Striving Toward Peace

On November 11th, in 1918, an armistice ended the first World War and the hope was born for permanent peace. This hope was not realized, but it is a goal toward which we have steadfastly set our minds and hearts

Our wars enabled us to continue to live in the way of our choice -the American way. On Armistice Day we honor those who died to safeguard the principles of life and liberty which we hold dear. The greatest tribute we can pay to them is to preserve, by the strength of unity, the peace for which they fought.
