 1997.

One hand-written test will be removed from the testing schedule each year to complete the elimination, said Cindy Miller, secretary of Tech graduate admissions.

"Students who wish to avoid the computerized GRE must take the exam on Dec. 10, if they plan to meet winter application deadlines," said Jose

Ferreira, director of GRE programs for Kaplan Educational Centers.

Students can schedule appointments to take the computerized exams weekdays at the Sylvan Learning Center at 5166 69th St.

The GRE is the first major exam to shift to the computerized format, Ferreira said.

Other tests such as the Scholastic

Where: Sylvan Learning Center
Address: 5166 69th St.
When: Monday-Friday
Time: 8:30 a.m.

How: an appointment must be made and payment must be completed at least three days in advance

Aptitude Test, the Law Scholastic Aptitude Test and the Medical College Admissions Test probably will follow the trend, he said.

Computer testing allows students to immediately see their scores, Ferreira said.

Scores can be reported to different colleges and universities quickly, he said.

"The computer format doesn't enable students to mark up problems in their test booklets," he said.

"Many students find this format intimidating and are simply more comfortable with a paper and pencil test." Students taking the computerized test must answer every question as it is given.

Students taking the computerized GRE are not allowed to review previous questions or answers and may not omit questions.

The Kaplan Test Preparation Center, at 4620 50th St., offers free seminars about the computerized version of the GRE.

Pill offers pregnancy protection for sexual assault, rape victims

Victims of date rape or sexual assault who fear an unplanned pregnancy have an option available to them through Texas Tech Student Health Services.

The morning after pill, a post-coital highly concentrated dose of oral contraceptives, prevents the egg from implanting on the uterine wall after fertilization, said Robin Brewton, Student Health Services health education coordinator.

"It can reduce the risk of becoming pregnant by 75 percent if taken within the first 24 hours after intercourse," Brewton said.

Time is a significant factor in administering the pill, she said. "You can take the morning after pill up to 72 hours after intercourse," she said. "But the longer you wait, the less effective it will be."

Student Health Services considers an appointment for the morning after pill a crisis situation and works to see patients as soon as possible, Brewton said.

The education process following administration of the pill will inform the patient about what kinds of side effects to expect and then prescribe an on-going birth control method, she said.

"Nausea and vomiting are common side effects and can last for up to two days," she said. "If the patient throws up within an hour, she must come in immediately."

The morning after pill requires patient counseling, Brewton said.

Severe abdominal or chest pain, dizziness, severe leg pain and severe headaches are not normal side effects and should be reported immediately to a physician, she said.

Patients will experience a menstrual period within 48 hours after ingestion, said Karin Holdamph, University Medical Center pharmacist.

"The high dosage of progesterone and estrogen causes sloughing off of the lining in the uterus," she said. "A person will experience excessive bleeding, usually within 48 hours."

Anyone who fears possible ovulation and seeks the morning after pill can only obtain it through a doctor, Holdamph said.

"The patient must have a written prescription from a physician," she said.

If the patient does not undergo a heavy menstrual period soon after taking the pill, the patient must return to her physician, Holdamph said.

"If you haven't started your period in three weeks, then you need to come in for a pregnancy test," Brewton said.

The more often you take the morning after pill, the less effective it becomes, she said.

Student Health Services prescribes the birth control method only in isolated situations, Brewton said. "The morning after pill is prescribed frequently for cases of forced intercourse, such as date rape and sexual assault," she said.

The morning after pill should not be used as a regular birth control method, she said.

"We can prescribe this if a condom breaks or if a diaphragm slips, but it should not be considered a normal form of birth control," Brewton said.

This morning after pill is available in the United States and should not be confused with other non-legalized medication, she said.

Dean plans return to teaching

BY LISA RAY
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Stepping out from behind his desk and back to a laboratory and the blackboard is what Graduate School Dean Clyde Hendrick intends to do within the next two years.

After being involved in university administration for more than 18 years, Hendrick said he believes it is time to return to teaching. He said he is ready to start focusing on research and teaching psychology after spending seven years as chairman of the psychology department at the University of Miami and 11 years as dean at Tech.

Hendrick will take a developmental leave in the spring of 1996 to become prepared for the classroom atmosphere, of which he has not been a part of since 1977. He will conduct research and prepare to teach a graduate course, an undergraduate course and to supervise dissertations, he said. "There's no behind-the-scenes or negative factors in my resigning," Hendrick said. "It's just that Texas no longer funds higher education. There's not a court mandate for funding higher education, and administration is just not fun anymore."

Hendrick will be dropped from his 12-month administrative contract by the 1996 fall semester and will be placed in a nine-month teaching faculty contract, he said.

Hendrick will be earning three-fourths of his current salary, but said he doesn't mind taking the pay cut.

"It will be a sacrifice. But if I teach summer school, I can make one-sixth of my regular salary (as a professor)," he said.

Marijane Davis, assistant dean of the Graduate School, said, "I'll be sorry to see him step down."

"He is a very fine dean. He is very concerned with the entire environment (of the Graduate School) and the student's education."

"He raised the teaching assistants' stipends and is a full-time recruiter for the Graduate School," Davis said.

Davis said she believes Hendrick should be recognized most for the "white paper" an in-house, policy-making paper he wrote in 1986 which analyzed the inequities between the graduate student head count and the funding the school received.

The paper eventually "overturned how financial decisions were made," Davis said. The paper also resulted in increased funding for many organizations, she said.

Lecture promotes AIDS awareness

BY CANDIDA JOHNSON
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Zeta Tau Alpha sorority is trading AIDS information for canned goods. The sorority is sponsoring an AIDS lecture at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the University Center Allen Theatre. Everyone is asked to bring a can of food, which will be donated to the Lubbock food bank. "We felt that AIDS is an important topic that college students need to be informed about," said Stacey Reising, standards chairwoman of Zeta Tau Alpha. The event is open to the community and is held in conjunction with the South Plains AIDS Resource Center.

Barbara Pierce, a resident and director of education, testing and counseling at SPARC, will be the speaker. "Barbara will concentrate on dispelling myths about AIDS," Reising said. "We will also answer the many questions students have about AIDS."

"She calls the lecture AIDS 101." Reising said there will be no visuals, but the lecture will hold the attention of those in attendance. "People who come out will be able to ask questions they may have had for a long time," she said.

Reising said there will be members of Zeta Tau Alpha in the UC Thursday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. to answer questions students may have prior to the lecture. "Our studies show that one in 500 Texas Tech students are HIV positive," said Corey Turner, a volunteer for SPARC's education and development department. "Unfortunately, we live in a conservative community where no one wants to talk about AIDS."

Turner said some people believe AIDS is a homosexual disease. "This disease is not limited to just gay people," he said. "It is a human disease that affects everyone. That is why it is so important for students to come out (for the program)."

Turner said the lecture will stress abstinence and AIDS awareness. "Here at SPARC we believe in teaching abstinence," he said. "The lecture will also touch on the use of protection." Turner said those with questions about AIDS or HIV may call the SPARC office at 796-7068. "We felt that this was a great opportunity to get the word out about AIDS to Tech students," Reising said.

Former escort service owner covers trial of Heidi Fleiss

NEW YORK (AP) — Want an expert's opinion? The Mayflower Madam is going to cover the trial of the reputed Hollywood Madam. The cable channel America's Talking said it has hired Sydney Biddle Barrows to be a regular contributor, covering the Los Angeles trial of Heidi Fleiss.

"If you want an expert on war, you get a retired general," Barrows said.

"I'm not exactly a general, but I am retired."

Fleiss is accused of procuring four women for prostitution. Prosecutors say she ran an exclusive call-girl ring whose clients purportedly included Hollywood's rich and famous. Barrows once ran two $200-an-hour escort services in New York City. She pleaded guilty to prostitution a decade ago and was fined $5,000.

Men sue Ice Cube for profits from song

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rap star Ice Cube is being sued by six men who claim they wrote a hit song with him and are still owed part of the profits.

Their lawsuit, filed Tuesday, claims they helped Ice Cube, whose real name is O'Shea Jackson, write "Wicked," a hit song on his 1992 album "Predator."

Lee Young, a lawyer representing Ice Cube, did not return a phone call seeking comment.

The six claim they had an oral agreement with Ice Cube to produce and supply the instrumental part of the song. So far, they claim, they have received a combined $30,000 in production royalties and no songwriting royalties. They are seeking a total of $50,000 plus damages.

Armani designs costumes for opera production

LONDON (AP) — Italian fashion is joining with a Mozart opera on the London stage.

Giorgio Armani will make his first venture into opera by designing costumes for an updated version of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's "Cosi fan tutte," to be directed by Jonathan Miller, the Royal Opera House said Wednesday.

"Jonathan Miller has devised an original and elegant way to present 'Cosi fan tutte' for us in London and then in Rome, which cried out for coolly elegant Italian costumes," said Nicholas Payne of the Royal Opera.

The production's international mix will include two American singers, mezzo-soprano Susan Graham and tenor Bruce Ford.

Woman charged with animal neglect

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A porker of a pig has gotten pet owner Virginia Hudgins charged with animal neglect.

"It's, believe it or not, an obese pig," said Mark Kumpf, the police department's senior humane officer.

Pinkie Starlight is a Vietnamese potbellied pig. Pigs of that breed normally weigh 65 to 100 pounds, but Pinkie tips the scales around 200 pounds.

Her belly scrapes the ground when she stands, and rolls of fat from her forehead drape over her eyes so she can't see.

"I had heard that she was pretty big, but when you see a pig of that size it still gets your attention," said animal control officer Christina Roeske.

Hudgins' disregard of the veterinarian's warnings about the pig's weight constitutes neglect, Kumpf said.

Officers on Tuesday lured the pig from the house with a piece of bread and a trail of bread crumbs. The pig has been boarded at a farm to go on a diet. Hudgins could not be reached for comment; no telephone number is listed for her. If convicted, she faces a maximum of a year in jail and a $2,500 fine on the misdemeanor charge, said Lt. Philip McKeon, administrator of the city's animal protection division.

League prepares for holiday season

BY CANDIDA JOHNSON
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Santa's elves are coming to town early — at least according to the Lubbock Junior League elves/volunteers.

The League will sponsor the 15th annual Holiday Happening today through Sunday at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

"We have 116 merchants from across the U.S., as well as (merchants from) our own backyard," chairwoman Karen Fulton said.

"We feel our schedule of special events will provide fun for everyone." Fulton said the event has enabled the League to return about $2 million to the Lubbock community.

"We're extending a warm welcome to Tech students," she said. "We feel this event is a great opportunity for the students to get their holiday shopping done."

"The students can get unique gifts without waiting until the last minute to do shopping," she said. "We have something for everyone."

The theme of this year's Holiday Happening is "A Southern Celebration."

The local holiday celebration will open with a silent auction today from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the civic center.

Various groups will perform at 9:30 p.m. Friday.

The music will range from soul or country-western to oldies.

The Cotton Ball western dinner dance will be Saturday at 6:30 p.m. at the civic center, and the League expects to raise $187,000 for community projects, Fulton said.

"I guess one of the most exciting events we will showcase is a concert by country great Daron Norwood," Fulton said.

"We decided to bring him in because he's very talented, and he is a local artist."

Norwood is the featured entertainer at the ball.

"I am so glad the Junior League invited me to come home and perform," Norwood said. "This is going to be one of my most memorable performances."

Fulton said during the Norwood concert a dance floor will be provided.

"We encourage everyone to come out and have fun with us," she said.

Admission costs $25 and includes a buffet dinner and the concert.

Those wishing to see just the concert can come at 9 p.m. and pay $15, Fulton said.

The final event at 12 p.m. Sunday will feature the Flintstones.

"The Flintstones show is something the kids will really enjoy," Fulton said.

The show, called "Dino's Christmas Wish," costs $10 per person for lunch and the show.

For children ages 6 and younger, admission costs $7.

Fulton said the price for those wishing to see the show and have a snack provided for them is $5 per person.

Fulton said tickets are available at the Civic Center Ticket Booth. They also are available at Select-a-Seat outlets. For more information, students may call 794-7288.

Capriati falls in first match back

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Jennifer Capriati, appearing to tire in the third set in her return to tennis, lost 6-4, 3-6, 6-1 Wednesday night to Anke Huber in the opening round of the $750,000 Virginia Slims. Capriati, who spent more than a year away from the women's tour because of burnout, injuries and legal problems, dropped the first three games of the final set to the German, who is ranked 13th in the world.

Raiders beat Texas-Arlington in four games

BY JESSE MALDONADO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

After losing game one 16-14, the Texas Tech volleyball team rallied to win its last home match defeating Texas-Arlington 14-16, 15-11, 15-11 and 15-10. The Red Raiders now are 14-13 on the year.

Despite trailing by eight points early in game two, head coach Mike Jones said the Red Raiders ignited their level of play tremendously.

"It seemed we had a hard time getting our intensity up, but once we did, we played pretty good," Jones said. "You have to give them credit for turning it around and coming back. That was one of the few times we lost in the first game of a match and still won the match."

Both the Raiders' and the Lady Mavericks' passing and serving game struggled throughout the match. Tech had 23 service errors in the match, mostly in games one and two.

"On our serving, I don't know what happened. I think that's probably the poorest serving night that we've had in six or seven weeks," Jones said. "I think this is one of the reasons why the match was as close as it was tonight."

Senior setter Ginger Carter said the team wanted to repeat what they had done earlier against the Lady Mavericks.

"Last time we were at UTA weaced them 18 times of 45 points," Carter said. "So I think we were trying to go after it again because we knew we had aced them a lot. So we thought if we served them really hard we would ace them."

Overall, the Raiders shined offensively, hitting a .193 percentage. Tech also converted on 79 of 223 total attacks. Carter, junior middle blockers Jill Slapper, Jennifer Cohn and sophomore outside hitter Cristine Martin highlighted things offensively.

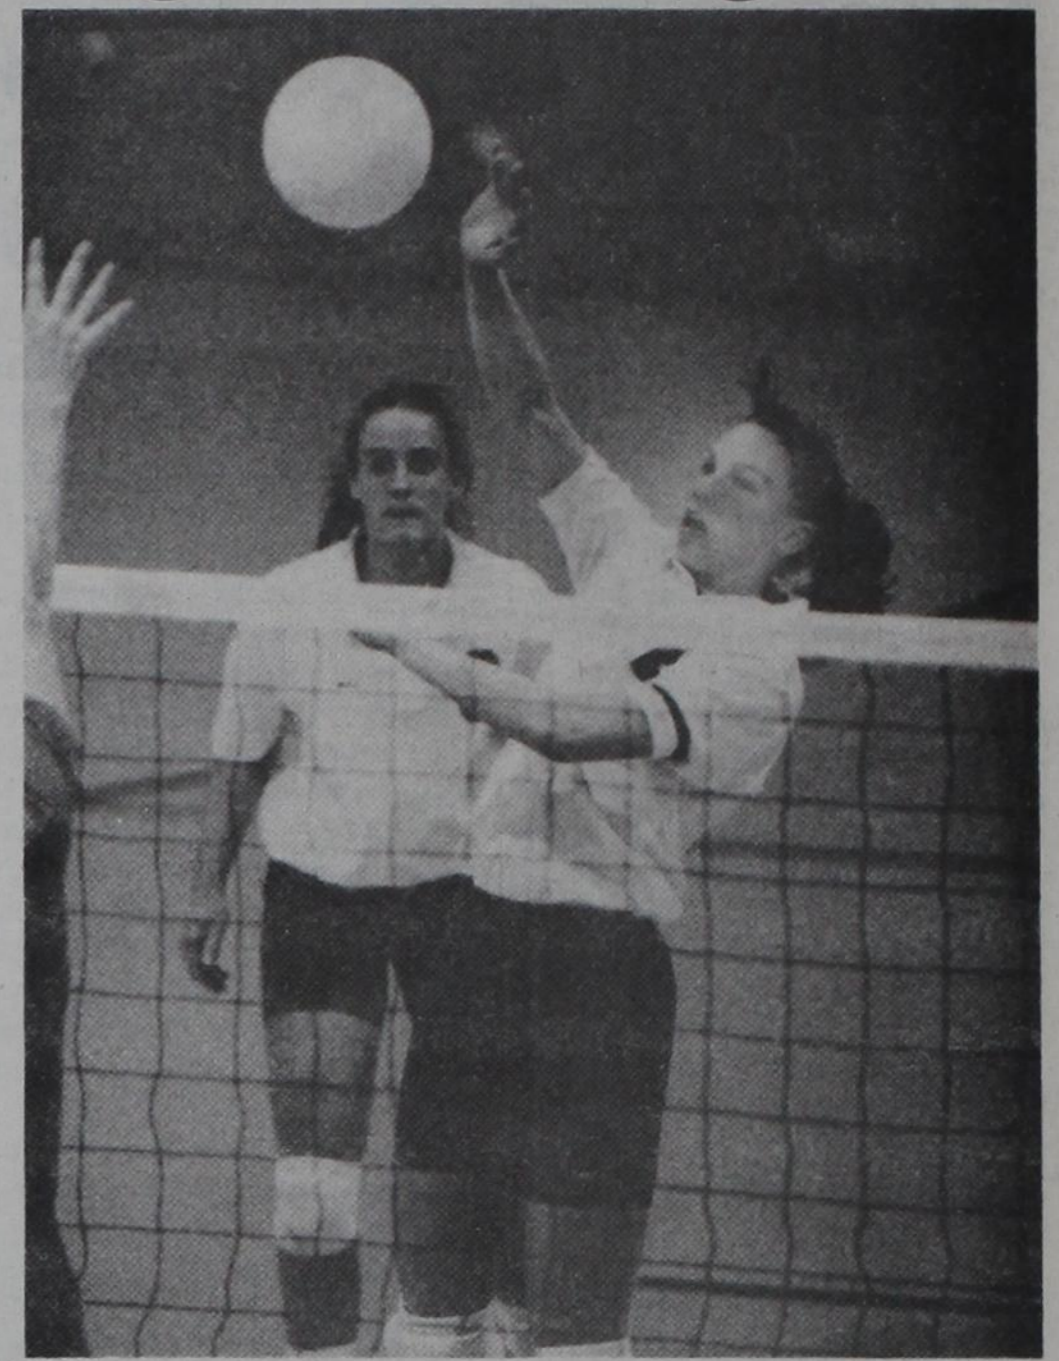

The trio of Slapper, Cohn and Martin dominated the front area of the net. All three combined for a .489 hitting percentage and also accumulated 43 kills.

Defensively, Cohn dominated the net having four block solos and one block assist. The Martin and Slapper duo totaled 10 block assists. Jones said he is still aware of the Raiders being slightly weak in the passing area.

"We had a little bit time off last week and I think when that happens you are going to see the passing, especially going down," Jones said.

Despite the win, the Raiders said farewell to lone senior Carter. This was the last home game for the senior and she said she'll miss the home atmosphere at the Student Recreational Center.

"It's sad, I like playing here at home," Carter said.

Lady Raiders look to rebound against Hungarians

BY JARED PARCELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech Lady Raiders will have one more opportunity to work out the kinks before the first round of the National Invitational Tournament Tuesday night.

The Lady Raiders will host the Hungarian National team at 7 p.m. today in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum. This is the first game in the United States and the first of seven games in Texas that the Pecci Vasutas squad will play.

Last Sunday, the Lady Raiders fell to the Athletes in Action, 76-70, in their first exhibition game of the season.

Head coach Marsha Sharp said the first game is one the team and coaches can build on, having gained experience in game situations.

"We had to make decisions at the end of the game, what to do if we score or don't score," Sharp said.

A zone defense AIA played is something Sharp expects her team to see throughout the year, she said in her press conference Monday.

Sharp said she is going to make a lineup change for tonight's contest.

"(Senior) Nikki Heath will start in place of (junior) Michelle Thomas," Sharp said. "The other four starters will remain the same."

The other four are seniors Noel Johnson, Connie Robinson and Tabitha Truesdale and junior Michi Atkins. Robinson led the attack Sunday, with 13 rebounds, five offensively and eight defensively. She also led the Lady Raiders in scoring with 21 points. Truesdale, playing the point guard position, dished out 12 assists, but also turned the ball over 12 times.

Tech was 3-16 (.188) from three-point range and 29-66 (.439) from inside the three-point arc. The team was 9-16 (.563) from the charity stripe.

The Lady Raiders, Sharp said, are not in a must-win situation heading into tonight.

"I'm not concerned about the outcome of the game. However, we will try to win," Sharp said.

Even though she is not worried about the final score, Sharp said the play of the Lady Raiders is a worry.

"I'm more concerned about what we do offensively and defensively and the quality of our play," Sharp said.
