Ferry crashes into freighter, sinks

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — An inter-island ferry carrying more than 500 people collided with a freighter and sank before dawn Friday in Manila Bay.

Reports said some of the passengers were rescued, but the numbers ranged widely. ZZRH, a private radio station, said the coast guard had rescued 18 people while station ZZMM said more than 200 were saved.

"We were sleeping. Suddenly we heard a crash. I grabbed my two children, but when the ferry sank we were sucked under the water with it. A piece of metal hit my arm, and I lost hold of my two kids," said survivor Erwin Maravilla.

"I was lucky to be able to swim to the surface. Otherwise I would be dead," he said, adding that his wife also was missing.

He was one of the first group of survivors plucked from the sea by a navy patrol and brought to Manila.

Clinton to beef up military by $25 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton, aiming to counter Republican charges he's weakened the military, said Thursday he'll pump $25 billion into future Pentagon budgets to give troops higher pay and enough training to stay combat-ready.

"Our number one commitment is to the readiness and well-being of our men and women in uniform," Clinton said at a Rose Garden ceremony.

"Our military will remain the best trained, best equipped, the best fighting force on earth," Clinton pledged as Defense Secretary William Perry and the generals and admirals of the Joint Chiefs of Staff stood by.

The president also said he will ask Congress to replenish funds taken out of this year's defense budget to pay for unanticipated military deployments in Haiti, Kuwait and the Caribbean. Pentagon officials said that would amount to more than $2 billion.

Clinton said the future spending would include "quality of life" improvements for U.S. forces and their families, such as better housing, child care and family support services.

Bush gives assurance to Mexico president

DALLAS (AP) — Gov.-elect George W. Bush assured new Mexican President Ernesto Zedillo on Thursday that he will fight any effort to deny public education and health care to the children of illegal immigrant families.

Bush and his father, former President Bush, met for 20 minutes with Zedillo shortly after his Thursday inauguration in Mexico City.

Zedillo told the governor-elect of his concern over Proposition 187, the California ballot initiative to deny illegal immigrants any state-funded services.

"They were all told by me that I believe that that aspect of 187 ... that does not allow for education of children, I just don't agree with that. That's just bad public policy for Texas," he said.

Senate put ends to funding cap

BY AMY OSMULSKI
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A Student Senate resolution that would put a 5 percent cap on all student organization funding failed after an hour debate during a senate meeting Thursday night.

The resolution stated that "no university student registered organization shall be appropriated more than 5 percent of the total amount of the yearly Organization Funding Bill."

Eric Sanchez, a member of the Budget Finance Committee, said the purpose of the resolution was to instill fairness and guidelines currently not present in the committee.

"There is currently no legislation in the rules of the senate on how the Budget Finance committee can allot money," Sanchez said. "If the committee wanted to allot $40,000 to one organization, they could."

Sanchez provided the senate with a graph showing the organizations which received the most money for 1994-95. The top 10 organizations received a total of $46,860 from a total budget of $139,000.

"Ten organizations receive $46,860, and that only leaves $92,240 for the other 102 organizations," he said.

The Budget Finance Committee will implement the 5 percent cap as a guideline for themselves, and the resolution was a courtesy to the senate members to give them an idea of what the committee does, Sanchez said.

Deana Otts, a senator from the College of Agriculture, said putting the cap into effect would take money away from groups who deserve it.

"Groups who bring recognition to the university bring recruitment, and that brings money," Otts said. "The groups who do have the money have obviously done something to deserve it."

Otts said she was not opposed to more funding to other groups, but she believes they should prove themselves first.

Russell Thomasson, chairman of the Budget Finance Committee, said the cap does not mean an organization's funding cannot grow.

"If the budget increases, so can funding, because the cap is a percentage," Thomasson said.

"If the budget decreases, every organization takes a cut, and that is where fairness comes into play," he said.

If some of the organizations were given the funding opportunities other organizations receive, they may be able to do more to bring recognition and recruitment, Thomasson said.

Drunken driving deaths drop

ATLANTA (AP) — Deaths from drunken driving accidents have dropped by nearly one-third over the last 12 years as states raised their drinking ages and grass-roots campaigns raised awareness of the problem, the government said Thursday.

Last year, 17,461 people in the United States were killed in alcohol-related traffic accidents, down 31 percent from 25,165 in 1982, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported.

In 1982, alcohol accounted for 57.3 percent of traffic deaths; that had declined to 43.5 percent by 1993, said the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, which collected the data.

The number of intoxicated drivers involved in fatal accidents dropped 33 percent, from 21,780 in 1982 to 14,589 in 1993.

"Substantial progress has been made nationwide in reducing alcohol-related traffic fatal crashes," said CDC epidemiologist Julie Russell.

"However, there is still a tremendous loss of life and enormous costs associated with this problem," Russell said.

The CDC estimated that in 1990 alone, drunken driving accidents cost $46.1 billion, including $5.1 billion in medical expenses.

Texas senators vote in favor of highly debated trade agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite some criticism of a world trade accord partially negotiated by the Clinton administration, Texas' two Republican senators backed ratification of the 124-nation pact that would lower trade tariffs.

Sen. Phil Gramm last week announced his support for the accord in negotiation since 1986 under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison did so Thursday morning, as backers of the pact lobbied vigorously to corral enough votes for passage.

The Senate approved the accord on a 76-24 vote Thursday night, sending the legislation approved earlier this week by the House to the president's desk.

The trade agreement would slash global tariffs by 38 percent and create a more powerful World Trade Organization to referee disputes. Hutchison, as did many in Congress, initially questioned whether the Geneva-based WTO would infringe on U.S. sovereignty.

"After thoroughly reviewing this issue, I have concluded that the implementing legislation contains adequate safeguards against ceding our authority to a multinational body," Hutchison said in a floor speech announcing her support.

While Gramm didn't fear any loss of sovereignty, he was harshly critical of the Clinton administration's writing of the legislation necessary to implement GATT.

In his floor speech, Gramm complained that the administration crammed goodies unrelated to trade into GATT's implementing legislation, either as a way of rewarding supporters or currying favor with GATT skeptics.

"I am going to take a deep breath and look beyond the outrageous and irresponsible manner with which the Clinton administration has dealt with GATT," said Gramm, who is a likely challenger to Clinton in 1996.

Hutchison also touted GATT's promise of savings for consumers. "The Treasury estimates that lower prices from GATT will result in savings of $1,700 for every American family of four," she said. "That's a tax cut, and it provides needed help for every person."

Opponents contend the lowered trade barriers will subject American workers to unfair competition from low-wage countries.

"The reality is that we are in decline. Everybody knows that," said Sen. Fritz Hollings, D-S.C., whose home-state textile industry will be one of the biggest losers in the deal. "Wake up, Washington."

President Clinton, badly in need of a congressional victory to lift his battered fortunes following the November elections, had worked throughout the day to convince wavering lawmakers to support the deal.

Retiring Democratic Leader George Mitchell noted that the vote was the last one to be taken by the 103rd Congress and the last he would ever take in the Senate. He said he was proud that his last vote as a senator was "on a matter that will have significance for generations to come."

On the crucial budget waiver vote, the accord was supported by 31 Republicans and 37 Democrats and was opposed by 15 Republicans and 17 Democrats.

Alcoholic Beverage Commission gives last call to coin specials

BY JONATHAN HARRIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

As the end of the year approaches, last call will be given for the any-coin happy hour drink specials prevalent in Texas bars.

Beginning Dec. 20 the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission will no longer allow bars to charge a cover fee for entrance into a club or bar and then sell alcohol for coin amounts.

Randy Yarborough, TABC assistant director, said the prohibition was initiated by Mother's Against Drunk Drivers.

Yarborough said there would be no way to abolish drink specials because of monitoring difficulties.

"MADD initially wanted us to do away with happy hour altogether," he said.

Bars still will be able to charge coins for alcohol with the new law, but they will not be allowed to charge a cover fee when such drink specials are offered, he said.

"Instead of that elimination, we decided to just do away with the practice of charging a cover and selling for change," he said.

Yarborough said he believes bar owners will find a loophole in the system and will continue to offer drink specials, but financial restrictions may discourage others.

"We think the financial part of that deal will discourage bars to do that," he said.

Yarborough said he hopes the new restrictions will slow down the consumption of alcohol and reduce the incidents of minors drinking.

"One problem we found was when these specials were being held, there was a large amount of minors in the bars," he said.

Todd Lalonde, Conference Cafe manager, said he agrees with the new law because it will cut down on the consumption of alcohol.

"We never really followed the specials like most bars," Lalonde said. "There is no reason to sell beer at a low price like that."

He also said the new law may eliminate disorderly conduct in bars.

Bowl appearance major accomplishment

To the editor:

My Texas Tech roots go back to the year 1938 when my father, Forrest W. "Chief" Jones, played for Pete Cawthorn's football teams of 1938 and 1939. From some people of that era, I have heard that Pete Cawthorn would not have allowed his football team to go to the Cotton Bowl with the win/loss record we have today. On comparing Pete Cawthorn to Spike Dykes, I would say that both coaches have a heart of caring for their players. Pete gave his men a chance to play football and to get an education. Some of those men came from dirt-poor families. He loved those men like they were his own sons. They became a part of his life through the years. I see a parallel in Spike Dykes — he loves his men. They give him 100 percent. Look at Spike's recruiting class. He accomplished this with a fifth- or sixth-rated recruiting class. SPIKE GETS IT OUT OF HIS MEN!

With Tech's '94 loss to TCU, I heard many people say we should not go to the Cotton Bowl; that we should defer our bid to TCU; that we don't deserve to play after our loss to TCU. That was my first reaction as well! HOWEVER, I have done some real soul searching and have come to this conclusion — this game is not about a win/loss record or who does or does not deserve to be there. This game is about the effort and spirit that the 1994 players, coaches and fans put forth. This game also lays the groundwork for us to enter the Big 12 Conference in the next two years. I have heard talk from people of another university that they "put us in" the Cotton Bowl. I have also heard talk from a second university that we get to go because they just happened to be on probation. LET ME SAY THIS ABOUT THAT: To the first university — we met them heads up Oct. 29, and we kicked their butts. To the second university — they were lucky they didn't receive the "death penalty" like SMU did for all the NCAA rule infractions they committed.

The PUF Fund that those two universities have access to and have kept (thanks to their legislators) has prevented other universities access to those funds, thus creating the illusion that they are the only two significant universities in the state of Texas. This Cotton Bowl game puts Texas Tech in a favorable class because the revenue generated will put Tech on equal ground with those two universities.

I'm here to tell you that Texas Tech is a university to be reckoned with. This Cotton Bowl appearance is only the beginning. Alumni of those other universities had better look over their shoulders because Texas Tech is on their tails and coming on strong. Texas Tech players, coaches and fans have nothing to be ashamed of — we have finally arrived at the threshold of our destiny!!

TO THE 1994 TEAM: You have accomplished something that we have tried 56 years to do. You have brought us to this point and we're proud of it! GO TECH — THE BEST OF LUCK TO YOU IN THE COTTON BOWL.

Forrest Jones Jr.

Even UD editor is fan of Tech football

To the editor:

As a former Tech student and Tech fan, I am very excited about the Cotton Bowl! Who better to represent the Southwest Conference than Texas Tech? Always in the shadows of A&M and Texas, we have finally gotten our chance to play with the "big boys." So what if we did not finish first in the conference standings. WHO CARES HOW WE GET THERE? If not for the suspension, the Aggies would be representing the conference AGAIN! Anything is better than that! So what if we have a 6-5 record. We defeated the teams we needed to defeat. What matters is that we are going to be in Dallas on Jan. 2. Our national recognition for athletics comes from the Lady Raiders, and it is about time we show that we can play football, too.

I am proud of the Raiders. I only wish I could be there to cheer them on as I did many times before. I remember going to Tech games when we would lose by narrow margins and it seemed that we would never be on top. Who can forget the A&M game at College Station in '92? Losing by a field goal in the last seconds! I hated the Aggies more than I have ever hated anything in my life! That is what school spirit is about! That is what Texas football is about! Kristie, you say the conference is one of mediocrity. You chose to attend Tech; Tech did not choose you. If you are not proud of your school, then you should be somewhere else. I agree that you should not rate a school on its athletic prowess. But as a student, you should not say that you are ashamed of the team. You are a representative of the university. How does this look to other schools in the conference? Even though football isn't everything, it sure is nice to finally come out ahead after 55 years! As a friend who went to Tech games with you for three years and watched you cheer as loud as the next guy, I am disappointed in your comments. However, as a friend who knows you like a good controversy, I am not surprised. Kristie, you need to realize that the Cotton Bowl can only mean good things in the future for Tech. Fortunately, years from now, people will remember the bowl game and not some forgotten editor's asinine comments.

Tech football exceeded expectations

To the editor:

You may be embarrassed by the fact that we are going to the Cotton Bowl with a 6-5 record, but I don't think you should be. I am certainly disappointed in our loss to TCU, but I am anything but embarrassed.

Let's go back to September for a moment. How many people do you think would have predicted that this team, minus its entire offensive unit from 1993, would go to the Cotton Bowl? We were picked to finish fifth in the Southwest Conference. Our early season record seemed to verify that selection. However, we did play three teams (Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas A&M) all ranked in the top 20 during the first five weeks of the season.

However, what this team and its coaches have accomplished is truly remarkable given the circumstances. The loss to TCU prevented us from winning the conference outright. TCU has a very good football team. They have averaged four to five turnovers per game, yet did not have a single turnover against us. I would say that their quarterback, Max Knake, is probably the best passing quarterback we faced all year. We also lost Byron Hanspard early in the third quarter of that game. These are not excuses. These are facts.

You said that "the only reason Tech's going to Dallas in January is because A&M got themselves in trouble and because Tech's never represented the Southwest Conference in the Cotton Bowl." First of all, Texas A&M was put on probation because an alumnus paid players to work when they didn't work. This is not the first time they have been on probation. Texas Tech has never received that type of penalty. Why didn't you say that we are going because we have followed the rules? Secondly, we are going because of a tie-breaker rule. In 1976 our record was 10-1 but did not go because of that same rule.

Red Raiders want Cotton Bowl berth more

To the editor:

Gee, I'm so glad that The UD has gotten excited about the Red Raiders going to the Cotton Bowl. Maybe the mediocrity of school spirit by some students on this campus should be discussed on the OPINIONS page rather than what the football team did this year. Texas Tech could go 11-0 and be national champs and The UD would still gripe about something. True, a 6-5 record is not exactly something to be proud of, and true, the loss to TCU took some of the spirit from the fans and players alike. However, the team did significantly better than many predicted. Close losses to A&M and Oklahoma were quickly forgotten with thrilling wins over Texas and Baylor. The truth is that no other team deserves to go to the Cotton Bowl more than the Red Raiders. Not just Perhaps you are disappointed in finishing in a tie for second in 1991, 1992 and 1993 and finishing in a tie for first this year, but I am anything but disappointed. Given the financial resources that our coaches lack, I think they have gotten considerable mileage out of this team. They have improved each week, but they are a very young team offensively and so their performance is not as consistent as a veteran team's might be.

I'm sorry you cannot see the positive side of all this. The bowl appearance will give us additional revenue for the athletic program and will be of great benefit in recruiting. But most important, it will be the first opportunity that our alumni have had to go to the Cotton Bowl and watch the Red Raiders play. There have been plenty of years when we were close, but this happens to be the year. Whether we are 10-1 or 6-5, we are going.

Last year the game was played between two teams ranked in the Top 10 (Texas A&M and Notre Dame) and was not a sellout. This year's game has already been declared a sellout because of the Tech fans who have purchased the tickets that the Cotton Bowl had for general sale. If we sell the 20,000 tickets we are allotted, and it seems that we will, the game will be a sellout because of Texas Tech. I don't hear anybody connected with the Cotton Bowl complaining about that.

Instead of worrying about our record or the fact that we ended in a five-team tie for the championship, why not be enthusiastic because we have a bunch of young overachievers who defied the experts and are going to represent Texas Tech for the first time ever in the Cotton Bowl as the SWC representative?

because it has been 56 years since we have made an appearance, but because we want it more. Also, we have a chance to redeem ourselves and show those critics that Tech deserved to be in the Cotton Bowl in the first place.

I have a feeling that you, Davis, wanted to leave your mark during your last year at Tech and maybe cause a little controversy like the "Fire Spike" editorial did last year. Sorry, Kristie, but no one shares your views except maybe some USC Trojans. I, for one, am glad that you are graduating soon because your negative comments are something we don't need and won't tolerate here. I'm proud Tech is going to the Cotton Bowl and I will be there Jan. 2 as Tech fights on to victory! Go Tech! Beat USC!

Educate yourself to save yourself

To the editor:

It kills. It kills your mothers and brothers; fathers and sisters; nieces and nephews; even grandma and grandpa — and maybe even you. It's the killer we don't want to talk about and the disease that, as a whole, Americans try to ignore. But the funny thing is HIV/AIDS doesn't go away, but the people you love and care about do.

I have walked, talked, marched, and I have cried. AIDS taught me the meaning of two words: compassion and hate. It is impossible to discuss HIV/AIDS without discussing the prejudice and stigma that goes along with it. For all of you who still think HIV/AIDS is a disease that belongs to "those people," I want to remind you that those who live with, and eventually die of, this disease are people and they don't deserve your judgment, pity or condemnation.

Three years ago, I began my HIV/AIDS education when a friend tested positive. Since then, I have said too many good-byes. Dec. 1 was designated World AIDS Day, and it is estimated that someone somewhere in the world dies of AIDS every 60 seconds, that someone doesn't have to be you. I encourage everyone to become more educated about HIV/AIDS whether you think you are "at risk" or not.

'Generation X' must defy odds

KENDRA CASEY

I finally have come to grips with the fact that I will never not be a member of the tagged "Generation X."

I used to think that being an "Xer" meant I was really cool; I thought it was synonymous with young, well-dressed and, get this, personal achievement.

But, the older I get the more I learn that the intended definition of the label means lazy, rude and, not just uneducated but uneducateable.

So, I've now become obsessed with proving the worth of the people who fall into my age category. Much to my chagrin, it has not been an easy task.

It doesn't bother me that those filling the generations before mine don't like how the young'ns of today dress or the music we listen to — that's OK, no one liked the way they dressed or the music they listened to either.

Where I run into a brick wall is when it comes to education and social skills.

The elders have stumped me, and that's because it's true that those of us in our 20s aren't as educated as previous generations.

Why?

I didn't understand up until recently when someone older tried to explain it to a group of people.

What he said in short is that our parents (at least their generation) left learning up to us. Youth today have paid the price for being born during socio-economic times that were characterized by independence, single-parenthood and working mothers.

And while those things are not to be criticized, their offspring shouldn't be either.

So, what do we do?

Well, for starters we follow the advice from a great '80s movie — "Tell them, hey, I don't know what I'm doing but I'm upset about it, folks!"

As "Xers," we can't blame our parents and expect that to make us better people. Instead, the older we get we have to take on the task of learning what we don't know — we may be uneducated, but we're not uneducateable.

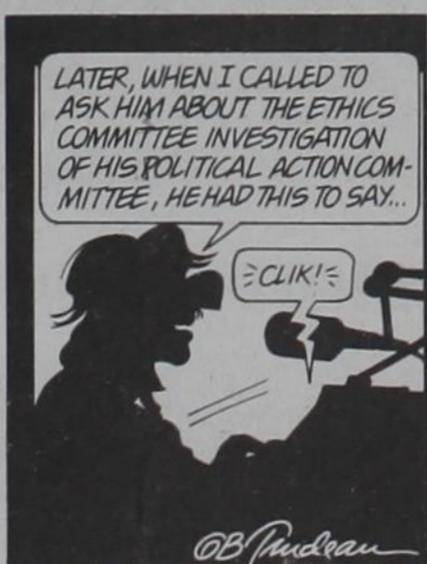

If we don't, then who's to say that our children won't be in the same predicament when they're in their 20s?

If I can't change my status, then I at least plan to do my best to shake the stigma attached to it, and if that means taking on the social responsibility of educating myself, then so be it.

And, nothing would make me happier than to prove wrong the people who coined the nasty name "Generation X" before I was old enough to walk.

Meat Judging Team places sixth in national competition

BY SANDY FULLER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

After almost five successive years of winning the national championship or second place, the Texas Tech Meat Judging Team took home sixth place this year during the national championship competition in November.

Team Adviser Mark Miller, associate professor in the animal science and food technology, said the team had a good year.

"I would say we have had a successful year again," Miller said. "We like to say we're the most winning team in the '90s."

Tech has won national championships in 1989 and 1991 and placed second in 1988, 1992 and 1993.

Miller attributed the decline to sixth place this year to fewer team members to select from.

"We did not have the depth of students this year as we have in the past," he said. "Usually we have twice the number of students."

This year's team was comprised of six students, including Joey Hamill, Brandi Andrews, Scott Smith, Russell Munday, A.J. Bonanno and Craig Joy.

The students rotate to make up the four-member team that judges meat at competitions.

The 1995 team will include 12 members, Miller said.

About 85 students representing 24 universities compete in the final meat judging contest of the year, and placing sixth is still prestigious, he said.

"Out of the four competitions this fall, Tech has received High Individuals in three of them," Miller said.

Brian Owen, 1994 team coach and graduate student in meat science, said the meat judging team represents Tech in competitions, throughout the United States.

"Basically what we do is we evaluate beef, lamb and pork products," he said.

There are nine classes of meat, including carcasses and cuts of various animals, Owen said.

"The meat is evaluated based on current industry standards," Owen said. "Team members must give a written set of reasons on why they ranked the meat the way they did."

Miller said the team judges the meat by taste, fat content and how much lean the meat has.

Team members spend seven hours in one-day competitions judging meat.

The team participates in seven competitions annually, including three in the spring and four in the fall.

Team members are eligible for one calendar year only, Miller said.

Owen agrees with Miller that the Tech team is the most winning meat judging team in the United States.

"We've won 14 contests this decade," Owen said. "And that's out of 28 we've participated in. So we've won half the contests."

If the team wins one more national championship, Tech will be able to keep the rotating championship trophy, he said.

Owen said the Tech meat judging team has only recently been a top-notch team.

"Texas A&M was probably the dominant team of the '70s and '80s," he said. "But we have had a lot of successes, and I expect we'll be back at the top again next year."

Simpson lawyers say comments will decline

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The judge in the O.J. Simpson case dismissed three jury prospects Thursday who acknowledged hearing that Nicole Brown Simpson's sister has publicly branded Simpson a killer.

"I think I heard Simpson's sister-in-law say he was going to kill her ... Nicole," one of three prospective alternate jurors told Superior Court Judge Lance Ito.

All three of the prospective jurors were dismissed as Ito continued his search for 15 alternate jurors to join the 12 jurors who have already been selected to hear the case.

In recent days, a feud has erupted between the Simpson defense and relatives of Simpson's ex-wife and her friend, Ronald Goldman, who were knifed to death outside her condominium June 12.

Simpson is charged in the slayings.

Defense lawyers Robert Shapiro and Johnnie Cochran Jr. have accused Ms. Simpson's sister, Denise Brown, of orchestrating an effort to deny Simpson a fair trial by repeatedly accusing him in media interviews of killing her sister.

Thursday, Shapiro said he would try to limit his public comments to temper the "media madness."

"In the spirit of trying to accomplish what we all want, we are going to take the high road," Shapiro said outside court.

"We no longer are going to be talking to the press on a daily basis. ... We hope everybody else takes the road with us."

In New York, a judge rebuked Ito for scheduling a hearing on DNA evidence at a time when Simpson's DNA expert, Peter Neufeld, is supposed to be representing a murder defendant in his courtroom.

Justice Harold Rothwax rebuffed Neufeld's renewed effort to delay the trial and ordered the lawyer to appear in his court Monday.

"You are, as you say, in a difficult position. But it's a difficult position of your own making," Rothwax said.

"If I had been told early that you wouldn't be available, then maybe we could have done something," he said.

Rothwax criticized Ito for ordering Neufeld to appear at the DNA hearing in Los Angeles Dec. 12.

Officials form group to prevent fire related deaths

BY LINDA CARRIGER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Smoke detectors with working batteries could have saved the lives of 10 Lubbock residents within the past 15 months, Lubbock Fire Department Lt. Marlin Hamilton said.

To prevent more deaths from smoke inhalation and severe burns, the University Medical Center, Southwest Lubbock Rotary and the Lubbock Professional Fire fighters Association have joined together to inform the public about the need for smoke detectors.

"If we can increase the public understanding of smoke detectors, to have one test it and make sure it works, we can see a decline in the injuries and deaths (of people) and money lost to properties due to fire," Hamilton said.

Lubbock Mayor David Langston joined the group Monday and declared December as Smoke Detector Awareness Month.

The group is planning educational programs with Texas Tech greek organizations, local elementary schools and neighborhood associations.

Educating residents has the top priority with the group, said Art Rousseau, the president of the Southwest Lubbock Rotary Club.

"If somebody's place burns down, you know, that's terrible, but it's not a loss of life," he said. "So, we're not concentrating on that."

College students who live in rental houses or apartments often have faulty smoke detectors, he said.

"In most rental houses the owner has to provide some sort of smoke detector, but people tend not to take as good a care of it when it's not their's," he said.

The law requires that building owners provide each residential unit with one working smoke detector, Rousseau said.

The resident is responsible for keeping working batteries in the detector, he added.

Ric Romo, a senior public relations major from Austin, said most college students take the fact that their smoke detectors will be working for granted.

"That's something their parents did, and their parents took care of," Romo said. "Your smoke detector doesn't say 'Hey, You need to change your batteries.'"

The idea for Smoke Detector Awareness Month emerged from members of the University Medical Center burn intensive care unit when Robert Hurt, a UMC pharmacist, died in a fire which could have been prevented with a smoke detector, said Matt Baker, a UMC licensed vocational nurse.

"We knew there had to be a way to reduce the amount of burn deaths," he said.

Hamilton said residential fires occur most during the holidays.

Because the holidays are usually a hectic time for most people, the chances of starting a house fire increase, Hamilton said.

"You get out of the routine — and boom — a fire," he said.

Eventually, the group plans to provide smoke detectors to families who need them, but for now they are sending discount coupons for smoke detectors to Lubbock residents with their electricity bills, Hamilton said.

Nationally, one out of every five homes does not have a working smoke detector, and more than half of the residential fires in the nation are in homes without smoke detectors, Hamilton said.

Investigation of Dahmer's death continues

PORTAGE, Wis. (AP) — Authorities are investigating whether more than one person was involved in the bludgeoning deaths of Jeffrey Dahmer and another inmate.

Two guards, a recreation officer and three inmates were in the area when Dahmer and Jesse Anderson were beaten Monday in a bathroom and locker room at the Columbia Correctional Institution, sheriff's Detective Lt. Vern Gove said Thursday.

Christopher Scarver, 25, who is serving a life term for murder, is the only suspect to be identified. The Milwaukee Journal on Thursday quoted an unidentified prison official as saying Scarver didn't act alone.

Gove would not give details of the investigation.

Asked if more than one person was involved, he said, "I'm not ruling that out, OK?"

Dahmer, 34, who killed 17 young men and boys and cannibalized some of them, was found in a pool of blood. He had been assigned to clean the bathroom while on a work detail along with Anderson, who died Wednesday of his injuries.

Shakur found guilty of sexual assault

NEW YORK (AP) — Rap star Tupac Shakur was found guilty Thursday of sexually abusing a woman he had invited to his hotel room and acquitted of more serious sodomy and weapons charges.

Shakur, 23, who was shot five times during a robbery Wednesday, was not in the courtroom when the verdict was read. He had appeared earlier Thursday in a wheelchair, but his lawyer said he had returned to the hospital.

The jury, which reached its decision on the third day of deliberations, found the same verdict for a co-defendant, Charles Fuller, 24.

"We're ecstatic," said Shakur's lawyer, Michael Warren. He said he was pleased that the jury "kept an open mind."

Each man was convicted of three counts of first-degree sex abuse, which means they groped and touched the victim without her consent. Shakur and Fuller had been charged with assaulting a 20-year-old woman.

ROTC changes command in ceremony

BY TERRI LOWRANCE
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Air Force ROTC Cadet Alan Goodwin became the new corps commander Thursday afternoon at the corps' Change of Command Ceremony at Memorial Circle.

Under the Memorial Circle flags, former Corps Commander David Perez handed the commander's flag and his duties to Goodwin.

Perez told cadets learning never stops and to come back next semester ready to work.

Goodwin, a senior history major from Del Rio, will officially begin his role as commander next semester, giving him some time to learn the obligations of his position.

The corps commander position is designated for a senior, and a new commander is appointed each semester.

"Cadets have to participate in at least one leadership position and one management position while in the corps," said Capt. Robert Surprenant, assistant professor of aerospace studies.

The commander position fulfills the leadership requirement for Goodwin, he said.

Goodwin was selected for his leadership potential and high GPA, Surprenant said.

"Only 2 percent to 3 percent of all cadets get to see the corps commander position," he said.

Goodwin said he was honored to be selected for the position.

"We owe applause to Mr. Perez for last semester because things went so well," Goodwin said.

He said he hopes to build leadership and teamwork for a higher level of professional quality. Educating and commissioning the cadets to the Air Force are also two of his goals, he said.

"I am looking forward to working with y'all next semester," he said to cadets present at the ceremony. "I hope to see most of you back because next semester will be the best semester the Air Force ROTC ever had."

Goodwin also told the cadets they are appreciated.

"We're really proud of all of you," he said.

Col. Danny Rouse, chairman and professor of aerospace studies, told the cadets he thought the ceremony was beautiful.

After the awards presentation, Goodwin appointed cadets to staff positions for next semester.

"The cadets I'm working with are among Tech's greatest," he said.

Parents asked to be careful when shopping

Toys should develop long-term skills, stir the creative imagination

BY GUY PRIEL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

For shoppers the four weeks between Thanksgiving and Christmas may be a holiday paradise, but for parents this time may bring confusion about gifts that are appropriate to give to children.

"The best toys for Christmas are simple ones," said Doug Klepper, assistant professor of pediatrics at the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

Parents should keep safety in mind while shopping and read all labels and safety warnings, he said.

"The National Safety Council has required manufacturers to place age information on all toys," he said. "These guidelines should be adhered to at all times."

Two federal statutes, the Hazardous Substance Act and the Consumer Product Safety Act, require toy companies to manufacture products to meet regulations set by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, according to Texas Attorney General Dan Morales' Office.

The law bans small parts in new toys intended for children under 3.

The ban includes removable small eyes and noses on stuffed toys and dolls and small, removable squeakers on squeeze toys, according to "Con-

PARENTS SHOULD LOOK FOR QUALITY DESIGN AND CONSTRUCTION IN ALL TOYS FOR ALL AGES AND PAY ATTENTION TO AGE LABELS.

Dan Morales
attorney general

sumer Safety Laws."

"Parents should look for quality design and construction in all toys for all ages and pay attention to age labels," Morales said.

Stuffed animals should be washable, non-toxic, flame-retardant and resistant, he said.

"Parents should be wary of toys with sharp edges, small parts and sharp points," he said. "New toys intended for children under 8 should be free of sharp glass and metal edges."

Klepper said customer service representatives can help parents make informed decisions.

Toys are designed for play and should develop long-term skills and stir the imagination, he said. Parents should consider purchasing educational toys, which encourage imagination, he said.

"Toys which encourage group participation and family interaction are better for children and families,"

Klepper said. "These are the toys which instill lifelong values in children."

Parents who give in-line skates and bikes for Christmas also should give helmets and pads for protection, he said.

"Due to the high speeds possible with them (in-line skates), there has been a rapid rise in head injuries," he said. "Parents should keep this factor in mind when choosing skates for gifts."

Guns and action figures also should be given with caution, Klepper said. There is already an overabundance of guns in society and giving a child a gun and toys associated with guns can send mixed messages, he said.

"The popularity of action figures can cause confusion for parents who are not sure which ones are which," Klepper said.

"Action figures promote aggressiveness and should be given cautiously and with fiction in mind."

Jury selection to begin for trial

Attorneys will choose jury members for the sexual assault trial of Lawrence Wolverton Monday.

Wolverton was charged in September for the alleged aggravated kidnapping and assault of an 18-year-old female Texas Tech student.

Wolverton allegedly took a Horn/Knapp Residence Hall resident to K.N. Klapp Park Sept. 9 where she was fondled and forced to perform oral sex.

Wolverton, who was on parole until 2001, has three prior felony convictions.

In 1978 he was sentenced to three years of probation for forgery. In 1991 he was sentenced to nine years of confinement for possession of an illegal substance with the intent to deliver cocaine. In 1992 he was sentenced to 15 years confinement for aggravated sexual abuse.

Photos to be distributed

NEW YORK (AP) — Penthouse can resume distributing an issue with topless pictures of Paula Jones, the woman who accused President Clinton of sexual harassment, a judge ruled Thursday. U.S. District Judge Peter K. Leisure had ordered the magazine not to distribute or promote the article.

Hill Country murders resolved

JUNCTION (AP) — A second man has been convicted of capital murder in the 1992 beating and stabbing deaths of a family at their Hill Country home.

Kimble County jurors deliberated 25 minutes before finding John James Steiner guilty Wednesday in a trial that began Tuesday morning.

Steiner was convicted of the March 29, 1992, slayings of Clayton Kenney, 83, his invalid wife, Juliana, 74, and Mrs. Kenney's daughter, Adrienne Arnot, 44.

Samuel Clark Gallamore, 22, was convicted of capital murder and sentenced to death for the murders earlier this year in New Braunfels.

Both trials were moved from Kerrville because of publicity.

The family members were killed at their home just east of Kerrville off Texas Highway 16.

Arnot had recently moved from Houston to care for her elderly parents.

Steiner's attorney, Richard Mosty, presented no evidence or closing argument.

"Guilt or innocence was a foregone conclusion," Assistant District Attorney Donnie Coleman said.

"The whole issue is whether he should receive life or death," Coleman said resting without presenting any evidence or argument was good trial strategy by the defense and preserves its credibility for later.

The punishment phase of Steiner's trial is scheduled to start at 9 a.m. Monday.

Coleman said the punishment portion is expected to last about three days because of problems in scheduling witnesses.

Hearing determines fate of Mexican official

McALLEN (AP) — Three people allegedly tortured in Mexican police custody say the Mexican government has framed the former police commander.

Maria Sanchez denied Thursday that she had been beaten, contradicting detailed statements attributed to her by Mexican prosecutors.

"In Mexico, you sign what's put in front of you, or else," added Jose Filipe de Jesus Victoria Cepeda, claiming that the Mexican attorney general's office falsified his complaint to implicate Guillermo Gonzalez Calderoni.

U.S. Magistrate Peter E. Ormsby is holding a hearing to determine whether Calderoni, a former top commander in the federal judicial police, should be extradited to Mexico to face charges of torture and abuse of authority.

Calderoni's attorneys said their client cannot receive a fair trial in Mexico. Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael McCormick argued the matter should be left to Mexican courts.

Sanchez was detained as a witness in the shooting deaths of two federal police officers outside the Mexico City restaurant where she worked.

She denied implicating Calderoni in any mistreatment, which the Mexican government alleges occurred during the investigation into the deaths.

Victoria, a Mexican writer who said he was tortured for three days in January 1990, testified that he had never seen Calderoni before Wednesday's hearing in Ormsby's court. McCormick tried to discredit the claim by introducing one of Victoria's books in which Calderoni is pictured and identified as the torturer. Victoria said the Mexican attorney general's office supplied the picture to his publisher. It was published before he could inspect it, he said.

"Did you ever look at your book and say, 'My gosh! They've got the wrong picture?'" McCormick asked mockingly.

School employee sentenced for theft

RICHMOND (AP) — A former Richmond State School employee was sentenced to seven years in prison Thursday for stealing $68,000 from 170 mentally retarded students.

Jurors issued the prison term despite a pledge from a Lotto Texas winner to pay the money back on behalf of the confessed thief, Sonya Balderas.

The former school cashier pleaded guilty to the theft on Tuesday. She will be eligible for parole in seven months.

Defense attorney Lawrence Tackett had urged jurors to give Balderas probation. He said the mother of two would work to repay the money.

Then came a surprise final witness: Martin Castellano, a 30-year-old friend of Balderas who won $9.3 million in a June 1993 Lotto drawing.

Castellano, of Sugar Land, said his wife once worked with Balderas and had been friends with her husband for several years.

"No matter what happens, I'll be willing to help her out," Castellanos testified.

Castellanos told jurors he didn't have the cash immediately available to pay the entire debt because he recently purchased a Katy restaurant for $150,000.

He said, however, that he receives a $330,000 Lotto payment each June and about $28,000 a month from investments and interest. He could be counted on for the cash, he insisted.

"I would need some time to pay it, but I would be happy to guarantee it. I'm not being forced to be here," he said.

The offer didn't impress prosecutor Fred Felman, who told jurors they were being held hostage by a witness "dangling a carrot" before them.

He urged jurors to accept Castellanos' pledge but also send Balderas to prison for the 20-year maximum. It was unclear whether the lottery winner would pay the students back despite the prison term.

Richmond State School Superintendent Gerry Brunette said he hopes Castellanos makes good on his promise.

"It would be a very nice gesture on his part to consider that," Brunette said Thursday.

Balderas testified she had used the stolen money for gambling trips to Louisiana and Mississippi and to support her husband's cocaine habit.

Tigua Indian tribe plans to take casino issue to Supreme Court

EL PASO (AP) — The Tigua Indians will take their fight to bring casino gambling to Texas to the U.S. Supreme Court.

An appellate court has denied the Tiguas' request that it reconsider a ruling that dealt a serious setback to the tribe's plans to open a casino.

It was planned to be built on its El Paso County reservation.

Tribal Gaming Commissioner Vince Munoz told radio station WOAI in San Antonio Thursday that the tribe will now file an appeal with the Supreme Court.

Men convicted of murder

HOUSTON (AP) — Two men face up to life in prison following their convictions in the murder of a Persian Gulf War veteran gunned down only because he was black.

Jurors found Jory Wayne Thomas, 21, and John Carillo, 20, guilty Wednesday in the June 7, 1991, death of 25-year-old Marine Lance Cpl. Taron Dixon.

The trial's punishment phase was to begin Thursday.

Carillo and Thomas were among four men charged with Dixon's slaying. Donald Worth Riley is serving a life prison term after his murder conviction in September.

Charges against a fourth defendant, Robert Folks, have been dropped. Dixon had been back from wartime duty two days before his death. He was walking home after a welcome-home celebration when he was shot in the chest and side.

Police initially thought Dixon was killed in a robbery because some jewelry had been stolen from him.

But officials six months later got word that Carillo, Thomas and Riley had boasted about shooting a black man.

Friends of the trio testified that the four left a party in Angleton, headed for Houston, on the night of the shooting.

When they returned several hours later, their friends said, the men bragged about gunning down a black man. According to testimony, the men later saw the slaying reported on television and boasted that Dixon had been their victim.

Woman detects explosion on break

HOUSTON (AP) — Mary McLain's smoking hasn't been hazardous to the Johnson Space Center lately.

It was during an outdoor cigarette break last April that she became the first to spot and report a major toxic chemical leak.

During another cigarette break Wednesday, she saw a transformer explosion that sent two contractors to the hospital, patted out the smoldering clothes of one worker and sounded the fire alarm.

"I just think I'm lucky," she said.

Anthony Anguiano, 18, had minor burns on his head, neck and forearm, and Cal Palmer, 31, had minor burns on his left ear and forearm. Both were treated at Hermann Hospital in Houston and released.

Movie proves far from 'Paradise'

TARA McQUEEN

If you want to be trapped in a movie theater with very little to laugh about this holiday season, go see the movie "Trapped in Paradise."

Nicolas Cage, whom I loved in "Peggy Sue Got Married," "Raising Arizona" and "Guarding Tess," gives a mediocre performance as the only crime-free brother among criminals. Jon Lovitz and Dana Carvey, of "Saturday Night Live" fame, are his brothers, who are paroled for Christmas.

Lovitz is a pathological liar who cooks up a scheme to rob a small town bank in Paradise, Pa.

The bank was an easy target, since the security guard never wakes up, and the security cameras have been unplugged for years.

Carvey, a high-pitched kleptomaniac who drives the get-away car off an icy bridge, is a little bit funny—but only because he is so stupid.

After the accident the three brothers are inadvertently treated like long-lost sons by all the townspeople in Paradise. The town gives so much, even the brothers can't take anymore.

Carvey's life is even saved in one scene by local do-gooders.

The small townspeople are sugary sweet and unbelievably generous to the strangers. The brothers find no matter what evil they do, the townspeople still help them, feed them Christmas dinner and give them presents.

All this love and compassion acts as the catalyst which brings forth a dramatic change in the brothers.

Of course in the movie there is the obligatory love interest for Cage who provides the final push for the brothers to do right by the people of Paradise.

This was a predictable, happy holiday-movie ending.

The gross profanities and the vulgar, graphic mental images which the characters describe didn't fit the story line and detracted from the movie.

There were too many characters and not much character development, which made the movie slow and a little confusing for audience members.

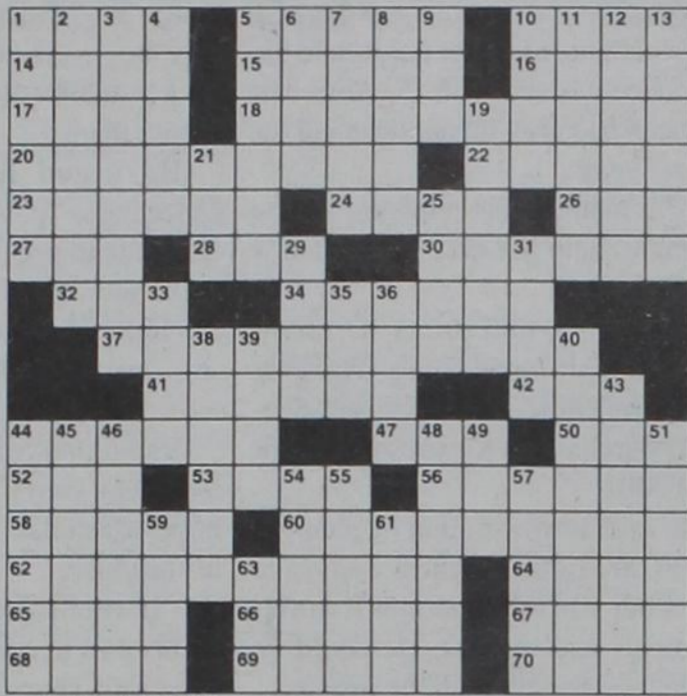

"Trapped in Paradise" was an attempt to be funny, but failed.

I wouldn't pay the $5.75 to see this movie, I wouldn't even bother to rent it or watch it on cable.

Tara McQueen is a features reporter for The University Daily.

EPA foresees better air, high gas costs

WASHINGTON (AP)—The December forecast for millions of Americans in the most polluted cities: Better air, higher prices for gas.

Drivers will begin paying more as gasoline stations shift to a cleaner-burning but more-expensive fuel under government orders. Prices at the pump could rise a nickel or more a gallon.

By the end of the year, nearly one-third of all the gasoline sold in America will have to be a new, reformulated blend that the government estimates will produce 20 percent less toxic and smog-causing pollution.

"This is the biggest change in gasoline in our lifetime," said William Berman, environmental affairs director for the American Automobile Association.

But Berman voiced concern that retail gasoline prices may rise more than necessary in the confusion surrounding the introduction of the new fuel, which the Environmental Protection Agency estimates will cost refiners about 4 cents more a gallon to produce.

The change is expected to affect more than 48 million motorists in all or parts of 17 states, including the Northeast and mid-Atlantic regions from southern Maine to Virginia.

The fuel also will be required in the Los Angeles and San Diego areas of southern California; in and around Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth in Texas; in the Chicago area, stretching into northwestern Indiana and southeastern Wisconsin, and in Kentucky in the Louisville area and the counties across the Ohio River from Cincinnati.

The gasoline, which has a different chemical makeup so it burns more cleanly and evaporates more slowly, already is at distribution terminals and will flow into service stations during December, industry officials said. In a few cases, some of the new gasoline already is believed to be in service station tanks.

Wholesale reformulated gasoline for delivery in January recently sold at 6 to 8 cents a gallon higher than conventional gasoline on the New York commodity market.

How much of that price increase will be passed onto retail customers will depend largely on local competitive pressures. In some areas of the Northeast and mid-Atlantic, gasoline prices already have jumped as much as 10 cents a gallon since mid-October for a variety of reasons, including weather-related supply interruptions. In some cases those temporary price increases may now become permanent.

"By the first of the year it's going to be 3 to 4 cents higher than today" because of the reformulated gasoline change, predicted Harry Murphy of the Service Station Dealers of America.

While consumers will pay more, EPA Administrator Carol Browner called the additional costs "extremely modest" when compared to the public health benefits from reducing tailpipe emissions of toxic and smog-causing chemicals.

"This is the easiest, most common-sense approach toward seriously improved air quality," said Browner.

Motorists are unlikely to notice much of a difference in the gasoline, say oil and auto industry experts. It has a slightly sweet, more pungent smell, but looks much like conventional gasoline.

"The car won't know the difference in terms of how it operates," says Walt Kreucher, an environmental engineer at the Ford Motor Co. "I can't see any customer noticing the difference."

There may be a 1 or 2 percent decline in fuel economy, according to EPA and industry studies.

Bourbon Street offers local blues connection

BY TARA ALLEN
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Songs about the facts of life, depression and elation; songs that get back to the roots of country music — they're the "blues," and now audiences don't have to travel all the way to New Orleans to get them.

Bourbon Street bar and club, located at I-27 and 50th Street, is dedicated to local West Texas blues bands.

Chris Commerford, general manager, has been in the nightclub business for more than 10 years.

"I saw a real opportunity here because of the interstate and because Lubbock needed a bar that caters to live bands," Commerford said.

The name for the bar came from Commerford's last "greatest vacation," he said.

"I spent the weekend on Bourbon Street in New Orleans and heard the blues band," he said. "I thought it would be a fitting name."

Commerford said he is trying to achieve a New Orleans atmosphere, but would eventually like to see a variety of music played there.

"Lubbock is good about supporting local music, and there aren't many places that play live music in the city," local blues singer Mike Pritchard said.

THE SOUND IS BETTER, IT'S MORE LAID BACK, AND WE DON'T HAVE A MEAT-MARKET ATMOSPHERE.

Chris Commerford
owner

"With technology progressing it is easier for club owners to use recorded music.

"For someone to actually support and get behind live bands is an art form that is fading out," Pritchard said. "People must support it."

Pritchard said West Texas blues bands are top-rate.

"Bands in Lubbock are more talented, original and authentic than any others," he said.

Bourbon Street will continue to offer live bands instead of taped music.

"We have a lot of good bands who really want to play for us," Commerford said.

Pritchard said he and his band, Mike Pritchard's Cat House Blues, were honored to be the act for the opening of Bourbon Street.

"Bourbon Street is off the beaten path, which really lends itself to this kind of music," Pritchard said.

Commerford said he is pleased with the club's location so far, even though business started out a little slowly.

"If people see what we have to offer, like the atmosphere and laid-back crowds, they'll come back," Commerford said. "The average Lubbock resident would fit in perfect here at Bourbon Street."

Commerford said Bourbon Street has a personal touch.

"The sound is better, it's more laid back, and we don't have a meat-market atmosphere," he said. "The customers will know everyone and be comfortable. The bartender is not going to be rushed and impersonal."

The club is open from 5 p.m. to 2 a.m. Wednesday through Friday and from 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Singer has series of disappointments

BRANSON, Mo. (AP) — Charley Pride's first year in this Ozarks music haven has been a mix of good times, disappointments and health worries.

The country star's new theater was supposed to be ready in April, but delays pushed the opening back to June. While crowds have been good, sales of his new autobiography, "Pride: The Charley Pride Story," have been flat.

Then in September, the 55-year-old Pride had a health scare on stage.

"My mouth started twisting on me and I started talking with a slur to my words," he said. "The doctor asked if I could wink my eye. Well, I could wink my right eye but could not wink my left eye."

Pride was diagnosed with Bell's palsy, a common nerve disorder that is not dangerous and usually is temporary.

Pride, whose hits include "Kiss an Angel Good Morning" and "Burgers and Fries," said his health is fine now.

Tommy Tune stars in Broadway musical

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy Tune on stage in a role played on screen by Charles Laughton? With music and lyrics by the team that wrote "Mary Poppins?"

This intriguing combination will bring the dancer and choreographer back to Broadway next fall in "Busker Alley," a new musical based on the 1938 British movie "St. Martin's Lane." The show is about London entertainers called buskers. The music and lyrics are by Richard and Robert Sherman, the brothers who wrote scores for such Disney movies as "The Jungle Book," "The Aristocats," "Bedknobs and Broomsticks" and "Mary Poppins."

Tune will star in "Busker Alley" but won't direct or choreograph it.

Newman donates money to theater

EASTON, Pa. (AP) — It's easy to find people willing to wrestle over $5,000. It's even easier when the money comes as a check endorsed by Paul Newman.

The actor donated the money from his food company to the State Theatre at the suggestion of friend and fellow race-car driver, Mario Andretti.

"We've gotten donations before, but you can never escape the thrill of celebrity," said Shelley Brown, the theater's executive director. "We don't usually have everyone in the office fighting to touch the signature on the check."

The money comes from Newman's Own, which makes salad dressing, salsa, spaghetti sauce and popcorn. Newman donates all of the profits — more than $50 million to date — to charity. Andretti, who recently retired from racing, has been a longtime supporter of the State Theatre. Newman was Andretti's guest at the reopening of the refurbished theater in 1990.

Jackson-Presley marriage may be shaky

NEW YORK (AP) — Who would have imagined? The Michael Jackson-Lisa Marie Presley marriage may be breaking up.

Less than five months after the kids secretly tied the knot and stunned the world, it seems the whole Neverland-Graceland love thing might have been — gasp! — a corporate merger. Or a publicity stunt. Or just another tale of boy meets girl, boy gets weird, girl gets out.

The official word from the couple's spokespeople: The couple are not registered at the Heartbreak Hotel. Michael did not tell Lisa to beat it. The newlyweirds never can say goodbye. "It's totally untrue," Jackson spokesman Lee Solters said of the divorce rumors. A spokeswoman for mother-in-law Priscilla Presley agreed: "It is absolutely, unequivocally not true."

Those issuing the denials are the same folks who spent 11 weeks after the wedding saying the couple had never tied the knot.

The separation speculation, coming just after the couple's six-month anniversary, started with published reports in New York and London that the marriage was sinking.

Jackson biographer Christopher Andersen said he first heard rumors of a split on Tuesday.

"I had heard their lawyers were actually talking annulment," said the author of "Michael Jackson Unauthorized."

"Are Michael and Lisa Marie friends? Sure — they've been friends for a long time. But that's not a marriage," he said.

For those in need of a marital recap, a month-by-month report on the (un)happy couple:

April — Lisa Marie announces her divorce from musician Danny Keough.

May — Lisa Marie and Michael are married in a secret ceremony in the Dominican Republic.

June — Everybody lies about the marriage.

July — Everybody lies about the marriage.

August — The marriage is confirmed. The kids honeymoon in Hungary. A Time-CNN poll shows 41 percent of Americans think the union will last less than a year.

September — Lisa Marie is visibly uncomfortable when Michael plants a long kiss on her to open the MTV Music Awards.

Child molestation charges against Michael are dropped.

October — A Memphis homecoming for the wedded couple for an Elvis Tribute Concert. Elvis is seen mumbling about the wedding in a Commerce, Okla., Burger King.

November — Marital problems. Or not.

What's behind this alleged sudden change of heart?

Andersen said the marriage was "a scam" from Day 1, and now Lisa Marie wants out. Gossip columnist Liz Smith intimates Michael viewed the nuptials as a "public relations coup," but Lisa Marie fell in love and now Michael wants out.

Another Jacksonophile, author J. Randy Taraborrelli, blames the split on Lisa's refusal to go East with Michael to his Trump Tower apartment in New York.

Whatever the reason, it seems only a few people expect the Jacksons to be exchanging silverware on their 25th anniversary. Or, for that matter, paper on anniversary No. 1.

"I did say the marriage would be over by the end of the year," Andersen said. "Not that I want to say I told you so."

Bush mimics 'Saturday Night Live' comedian

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Former President George Bush turned the tables on comedian Dana Carvey, mimicking one of his most well-known impersonators.

During remarks at Wednesday's groundbreaking for his presidential library at Texas A&M University, Bush talked about the changing status of himself and his eldest son, Texas

Gov.-elect George W. Bush.

"Barbara and I are just so proud of him, but there is one thing about his being elected that upset me. One of those media 'talking heads' apparently said that George's election was also good news for Dana Carvey — that Dana could now impersonate him like he did me.

"Well let me tell you this doesn't help with my identity crisis. First I was known as (first dog) Millie's owner, then it was Barbara's husband, now it's the father of the governor-elect of Texas."

Then shifting into the clipped speaking pattern Carvey uses in his impersonation, Bush continued: "Now I have to share Dana too? Not gonna do it. Wouldn't be prudent."

Natalie Cole says musician father was 'typical dad'

NEW YORK (AP) — As a child, Natalie Cole grew up with the sounds of Nancy Wilson, Tony Bennett, Johnny Mathis and other pop and jazz greats.

But when the Beatles hit it big, she begged her father for their records.

And what was Nat "King" Cole's reaction to the Fab Four?

"Ehhhhhhh," she said in a recent interview, laughing.

"He was a typical dad in that sense.

He just wanted to make sure that I was grounded in some other stuff. I'm really glad that I was able to absorb Sarah (Vaughan) and Ella (Fitzgerald) at the same time I was absorbing Jimi Hendrix and the Beatles and Motown."

The 44-year-old Cole will sing tunes from her new Christmas album, "Holly and Ivy," on PBS' "Great Performances" Monday night.

Jury awards millions to mauled zoo keeper

CINCINNATI (AP) — A jury awarded nearly $3.5 million to a former Cincinnati Zoo animal keeper whose forearm was chewed off and swallowed by a polar bear.

Laurie Stober, 30, was attacked in 1990 by Icee, an 800-pound bear that grabbed her fingers with his teeth and chewed his way up to her elbow.

The zoo said that it had followed proper procedures.

Stober had stuck her fingers inside the cage in violation of zoo policy, they said.

Stober, however, said the bear poked through the bars of the cage and bit her fingertips as she offered it a grape.

And she said the zoo had made the animal hostile by confining it in a small, poorly lighted and ventilated cage.

"It's never been about money to me. It's been about working conditions," Stober said after the verdict Wednesday. "I'm happy for me and the people who are still working at the zoo."

The zoo said it will appeal.

Roseanne, Tom Arnold sell boat, 'My Rosey'

ROCK ISLAND, III. (AP) — Roseanne and Tom Arnold's floating love nest is on sale now that their marriage has sunk.

The boat, My Rosey, arrived in Rock Island on Wednesday after spending time in the waters of Lake Rathbun near Centerville, Iowa.

Joe and Mary Wakeen, owners of Wakeen's Family Boating Center Inc., who originally sold the boat to the Arnolds, were asked to sell it again.

The Arnolds ordered the yacht in 1993, paying $190,000.

The 37-foot yacht has a black and beige interior with television, stereo equipment, air conditioning and sleeping quarters for two.

"They wanted something to escape and get away from the crowds," Wakeen said.

The Arnolds didn't do much escaping.

The boat has logged only 46 hours.

Cotton Bowl: Can't we all just get along

Yes, fellow Techsians, we are upon one of the greatest moments in Texas Tech athletic history. For the first time in 55 years, the Red Raiders football team is representing our university in the Mobil Cotton Bowl. The big problem is no one can get along.

JONATHAN HARRIS

Students are mad at season ticket holders and Bob Bockrath, Cotton Bowl ticket lottery people are mad at students and it seems everyone is mad at The University Daily editor.

In the immortal words of Rodney King, "Can't we all just get along?"

Let's get things prioritized here. To students, that would be let's sixth prioritize things.

The first problem is students and tickets. I think the lottery for tickets Tuesday, that went on sale Monday, was kind of putting the cart before the horse. The Student Association should have made it known that students would be able to buy tickets Tuesday. Instead, students froze their butts off to stand in line to fill out an application at the ticket office to maybe get tickets in the nose bleed section of the Cotton Bowl.

Here's an idea for future reference, why not offer the students the tickets on a first-come first-served basis, like most everything else you buy tickets for.

I hope students are beginning to realize they are second-class citizens when it comes to athletic events at Tech. You can see it evident at football games, basketball games and, now, the Cotton Bowl. If you have been to a basketball game this season, you know what I mean. Those are some really nice behind-the-goal seats students are assigned to, huh? I think I know what the athletic department is trying to get from the seating. (i.e. The North Carolina-Duke basketball game, where students are behind the goal trying to make the other team miss their free throws.)

Yes, that is one of the coolest sights in college basketball.

But at the coliseum, you can't see anything, and it won't matter who makes the free throw, if no one is there.

I think most students would agree with me. If I could afford season tickets, I would buy the damn things.

RAIDERS ARE WORTHY OF COTTON

Now for the big thing, I say hell yes the Red Raiders deserve to go to the Cotton Bowl!

This is a team that was picked to finish fifth this year. They have seven freshmen playing on a regular basis. Spike has done a great job with these guys. That defense, oh man, that defense. Sure they had five losses, but let's see who they lost to: Nebraska — they are pretty good, considering they have been ranked No. 1 for most of the season; Texas A&M — they are pretty good themselves, since they have not lost a Southwest Conference game in four years; Oklahoma — another ranked team that is tough to beat in Norman. Tech could be like A&M and play Iowa State every year.

Tech finally gets a chance to show the rest of the country what they have. Jan. 2 I think it would be great to see the students with their red and black and, of course, their tortillas and show this Tech team the support they need. GIVE 'EM HELL BIG RED, GIVE 'EM HELL.

Raiders face first road test against Wisconsin

BY JESSE MALDONADO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

After its season opening win at home, the Texas Tech men's basketball team is on the road to face No. 13 Wisconsin (2-0) at 1:05 p.m. Saturday in the University of Wisconsin Field House in Madison.

This will be one of the Red Raiders' first road challenges. Last season the Badgers claimed a 91-88 victory in Lubbock. Tech head coach James Dickey said preparation for the game is essential for Tech.

"Playing on the road will be a big key," Dickey said. "However, we have a veteran team, and they understand that we're on the road. The big thing is (that) we make sure we prepare ourselves for the ball game."

Both teams enter Saturday's game with undefeated records and experienced veteran ball clubs. The Raiders return all five starters from last season's 17-11 ball club. The Badgers also return four starters and two all-American candidates in senior forward Michael Finley and sophomore center Rashard Griffith.

"They're a good basketball team," Dickey said. "They have two all-American candidates in Rashard Griffith and Michael Finley, they're both excellent players. It gives them a good inside and out combination."

In the last meeting, both Finley and Griffith were the offensive and defensive spark for the Badgers.

Finley, who led all Badgers scorers, scored 27 points and was three of four from the free-throw line. He also had four rebounds.

Griffith's inside game gave the Badgers some room underneath, as he racked up 21 points and seven rebounds.

Senior guard Lance Hughes said the key in winning the game in Wisconsin will be to stop Finley's offensive strength.

"The key to stopping their offense is stopping Michael Finley," Hughes said. "Last year he had 27 points against us. I know I was playing in that game, and I don't remember him scoring 27. If he can score that many points and can be quiet, he is capable of scoring 40 points against anybody. He is one of the best players in America."

Dickey said the Raiders enter the game with some starters who have not stepped up for the team, but he expects them to fare well against the Badgers.

"I don't think that Lance (Hughes) has played as well as he is capable of playing nor has Jason Sasser. But they will step up in the game on Saturday."

However, Hughes said that both he and Sasser will be ready come Saturday.

"A game like Houston Baptist is really hard to get up for, though you can't use that as an excuse," Hughes said. "I don't think Jason would use that excuse because he certainly didn't play as well as he could."

"I think if you are a big-time basketball player and you're going in and playing No. 13 Wisconsin and if you can't get up for that game, then you can't get up for any game."

Leading the Raiders is senior guard/forward Mark Davis.

He was 12 of 21 from the field and five of eight from the free-throw line, tallying up 29 points in the Raiders' win over Houston Baptist.

Defensively, Davis also produced big numbers, grabbing seven offensive and three defensive rebounds and three steals.

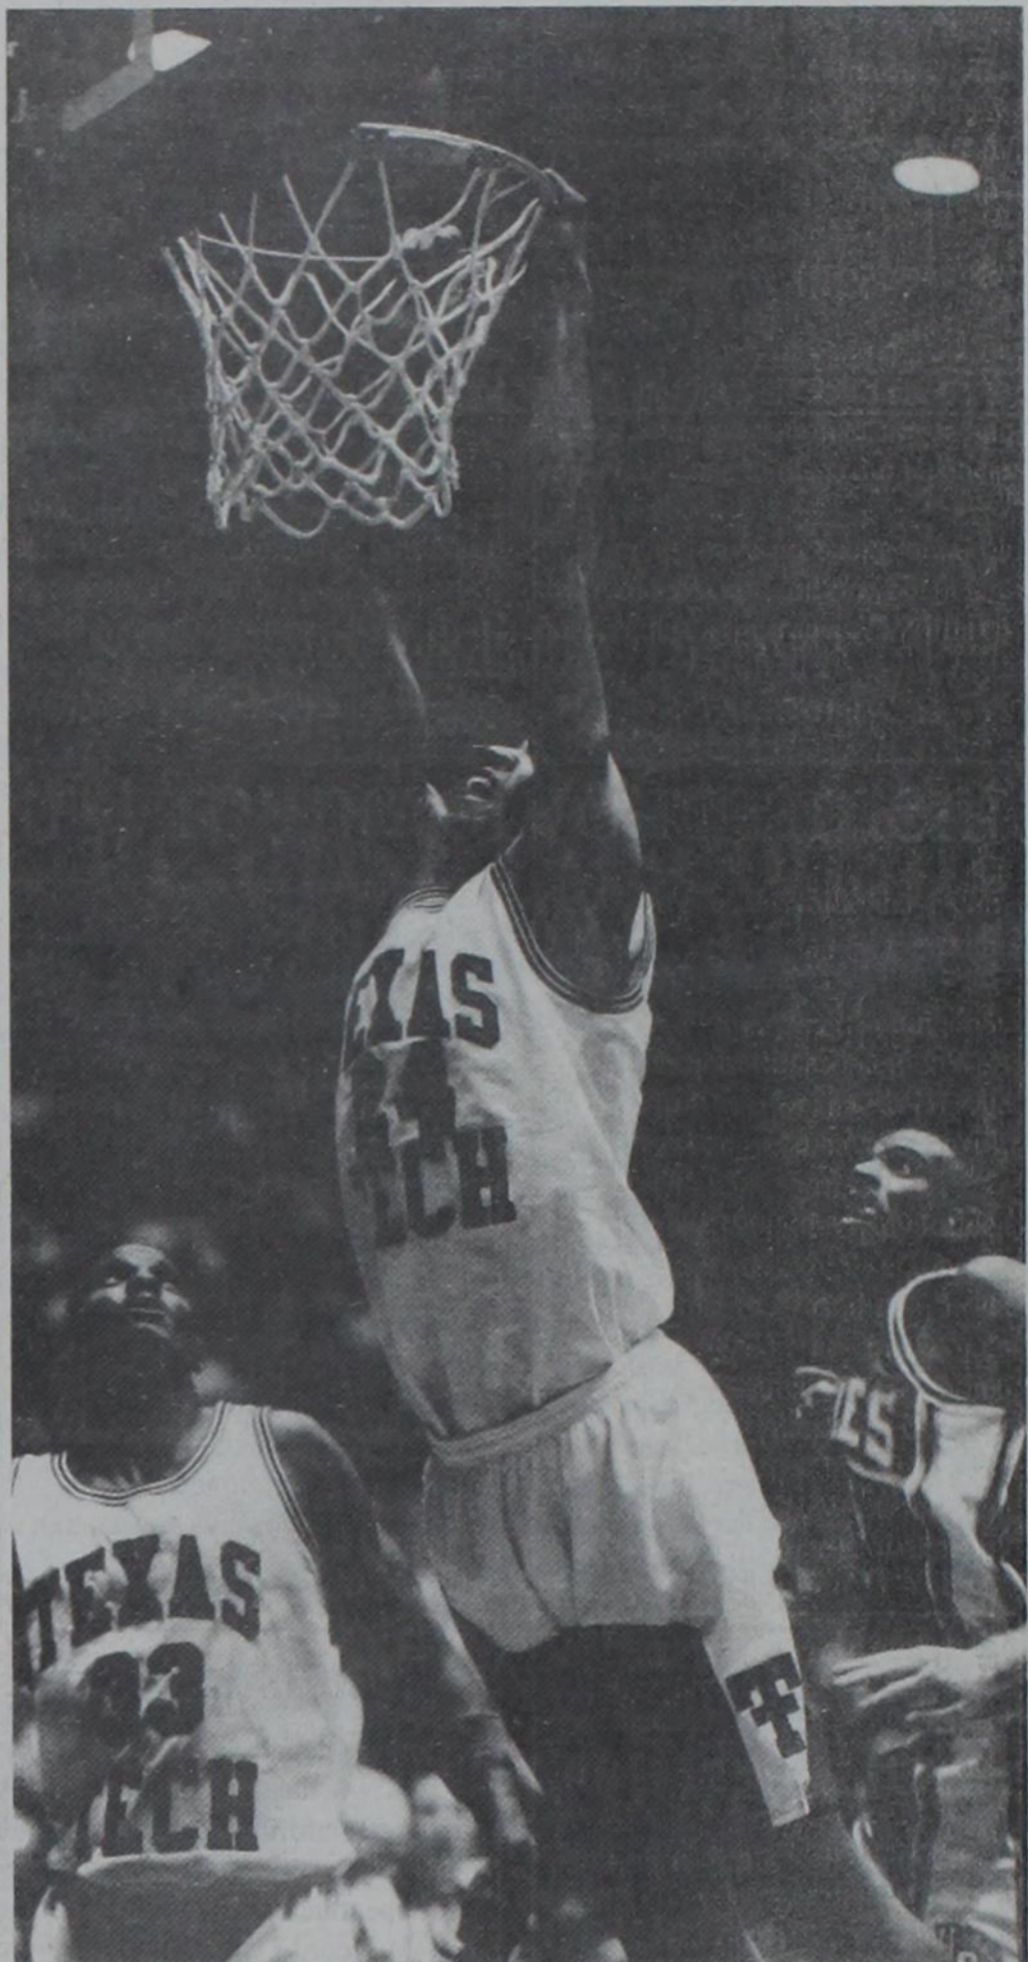

Junior guard Koy Smith, the other offensive spark for the Raiders, contributed with 22 points in the season opener.

Smith also tied the school three-point record, going 6 of 11 from three-point land.

"Hopefully, we're going to go in and Koy and Mark will have similar games, but Jason and I will have a better game. It will be an all-around team effort, and we'll try to come out of there with a win," Hughes said.

The Wisconsin game is the first against a ranked opponent this season for Tech. Dickey said this will be a great opportunity for the Red Raiders.

"It will be a big challenge, but at the same time, it's a great opportunity for us," Dickey said. "If we play well, we feel like we can go up there and have a great chance to win the ball game. But it will certainly have to be a good effort by everyone."

Sports talk shows offer Tech fans variety of views

BY JARED PARCELL
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

For people who want to express their opinions about sports over the airwaves, Lubbock has three sports talk shows on local radio stations that allow people such an opportunity.

The first show, Sports Line with Jack Dale, the voice of the Red Raiders, can be heard on KKAM-AM 1340 from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Dale said he owns Sports Line Inc. with his son, Steve, and buys time on the KKAM show. He said Sports Line Inc. is a production company.

"We buy time for The Spike Dykes Show and The James Dickey Show," Dale said.

His show, which he said was his idea, debuted June 1. Prior to Sports Line, Dale worked on Sports Talk for nearly two years, and he spent more than 40 years at KFYO-AM 790.

"Before moving, we (he and his son) had talked about the idea of running our own business," Dale said.

He also said he gets little information for his shows from newspapers and outside sources.

"We talk about current events," Dale said. "We try to feature guests locally, statewide or nationally. Sometimes we will have a round table with various sports media personnel in the area. Most of our material is from phone calls, and once a month we have a trivia show."

Dale said preparation for a show can take a long time.

"Just for a week's worth of material, I need to line up guests, which is time consuming," Dale said.

The reaction from around the area, Dale said, has been tremendous.

"People love the show," Dale said. "There are a bunch of talk show listeners in Lubbock. I cherish those who call because they are a part of the program."

On deck is Sports Talk with Williams and Hyatt, which can be heard on KFYO, from 5:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The show's co-hosts, Ryan Hyatt, sports director at KFYO, and Don Williams, a sports columnist for the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, also made their debut June 1.

Hyatt said the idea for Sports Talk was created by Danny Fletcher, the general manger at KFYO.

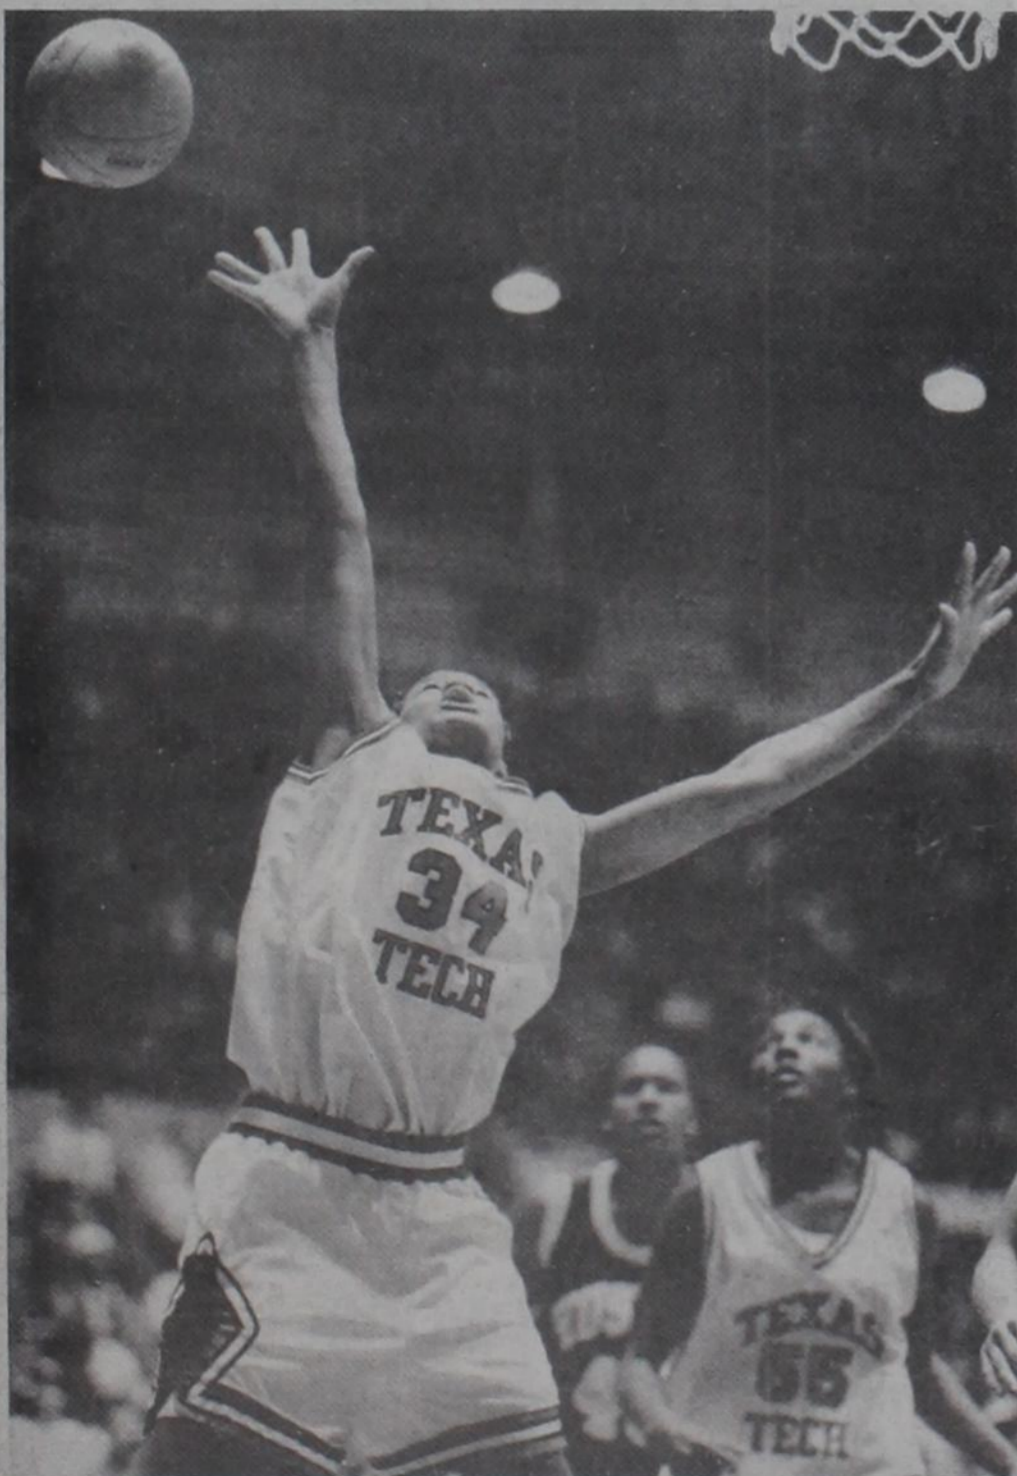

Sports talk shows are nothing new to Hyatt.

He was a part of Raider Talk on KTX-FM 88.1 in 1988.

Williams said he had never had any experience in the radio business before Sports Talk.

"I really have no background on the radio except for maybe half a dozen guest appearances," Williams

Senior forward Tabitha Truesdale tries to rebound a missed shot against Washington. The Lady Raiders return home to face Richmond Saturday at 3:30 p.m. in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Tech faces Richmond in first round of tournament

BY BRYAN ADAMS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech Lady Raiders take on the University of Richmond at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum in the first round of the seventh Lady Raider Classic at 3 p.m. Saturday.

The other first-round game is West Virginia against Wichita State at 1 p.m. Saturday in the coliseum.

The No. 11 ranked team will try to extend its Lady Raider Tournament winning streak.

The Lady Raiders are 4-2 this season and have won the two-day event four out of the six times, including 1993 and 1992.

"We're real excited about hosting the Lady Raider Classic," Tech head coach Marsha Sharp said.

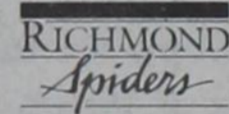

"We have a real quality field this year. There are three other teams with a chance to be great teams. These will be some great games."

The Spiders have a new face this year in freshman Carole Detollenaere, who won the starting point guard job in preseason and adds a new dimension to the position.

On defense Detollenaere is intense and quick, as evidenced by her eight steals in their season opener against Maryland-Eastern Shore.

Since she was 11 years old, she has been a member of the Belgian national team and is the starting point guard for the current Belgian national team. "They have a lot of weapons," Sharp said.

"They won their only game this year pretty handily. She (Detollenaere) will be a big part of their game. It ought to be a great game."

The winner of Saturday's game will play the winner of the West Virginia-Wichita State game Sunday at 3 p.m.

The losers will play at 1 p.m. Besides Tech, only Richmond has played a game prior to this weekend.

"We probably know more about Wichita State," Sharp said.

"We've played a lot of games up to this point, and the others are just beginning their seasons. That's an advantage for them because they've had a chance to look at us."

The Lady Raiders have already played three ranked teams this season: Vanderbilt, Washington and Stanford. Sharp said even though these teams are not ranked, they will be tough opponents.

"There is so much parity in women's basketball," Sharp said. "Everybody takes it up a step higher when they play us. We've learned some things the past few games, and hopefully we can convert those things to the court this weekend."

Last year's Most Valuable Player in the Classic was junior post Michi Atkins.

She is averaging 17.3 points and 7.8 rebounds a game this year.

"She (Atkins) has played very well for us so far this year," Sharp said. "She played well against Oklahoma earlier in the week, and she had a good game against Stanford. We will need her to be a major contributor this weekend."

Sharp said early in the week that she was looking for help coming off the bench at the guard positions.

Backups Michelle Thomas, Sandy

Parker and Elesha Walker have combined for 15 points in six games this season.

"Not yet," Sharp said about a possible solution to the problem. "We'll just have to wait for that to emerge. Hopefully soon we'll have an answer there."

During the 1990s the Lady Raiders have posted a mark of 59-6 at home. Until they lost to Washington in the finals of the WNIT, they had won 24 in a row and 49 of their last 50 at home.

"There's no question we're at home," Sharp said. "I think our crowd is like our sixth man. We'll see some great basketball. I hope a lot of people come out."

Drug test results examined by officials

BEIJING (AP) — Positive drug tests for 11 Chinese athletes were not evidence of regular drug use in Chinese sports, an official said Thursday.

"This is an act by individuals," Foreign Ministry spokesman Chen Jian said at a weekly briefing, adding that Chinese sports authorities practice "strict prohibition, strict testing and strict punishment" of drug use.

Chen reiterated China's position that recent stunning performances by its athletes were the result of hard, scientific training.

"Their performance cannot be denied," he said.

The 11, including seven swimmers, tested positive for performance-enhancing drugs during the Asian Games in October in Hiroshima, Japan.

On Wednesday, in its first official comment on the affair, the Chinese national Olympic committee said it was "shocked and upset" by the test results.

They followed allegations by coaches and athletes from other countries that the stunning successes of China's athletes may be due in part to the use of performance-enhancing drugs.

Allegations of drug use among Chinese women swimmers escalated at the World Championships in Rome in September when they won 12 of 16 gold medals. The Chinese women won all 15 of their races at the Asian Games, raising further suspicion.

On Thursday, the Yomiuri Shimbun, Japan's largest-circulation daily, identified the 11 accused of illegal doping. They include Yang Aihua, who won the women's 400-meter freestyle at the World Championships, and Lu Bin, who won four gold medals at the Asian Games and set a world record in the women's 200-meter individual medley.

Yang already has been banned from competition for two years for a positive test in Hiroshima just before the games.

The Yomiuri said the other swimmers include women's 400-meter freestyle champion Zhou Guanbin; male teammate Xiong Guoming, who also won four golds; 50-meter freestyle titlist Hu Bin; 200-meter butterfly gold medalist Xue Wei; and Fu Yong, a bronze medalist. Also accused, it said, were women's 400-meter hurdles champion Han Qing; men's canoeing double gold medalist Zhang Lei; canoeing silver medalist Qiu Suoren; and women's cycling sprint champion Wang Yan.

Germany's swimming federation responded by announcing plans to boycott the World Cup in Beijing and other events in China to protest the country's doping record.

But Chinese sports officials said Thursday there are no plans for a World Cup swimming competition in Beijing next month. The World Swimming Federation had assigned the dates Jan. 7-8 to Beijing for one stage of the World Cup competitions, held in several different cities each year. But the Chinese Swimming Association said it has been unable to raise funds.

"We never even sent out any invitations," said an official who answered the phone at the association's offices.

NHL negotiators continue searching for labor peace

CHICAGO (AP) — With many of their players taking a tough stance, the National Hockey League Players Association went back to the bargaining table Thursday still hoping to find labor peace.

"Many of the players — I'd say 90 per cent — feel we've given up too much already and we're not going to give up any more," said Chicago's Jeremy Roenick.

"A lot of things have been talked about and agreed to and I hope people realize how much the players have given up to get hockey back on the ice."

Roenick alluded to the rookie salary cap issue, among other things.

At one time strongly opposed to any kind of salary cap, players have softened their stance on entry-level salaries.

But they still haven't come to terms on the numbers.

Reportedly, owners would like a maximum cap for rookie salaries set at around $750,000 a season, while players would prefer around $1.5 million.

Players were expected to present the owners with their thoughts on other major issues such as free agency and salary arbitration.

But they were likely to stay away from one key issue: the contentious luxury tax which has been the main sticking point of the dispute.

"The players won't have a salary cap," said Los Angeles Kings captain Wayne Gretzky, who was in Michigan with a team of NHL players for an exhibition against Detroit's International Hockey League team

Thursday night and a tour of Scandinavia beginning Sunday.

"Everything else is negotiable."

In fact, we could start playing hockey right now if the owners would throw out the salary cap."

Until now, owners have insisted on a tax of team payrolls that go over the average team salary and give the money to those under the prescribed limit.

The players have been against such a tax, believing it has the same effect as a salary cap.

Players reportedly would accept a diminished version of the payroll tax if owners share the burden by taxing gate receipts.

The tax issue did not come up in recent talks when the negotiators met six times in a 10-day period in Boston ending on Saturday.

Troy Loney of the New York Islanders thought it was a good thing.

"If the tax is on the table, there's trouble," said Loney, the Islanders' player representative.

Negotiators arrived for the latest session Thursday morning, with NHL commissioner Gary Bettman among the first to appear at the meeting.

"I am always hopeful," Bettman said as he walked past television cameras and into an elevator at a Chicago hotel. Among the players present were Toronto's Ken Baumgartner and Marty McSorley of the Los Angeles Kings.

Baumgartner's only response was "no comment" when approached by reporters on the way back from a lunch break.

Murray favored for rodeo title

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Few will dispute that Ty Murray is one tough cowboy. He's also well on his way to being one rich rodeo rider.

Murray is once again the dominating favorite to take home the big money beginning Friday when the National Finals Rodeo begins a 10-day run with $2.8 million at stake.

Murray has won five straight All-Around Cowboy titles and is well on his way to taking a sixth as the world's richest rodeo caps a long and grueling rodeo season.

Only two other cowboys — Larry Mahan and Tom Ferguson — have won six all-around titles, a record the Stephenville, Texas, rider would tie if he has even a mediocre finals.

"That's been a goal of mine for quite awhile," Murray said.

Murray has won $165,558 this year and is once again qualified for all three roughstock events in the NFR — bull riding, saddle bronc and bareback.

Murray earned $124,821 at last year's NFR, giving him a total of $297,896 for the season. He could eclipse both of those marks at this year's event, which would make him the leading money in Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association history.

Salaam plans announcement about possible move to NFL

IRVING (AP) — Another award for Rashaan Salaam. And more pressure to leave Colorado for the NFL after the Fiesta Bowl game with Notre Dame.

Salaam was announced the winner of the Doak Walker Award for the nation's top running back on Thursday and said he would announce in early January whether he will forego his senior season.

Speaking by television hookup from Boulder, Salaam hooked up with Boulder, Salaam said, "I'm thinking about Notre Dame until Jan. 2. Then I will make my decision on the fifth or sixth of January."

carry, fourth best in NCAA history. He rushed 298 times for 2,055 yards to become only the fourth player to rush for 2,000 yards in a single season. He led the nation with 144 points.

Salaam was one of 47 candidates for the Doak Walker, named after the former Southern Methodist All-American and All-Pro with the Detroit Lions.

Previous winners included Greg Lewis, Washington, 1990; Trevor Cobb, Rice, 1991; Garrison Hearst, Georgia, 1992; and Byron (Bam) Morris, Texas Tech, 1993.

Salaam said "winning the Doak Walker was one of my goals before the season started. I wanted to be the top notch running back in the nation."

Colorado coach Bill McCartney said Salaam's success didn't go to his head.

State's top two 5A programs to meet

DALLAS (AP) — Without much argument, Plano and Odessa Permian are considered the state's top two Class 5A football programs. This weekend, one school will take a step toward ending any debate.

The two meet Saturday in a 5A Division I semifinal that will send one of them to the title game. A championship appearance by Permian would be its state-record 11th; should Plano go on to win the title, it would be its record seventh. Earlier this season, neither school was expected to be playing on the first weekend in December. Yet both are 10-3 and on a roll, serving as proof of strength of their programs.

Salaam, who could become an instant millionaire as first pick in the 1995 draft, said earlier in the week he wants to stay in Colorado for his senior season.

"It's hard to leave college football. It's a tough decision because I'm getting a lot of telephone calls (from NFL teams). My feelings are pretty steady and I just really want to stay here," he said after winning the Walter Camp Foundation Award for the nation's best college football player.

Salaam averaged 186.8 yards per

Owner receives no local bid for team

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — No one stepped forward by owner Taylor Moore's Nov. 30 deadline for receiving only local offers for his Shreveport Captains minor league baseball team.

Moore has said he wanted the team to remain in Shreveport.

He leaves Friday for Baseball's Winter Meeting.

There he is expected to receive offers from out-of-town groups during the conference.

Moore is asking for $3.5 million for the team, which plays in the Class AA Texas League.

The price tag for the team rises to an estimated $4 million with other assets included.

Talk show

Shows require hard work to gather information, contact sources

continued from page 9 said. "They approached me in May and kind of recruited me. It was really a crash course in learning."

Information for the daily talk shows are obtained through various sources.

Preparing for each show, Hyatt said, is an ongoing process.

"I read as much as possible," he said. "Exposure to different sports allows us to talk about several topics. We talk to each other during the day, but Williams usually shows up about 30 minutes before we go on the air."

Hyatt and Williams said reaction around the area has been positive because of the audience and topics they try to cover.

"The comments have been very positive since we started," Williams said.

"We have been complimented on our objectivity. We don't sugar coat anything, we treat issues fairly."

Tuesday nights are the busiest for sports fans because from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m., KTXR has returned to the sports talk show scene after a year's absence.

The Sports Corner, with KTXR Sports Director James Aber and University Daily Sports Editor Arni Sribhen returned to the airwaves in September.

Since its return Aber said the shows have gotten progressively better with time and practice.

"It takes time to get going," Aber said. "At first we did not have many calls. We used to fill our time with interviews."

Aber said he can spend anywhere from two to five hours during the week preparing for a Tuesday show.

"The length of preparation depends on what is on the show," Aber said.

"If Razor (Dobbs) is on with his (Blade Radio) segment, my time is cut in half. I usually do some production, cutting tapes from interviews. Some time is spent doing homework on sports topics."

Aber said he uses several different sources to create topics for a weekly show, and most of the show is centered around Texas Tech sports.

"I watch SportsCenter on ESPN, read Sports Illustrated and various sports magazines and use press releases from Texas Tech," he said. "Being on the Tech campus, it comes with the territory that we would cover a lot of Tech sports."

Reaction from students and around the area has been mixed at times, but the audience, based on the amount of phone calls and comments from students around campus, has increased, Aber said.

"We have had a mixed bag of reactions," Aber said.

"At first we were just feeling our way through things, and people would call telling us to quit. Now, we have more listeners and callers, with many people being regulars. It's a fact we have gotten better and smoother."

Baseball owners say next strike move is up to players

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball negotiators returned to their offices Thursday, with the owners saying the next move is up to the players.

"The ball is in their court," acting commissioner Bud Selig said.

Players said they hope to have a counterproposal next Friday, when talks resume in Rye Brook, N.Y. The owners vow to start the season with or without union players.

Mediator W.J. Utery is considering attending the union's three-day executive board meeting that starts Monday in Atlanta. Eugene Orza, the union's No. 2 official, said his group already has been discussing a counteroffer. But the plan isn't expected to take shape until the board reviews negotiations. A large number of players are expected in Atlanta and management hopes players will pressure union head Donald Fehr to make a deal. On Wednesday, owners put their threat to implement a salary cap on hold. The major league meeting that had been scheduled for Chicago next Monday was postponed to Dec. 15 or 16 to allow the union additional time to formulate a plan.
