Heavy rains, flooding kill 65 people in Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Heavy rains and flooding from Tropical Storm Gordon swept across Haiti on Monday, triggering landslides and washing away makeshift homes in the slums of the capital. At least 65 people were killed.

Two deaths were reported in Jamaica, where the storm caused widespread flooding and mudslides.

In Port-au-Prince, hundreds of terrified people fled rickety homes in darkness early Monday as floodwaters poured in. Some spent the night huddled on their rooftops in the downpour.

A mudslide collapsed a wall in one neighborhood, killing a woman and three children, the Haitian Red Cross said.

U.S. Army helicopters flew overhead to assess the damage. "Obviously we will do what we can to help the Haitian government," said Col. Barry Willey, a U.S. military spokesman.

Judge approves plan to end desegregation

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal judge Monday approved a plan to end a 20-year desegregation battle by encouraging enrollment by blacks and whites alike at all Louisiana universities while preserving two historically black schools.

The proposal is aimed at resolving a 1974 lawsuit in which the U.S. Justice Department accused Louisiana of running a dual system of higher education — one for blacks and one for whites.

It was the department's first lawsuit to desegregate a state's entire higher education system.

U.S. District Judge Charles Schwartz said a three-member committee will be appointed to monitor the settlement, which succeeds a 1981 agreement that was abandoned after the state had spent $100 million.

The historically black Southern University system, 92 percent black in 1993, will remain intact. And Grambling State University will not be merged with other schools. Grambling was almost 95 percent black in 1993.

Bush vows to allow concealed handguns

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov.-elect George W. Bush vowed Monday to sign new legislation that would allow Texans to carry concealed handguns.

The gun measure was one of dozens unveiled by lawmakers on the first day to file bills for the Jan. 10 start of the regular legislative session.

State Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, who sponsored concealed handgun legislation in 1993, said he was glad to have Bush's support.

"It's nice to have the chief executive who believes in the people's ability to protect themselves," Wilson said.

At a news conference, Bush, a Republican, said, "I support Mr. Wilson's bill ... I will sign that bill."

In 1993, a similar handgun bill was stripped down to a non-binding referendum before it was approved by the Legislature and sent to Gov. Ann Richards.

Poll says environment on decline

BY AMY OSMULSKI
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A majority of U.S. college students believe the condition of the environment is worse than it was five years ago, according to a survey sponsored by Veryfine Products Inc.

Despite an increase in the interest of environmental problems and personal recycling efforts, 62 percent of college students believe the environmental conditions are declining, the survey stated.

"I think recycling is up, by I seriously doubt the rate of recycling will ever offset the rate of pollution," said Sarita Smithee, a sophomore speech pathology major from Lubbock.

The survey was conducted at

Environmental Statistics

- 82 percent of college students surveyed revealed they make a personal effort to recycle on campus.
- 70 percent of the students said they look for products and packaging that are safe for the environment.
- 58 percent said they would pay more for these products. Of the students who would pay more, three quarters are willing to spend a premium of at least 6 percent.

SOURCE: VERYFINE PRODUCTS INC. SURVEY

CollegeFest Oct. 22 in Boston, by Pathfinder Research Group, an independent marketing research firm in Acton, Mass., said Tara McKenzie, senior account executive in the Veryfine Products Inc. public relations department.

The survey stated students are making a conscious effort to improve the environment by looking for products that are environmentally friendly, McKenzie said.

Most colleges students believe their campuses are doing their part for the environment, with their on-campus recycling programs, environmental courses and student organizations, she said.

Jim Northcutt, director of Texas Tech's Environmental, Health and Safety department, said he believes Tech students are involved with the campus environment.

"I agree with the nationwide feeling that the environment is not getting better, but I think the students are making a conscious effort to recycle," he said.

Tech is doing its part for the environment by making recycling containers readily available, publicizing recycling efforts and recycling everything that is possible, he said.

Tech has a clean campus compared to other colleges because students are conscientious about their local environment, Northcutt said.

Joe Goddard, an environmental health specialist in the environmental, health and safety department, said he did not agree with the survey.

"Just by looking at what happens in Lubbock with clean air and water guidelines and recycling efforts, I tend to disagree," he said. "I do think students are more concerned with the environment."

The survey stated the most important environmental problems affecting college students are endangered animals and plants, population growth and loss of tropical rain forests, McKenzie said.

Officials ask public input in city's future

BY LINDA CARRIGER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Lubbock officials are creating a vision of the 21st century for the city and are seeking public opinion tonight on what the city will need in the future.

The Goals for Lubbock Committee will play host to a public meeting at 7 p.m. in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center Banquet Hall to gain residents' input before they categorize residents' various needs as high, medium or low priorities for the city.

GLC chairman Gary Lawrence said he hopes at least 300 to 400 people will attend the meeting.

"It's kind of like throwing a party and having very few people come," Lawrence said. "We'll be very disappointed."

The group is considering several economic development issues, including one which calls for night degree programs at Texas Tech.

Other issues include education, health, safety and human services, intergovernmental coordination, land use and urban design, neighborhood and citizen involvement, recreation, parks, entertainment and cultural affairs, transportation and utilities.

Councilman Randy Neugebauer said citizens could "chart a course for the future" at the meeting.

GLC will present their plan to the Lubbock City Council next year.

Mayor David Langston will give a state of the city address at the meeting, Neugebauer said.

Oilers give boot to head coach Pardee

HOUSTON (AP) — In less than a year, the Houston Oilers have gone from a playoff team to the NFL's worst record. Monday, the plunge cost Jack Pardee his job.

He was replaced by defensive coordinator Jeff Fisher, who inherits a 1-9 team heading for Houston's first losing season since 1986.

"I would never have thought we would have fallen so fast and so far," Fisher said. "It goes to show you how volatile the National Football League is. It also shows you the head coach is obviously responsible for that. The weight falls on his shoulders, and now the weight is on my shoulders."

Pardee, 58, is the first NFL coach to be fired this season. He was in the last year of a five-year contract.

The Oilers made the playoffs the past four seasons, but lost in the first round three times.

"It's part of the business," Pardee said. "When you start struggling, you try everything. We probably coached harder this year, used more players."

Under Fisher, Houston's defense has been a bright spot in an otherwise dismal season. The Oilers' defense ranks third in the AFC and eighth in the NFL.

"Jeff had done a fantastic job keeping our defense going," owner Bud Adams said. "We feel Jeff is a very capable young man and has a great future in the National Football League. We felt we had the man on board to be the head coach for the Houston Oilers for some years to come."

Fisher, 36, said he's looking forward to the challenge. "We're starting over," he said. "We are 0-0."

Adams said he and general manager Floyd Reese decided to dismiss Pardee Sunday night after the Oilers lost to the Cincinnati Bengals, who also entered the game with only one win.

"I'm sorry we didn't have better results in the first part of the year," Pardee said. "When you lose your livelihood, it's pretty traumatic."

Also dismissed Monday was assistant head coach Kevin Gilbride, who was punched by former defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan during a sideline confrontation last season. Ryan left after the season to become coach of the Arizona Cardinals.

Former student continues to sell bikes after accident

BY SANDY FULLER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Seven months after being shot in the head at close range, former Texas Tech student Terry Berridge continues to sell bicycles at the same shop he tried to prevent a robbery at April 18.

On that afternoon Berridge was working at DFC Cycles and Fitness at 3501 50th St. when Cory Young, then 16, entered the shop.

The boy walked around for a while, then allegedly grabbed a bike and ran out of the store with it. Berridge gave chase, and the juvenile dropped the bike and attempted to scale a fence. When Berridge caught him, the youth pulled a gun and allegedly shot Berridge in the head.

"All I can remember is his pulling a gun out and pointing it toward my forehead," Berridge said. "I remember seeing the gun. It looked about 6-foot wide, and then I heard the gun go off."

Berridge said he is not sure how long he was unconscious.

"Several days later I woke up at the hospital, and I really didn't have any idea what was wrong with me," he said. "I was surprised to see my parents were there because they live down in San Antonio, and then I kind of realized something bad happened."

Berridge said he has been sitting out this semester to recuperate. He hopes to return to school next spring, he said.

"My doctors have been half and half," Berridge said. "Some of them want me to take it easy; some of them say go for it. I'm going to start out slow and take just a few hours, maybe six hours at the most."

A senior majoring in recreation management, he planned to graduate this semester. He has 16 hours left to graduate, he said.

"I'm hoping I'll graduate next December," he said.

Berridge said he has had several surgeries on his head to clean out wounds and remove bone and bullet fragments.

"The bullet entered near my ear and shattered my skull, in on my right side of my head," he said.

One bullet fragment remains in his head, he said. Doctors have decided to leave it alone for fear they will do more harm by trying to remove it, he said.

He is blind in his right eye and deaf in his right ear.

His eye is still intact, though he

Reagan's sun still shines with voters

JEFF GREENFIELD

OK. It was a rout, an earthquake, a bloodbath, a tidal wave. You can measure it any one of a dozen ways.

—Not a single Republican incumbent lost a race for senator, Congress or governor — including a California representative who, a while back, was found in his car with a prostitute.

—The speaker of the House lost his seat — the last time that happened was in 1860.

—Of the nine most populous states, Republicans govern every one save Florida. (Two years ago, Bill Clinton carried seven of those states.)

—The last time the Republicans held the House, speaker-to-be Newt Gingrich was a Cub Scout, and Bill Clinton was a third grader in Hot Springs, Ark.

But perhaps the most telling, and least noticed, measure of what happened is to be found in five contiguous states of the Midwest — where five Republican governors won landslide re-elections on platforms that reflect the continuing power of Ronald Reagan.

Voinovich in Ohio, Edgar in Illinois, Thompson in Wisconsin, Engler in Michigan and Carlson in Minnesota all won with margins ranging roughly from 60 to 70 percent. These states are hardly GOP bastions: Clinton carried every one of them two years ago. Until this election, Democrats held nine of the 10 U.S. Senate seats in these Rust Belt states.

Yet in a time when voters are supposedly angry, frustrated, petulant, disgusted with government, these governors cruised to reelection. Intriguingly, they have a good deal in common.

All ran and governed as tax-cutters; all reject the idea of ambitious domestic spending programs; all are tough on welfare, and one of them, Wisconsin's Thompson, has adopted a welfare reform plan that Republicans regard as a national model.

All are, expectedly, "tough" on crime, but none of them is a strong cultural conservative. Minnesota's Carlson, in fact, beat back a primary challenge from a champion of the religious right.

Taken together, they exemplify a kind of "post-Reagan Reaganism" stripped of its more controversial elements and, of course, its global message, but rooted in the conviction that government can deliver services to the citizenry even as its size and scope are scaled back.

President Clinton spent much of his time this fall arguing that Americans "do not want to go back" to the 1980s. These election results say something else: They say that, at least in these states, the promises of Ronald Reagan remain politically potent.

These victories also hint at a potent political message: that for Republicans, the road to the White House in 1996 may not lead through Washington any more than it did in 1976, 1980 or 1992.

Right now, much of the talk about Republican prospects centers around well-known names from the capital: Dole, Gramm, Cheney, Baker, Powell (former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander is the exception).

Yet these governors, along with Weld of Massachusetts and Wilson of California, suggest another possibility for the Republican Party: that the way to run in a time of profound discontent with the national government may be to nominate someone who has governed to the enthusiastic support of the governed.

In his poignant letter revealing that he was in the early stages of Alzheimer's disease, Mr. Reagan said, "I now begin the journey that will lead me to the sunset of my life."

For Republicans looking to recapture the White House, Mr. Reagan's sun may still be on the rise.

Some things better left unsaid. Period.

RICHARD SULLIVAN

As a somewhat regular reader of Cosmopolitan magazine, I've come to appreciate many of the pop wisdom in those pages. A recent how-to-snare-that-man story, for instance, told Cosmo readers that one thing NOT to do is talk a lot about your past boyfriends when you're with a current love interest.

This is eminently sensible advice. There are plenty of things people just shouldn't tell their boyfriends or girlfriends, and past affairs and exploits are at the top of the list.

I went on a date once with a woman who was bright, attractive, athletic, successful in her work — all the good stuff — but she kept talking about her old boyfriends.

Which was bad enough. I'm not one of those people who feels much need to know this stuff.

But then we got back to her place and sat down in the kitchen to have a beer, and on the wall right besides the kitchen table was one of those big planner calendars. Written in red marker with a line continuing out over the next couple of days was: "Period begins."

Now, call me insensitive, call me old-fashioned, call me unenlightened, but I'd just as soon have the women in my life release that information strictly on a need-to-know basis.

Actually, it WAS a couple of weeks, as I recall, before she was due again. So maybe I missed an important message there. By that point in the evening, though, I felt sure I wouldn't be needing that information anytime soon.

Perhaps it's good that people are comfortable with talking freely about more and more subjects these days. After all, 15 or 20 years ago most newspapers probably wouldn't even have printed the word "period" unless the writer was talking about grammar or hockey.

On the other hand, all this new free expression sometimes just means more opportunities for boring people to express their boringness over a vast new range of subject areas.

And all the better if the topic is considered shocking, the boring person thinks, because then you can drone on and on and regard yourself as even more fascinating than usual because the subject is, after all, scandalous.

This is the controversial equivalent, by the way, of people who consider themselves supercool because of where they live, rather than what they have going on inside their heads.

Anyway, as a former paper boy who developed a full repertoire of techniques to escape from lonely retirees who were desperate to talk to someone, anyone, even if it meant withholding payment on collection day until they'd bent my ear for 20 minutes, I hereby offer a short list of things I don't want to hear.

—A detailed description of the horrible dyspepsia that kept you out of commission all weekend.

—All about your day at work, unless I ask, or unless the story is genuinely interesting.

—All about your awful experience trying to catch a flight on the day before Thanksgiving, or how many times you had to take your car back to the garage before they finally fixed your horn right, or how you haven't felt the same about TV ever since they canceled "thirtysomething."

—Long stories about your old boyfriends, especially if you're telling them while out on a date. I think most women would say the same about tales of old girlfriends. Cosmo was right. We don't want to hear it. Period.

Democrats not down for the count

To the editor:

Please permit me to answer Wayne Young's attack on Lubbock County Democratic Party Chairman Mark Harmon. I not only heard Mark's statements Tuesday night; I was present when he made the statements. Let me explain the context of his remarks.

When Mark made his statement, Texas had just lost the best governor we had had in a generation. Ann Richards was the first governor in 50 years who did NOT raise taxes.

As governor, she showed new businesses and new jobs to Northern politicians and labor leaders to help pass NAFTA. She was the first Texas chief executive whose appointments reflect the fact that white males represent less than ONE-THIRD of the citizens of Texas. She doubled the size of the Texas prison system by building the facilities vetoed by the previous Republican governor. And she retained (and retains today) a popularity rating of about 60 some odd percent. Most people present at Democratic headquarters that night were not really as surprised or grieved about the results in the rest of the country as they were at the ouster of our wonderful governor. When asked what the Democratic Party planned after its defeat, Mark replied that we plan to continue to appeal to people's intellect and not their fears. If intellect is liberal and fears are conservative, count us as proud to be liberal.

Mark went on to say that the winners will now have to move from promises to performance. If bearing the responsibility of government is liberal and pie-in-the-sky promises are conservative, count us as proud to be liberal.

Mark said we plan to continue to fight for the rights of the individual. If our record in ending Jim Crow segregation and women's bondage is liberal and supporting those evils is conservative, count us as proud to be liberal.

Mark's party under Jefferson and Madison won the battle to establish religious freedom in our country. In those days, our party was called Christian by Hamilton and Adams (leaders of the forerunners of Republicanism) — the same epithet used against us by the Radical Right today. If freedom of religion is liberal and state churches are conservative, count us proud to be liberal.

The entire history of Western Democracy and Free Enterprise is the history of the victory of liberalism.

Young may be right that the impermanence of things portends a temporary eclipse of the humanitarian principles in which our party believes. But he is wrong to call Mark's statement a "farewell address." There WILL NEVER BE a farewell address for equality, social reform and freedom of conscience.

An internal audit of the University of Oklahoma's athletic department showed tens of thousands of dollars in advertising revenue was not billed or collected last season.

Bills for some of the debts were distributed and paid for more than a year after the advertising was published.

John Eckert, director of the Office of Internal Auditing, conducted the audit in conjunction with the athletic department. The period reviewed was July 1, 1993 to June 30, 1994.

The following items were reported in the audit.

- Billings were not sent for eight of 10 football scoreboard advertisements during the past two seasons, representing potential income to the university of $40,000.

- A billing for 1993 football and 1993-94 basketball radio broadcast network advertising totaling $84,800 was sent on June 28, 1994

by management after auditors identified that no income had been received from the advertiser. It was determined that the production company responsible for sending the billing had not done so.

- Independent reconciliations were not performed to ensure all funds collected were deposited into a university account.

- No written agreements existed for the baseball scoreboard advertisements and various other sports' sponsorships. Signed agreements could not be located for certain radio broadcast rights and network advertisements.

- The relationship between OU and Southwest Sports Production Inc. and related university support provided for the football, basketball and baseball coaches, with regard to their coaches' shows, are not fully documented.

The audit determined a performance improvement plan to be implemented by a project team including internal auditing and athletic department representatives.

Former Texas A&M Vice President Robert Smith was sentenced Friday to a $2,750 fine and a year's probation.

He was re-indicted in October on a misdemeanor charge of soliciting gifts as a public servant.

Smith was convicted of asking Barnes and Noble Bookstores Inc. to pay for his wife's airfare, their transportation, meals and entertainment during a 1993 trip to the company's New York headquarters.

During that trip Smith signed a contract extending Barnes and Noble's operation contract for the campus bookstore.

Smith said shortly after the trip, he reimbursed the company $2,440 for his wife's travel expenses to New York.

Smith's wife Pam testified she and her husband did not solicit gifts from Barnes and Noble.

Smith's attorney said an appeal of the sentence is planned.

Minority media issues discussed

BY TERRI LOWRANCE
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Minorities in the media will be the focus of a panel discussion sponsored by Tech's Office of News and Publications and Multicultural Services Center at 7 p.m. today in the human sciences building, room 169.

"In Living Color: Careers for Minorities in the Media" will discuss role models for minority mass communications students, and professionals will share experiences from the professional arena, said Patrick Day, coordinator of the Multicultural Services Center and moderator of the panel discussion.

General Berry, publisher of Our Texas magazine, will be the keynote speaker. The panel discussion will include information about the media as a career opportunity and what it means to be in the media field, Day said.

"We will also discuss the cultural and professional challenges faced in the media field," he said.

Panel

What: Panel discussion on careers for minorities in the media

Time: 7 p.m.

Day: today

Where: Human Sciences Building, room 169

• The discussion is free and open to the public representing the print and broadcast media will participate in the panel.

KAMC-TV reporters Gina Salazar and Eric Wesley, KCBD-TV reporter Deanna Dewberry, El Editor newspaper editor Bidal Aguerro and Myrna Whitehead of Tech News and Publications will participate in the discussion.

"I believe it is important to show other minorities that, yes, we are in this profession and, yes, we are visible," Whitehead said.

The panel will describe the professions in the media and show students they have role models and mentors, she said.

"The media is the one area where there aren't many people of color who are visible," she said.

The panel also will discuss the media coverage of Henry Cisneros, the O.J. Simpson hearings, California's Proposition 187, and similar types of high-profile news issues, Day said.

Difficulties in remaining professional and objective while covering race-sensitive issues also will be addressed by the panel.

Whitehead said professionalism should be considered before race issues.

"I will stress professionalism," she said. "You have to be a professional and do your job."

Day said the newsworthy events and issues also will be discussed.

"We will try to increase awareness of the role the media plays in society and the magnitude of that role," he said.

Suit resolved against county for false autopsy report

BY LINDA CARRIGER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

County commissioners offered a settlement in the Jerry Neil Beard v. Ralph Rodney Erdmann Lubbock County and Dawson County case during the Lubbock County Commissioners Court meeting Monday, and the plaintiff accepted it.

Beard will receive $15,000 and attorney's fees.

Beard sued Lubbock County because he alleged it should be responsible for damages caused by a false autopsy reported by Erdmann, the county's medical examiner, which caused him to be imprisoned in Dawson County.

The suit against Lubbock County states commissioners should have been aware of the negligent manner in which Erdmann conducted the autopsy.

During a trial Bingham said county attorneys would explain to jurors that county officials did not know Erdmann was performing false autopsies and that they were not at fault for Beard's imprisonment.

If the case had gone to trial, the jury could have awarded Beard as much as $100,000 plus attorney's fees, she said. Attorney's fees for Beard have yet to be settled with the county, Beard's attorney Floyd Holder said.

Holder said the county estimates attorney costs at $15,000 while Holder said his services have cost Beard $50,000 to $60,000.

Judge Don McBeath was unavailable Monday to comment on estimated attorney's fees in the case.

Charlotte Bingham, an attorney with Crenshaw, Dupree and Milam, who is representing the county in the suit, said the county should bow out of the case to save taxpayers' money.

"Your dealing with an attorney that is extremely prepared, and you'll acquire a lot of expenses to reach the level of preparedness that he has," Bingham said.

McBeath said the commissioners agreed taxpayers should not have to pay exorbitant court awards for Erdmann's errors.

They are not admitting guilt in the case, he said.

"It's very frustrating to be held accountable for things you really didn't have any control over," McBeath said.

Holder said he will continue with a suit against Dawson County.

Commissioners support pickup bed regulation

BY LINDA CARRIGER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Lubbock County Commissioners joined groups supporting attempts by a Lubbock woman to fortify Texas laws regulating children in pickup beds.

The Lubbock City Council, Texas PTA and the Texas Municipal League also have endorsed the proposal Karen Slay presented to commissioners Monday.

Slay's plan is to ban truck drivers from allowing children to ride in the open bed of a pickup.

Slay is seeking endorsements to pressure local legislatures to sponsor the plan in the 1995 Texas Legislature, she said.

"I feel like it's my duty as a mother and citizen to put pressure on the Legislature," she said.

The only opposition she has heard of the bill has come from migratory workers, Slay said.

Commissioner Gilbert Flores said migrant workers often transport their families from job to job in pickup trucks. Flores said Slay's plan may prohibit their earning power, but supported the measure nonetheless.

"I know there are a lot of people who use their pickups from (work) site to site," Flores said. "I believe the safety of the kids comes first. They'll have to find a way to transport their kids."

Slay said California, a state with more migratory workers than Texas, has recently passed legislation prohibiting children from riding in pickup beds.

"I think there's a way, or California would not have passed this," she said.

Currently, Texas law states a child under the age of 12 can ride in an open pickup bed as long as the truck travels less than 35 miles per hour. Slay said she began her fight to keep children out of pickup beds because of the July 4 accident in Scurry County when eight children riding in a pickup bed were killed when the truck collided with an 18-wheeler.

Senator says domestic violence laws unenforced, ineffective

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—A state senator says laws to protect battered women will be ineffective until judges and law enforcers start acting more responsibly in dealing with abusive spouses and boyfriends.

"We have good laws on the books, but they're not always enforced," said Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo and a member of a Senate committee examining domestic violence.

"We need continuing education for judges, police and prosecutors so they can develop experience and knowledge about how to deal with these cases."

Women are urged to seek a protective order in abusive relationships, but that doesn't always protect them, the senator said.

Protective orders have come under attack for various reasons:

- they are difficult to enforce;
- a hearing on a violation may take six months to come to court;
- judges often don't assess the maximum punishment;
- the orders aren't available to everyone who needs them.

Debby Tucker, executive director of the Texas Council on Family Violence, noted that Michelle Gomez obtained a protective order to defend herself from her ex-husband.

The day before Gomez was killed, Tucker said, the judge presiding over a hearing on a violation of a protective order admonished the woman's former husband "to be more sensitive to her needs."

"The judge saw the problem as a marriage-communication problem," Tucker said in Sunday's editions of the San Antonio Express-News.

Gomez had obtained a protective order to keep Don DeLaCruz at a safe distance from her Austin home.

She also had filed a chillingly prophetic affidavit two days after Christmas.

"He has always been verbally abusive to me, (choking) me and beating me," Gomez said in the court document.

"I'm afraid he is going (to) kill me or our children."

The couple were divorced March and Gomez died at DeLaCruz's hands less than a month later.

Tucker said she believes her organization will press for a law mandating that Texas judges receive substantial training.

This would help them learn to deal with domestic violence.

Statistics show that 161 women in Texas were killed last year by their intimate male partners — husbands, boyfriends, lovers.

Musicians react to proposition

HARLINGEN (AP)—Like many unhappy episodes in Mexican history, California's newly approved Proposition 187 already has a song written about it.

"What fault does the illegal have that times are tough in California if he's saving the people a lot of money?" the Houston-based Los Soldados de Levita sing in Spanish over an accordion weaving in and out of a bouncy norteña beat.

"What fault does the illegal have for unemployment if he's doing the work that a citizen looks down on?" Proposition 187 was approved one week ago in California.

The proposition cuts off several state services such as education and non-emergency medical care to illegal immigrants and requires teachers and doctors to turn them in to authorities.

Courts will review claims that Proposition 187 is unconstitutional before it can be implemented.

"What inspired me was all the news from California," said Noe Trevino, a Houston welder who wrote the song as the California debate was heating up this year.

"It just seems to me that the government is blaming all the deficits on the immigrant, and that doesn't seem fair," Trevino said in a telephone interview.

Released only two weeks ago, his song "El Illegal" is patterned after a "corrido" — a festive, storytelling musical style made popular during the Mexican Revolution.

It tells one Mexican citizen's story of crossing the Rio Grande to look for work.

"I am not a burden to others, as is said in California by a 'gran senor,'" the lyrics go, referring to Republican California Gov. Pete Wilson, whose successful re-election campaign embraced Proposition 187.

"Instead, it's this country that comes out winning, because the illegal comes cheaply to bring products in from the fields ..."

Trevino, who was born in Camargo, a border town in the northeastern state of Tamaulipas, said he has immigrated legally.

He has lived half of his 43 years in the United States.

"I had lots of friends who were illegal. I saw how they suffered when they didn't have a job. Nobody gave them food," he said.

Program assists employee personal problems

BY JONATHAN HARRIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech employees dealing with personal problems can receive help through the Tech Employee Assistance Program.

The EAP enhances a healthy work attitude by providing employees and their families an opportunity to manage life's problems, Krista Winn, chairwoman of Tech EAP, said.

Programs are designed as a structured approach to dealing with troubled employees whose job performance is draining administrative energy and costs and reducing productivity below acceptable production standards, Winn said.

"We believe that troubled employees may be retained, their behavior can be changed and early intervention and prevention can reduce the financial and human waste," she said.

U.S. Department of Labor studies stated troubled employees cost American business between $15 and $18 billion annually.

The EAP is aimed at a full range of behavioral problems, such as alcohol/drug abuse, anxiety, depression, marital/family problems and relationship problems, Winn said.

"Troubled employees whose physical and psychological problems can be identified at an early stage can be more successfully treated than unemployed individuals," she said.

Program participation is free, voluntary and confidential for all Tech employees and their immediate family, she said.

The program is kept confidential through federal guidelines, information released by the EAP stated.

mation unless an employee gives written consent by signing a release of information form, information released by the EAP stated.

The EAP helps employees and their family members recognize problems and gain the confidence they need, without the worry of losing confidentiality, Winn said. EAP counseling will not affect employees' insurance plans in any way, she said.

Ordinance designates locations of businesses

BY LINDA CARRIGER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

An indefinite article has temporarily blocked the Lubbock County Commissioners court from adopting an ordinance designating inappropriate locations for new sexually orientated businesses.

Commissioners sent the ordinance back to lawyers Monday to reword the singular "a dwelling" stated in the law.

According to the current ordinance, even one house located less than 1,500 feet from a proposed site for a sexually orientated facility will disqualify the site for use by the business.

The law does not apply to established adult entertainment businesses in the county, as long as they retain their current ownership.

Commissioners and a county resident argued that one neighboring house should not impede a business venture.

Future burlesque club owner Bobby Cannon, who is trying to establish a club at 98th Street and Martin Luther King Boulevard less than 900 feet from a house, said under the current ordinance, he is prohibited from building at the location, even though he has permission from the adjacent household head to set up shop.

Cannon is building a fence around his property to isolate the business from the neighboring family.

"I'm all for sectioning this type of business from families, but let's come up with some definition of a neighborhood (for this ordinance)," Cannon said.

Commissioner Alton Brazell said the ordinance should allow for sexually orientated businesses who receive permission from a resident to operate closer than 1,500 feet from a home.

County property owner Norma Nash argued that having a strip bar even 1,500 feet from private dwellings push the property value down.

"Fifteen hundred feet to me is too close," she said.

"I'd like to see that distance further."

Commissioners decided not to change the distance allotted in the ordinance.

The law also states new sexually orientated businesses may not be located within 1,500 feet of a child care facility, a church, a hospital, a public building, a public park, a school or another sexually orientated commercial enterprise.

The singular version of these facilities will be kept in the ordinance, Judge Don McBeath said.

McBeath said he ordinarily is opposed to regulating business, but the strict rules set by the City Council in 1992 concerning adult entertainment facilities have pushed sexually orientated businesses into county territory.

Sexually orientated businesses are businesses which provide sexual stimulation or gratification to customers, the county ordinance states.

Under the county ordinance, adult entertainment facilities must comply with the distance requirement and display a county permit to operate.

The permit will expire every 24 months and will cost $100 to renew, the ordinance states.

Berridge

Former Texas Tech student recovers from injuries, plans to return to finish college career

wears an eye patch to prevent headaches.

"My eye's there—I just have no vision out of it," Berridge said.

His right-eye vision will most likely not return, he said, but his hearing might. He also does not have much feeling on the right side of his face due to nerve damage.

Berridge, who was in the hospital for about two and one-half weeks, credits his co-worker, Jay Light, for saving his life.

During the chase Berridge said he yelled at Light to call the police.

"And then he heard the gunshot, and he told (the emergency operator) right away to send an ambulance," Berridge said. "He didn't see what had happened, but for some strange reason, he felt someone had been shot."

"If he would have just said he heard gunshots, they would have just sent a police officer to see what was wrong. Then the police officer would have had to call an ambulance, and I would have been gone."

According to information released by the Lubbock County District Attorney's office, the suspect, Young, who was arrested the night of the shooting, was certified as an adult Nov. 3.

Young has been charged with attempted capital murder, but has not been indicted yet. The next grand jury meets the week of Dec. 5.

Young is in the Lubbock County Jail where he is being held on $100,000 bond. Berridge said he feels satisfied with the way the case is proceeding.

"I feel a little more satisfied that it's heading the right way," Berridge said. "Every action he took was an adult action."

For now Berridge is concentrating on recuperating. He spends most of his time working at the bike shop, which he said is good therapy for getting up and getting out of the house.

"I've been instructed by my doctors not to do much physical activity, to stay very calm and don't get stressed for about a good year," he said.

That means he has had to sacrifice cycling as one of his favorite activities.

"I'm not out and about anymore on my bike," he said. "I've always been an active person, and the doctors say one of the reasons why I survived was because I was in good shape."

He said he was overwhelmed at the support he received from friends, faculty and even strangers at Tech.

El Paso police continue investigation of murder

EL PASO (AP)—Police believe it will be several weeks before they complete their investigation into the death of a man who was shot in the back while fleeing from U.S. Customs officers. Police spokesman Sgt. Bill Pfeil said Monday that Customs officials are cooperating.

Campus honorary societies award faculty

Texas Tech's chapter of Mortar Board and Omicron Delta Kappa honored five outstanding faculty members Saturday for their campus and community accomplishments.

Randall Peters, associate professor of physics, Leslie Thompson, assistant professor of animal science and food technology, Idris Traylor, executive director of the Office of International Affairs, Larry Blanton, assistant professor of biological sciences, and Tech band director Keith Bearden were honored during Saturday's football game against the University of Southwestern Louisiana.

Omicron Delta Kappa is an honorary service and academic society.

Mortar Board is a senior academic and leadership honorary society.

Student author writes of people, life

BY TARA McQUEEN
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Joseph Kyle, a senior history major from Carthage, published his personal writings this spring for all to see.

Kyle said his book is snapshots of people in daily life.

"Good or bad — my stories are about people I know," Kyle said.

Kyle, a transfer student from Stephen F. Austin State University, said he has always wanted to go to Texas Tech.

He began his college career as an English major but quickly changed his major to history, calling it his true love.

"I came to the decision because I have written since I was 10 years old," Kyle said. "I thought I'd be an English major, but I thought if I continued it would become boring. I have to be able to be free in my own (writing) experience."

He said his writing is usually born about 2 a.m., when he wants to go to bed.

"I'll open my notebook and write one sentence, and another sentence, and another sentence, and before I know it there is a story," he said. "I have some poetry and short stories in this collection."

Kyle named his collection, "From Crime to Cranks: A Collection of Short Works."

"The title stems from an ex-girlfriend," Kyle said. "She was totally enthused about my writing when we were together. After we broke up she accused me of being a charlatan."

He said the phrase "From Crime to Cranks" is a line from a song, which made him think of her.

"I wanted a title that made my writing seem like it was not legitimate for her sake," Kyle said. "But my writing is legitimate, and I am a bit of a prankster anyway."

He said he is a pessimist about his writing, but other people tell him his writing is good.

Kyle said the most interesting thing about himself is his interest in communication between two people.

"I am really into conversation and dialogue," Kyle said.

"Dialogue interests me most. It is dying with the advent of computers and the Internet.

"Conversation is very personal," Kyle said. "My opinion is that society is becoming very impersonal."

Kyle, the son of a college professor and the brother of a high school teacher, said he hopes to follow in the family footsteps and become a history professor.

"Right after high school, my sister said, 'Don't try to become a teacher, continue to be a writer,'" Kyle said. "She said, 'You won't be happy with anything else.' She is very supportive."

Kyle said he knows of many closet writers who are too afraid to admit they write.

"I want people to read my works and say, 'If he can do it, I can do it,'"

Joseph Kyle

JEREMY CHESNUTT, THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

he said. "Writing is a dying art, you don't hear about writers anymore." Kyle's collection is available for $10.95. Students interested in purchasing the book can contact Kyle at 742-5804.

Pageant highlights Texas Tech beauties

BY CANDIDA JOHNSON
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech University has some of the most beautiful girls in the world — at least according to Michael Simon, coordinator of the Miss Black and Gold Pageant.

The Miss Black and Gold pageant will be at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Godbold Cultural Center at 19th Street and University Avenue.

"We have eight girls who have been working for over a month to get ready," Simon said. "The pageant will have five phases of competition."

"The girls will compete in casual wear, swim wear, talent, evening gown and on-stage interviews."

Simon said the winner will go on to the state convention which will be at Prairie View University in the spring.

"We sponsor our winner in the state pageant," Simon said. "We provide transportation lodging, and we pay her entry fees."

The pageant is being sponsored by Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity.

"This is the third year we've had the pageant, and each year our contestant places higher and higher," Simon said. "The first time we sent a contestant was in 1992, and she placed third."

"Last year's runner, Teala Johnson was first queen-up," he said. "This year we feel that with the caliber of contestants, whoever wins here can bring home the state title."

The winner of the state pageant progresses to the regional pageant and then on to the national competition, Simon said.

Johnson, Miss Black and Gold 1993-94, said the competition is steep.

"I have never seen this quality of contestants in one pageant," Johnson said. "Usually there are one or two good contestants in a pageant, but this year all eight girls are exceptional."

Simon said that unlike the past, Alpha Phi Alpha has chosen to use judges from outside Texas Tech.

"We wouldn't be friends voting for friends or greeks voting for greeks," Simon said. "We're using qualified pageant judges to do the judging."

Simon said the judges will be looking for well-rounded individuals.

"The contestants must have a platform and at least a 2.5 grade point average," he said.

Johnson said a platform is something the contestants feel strongly about.

"It can deal with anything the constant wants to promote during her reign, such as combating teen pregnancy, drug abuse or AIDS," he said.

Tickets for the event cost $2 for students and may be purchased in the University Center.

Simon said the proceeds go toward a $300 cash scholarship awarded to the winner and prizes for the runners-up.

Police nab 'most wanted' traffic offender

NEW YORK (AP) — The traffic violation — an illegal U-turn — was routine stuff. But when police pulled over Leroy Linen, they soon discovered he was no ordinary motorist.

It took nearly two hours to print out his list of traffic violations, which had resulted in 633 license suspensions in the last five years.

He was the city's most-wanted driver.

New York's No. 1 scofflaw was charged with aggravated unlicensed operation of a vehicle and driving without a license. The 40-year-old scrap-metal dealer was jailed without bail.

After a series of fatal accidents involving unlicensed drivers, state lawmakers last year made it a felony to drive with 10 or more suspensions.

In one accident last May, Abraham Meyers, 55, a drunken driver with 22 license suspensions, killed a mother and her two daughters as the family tried to cross the street after a party in Queens, authorities say.

Since then, the Police Department has kept a list of drivers with 100 or more suspensions, about 340 names, topped by Linen's. Officers also are under orders to make more computer checks on drivers stopped for traffic offenses. Despite the crackdown, officials estimate that as many as 15 percent of the city's 2.8 million motorists may have suspended licenses.

Linen, like many of the worst scofflaws, amassed his record with a plethora of moving violations. He avoided arrest mainly by avoiding accidents and by giving police false names and addresses, police said.

Lady Raiders tip off season with Toledo

BY BRYAN ADAMS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech Lady Raiders will kick off the first Pre-Season Women's National Invitational Tournament against the Toledo Rockets today at 7 p.m. in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

"We're real excited about the opportunity to play in the NIT this week," head coach Marsha Sharp said at a press conference Monday. "I think to be involved in the first one ever for women's basketball is something special for Texas Tech.

"I know that there are going to be 16 very good basketball teams that are going to be playing. We really feel like there will be great competition all the way across the country the first night out."

Participating in the tournament with Tech and Toledo are Northern Illinois, Arkansas State, Vanderbilt, Florida International, Montana, Oklahoma, Rutgers, Seton Hall, Washington, Northwestern, Maryland, Virginia Tech, Southwest Missouri State and Marquette.

Texas Tech enters the game ranked in the top 10 in every preseason poll, so far.

"As we found in the past," Sharp said, "the things you do early in the season against real quality opponents not only helps your basketball team but also probably makes a big difference in what happens to you in the NCAA tournament at the end of the year, as far as seedings are concerned."

Tech is one of only six teams in the nation to have advanced to the sweet 16 in each of the last three seasons.

The Lady Raiders ranks sixth in total victories during the '90s with 122.

Toledo finished last season by winning the losers bracket at the Women's Invitational Tournament in Amarillo. They ended the year with a 24-8 record.

"Against Toledo two things will be real key for us," Sharp said. "They'll play a two-three zone exclusively if they do the things they did last year.

That, right now, is the most difficult look for us to go against. They have a player on the other end that presents some very big challenges for us. Dana Drew is someone they've touted as a preseason all-American. She is a point guard that shoots the ball very well. Maybe the best pure shooter we'll play all year."

Toledo returns four starters, including Drew, who averaged 20.1 points, 5.5 assists and 3.5 rebounds last year. Drew also was named Academic all-America last year and is a preseason all-America prospect.

Others who start include junior guard Denise Pickenpaugh, sophomore 6-foot forward Mini Olson and 6-foot, 1-inch sophomore forward Angela Drake.

Should the Lady Raiders beat the Rockets, they would face the winner of the Northern Illinois and Arkansas State game Thursday at the coliseum.

Tickets are still available for today's game for $10 at the athletic ticket office.

Tennis team performs well in tourney

BY JARED PARCELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Sophomores Dieter Schwendinger and Tal Roma had a successful weekend for the Texas Tech tennis team at the America West Cup Tournament in Houston.

Schwendinger and senior Eric Guzman competed in the first flight portion of the tournament. Schwendinger opened with a first-round victory over Luke Smith of UNLV, 6-1, 6-2, before dropping a second round match to Paul Robinson of TCU, 6-1, 6-2. Saturday, Schwendinger fell in the consolation bracket early, losing to Bobby Herdina of San Diego, 6-4, 6-0.

Guzman lost to Doug Bloom of Oklahoma State in his first round match, 6-2 and 6-3.

Roma, playing in the second flight of the tournament, won his opening round match, downing Alex Zesati of Texas-Arlington, 6-1, 7-6. He lost his second match to Rico Rodarte of Texas A&M, 6-1, 6-1.

With his first-round victory, Roma moved on to the consolation portion of the tournament, where he downed Owen McDonald of Southwest Texas, 6-4, 6-4, in the third round. He lost in the next round, 7-5, 7-5, to Nick Lorenzini of Rice.

Head coach Tim Siegel said he was not disappointed in the results from the team's last tournament of the fall.

"We had three players competing in a strong field," Siegel said. "It was the last tournament, and I was not too worried. We want to build on last year's regional appearance. Things are looking up for us."

Women's golf team finishes 12th in NCAA preview tourney

BY JARED PARCELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech women's golf team finished in 12th place at the National Collegiate Women's Golf Invitational in Wilmington, N.C., this past weekend.

Head coach Jeff Mitchell said he was pleased with the finish by Tech because the Red Raiders were competing against a difficult field.

"We beat Oklahoma State who is in the top 10," Mitchell said of his team's play. "We finished ahead of Lamar, who defeated us in the only other tournament we faced them in. We also beat TCU, which solidifies our regional spot heading into the spring."

Tech finished the three-day tournament with a total of 967, trailing Southwest Conference foe Texas A&M by 14 strokes.

Arizona State University, the defending NCAA national champions, ran away with the team title, finishing with a total of 900, 35 strokes better than second-place North Carolina.

Individually, Mitchell said Stacey Kolb and Tamara Parker both played well at the tournament. Both golfers finished the tournament in the top 30.

Kolb led the Red Raider attack, finishing the tournament with a total of 235 and tying with three other golfers.

Parker finished in a five-way tie in the 26th spot, with a three-day total of 237.

The Sun Devils' Wendy Ward took home the individual trophy, ending with a total of 216. Her teammate, Heather Bowie, took second place, four strokes behind Ward.

With the conclusion of the tournament, the women finished the 1994 fall season and will begin preparing for the spring during the semester break.
