Russian conflict heightens in attack

GROZNY, Russia (AP) — Fighter jets attacked the airport of the Chechen capital Tuesday, hours after Russian President Boris Yeltsin threatened to crack down on the breakaway region if the fighting doesn't stop.

It was the first time jets have been used in the escalating conflict in the Caucasus Mountains region, which declared independence from Moscow in 1991.

Russia has openly backed the opposition to elected Chechen President Dzhokhar Dudayev, but denies providing any military help. It says mercenaries are involved on both sides. Dudayev said the jet attack was the latest sign that Russia is arming and leading the opposition forces.

Chechen officials claim to have shot down a Russian-made MiG fighter, one of four MiGs and four Su-27s that they said attacked the airport six miles north of the Chechen capital, Grozny.

New tracer detects breast cancer quicker

CHICAGO (AP) — A radioactive tracer injected into women who may have breast cancer makes malignancies "light up" on a detector and could cut in half the number of biopsies needed in this country, a researcher said Tuesday.

If the technique is proved effective, it could save millions of dollars and spare hundreds of thousands of women the pain and scarring that can accompany biopsies, said the researcher, Dr. Iraj Khalkhali.

The technique was 90 percent accurate in identifying breast cancer in women who were afflicted, Khalkhali and colleagues reported at a meeting of the Radiological Society of North America.

"Mammography is very sensitive at detecting most abnormalities in the breast, but only one out of every four or five suspicious lesions seen on a mammogram turns out to be a cancer," said Khalkhali, an associate professor of radiology at the University of California at Los Angeles.

STATE

Officials say Medicaid needs added funds

AUSTIN (AP) — The state's Medicaid program needs an additional $2.2 billion over the next two-year budget period to keep up with a growing number of uninsured and needy Texans, health officials told legislators Tuesday.

The state's Medicaid director says there is no room to make cuts in the program without affecting health services to the elderly, disabled or poor.

"The basic problem in Texas is that we have a disproportionate number of low-income, uninsured people who qualify for Medicaid aid," said state Medicaid Director DeAnn Friedholm.

"This demand is coupled with medical inflation and higher reimbursement for institutions, such as nursing homes and hospitals."

Medicaid provides health care to poor and low-income persons.

State leaders say they will try to meet the $2.2 billion request in the budget that will pay for state programs in 1996 and 1997.

Disputed trade agreement passes

BY LINDA CARRIGER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, voted against the bi-partisan global trade agreement which passed through the House Tuesday.

One hundred forty-six representatives voted against the treaty, and 286 representatives voted for the measure.

The General Agreement on Trades and Tariffs is a treaty lowering import tariffs between the United States and countries which trade with the United States in the European Common Market and the Asian Market.

Combest said he voted against the agreement because of the extra amenities in the treaty.

"GATT should be a vote about fair and free trade, not legislation burdened with excess baggage that has nothing to do with our best trading interests as a nation," he said. "The American people need time to hear extensive debate of GATT, not be rushed into a panic."

The Senate will vote on the treaty, which has the backing of President Clinton and Senate minority leader Robert Dole, Thursday.

Lewis Hill, chairman of the Texas Tech Economics Department, said congressmen have two reasons for opposing the treaty.

A group of right-wing Republicans that believes the treaty will give the power to regulate trade to the agreement's administrative body, the World Trade Organization, also opposes the agreement.

"They think this makes the World Trade Organization a super world government which is nonsense," he said. "All (the WTO) is doing is arbitrating disputes."

The WTO will mediate trade disagreements between countries, but it will not decide trade policies for countries participating in the treaty, he said. "WTO could not countermand laws of the United States," Hill said. "There's a clause in the treaty that United States laws are supreme."

Congressmen from states where textiles are a major industry also oppose the treaty which may stunt profits for textile producers and merchants, Hill said.

Textiles, which include yarn, fabrics and finished products, such as clothing and carpet, are often made of cotton, and cotton is a staple in West Texas, Hill said.

Don Ethridge, a Tech agricultural economics professor, said cheap textiles from other countries will compete heavily with domestic textiles when trade barriers are broken.

"A number of other countries have policies in place designed to supplement their domestic textile industry," he said. "If we open our textile industry too widely to that, it could hurt the textile industry."

Though, Ethridge said, it is difficult to gauge the actual impact GATT will have on the textile industry.

"The picture gets a little fuzzy there in terms of being able to track everything," he said. "Some exports come back into the country in the form of textiles, and some textiles leave the country and come back in the form of clothing."

Volleyball coach resigns citing player problems

BY JESSE MALDONADO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech head volleyball coach Mike Jones announced his resignation Tuesday because of problems within the program, he said.

"I just think things have been very difficult here in the last two years," Jones said. "I think at this point the players probably really don't want to play for me, and it's really hard when you're coaching to succeed with the players who aren't willing to follow."

"The coach has to be the leader, and I think we reached the point where we tried everything to get everybody on track, and it hasn't worked."

Under Jones' leadership the Red Raiders compiled an overall 128-62 record during the last six seasons.

Jones' success has been recognized with three NCAA berths and one Women's Intercollegiate Volleyball Championship appearance.

In his first season at Tech, Jones took Tech to its first national post-season tournament.

Jones said his last two seasons as head coach, with records of 14-16 in 1993 and 15-15 in 1994, were somewhat difficult.

"I think in the best interest for the program here, since we built a top 20 team who went to the NCAA tournament, I think for them to continue to succeed, it's time for them to get a new coach," Jones said.

Senior Tech setter Ginger Carter, who was coached by Jones in two of his NCAA berths, said she knew something like this was going to happen.

"I just think the whole program needs a change, it needs a face lift of some sort," Carter said. "I know if I was in the same situation Mike was in, I would have done the same thing. It would have been hard to go on and have the same kind of season next year for him."

Junior middle blocker Jill Slapper said she felt somewhat relieved with Jones' resignation.

"I knew it was probably going to happen, and I'm relieved," Slapper said. "I think it will be good for next year's team."

Problems arose with players and coaches during the last two seasons, and a new coach will help the team, she said.

"Since my freshman year, problems surfaced, and then my sophomore year, we had a lot of team meetings, with nothing getting resolved," Slapper said. "Problems were mainly centered around the coach. Hopefully the change will be good."

Jones said he had thought about resigning from his position since the beginning of the season.

"I knew coming into this year (this was) kind of a make or break year, as far as what I wanted to do for myself," he said. "Being a coach you kind of prepare for everything. I think that's just what had to happen, which was the best for everybody."

He said his overall career and collegiate experience at Tech has been a memorable one for him. He also said he will miss Lubbock and Tech.

"I think this is a great university. I wish I could stay here and continue what we are doing here right now," Jones said. "You can't find a better place to spend four or five years of your life. It is a big part of my life, and I will miss this university. It's been a good experience, and I think whoever comes in here as the new head coach will be in a great situation."

Jones said he still wants to coach, and his next step is job hunting at other universities.

"I want to continue coaching college," he said. "I don't know what I would do if I wasn't a coach. I have to go out and see what jobs are open, apply, see who is interested in me and go from there. Hopefully, in a short amount of time, I'll be somewhere else."

Lawyer says serial killer refused protected living arrangements

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Jeffrey Dahmer didn't want restrictive living arrangements that would have given him more protection in the prison where his head was bashed in, his lawyer said Tuesday. "He wanted to be in with the general population. He didn't want to sit in a hole all day long," said Stephen J. Eisenberg.

Authorities still did not know a motive in Monday's killing. Dahmer was found in a pool of blood in a restroom next to a gymnasium at the maximum security Columbia Correctional Institution in Portage. His head was bashed in.

An inmate who had been working with Dahmer also was beaten and remained in critical condition Tuesday with head injuries.

A third prisoner who had been working with the two men on a cleaning detail was identified as the suspect in the slaying.

Dahmer, who confessed to killing 17 men and boys over 13 years and sometimes having sex with and cannibalizing the corpses, died Monday of multiple skull fractures

Survey says teacher shortage on increase

BY TERRI LOWRANCE
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A shortage of mathematics and special education teachers in the public secondary school system is a growing trend, according to information released by the National Center for Education Statistics.

A 1987-88 center survey of 15,244 American secondary schools stated that in 1986 19.2 percent of teachers taught math.

The number of math teachers dropped to 14.5 percent by 1991, information released by the center stated.

The number of special education teachers increased by almost 2 percent during the five-year period observed in the survey, but the number of special education public school students increased by a greater margin, the center reported.

Physical education, health, English and language arts had the highest percentages of educators, according to statistics released by the center.

Ralph Madrid, assistant superintendent of personnel for the Lubbock Independent School District, said he does not see an increase in the supply of teachers in these areas.

"There has always been a low supply, and it is getting lower," Madrid said. "Individuals are not going into the teaching field."

Pam Summers, LISD math and science coordinator for secondary schools, said new courses have contributed to increasing demand for teachers.

"It makes me sad that we can't find enough teachers," Summers said.

"We can't find them in this area. We have openings, but not enough applicants," she said.

Money may play a factor in the shortage of math teachers, she said.

Commemorative video to highlight fans' enthusiasm

BY JONATHAN HARRIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech students will get the chance to show alumni some Red Raider spirit during the taping of a commemorative video today that will be shown during Cotton Bowl weekend.

Tech's Office of News and Publications will visit different locations around campus and will tape faculty, students and staff showing their Red Raider pride.

The video crew will begin taping in the University Center Courtyard at 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., Memorial Circle at 11

"WE MAINLY WANT TO GET PEOPLE ON CAMPUS TO TELL WHAT IT MEANS TO THEM FOR TECH TO GO TO THE COTTON BOWL."

a.m. to noon, the Will Rogers statue from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. and the business administration building at 3 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Michael Sommermeyer, assistant director of Tech News and Publications, said the camera crew will also visit other areas on campus and ask people to sing the "Matador Song" and give a "guns up" salute.

Students will be able to locate the video crew today by the "Are you Ready for the Cotton Bowl?" sign surrounded by red and black balloons, he said.

Sommermeyer said he encourages members of spirit groups to attend one of the tapings and give their support.

"We mainly want to get people on campus to tell what it means to them for Tech to go to the Cotton Bowl," he said.

The videotape will be shown before the Cotton Bowl at a reception for Tech alumni and friends, he said.

"There are many receptions scheduled before the Cotton Bowl, and we hope to show the video at all the receptions," he said.

Sommermeyer said he hopes to have a five-minute video of Tech fans, but would not mind if the video was longer.

"If the turnout for this is good, I would like it to be longer," he said.

If editing is not a lengthy process, the video could be shown during Dead Day, he said.

Sommermeyer said he generated the idea from a similar video made at the University of Nebraska.

"In the Nebraska video, they had the university chancellor leading students in singing the school song," Sommermeyer said.

"I thought that was a good idea, and I wanted to do something like that for Tech," he said.

Republicans: Ready, set, go!

ERIC SANCHEZ

A reporter in Washington, D.C., asked a woman bartender, "Do you think business will pick up since the mid-term elections?" The woman smiled and responded, "I hope so. Besides, Republicans tip more."

In case you haven't figured it out yet, the Republican Party now has control of the U.S. House of Representatives, something unheard of for the past 40 years. Every Republican incumbent in House, Senate or gubernatorial races won their re-election bid. How can some people (Democrats) say that this election was the reflection of voter's wishes that both parties work together? Admit it, people don't like the ideas and reforms of President Clinton. The Democratic Party lost eight Senate seats and 52 House seats — way above the normal average for presidents in off-term elections. Immediately after the election, political analysts, newspaper columnists and journalists gave their opinion of the elections and the impact the Republican Congress will have in the next two years. Almost every newscaster, journalist and reporter has given a negative viewpoint of Republican leaders, such as soon-to-be Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich. Why is this? Is it because some people are afraid of Gingrich's conservative reforms in government? Or is it because Gingrich possesses strong convictions in his ideas and philosophy? I believe it to be both, more the latter. After witnessing these viewpoints of the media for the past three weeks, I thought I would give you my thoughts and opinions of what to expect from the Republican Congress.

Democrats are sore losers. Attacks on the Republican's "Contract with America" seem to intensify each day. Issues addressed in the contract, such as welfare reform, have received criticism from liberals on the left. Since Lyndon B. Johnson's war on poverty, American taxpayers have footed a $3.5 trillion bill for welfare programs and social spending. What results do we have today? Has poverty been eliminated? Are there fewer poor people on the streets of America today than there were 25 years ago? If the United States government had set aside that $3.5 trillion, the amount of money saved could have purchased every Fortune 500 company and every acreage of farmland in the United States and given it directly to the poor.

Tell me something Democrats, what is wrong with a balanced-budget amendment or a line-item veto? These legislative reforms will reduce spending and the annual deficit. New Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee Bill Archer would like to see a cut in the capital gains tax, now 28 percent of net profits, and lower it 7.5 to 19.8 percent. By lowering the tax, people and consumers (not only the rich) will be encouraged to invest and buy more goods and services — thus stimulating the economy and increasing the yield of the capital gains tax by $12.5 billion over five years (U.S. Treasury Report, 1990).

Michael Barone, a columnist for U.S. News & World Report, stated, "...[T]he Republicans promise to get rid of 'current services' budgeting, which assumes costs will rise at current rates, in effect gives federal agencies a cost-of-living adjustment [COLA] and then lets them argue for even more. Billions can be saved by making government live as most taxpayers do, without COLAs" (U.S. News & World Report 11/28).

Keep this in mind Republicans, many of you were elected to make economic reforms and down-size government. Don't overplay your hand with far-right agendas, such as those displayed at the 1992 Republican convention. The "Culture Wars" against liberals can wait. Stick to economic issues and things will begin to change for the better.

ServicePlus needs some reinforcement

To the editor:

While recently speaking with an unnamed employee in an unnamed Tech department, I had the unfortunate opportunity of being reminded of the ever-present Bible Belt false sense of superiority that is so prevalent in this part of the country.

During the course of the said conversation, I unintentionally let slip with one of the lesser offensive four letter words under my breath when I was surprised at the amount of red tape that I had to go through to do what in any other environment would be a simple procedure. Regardless of the circumstances, that above-mentioned expletive was not directed at the person on the other end of the line, but directed, if anywhere, at my own desperate situation.

"I@#!," said I under my breath, at a level audible only to domesticated quadrupeds and God-fearing extremists.

"I don't put up with that kind of language," rang the receiver, and was promptly transferred to someone else.

It amazes me that in this age of blatant sex and violence in every media, that there are still those who are offended to the point of not being able to do their jobs properly. As a student, not to mention a full-time Tech employee, I shouldn't have to mention "ServicePlus." Unfortunately, the more dealings I have with the university, the more aware I become of how this program designed to put the students first has fallen by the wayside. But this topic is in itself an entirely different can of worms. I suppose though, that if I were accosted by such an obvious heathen as myself during the course of the work day, that I too would mount my moralistic high-horse and transfer the louse to someone else of a lesser moralistic nature, regardless of the situation.

Tech's been far from disappointing

To the editor:

Three cheers for you, Kristie Davis! Your column in Monday's UD in reference to Tech's trip to the Cotton Bowl was the epitome of mediocrity. You did an excellent job of tearing apart the Texas Tech football program, but your attempt to pat them on the back at the end of the article was mediocre at best.

You stated that Tech football has done nothing but disappoint for the last five years, and that they could not and did not know how to win Friday against TCU. Then you had the audacity to turn around and state that your column was not intended to criticize the players. You have got to be kidding! Please tell me exactly who those remarks were intended for.

The Texas Tech football team can win. Ask the Baylor and Texas teams how they enjoyed their trips to Lubbock this fall. Those games were far from disappointing.

Tech's loss to TCU was no doubt a letdown, and I agree that a five-way tie for the conference title is a little like kissing your sister, but someone has to go to the Cotton Bowl — why not Tech? For a team that was not picked to do much this season, I think the Red Raiders have played their tails off. They work hard on the field as well as in the classroom. They should be commended for their efforts, not criticized by our University Daily editor who has made it painfully obvious that she doesn't support our football team.

That's great! Can I please have your ticket to the game, Kristie? My friends and I, as well as thousands of other Tech supporters, will be in Dallas Jan. 2. I guarantee you that our trip will be anything but mediocre. Go Tech!

School spirit alive and well at Tech

To the editor:

I am writing this letter to prove to you, Kristie Davis, that there is such a thing as school spirit. Apparently you lost yours somewhere along the way. Please go find it!

In your column, you asked who had seen the TCU game. Well, I was there from beginning to end... just like all the other Tech supporters. Where were you — sitting at home bad-mouthing the team and saying they didn't know how to win? You said you weren't writing your column to criticize the players, but instead you criticize the players' knowledge of the game, the fans for supporting the team, the Southwest Conference and the Cotton Bowl executives for choosing them. Do you realize that most, if not all, of the players read The UD? When they see what you wrote they will be upset that the editor of their own school newspaper doesn't support them. If you knew anything about college football you would know that to be a part of the team is a great feat... not just anyone can play college football, you have to know how to play and how to win!

As for the fans that you say are making too big of a fuss... I think you need to check again. I am just a freshman, and I have attended all the games but three. I even traveled to Texas A&M and TCU. There were numerous other Techsans at both of those games, and I'm afraid they would disagree with you as well. We are PROUD of our RED RAIDERS, and we'll follow them to the Cotton Bowl or anywhere else they might take us! — 100 percent Cotton!

I know that your column is your own opinion and that's just fine. I just wanted to share my opinion as well — you don't slam an athletic team from your own school when they have come this far! No matter what the team's record, we, as a school, should be very proud of them for representing us in such a prestigious bowl game.

Tamara Mancini

Red Raiders should edit school paper

To the editor:

I was once under the impression that the space provided on the second page of The UD was reserved for people with educated, informed opinions. It was obvious, after reading Kristie Davis' column, I was wrong.

Davis, I would like to take issue with several comments you made in your "little" column Monday. You claim that Texas Tech has a mediocre football team. I disagree. Tech faced the 27th hardest schedule in the nation (that's out over 100 division 1-A colleges), and the hardest in the SWC. No one else in our conference faced four ranked teams this season, including the No. 1 ranked Nebraska Cornhuskers. That number could have increased to five, but Baylor was only No. 26 at the time we played them. In our five losses, four were by less than seven points, and verses Nebraska, we were in it until the middle of the third quarter (when the score was 14-0). That does not change the fact that we are 6-5. But, I bet there are two or three teams in the SWC that would trade their better records with us if they could be in the Cotton Bowl.

As to the mediocrity of the conference, once again you are wrong. While that might have held true in the past, this year it does not. Last year, only two teams had the required six wins to go to a bowl game (Texas Tech and Texas A&M, in case you forgot). This year, five teams have six or more wins and four will represent the SWC in bowl games (due [sic] the math: that's +3 against teams with six or more wins and +2 in bowl appearances). Last year the non-conference losses woefully outnumbered the wins. This year, that changed drastically, with the conference going 17-14, and that includes seven losses from SMU and Houston. And, our mediocre conference had three ranked teams with three more receiving votes in the polls, compared to one ranked team last year.

It also upsets me greatly that you would have the audacity to print the editorial you did. Not only does it undermine the spirit we have as students, but it hurts the team as well. And, have you not yet learned that what is printed in our paper does not necessarily stay on campus? If you recall, when students were calling for Coach Dykes to resign, The Dallas Morning News reported it. That's just what we need, ammunition for Texas and Baylor fans out of the mouth of one of our own.

So, if you cannot join the rest of the student body, alumni and the surrounding communities in supporting the team's effort on Jan. 2, then just keep your opinions to yourself. I guess the old saying holds true, with a fan like you, who needs enemies?

Thank God you're graduating soon and we can get a Red Raider for an editor.

Spaying, neutering pets deemed important

Students for Animal Welfare provide information to protect creatures

BY AMY OSMULSKI
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech's Students for Animal Welfare passed out information in the University Center Tuesday concerning the importance of spaying and neutering pets.

"It is important to have your pet spayed or neutered not only to help decrease the pet population, but to keep them healthier as well," said Joy Wiggins, president of Tech's Students for Animal Welfare.

Each year more than 10 million dogs and cats are put to death in the United States because no one wants them, according to a report released by the American Humane Society.

There are not enough homes to accommodate the large number of animals being born each year, and animal shelters can hold only so many, Wiggins said.

"One female dog and her offspring can produce 67,000 puppies in six years," said Anna Wallace, pet adoption coordinator for Lubbock's Animal Shelter.

"One female cat and her offspring can produce 420,000 kittens in six years."

Lubbock's Animal Shelter normally sees 200 animals a week, and less than 50 percent of the animals are reclaimed, Wallace said.

"We are required to keep the animals for at least 72 hours, but we try and hold on to them as long as we can," she said.

"We keep animals with licenses longer than those without."

During September 5,032 animals were detained by the shelter, and 4,417 animals were destroyed, Wallace said.

Six cats and 110 dogs were reclaimed, she said.

Spaying or neutering pets is a simple process which involves removing their reproductive organs while the animal is under anesthesia, Wallace said.

"Removing the ovaries and the uterus from the female and the testicles from the male eliminates the possibility of cancer in those organs, and reduces the possibility of cancer in other organs," she said.

Spaying or neutering pets will help keep them closer to home, because they do not have the drive to find a mate to reproduce, Wallace said.

Students for Animal Welfare also are involved in other activities, including finding alternatives to dissection during Tech science courses and visiting Tech's agricultural farm to check procedures, Wiggins said.

The organization was formerly known as the Animal Rights Coalition and was re-established this semester, she said.

"The former name sounded too militant, and people can relate better when they think of the welfare of animals," she said.

Since the group re-established they are working on deciding their goals, Wiggins said.

Cotton prices may decline, organic crops becoming popular

BY SANDY FULLER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Prices in the organic cotton market will most likely have to decrease if the environmentally friendly product is to become more popular, according to a recent study completed by Texas Tech's department of agricultural economics.

A survey conducted at the International Organic Cotton Expo in Lubbock Sept. 26 revealed the future prospects of the organic cotton market.

Organic cotton is grown without the use of pesticides, herbicides or defoliants.

Sukant Misra, assistant professor in the department of agricultural economics, said the survey, administered to 50 participants with 34 responding, showed that the future of organic cotton looks promising.

"The market is going to continue to grow," Misra said. "But the growth rate has slowed down."

He said the fastest growth occurred in 1991 and 1992.

"Products were introduced into the market at a growth rate of 100 percent per year," he said. "The growth continued in 1993, but now it's slowed down."

The study also revealed what merchants believe will help to increase organic cotton products.

"Prices for organic cotton are very high right now, and consumers realize this," he said.

"Merchants are trying their best to decrease their prices."

He said there is a 40 percent price difference between organic and conventional cotton products.

"Merchants hope the price difference will come down to 30 percent in the next five years," Misra said.

Merchants hope when the prices come down, there will be more demand, he said.

The demand for organic cotton products stems from environmental concerns, according to the survey.

"People believe that anything that is organic is good for the environ-

Cotton

- Organic cotton products provide a 40 percent price premium.

- Consumers buy organic products because they are perceived to be environmentally friendly.

- Most organic cotton products are sold in specialty stores, department stores and through mail-order catalogs.

- Further research targeting both retailers and consumers is necessary to better understand the market potential of organic cotton products.

ment," Misra said. Dave Nix, vice president of the Texas Organic Cotton Growers Association, said he has viewed the results of the survey.

"There seems to be a pretty good demand for organic cotton," Nix said. "It's just the infrastructure of getting the cotton from the field to the (store) shelf that needs working on."

The survey will help the organic cotton groups to see what the trends are in the market, he said.

"It's a pretty optimistic outlook," Nix said.

Texas is the leading producer of organic cotton, according to information released by the Department of Agriculture. The industry has grown from 500 acres in 1991 to 12,000 acres in 1994, according to information released by the Department of Agriculture.

The Tech study will be distributed to the Texas Department of Agriculture, as well as organic cotton producers, merchants and associations.

Providing reasonable, effective solutions for substance abuse is the focus of the outpatient Substance Abuse and Treatment Center in the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center department of psychiatry.

The center began an after-hours counseling program in August and serves five to seven people each week, but has room for growth, said Rudy Arredondo, director of the Southwest Institute Center For Addictive Diseases.

The center provides after-hours counseling for adults living with alcohol and drug abuse, Arredondo said. "When people enter this program, they are normally addicted to two or more chemicals," he said. "Twenty-five to 30 percent of the patients are strictly alcohol abusers."

The center was established for individuals needing assistance without hospitalization, he said.

"Outpatient care is a needed service," Arredondo said. "It is less expensive and requires a limited number of days."

The main benefit of the center is the ability patients have to maintain jobs while seeking help, he said.

"The national health care plan focuses on outpatient treatment," he said.

The center was established to provide group therapy to help patients overcome addiction, Arredondo said. The center sponsors two group meetings Monday through Thursday.

make a lot more money than as educators," she said.

Between the 1979-80 academic year and the 1992-93 academic year, the average U.S. teacher's salary increased by 20.5 percent and by 15.4 percent for Texas teachers, according to the center.

The average annual income for a U.S. teacher in 1993 was $36,059. Texas teachers received $29,935 for their 1993 income.

The lowest supply of educators is in special education, and the need is increasing, Madrid said.

Lubbock schools currently have two openings in special education,

he said.

Texas Tech removed its special education undergraduate program and added it to the master's program. The master's program makes special education a demanding field, Madrid said.

Many of the new Lubbock area teachers are Tech graduates, he said.

"About 45 percent to 60 percent of the new hires are Tech graduates," he said.

Summers said LUSD has received good teachers and student teachers from the Lubbock area.

"You teach because you love the kids, and you want to help the kids," she said.

Student opportunities for service

BY GUY PRIEL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Students interested in making the holidays a little brighter for those less fortunate can choose from a variety of local charities to support this Christmas.

The Lubbock chapter of the American Cancer Society, in conjunction with 'Tis Christmas, Methodist Hospital and South Plains Mall, is sponsoring the fourth annual Tree of Hope, dedicated to the memory of Vincent Rittman, a heart doctor at Methodist Hospital who died of brain cancer earlier this year.

The 12-foot Christmas tree, located in front of Luby's Cafeteria at the main entrance of South Plains Mall, was donated by 'Tis Christmas.

The Christmas tree will be decorated with red and white glass balls to represent donations received by the society.

"This (The Tree of Hope) provides the community an opportunity to give financial support to the American Cancer Society in honor of loved ones, families, friends and colleagues who have been touched by cancer," said Lubbock City Councilman Alex "Ty" Cooke, reading a statement released by Lubbock Mayor David Langston.

Donations will be used to provide equipment and medical services for local cancer patients, said Amy Brown, Tree of Hope chairwoman and program director for Fox KJTV-34.

Donations total $200 since Friday, and promotions began before Thanksgiving for the event.

"The mall is the best place for the tree because of the volume of residents who visit during the holidays," Cooke said.

Donations can be mailed or delivered to the Lubbock chapter of the American Cancer Society at 3411 73rd St., 79423.

Benefiting the Children's Hospital at University Medical Center is the purpose of the Festival of Trees Dec. 2-4 at the Godbold Cultural Center.

'Tis the season NICK DE LA TORRE: THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Lubbock Councilman Ty Cooke reads a proclamation for the Angle Tree of Hope Tuesday morning at the South Plains mall. Tree of Hope chair Amy Brown joins Cooke for the event.

The trees will be decorated and sold at a silent auction Dec. 1.

Lights, ornaments, tree skirts, extension cords and other items displayed are included in the tree prices.

Trees will be delivered to buyers' homes.

Trees will be available for sale at a minimum price if not sold during the auction. Auction admission is free.

Festival of Trees hours are 10 a.m.

to 10 p.m. Dec. 2, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Dec. 3 and 1 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. Dec. 4.

The Community Action Network in the Tech University Center will benefit local shelters and children's homes through the Angel Tree, Toys for Tots and Toys for Boys.

Students interested in supporting charitable activities need to visit the UC Activities Office at 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

News briefs

Commuter lot closes

The C1 portion of the Texas Tech campus commuter parking lot will be closed from 7 a.m. to noon Thursday.

Speakers planned

Jerry Bell, Lubbock branch manager of Johnson Controls, and Lloyd Henderson, regional human resources manager from Dallas, will give a presentation titled "Engineering at Johnson Controls" at 7 p.m. Wednesday in room 110 of the Engineering Center.

Officials will discuss interviewing, resumes and other topics related to preparing for and securing employment after graduation. The presentation is sponsored by Tech's Minority Engineering Program.

Quayle receives treatment for blood clot

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Former Vice President Dan Quayle underwent treatment Tuesday for a dangerous blood clot in his lung just weeks before he was expected to announce whether he will run for president in 1996.

"The doctors are very optimistic about Mr. Quayle's condition right now. He's doing extremely well and he is progressing very nicely," said Pam Perry, a spokeswoman for Indiana University Medical Center.

The 47-year-old Quayle was expected to make a full recovery, the spokeswoman said.

He was being treated with anticoagulants to prevent further clotting while natural enzymes in Quayle's body dissolve the lodged clot, said the physician treating him, Dr. Homer Twigg.

The clot was considered life threatening because it could have interfered with his breathing, Perry said.

Twigg said at a news conference that Quayle is otherwise in excellent health.

Twigg said it isn't known what causes such clots, called pulmonary embolisms.

They often occur in people who are sedentary for long stretches, such as truck drivers, and can be hereditary, but Quayle had no such predisposition, the doctor said.

Quayle has been promoting his book "Standing Firm" and appearing frequently on behalf of Republican candidates over the last year.

"Long term he'll be fine and this shouldn't affect his political future at all," said Ann Hathaway, executive director of his political action committee.

Quayle went to the emergency room for a chest X-ray Sunday because he wasn't feeling well and was diagnosed with walking pneumonia, Hathaway said.

He was sent home with a prescription but returned to the hospital Monday after complaining of shortness of breath, and doctors found that a blood clot had traveled to his lung, Perry said.

Pulmonary embolisms start in the calf of a leg and work their way up the body, through the heart and become lodged in the pulmonary vein of one of the lungs.

An average of 650,000 to 700,000 people have such clots each year, said Dr. Joseph H. Bates, chief of medical services at the Little Rock (Ark.) Veterans Administration Medical Center and president of the American Lung Association.

About 5 percent to 10 percent die suddenly from them, he said.

If Quayle's health is fine otherwise, chances are "he would never have another one," Bates said.

Quayle was deemed in excellent condition after a complete physical in 1989, after he left the Senate to become vice president under President Bush.

Free parking abandoned at airport

DALLAS (AP) — Abuse of the system by non-disabled people has prompted officials at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport to soon discontinue free parking for the disabled.

"There is an alarming number of people out there who are borrowing Aunt Millie's little blue hanging tag and using it," Michael DiGirolamo, the airport's deputy executive director for operations, said of state-issued tags given to qualified people.

"By eliminating free parking, we believe it will protect the truly disabled parkers because it will take away the incentive to cheat."

Airport officials estimate they lost about $900,000 in revenue last fiscal year from fraudulent activities, which were estimated at more than half of the 210,000 handicapped parking transactions at DFW.

Officials plan to eliminate free parking for disabled patrons in February. This week, as part of an ongoing program to bring the airport into compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act, crews began painting an additional 159 handicapped parking spaces. That will bring the total to 300.

Advocates for the disabled say they expect to hear complaints but point out that federal law guarantees equal, not preferential, treatment.

"We've been demanding equal treatment for years, so now we're going to get it," said Linda Johnstone, an ADA specialist with REACH of Dallas' Resource Center on Independent Living. "A lot of people will be up in arms about having to pay, but why should they be treated any differently from thousands of other people who pay to park?"

High school senior files for place in Spring School Board election

SPRING (AP) — Spring High School senior Tony Madison is hoping for a chance to apply his civics lessons — as a local school board member.

The 18-year-old is one of two candidates who have filed for the January election. The other, 45-year-old Bonnie Claire Dadidakis, has a son in Madison's class.

"If my son was doing that, I would be very proud of him," Dadidakis told the Houston Chronicle.

"I think it's very admirable. I also feel that it shows that he has received an excellent education."

Madison doesn't disagree with that. His main concern is making sure everyone who comes to the board with a complaint is heard.

"I would be the student's voice," he said. "I would be the voice of parents who have never gotten heard. I would be the voice of whoever had a complaint that was never really taken seriously."

Madison offers as credentials his involvement in peer mediation, counseling and tutoring.

He also has worked with special education students and elementary students, is a rookie member of the Spring Volunteer Fire Department and works on the school yearbook staff.

Dadidakis, a housewife and mother of three, has served on school board committees and has volunteered time for Spring schools.

Escapee denied extradition

McALLEN (AP) — Mexico will not extradite an alleged drug kingpin who escaped from the Hidalgo County Jail in April 1993.

Raul Valladares del Angel will not be sent to face charges in the United States and instead will face the same charges in Mexico, said Raul Vera Aguilar of the Mexico attorney general's office.

Valladares, accused of being a chief lieutenant for reputed drug lord Juan Garcia Abrego, was facing U.S. charges for cocaine possession and conspiracy when he escaped. A superseding indictment filed in December 1993 charged him with escape from federal custody.

A U.S.-Mexico treaty allows each country to decline extradition of its own citizens to face charges in the other country, Aguilar said.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael F. McCormick said the U.S. government is cooperating with Mexican officials and exchanging documents in the case.

"We will be working hand-in-hand with the Mexico government," McCormick said.

Valladares, of Ciudad Victoria, fled across the Rio Grande after escaping from a minimum security section of the jail, assisted by tear gas and the aid of an armed accomplice. He was arrested by Mexican authorities June 5 in a Monterrey restaurant.

The Garcia Abrego gang, dubbed the Gulf Cartel, is accused of distributing hundreds of tons of Colombian cocaine each year into the United States.

Officials in the U.S. Department of Justice say Mexico has never extradited one of its own citizens to face U.S. criminal charges. However, the Mexican constitution allows its citizens to be tried on foreign charges in Mexican courts.

Austin student charged with assault

AUSTIN (AP) — A 15-year-old student at an Austin high school is facing charges of aggravated assault after accidentally shooting a classmate with a gun he had brought to class to show off, according to police.

Austin Independent School District Police Sgt. Scott Shauger, who declined to identify the suspect, said charges would be filed against the Anderson High School student Tuesday.

"He was playing with the weapon in class. He had the shell of the magazine to the gun in his teeth," Shauger said.

Christmas carol

Tech's luminous tradition continues

BY TARA MCQUEEN
The University Daily

An explosion of red, orange and white will light the sky at the 37th annual Carol of Lights Friday.

The ceremony includes a carillon concert, the Saddle Tramps' Torch Light Processional and a speech by Texas Tech President Robert Lawless and two of the committee chairs.

Continuing a 13-year tradition, William Hartwell will sing "O Holy Night," followed by a performance by the Tech University Choir.

The Carol of Lights tradition was founded 36 years ago by the Women's

Carol of Lights

Residence Council. Students would drink hot chocolate and sing Christmas carols while holding candles in their hands.

Bryan Meadows, a senior communications major from Pleasanton and the indoor chairman for the event, said the women began putting up lights in 1958, when Harold Hinn, a regent, donated 5,000 lights.

"Originally it was just a few buildings," Meadows said. "The women did all the maintenance and tested all the lights."

"Now Tech's grounds maintenance has the sole responsibility of putting up all the lights and testing them."

Meadows started working with the Carol of Lights committee four years ago.

"I was a new student and needed something to do," Meadows said. "I guess after a while, if you work on it long enough, they let you be in charge of it."

Meadows said the first time he saw the Carol of Lights, he was in awe.

"The magnitude of seeing all the students, the torch processional and luminaries, made a lasting impression on me," he said. "A lot of people say Texas Tech doesn't have a lot of traditions, but the Carol of Lights is a big tradition that I am proud to be a part of."

Meadows is in charge of all the indoor activities.

He said he coordinates the formal banquet, which all members of the Tech hierarchy attend. The Housing and Dining Association and the head of each residence hall association is invited to attend the dinner this year.

Eric Crouch, a graduate student in public administration from Monahans, served as the outdoor chairman.

"Everything the public sees, I was in charge of," Crouch said. "The most rewarding thing about my job is the amount of publicity it gives Texas Tech and the amount of people who see the lights."

There are more than 20,000 lights on 13 buildings, Crouch said.

"The Women's Service Organization weaves the wreath that hangs in the middle of the quadrangle," Crouch said. "Chi Rho and Alpha Phi Omega make and set out 2,000 luminaries."

Festival features music, food, fun

BY CANDIDA JOHNSON
The University Daily

Texas Tech won't be the only spot in Lubbock with shining lights Friday.

The 1994 Lights on Broadway Holiday Festival will begin at 5 p.m. Friday prior to the Tech Carol of Lights.

Broadway Festivals co-chairwoman Julie McClure said the Committee of Churches in central Lubbock is the sponsor of the fourth annual event.

She said the festival is an expansion of the Fourth on Broadway Celebration and is designed to bring the community and Tech together to celebrate the holiday season with music, food and entertainment.

Co-chairman Chris Wallace said the celebration committee is expecting a successful celebration.

Wallace said the event will officially begin with the opening of a food court at 5 p.m. The court will feature food from various local restaurants.

McClure said the event is not meant to take away from the Carol of Lights but to add to it.

"We want Texas Tech and the community to come together," McClure said.

"We have people who come out to Lights on Broadway and end up going to the Carol of Lights."

"We also have those who are going to the Carol of Lights and then end up at the Lights On Broadway Holiday Festival."

More than 100 businesses and residences along Broadway will decorate their buildings with lights.

Yvonne Fouse, co-chairwoman of the lighting committee, said the businesses along Broadway will light their buildings with white lights.

"At 5 p.m. we will turn on our lights," she said. "At 7 p.m. the Carol of Lights will begin."

Immediately following the Carol of Lights, the "Light the Way Parade" will begin.

Parade coordinator Sheila Kirby said the parade has more than 30 entries.

"As soon as people heard about the parade, they began calling to enter,"

she said.

Kirby said the parade will begin on 16th Street and University Avenue.

"The parade will finish at the new Citibus Transfer Plaza on Broadway," she said.

Don Caldwell, owner of Don Caldwell Studios, said several local performers will appear at the event.

"We have several styles of entertainment," he said.

"Ballet Folklorico, Kyle Abernathie, Jane Begley, LaTronda Maines and Crystal Collection will perform. We have something for everyone."

McClure said more than 34,000 people attended Lights on Broadway last year.

Judge orders Penthouse not to distribute Jones' photos

NEW YORK (AP) — Penthouse magazine was ordered Tuesday not to distribute or promote partially nude photographs of Paula Jones, who has accused President Clinton of sexually harassing her while he was governor of Arkansas.

U.S. District Judge Peter K. Leisure issued the temporary order in a $30 million lawsuit Jones filed against the magazine earlier Tuesday.

Jones said the photographs were taken by a former boyfriend, Mike Turner, and were intended for his eyes only.

Victor A. Kovner, a lawyer for Turner and Penthouse, said the order was too late to stop distribution of the photos since the January issue hits the newsstands Dec. 6.

"I'm deeply distressed that what appears to be such an unconstitutional order could be granted," Kovner said. "The First Amendment protects this publication and bars prior restraint."

Jones, a former Arkansas state employee, said in a May 6 lawsuit filed against Clinton in Little Rock, Ark., that he exposed himself to her in 1991 and suggested they engage in a sex act after summoning her to a hotel room. She said she quickly left the room.

According to the lawsuit against Penthouse, the photographs were taken in 1987 by Turner, whom Jones dated for a year.

The lawsuit said she was 19 and he was about 32.

Jones said in an affidavit that she posed for photographs in various stages of undress at Turner's request.

"In response to my demands of him, Mr. Turner assured me that he would not show or give the photographs to anyone and he also assured me that they were for his own personal viewing," Jones said.

She said publication of the photographs will cause her "serious and irreparable harm."

The judge scheduled a hearing for Thursday.

Robin Gold, a spokeswoman for Penthouse, had no immediate comment.

Weight loss company accused of discrimination

BOSTON (AP) — Tracy Tinkham says he wanted to move up the corporate ladder at Jenny Craig Inc.

But when he was told he'd "either have to have a sex change or a push-up bra" to get ahead, he decided the price of advancement was too high.

Tinkham is one of the "Boston Eight," eight men who have filed claims of sexual harassment and discrimination against the weight-loss firm.

On Tuesday, the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination said it had found probable cause that three of the men had been discriminated against. Three other cases were still under investigation, while two of the complainants missed filing deadlines.

MCAD board chairman Michael Duffy said investigators found that the three men were passed over for promotions and treated differently than the women.

MCAD case workers will mediate negotiations between the company and the men: Joseph Egan, of Boston; Mark Davis, of Nashua, N.H.; and Lauren Webber, of Lynn. All are former employees of Jenny Craig diet centers in the Boston area.

If an agreement cannot be reached, the commission could hold a hearing and eventually order the Del Mar, Calif., based Jenny Craig to pay damages to the men.

Duffy said Jenny Craig officials have cooperated fully in the investigation. Company officials said in a release the allegations were unwarranted and they were confident of being exonerated.

Tinkham, who quit Jenny Craig in 1993, is among the three men whose claims are still being investigated. Five of the men also have sued the company in Middlesex County Superior Court.

All eight men claim they were denied promotions because of their sex and that they were given poor sales assignments, ordered to perform demeaning tasks and sexually harassed.

The men also complained that male employees were made to wear the same uniforms as the women: white coats and pale blue Jenny Craig neck scarves.

Egan, 28, said his female co-workers commented on his impressiveiceps and nice eyes. He says a female supervisor asked him to fix her car, and that another female supervisor told him she had dreamed about him naked.

Egan, a former manager of a Jenny Craig program in Burlington, said nearly everyone associated with the company is female, from clients to employees. Egan is bitter that he was denied a chance to advance.

"I want to expose the company," he said. "I want to be paid for what I was worth."

School of Music hosts faculty recital

A faculty recital at 8:15 p.m. Sunday will feature trombone player Don Lucas.

The recital, sponsored by the Texas Tech School of Music, will be in the Hemmle Recital Hall.

Lucas' accompanist will be artist John Hendrickson on piano.

Works will include Christian Gouinguere's "Concerto," Sergei Rachmaninoff's "Two Songs," Derek Bourgeois' "Coat de Bone," Sergei Prokofiev's "Sonata No. 3" and "Romeo and Juliet Suite" and Henri Dutilleux's "Choral, Cadence et Fugato."

Woman claims man stabbed her, drank blood after seeing movie

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A woman says her boyfriend stabbed her and drank her blood two days after they saw the movie "Interview With the Vampire."

Daniel Sterling, 25, was jailed on attempted murder charges in the attack on Lisa Stellwagen.

Stellwagen suffered seven stab wounds in the chest and back.

Stellwagen, 23, said the couple saw the vampire movie on Nov. 7.

The next morning she woke up and found Sterling staring at her.

According to the woman, she asked him what was wrong, and he replied, "I'm going to kill you and drink your blood."

The next day, Sterling stabbed her in their bed, police said.

In a jail interview, Sterling said: "I was influenced by the movie."

"I enjoyed the movie. But I cannot sit here and blame the movie."

Stellwagen was released from a hospital.

Hines credits success to mother's support

"My mother saw that my brother and I had a little interest and ability in tap dancing," the 48-year-old actor and dancer said Monday.

Tech cycling club open to all bikers

BY JARED PARCELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

After recent years of disorganization, the Tech Cycling Club is trying to change its image and open its doors to a variety of bikers' interests.

Dustin Dunnam, who has been with the team for almost a year, is vice president of the club and the one in charge of public relations for the team. He said changes are already under way.

"We were really unorganized in the past, but we are now turning it in the direction it needs to be," Dunnam said.

Eric Warnsman, a senior agricultural economics major from Houston and president of the club, said the club is opening its doors to more people.

"We are trying to change our style, which was strictly racing three or four years ago, and allow people the opportunity to join just to ride," Warnsman said. "If they want to come out and race, more power to them."

Dunnam, a sophomore psychology major from Lubbock, and Warnsman have been trying to adjust the program by planning several races in the spring semester.

"We have been planning mountain bike races in the spring, which is becoming a popular trend," Dunnam said. "We didn't have any this semester, because things just didn't get done."

Warnsman said the team competes in the South Central Collegiate Cycling Conference, a division of the NCAA. They compete against teams from Texas A&M, Texas, North Texas and Louisiana Tech.

Dunnam and Warnsman said they both prefer road bikes over mountain bikes.

"I enjoy both, but I just got into mountain biking," Dunnam said. "I prefer road biking because without it I won't be as successful. Road biking requires skill and endurance. Through time, though, one can benefit from both."

Because of an increase in interest in mountain biking, the Tech Cycling Club is changing by inviting everyone

Tech Cycling

What: Next Meeting
When: 8 p.m. today
Where: Student Recreation Center

to its meetings, Dunnam said.

"We have mountain bike as of this semester," Dunnam said. "We knew it would happen sooner or later. We want to promote the common interest we have, which is riding."

Dunnam said the biggest difference between road biking and mountain biking is the skill required.

"For off-road riding, you need to have good bike-handling skills," Dunnam said.

He said there are several reasons to join the Tech Cycling Club.

"It allows you to establish a good deal of fitness, is a great stress reliever and allows you to meet people with a common interest," Dunnam said. "If you are competitive, you can compare yourself with other racers."

Heath's free throws sink Sooners

NORMAN, Okla. (Special) — Two clutch-free throws, with six seconds left, by senior guard Nikki Heath gave the Texas Tech Lady Raiders their fourth win of the season 66-64 Tuesday at the Noble Center in Norman, Okla.

In a game that saw 10 lead changes, the Lady Raiders came back from five points down with 1:22 remaining.

Senior guard Noel Johnson stole the ball and found Heath lingering at the three-point arc.

Heath buried the shot tying the game at 64. At the other end of the court, the Sooners threw a pass out of bounds — their 21st turnover of the game.

The Lady Raiders got the ball back and attempted to run out the clock, but the Sooners fouled Heath. She drained both shots to give Tech the lead and eventually the victory.

Heath finished the game with seven points and a season-high 10 rebounds. Johnson racked up 10 points, including two three-pointers and three steals.

"Noel came up with a big steal, and Nikki gets five points in the last minute, and she hits a huge three," assistant coach Linden Weese said. "Then she walks up to the free throw line and knocks two free throws down, with six seconds left, to give us the win. Really great gut shots by Nikki."

Tech shot 37.3 percent from the field and 65 percent from the stripe to squeak by the Sooners to win its first game on the road this season.

Leading scorers for the Lady Raiders were junior post Michi Atkins, with 24 points and 10 rebounds, and senior forward Connie Robinson, with 19 points and six rebounds.

"I think our perimeter did a good job," Weese said. "Oklahoma, I'm telling you, is a good basketball team. We played zone most of the night because we just couldn't play them man-to-man."

Oklahoma's leading scorer was Mandy Wade with 18 points. The Sooners made five of 18 three-pointers in the game and was out-rebounded 47 to 33.

The Lady Raiders led at half-time 34-31, despite being down 12-4 early in game.

Since 1990 the Lady Raiders have led at the half in 111 of their last 152 games. In those 111 games, Tech has won 109, including 91 of its last 92 and the last 13 in a row.

Tech's next game will be Saturday in the first round of the Lady Raider Classic VII at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum against the Lady Spiders of Richmond.

"They've (Richmond) been in the NIT, I think, three years ago," Weese said. "We don't know that much about them. We just want to make sure that all the folks who came out for the NIT action know how much we appreciate the support. Hopefully we can come out and make this Lady Raider Classic a dandy."

First-day Cotton Bowl student ticket lottery turnout small

About 200 students filled out applications for the Cotton Bowl Ticket Lottery, leaving about 3,600 seats, including 2,000 sideline seats, unclaimed.

"If we don't sell the allotment, in the future students will get screwed," Student Association President Zach Brady said.

Brady said the lottery will not assign seats for the Jan. 2, 1995 game. Instead, it will determine who will be able to purchase tickets Friday.

"If your number comes up, it doesn't matter if you're No. 1 or 2,000," Brady said.

Students have until 6 p.m. today to apply for the lottery.

On a related note, students who prepaid for tickets but have not picked up their coupon books for men's basketball, women's basketball and baseball can pick up their books in the University Center's Mesa Room until 5 p.m. today. Only 72 tickets were claimed Tuesday.

Aikman to dress against Eagles, Garrett or Peete to start

IRVING (AP) — Troy Aikman will be in uniform for Sunday's game against the Philadelphia Eagles, but the Dallas Cowboys hope he won't have to play.

Aikman, who suffered a ligament sprain in his left knee two weeks ago, will be the Cowboys' designated third quarterback, coach Barry Switzer said Tuesday.

Either Jason Garrett, who rallied Dallas from a 14-point deficit to a 42-31 victory over Green Bay Thanksgiving Day, or sore-thumbed Rodney Peete will start against the Eagles.

"We'll know more later in the week, but both Jason and Rodney will be in the mix. Troy will suit up and probably be the third quarterback," Switzer said. "I think Rodney should be healthy, and both he and Jason will be taking a lot of snaps this week. I sure like what Jason did against Green Bay."

Aikman said his knee was feeling better, but added, "I think it would be extremely optimistic to say that I'm going to be ready to play in the game."

"I'll certainly be ready the following week," he said. "I'm able to run around and do things I haven't been able to do, although I'm not totally pain-free."

Switzer said he still was concerned about Peete's thumb, which was injured two weeks ago against Washington. Peete suited up but did not play against Green Bay.

"Rodney is still throwing the ball with four fingers and not using his thumb in the throwing motion," Switzer said.

Garrett, who threw two touchdown passes against the Packers, said he understands if Switzer moves him aside for Peete.

"Rodney has more experience than I do," Garrett said. "I wouldn't have any problems with that. I understand my role on this team."

Switzer said he hopes the Cowboys clinch the NFC East division title against the Eagles so they don't have to worry about it anymore.

"I don't think we'll lose our edge if we do clinch because of our stumble against San Francisco," Switzer said. "We've got to take care of business week to week to stay on track for the homefield advantage."

The Cowboys, who own a 20-6 record after Thanksgiving, beat the Eagles 24-13 in the third game of the season at Texas Stadium.

NHL announces labor talks will resume Thursday

NEW YORK (AP) — After a four-day break, negotiators in the NHL labor dispute plan to resume talks Thursday.

It will be the first bargaining between the league and the NHL Players Association since talks in Boston on Saturday.

Neither the league nor union would disclose the site of the next round of talks.

Bob Goodenow, executive director of the NHLPA, has since been reviewing the issues in internal meetings.

The union chief held a conference call with player representatives Monday night.

Despite the resumption of talks, a management source issued a note of warning: "They have not agreed on anything, yet. They have not agreed on the luxury tax."

That could be the issue that decides whether there will be an NHL season.

The owners want to tax teams that exceed a payroll cap, based on the average team salary in the NHL, and give the money to teams under the prescribed limit.

The players are against such a tax, believing it has the same effect as a salary cap.

But to save the season, players reportedly would accept a diminished version of the payroll tax if owners share the burden by taxing gate receipts.

Other issues the union has studied the past few days: rookie salary cap, salary arbitration and free agency.

Players, at one time strongly opposed to any kind of salary cap, have softened their stance on the rookie cap.

The schedule is already down to 60 games, following the cancellation of 24 for each of the 26 teams.

So far, 334 games have been called off.

Alabama walks thin line to success

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — No. 3 Alabama has been walking a thin Crimson line all season.

There's no room for error with these guys, who keep winning by the narrowest of margins: a last-minute touchdown here, a late defensive stop there.

"At the beginning of the season a lot of the guys were saying, 'Man, we've got to play better than this. If we keep playing like this, it's going to be a long season,'" safety Willie Gaston recalled. "There's only so many times you can come from behind."

But that's just what Alabama keeps doing, rallying four times in the fourth quarter alone. Only one game against a Division I-A opponent has been decided before the final period.

"We have come from behind a lot this year," said Gaston, admitting he has been proven wrong.

Alabama (11-0) has beaten only two teams by more than 11 points, and one of those was a 42-13 victory over I-AA Tennessee-Chattanooga. Excluding that game, Alabama's other victories have been by a total of 80 points.

Compare that with the other unbeaten, untied teams. No. 1 Nebraska (12-0) has defeated everyone by at least 10 points, with an average margin of 24.2 points. Second-ranked Penn State (11-0) has three close calls, but is still winning by an average of 26.7 points a game.

It may be hurting the Tide in the rankings, but one close game after another is viewed as a badge of honor around Tuscaloosa.

The players may not be able to explain it — watch their foreheads wrinkle and the eyes narrow when queried for an explanation — but they consider themselves the kings of the fourth quarter.

"Yeah, I think so, because we've done it so many times," offensive guard Kareem McNeal said. "If it's close, a lot of times people have doubts in mind that they can win a close game in the fourth quarter. But we've done it so much."

Sixth-ranked Florida (9-1-1), which meets Alabama in the Southeastern Conference championship game Saturday in Atlanta, is one of those teams that may be having doubts. The Gators have won by an average of 35 points, but their only two close games have resulted in a last-minute, 36-33 loss to Auburn and a 31-31 tie with Florida State when they blew a 28-point lead in the fourth quarter.

"We've had two close games and not won either one of them," Florida coach Steve Spurrier said. "That's very, very frustrating. To have a big, big year, you've got to win the close ones."

That's why Alabama is still in the running for the national championship and Florida isn't — even though the Gators are widely viewed as the most talented team (they are a 6-point favorite in Saturday's game).

So why does Alabama keep winning the close games and Florida doesn't?

Coach Gene Stallings points to the defense, which may not be as dominating as the 1992 unit which produced a national championship and four first-round NFL draft choices but is still one of the stingiest in the country.

The Tide has allowed only 13.6 points per game — first in the SEC and fifth nationally.

Oilers' Slaughter defies Fisher gag order on fine

HOUSTON (AP) — Webster Slaughter defied a gag order on Tuesday and accused Houston Oilers coach Jeff Fisher of trying to discredit him during a team meeting.

"I talked to a lot of players after that meeting and basically he tried to discredit me in front of the team," Slaughter said.

"He told the team I'm not a team player and that I wasn't with the team."

On Monday, Fisher fined the unhappy wide receiver one game check worth $9,529.

Fisher was responding to two weeks of complaints by Slaughter about not being used in the new two-wide receiver offense the new coach instituted after taking over from fired Jack Pardee.

Fisher said if Slaughter didn't cease his public complaints he would be suspended.

Slaughter spoke out anyway.

"This is America and there is freedom of speech and I'm going to say whatever I feel like should be said when someone poses a question toward me," Slaughter said.

Slaughter called an impromptu news conference at the training facility on Tuesday's off day.

He said he planned to be at Wednesday's workout unless otherwise instructed.

"If called upon and put in the game, I'll do my job," he said.

"Any competitor, when he's put in a situation, will try to win. But off the field, things just aren't going to be the same."

Slaughter objected to being removed from Sunday's 34-10 loss to Cleveland in the third quarter, and after the game he said he didn't see how he could play hard for the Oilers.

"Maybe I didn't handle this in the right way from the get go," Slaughter said.

"But this is an issue that I'm going to stand by because I know I'm right."

"They're wrong in what they're doing. If they want to suspend me the rest of the season and send me home without pay, so be it."

Slaughter, the Oilers' second-leading receiver with 48 catches, got caught in Fisher's shift from the run-and-shoot offense to a more conventional alignment.

Haywood Jeffries and Ernest Givins are the starters at wide receiver.

Slaughter is the third receiver in the game.

Slaughter earns the NFL minimum $162,000 salary, with incentives that are based on playing time.

"If someone snatches $50 from you and runs down the street, you'll chase your money and try to do something about it," Slaughter said.

"The main thing, I want to make sure the other 44 guys know that I'm with them."

"I think they know that now and that's my only concern from here on out."

Red Raiders run past Houston Baptist 116-82

BY JESSE MALDONADO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The season home opener for the men's Texas Tech basketball team started off on a high note as the Red Raiders knocked off Houston Baptist 116-82 Tuesday night at the Municipal Coliseum.

The night, with 6,240 fans in attendance, was capped off by the three-point shooting of Tech junior guard Koy Smith and Husky senior guard Bobby Sanders.

Smith capped the night by going six of 11 from the three-point line, tying the school record.

Sanders' hot hand at the three-point line helped him break the Houston Baptist school record by making eight of 11 three's. Sanders led the Huskies and all scorers with 30 points and five rebounds.

"I'm very proud the way he played," said Houston Baptist head coach Ron Cottrell. "I thought he didn't give up the whole game. He wanted to win the ball game, and that's what we want guys that are winners."

The Raiders start the season with an 1-0 record, while the Huskies suffered their third straight loss, giving them a 4-3 overall record.

Tech head coach James Dickey said the Raider win can be attributed to Smith and senior forward/guard Mark Davis' offensive and defensive efforts.

"We had two guys that really came ready to play, and that's Koy and Mark," Dickey said. "I thought they really played inspired basketball."

Davis led the Raiders with 29 points and 10 rebounds.

"Mark Davis is a heck of a player," Cottrell said. "He is very good, we were very impressed the way he went to the boards and the way he shot the ball."

Husky senior all-American candidate David Preston was held to 15 points and three boards. Despite the win Dickey said Houston Baptist came to Lubbock with game-time experience, which he said showed throughout the night.

"We're obviously a much better team than we played tonight, but I think you have to give Houston Baptist tremendous amount of credit. They came in with confidence, they were extremely well prepared," Dickey said.

Since the last Raider-Husky matchup, Dickey said Cottrell has done a good job with the Huskies.

"Ron has really done a great job with his program," Dickey said. "I knew they had improved from when we had played them before. I thought he had a great game plan. They did a nice job changing defenses, keeping us off balance."

One thing concerning Dickey is the lack of veteran support on the court. However, he expects that to change Saturday when the Raiders face No. 13 Wisconsin on the road.

"We are not shooting very good percentage from the three-point line," Dickey said. "We have some guys that didn't step up tonight. I thought we gave up too many points tonight, though you have to give them a lot of credit. We would have liked to hold them to 70 or less points, but if Sanders shoots the ball like that, they are going to win 20-plus games."

Stress relief

Stop by the Fitness/Wellness Center this week and pick up a Stress Dot which indicates how your body is reacting to the stresses put on it. Stress is not necessarily bad-it is just that sometimes we do not deal with the stresses in our lives in a positive fashion. Try some of these suggestions to get you through finals and holidays:

- Be aware of symptoms of stress in your life
- Prevent unnecessary stress
- Practice deep breathing regularly
- Practice muscle relaxation
- Retreat to a quiet place when necessary
- Watch your diet and nutritional intake
- Plan your time well-study in small increments to study effectively
- Be kind to yourself
- Get regular exercise-visit the Rec!

Intramural soccer

Intramural soccer is winding down as the fall semester comes to an end. The Men's All-University Tournament began Tuesday.

Eight teams qualified for the tournament. From the Residence Hall Division, Freak Nasty and Metrobox, from the Men's Open Division Bad Karma and Hooters, from the Greek Red Division Theta Chi 'A' and Delta Sig 'B' and from Greek Black Division Phi Delt 'A' and Phi Delt 'B' qualified for the All-University Tournament.

These eight teams will battle this week with the Championship Game being played 8 p.m. Thursday evening on the intramural skills behind the Student Recreation Center.

Rock climbing competition

The Indoor Rock Climbing Competition was a success.

There were 27 climbers in three divisions. Each division had four routes set up to climb. Points were awarded for how far in the route the climber reached.

Prizes were awarded for the top climbers of each division. In the Women's Beginner Division, first place-Phyllis Pausman, Second Place-Roselle Grasney.

In the Men's Beginner Division, there was a tie for first place between Joe Cano and Marks Lanham, third place-Frank Nguyen.

In the Advanced Open Division, there also was a tie for first place-Russell Parks and Darren Knezek, third place-Jeff Lozier. Congratulations to all the winners.

Final injury clinic

The final injury clinic of the semester will be 7 p.m. tonight in SRC 201. People with athletic type injuries are encouraged to attend this free clinic provided by Dr. Robert Yost, orthopedic surgeon for TTUHSC, and his resident doctors. The doctors will examine all injuries and make recommendations on treatment, rehabilitation or referral. For additional information, please call the Recreational Sports Office at 742-3351.

Volleyball Champs

The Modalities captured the Women's All-University title while the Gimps dominated the Men's. The ladies' match was a hard fought match that was closer than the scores reflected. The Modalities over-powered the S.W.A.T. Team to take the honors 15-6, 15-13. The S.W.A.T. Team advanced to the finals after defeating Six Pack 7-12, 14-11, 12-6 in semifinal action. The Modalities eased through their half of the bracket by downing the Butternuts 9-14, 15-4, 11-9 to play for the top honors.

The Gimps and Supreme Court squared off in the Men's Championship match for their third match-up season. The Gimps won in regular season play, and the Supreme Court evened the score by winning an earlier playoff match. The final match was no contest as the Gimps dominated the match 15-4, 15-5 to capture the men's title in less than 30 minutes. Supreme Court advanced by defeating Kappa Alpha 'A' 11-8, 12-6, and the Gimps put Fiji 'A' away 13-7, 15-5.

Co-Rec Basketball champions

For the second time, the Old Timers Co-Rec Intramural Basketball Team was triumphant in the championship game of the season. The Old Timers defeated Sigma Chi Omega in a nip-and-tuck contest 40-38. Evonne Bird of the Old Timers lead all scorers with 20 points, while Sigma Chi Omega was paced by Christy McGinnis with 11 points, nine of which were of the three point version. Other members of the Old Timers were Nick Moshou, Craig Parker, Cedric Mills, Marcus Barnum, Esther Weekes, Judy Decker, Kerri Canavan, Liz Jambor and Jennifer Franklin. In semifinal action, the Old Timers defeated last years runners-up, the Hoosiers 61-52.

Sigma Chi Omega out-scored the Frogies 68-42.
