Mabel Taliaferro has achieved an ambition of many years standing "The Snowbird," the next Metro wonderplay in which she is starred. She plays the role of a boy in this production. And a delightful and charming boy she makes! Then the "man" finds out that she is a girl because her cap slips and her long tresses fall down over her face and

"The Snowbird" is a story of the North and the setting is in the Hudson Bay district. Edwin Carewe, who directs Miss Taliaferro in this production, and who was a well known stage and screen actor before he was a director, plays the leading male role in "The Snowbird." He is especially fitted for the part, as the role is that of a French-Canadian reared in the woods in a primitive state. Mr. Carewe is half Chickasaw Indian, and he gives a fine characterization of this typical man of the great outdoors, whose impulses and passions are elemental in their sim-
