The Spectator...

By Mary Brecheen

A small paper-back book entitled "Unforgiven" is the "list of bestsellers" among farmers and interested persons in Tahoka--and throughout the nation.

A copy of the publication goes with me and it is on my bedside table--I read it as time allows. It is quite informative, but had I not gone past the page, my time would have been well spent. Herein lies an eye-opener. When the American Heart Association was first formed, a man named Alexander Tyler wrote of the decline and fall of the American Republic--"A democracy cannot exist as a permanent form of government. It can only exist as long as the voters discover they can vote themselves riches (generous gifts) out of the public treasury. From that moment on the majority always votes for the candidate promising the most benefits from the public treasury with the result that democracy always collapses over a loose fiscal policy, always followed by dictatorship."

It is a bit ironic that while that message is etched upon my thoughts, I was privileged to attend, in the presence of others from the county, an in-depth, concentrated, 15-hour study of the United States Constitution. To say that I learned much is an understatement.

I suspect that I share the sentiments of a young farmer who spoke at a meeting in the school cafeteria Monday night. He said, "We're at a turning point in history." He expressed his feelings that something is going to happen soon--we hope it will be something good. Without a doubt, he had the attention of the young and old, the indifferent and the concerned.

Throughout history, awakenings have begun in a small nucleus of people. That tiny group is sometimes ostracized, and the skeptics have a hard time, but, by and by, there comes a day of awakening. Whether the price of cotton is raised or not, there has been a rumble under the earth at Tahoka, as well as other hamlets throughout the county, and that rumble will continue until there is a change.

History-Making Decisions Come From Small Office ...Manned By Volunteers

BY MARY BRECHEEN
A branch office of one of the largest lobbying groups in the nation's capitol is in small rooms at AMS Smith in Tahoka.

The file cabinet looks as though it may have been found in a salvage warehouse.

One wall is covered with newspaper clippings about their counterparts throughout the nation, and there is a calendar and there is a telephone--two of the most used items in the building.

It is the American Agriculture office in Tahoka and the manager is the person who happens to be disseminating information at the moment or who may be talking to an airline ticket agent making flight reservations to Washington D.C. or some other distant part of the country.

When one "manager" leaves, another takes over--all the help is volunteer. And the prevailing attitude is,

BEN AND KAY GILLIAM of O'Donnell do their share of work at the headquarters of the Movement in Tahoka. They will be going to Washington within the next few days to give support at farm-bill hearings.

MONTE DODSON, president of the local affiliate of the American Heart Association, accepts from Mayor Mel Leslie a document proclaiming the month of February as Heart Month in Tahoka. Citizens are urged to support the campaign of the Association in its fight against the country's number one killer.

Chalk, Abilene Lawyer, Speaks To Rotary Club About "Dusty" Rhodes

John Allen Chalk, Abilene attorney and associate of A. L. (Dusty) Rhodes, candidate for 17th District Congressman, was the speaker at last Thursday's Rotary meeting.

The speaker declared the 17th Congressional District, now represented by Omar Burleson, is the second largest such district in the nation and covers 33 counties, from Lynn on the west to north of Fort Worth.

He presented a picture of "Dusty" Rhodes as a successful man financially who wishes to be of service to our state and nation, an aggressive and capable man, a man interested in the free enterprise system, in farming, ranching, small business, and oil production, a religious family man, and a "persuader who can get things done."

He is directly interested in farming, ranching, and oil interests, the major concerns of this district in Texas. Mr. Chalk highly recommends Rhodes as a man who can help our area get things done in Congress.

Since George Mahon, Omar Burleson, and Bob Poage, all stalwarts in representing farming interests, are retiring when their terms expire, (see Rhodes, page 3)

Weather And Broken Water Lines Close Tahoka Schools For One Day

City employees worked more than fourteen hours last Tuesday night and Wednesday morning in ice and snow to repair two major water lines which broke and caused residents throughout the city to be without water from early Wednesday until almost noon.

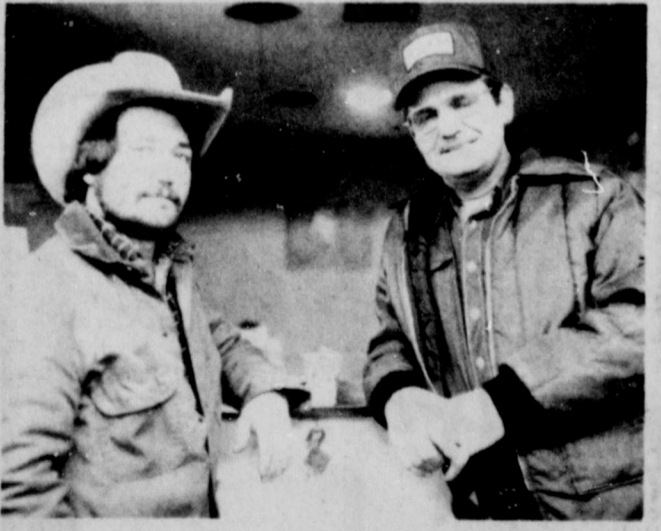

School was dismissed because of no water and because of the dangerous road and street conditions.

The eight-inch water main on West Lockwood broke about 7 p.m. on Tuesday, causing that part of town to lose water service; then another on North Third, near the warehouse, broke later.

"There's more at stake here than the price of cotton."

The office is open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and is many times operated by wives who have an hour away from home duties.

One farmer there on Tuesday of this week, Billy Russ, said that of the approximately 1600 farmers in the county, at least 50 percent are involved in some way in the Movement. J. A. Pepsworth, Jr., longtime Lynn County and Gaines BOBBY MARTIN, left, and Dan Lockaby are active in the American Agriculture Movement in Tahoka. Lockaby was an official delegate to Washington D.C. from the county.

American Agriculture Spokesmen 'Tell It Like It Is' To Large Audience

Eleven farmers from Lynn County who went to Washington D.C. recently as a part of the American Agriculture Movement met with a crowd of more than a hundred people in Tubb Elementary Cafeteria Monday night to report on their mission.

Billy Russ opened the informative session by saying, "Much good was done in Washington."

Wilson farmer, Tommy Bednarz, gave a day-by-day account of the time spent in the capital city by the official delegates--himself, Dan Lockaby, and Robert Bessire. Bednarz stressed the fact that urban congressmen are totally uninformed about the farmers' situation.

He and Lockaby heard Congressman George Mahon present the Presidential budget to the House of Representatives.

Lockaby and Robbie Roberson told of their experiences in other meetings.

Time Change Announced For Revival

Services at Sweet Street Baptist Church revival this week are at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. and Sunday services are 9:45 a.m. and 6 p.m.

The Booster Band for youngsters will be at 7 p.m.

Another delegation from the county stayed after the official spokesmen returned. Among those, Martin Warren reported that, for the most part, sessions were well organized. He met with the FmHA and said that it appears favorable they will help farmers.

Taylor Knight was one of about fifteen farmers from Dawson, Lynn, Garza, and Lubbock Counties who met with the National Cotton Council, and he was also one of several hundred who attended a meeting in Jefferson Auditorium of the Department of Agriculture, the group being comprised of cotton farmers, wheat farmers, corn and cattle

Jim Baum Brings Campaign To O'Donnell; Will Be In Tahoka

Jim Baum from Big Spring, who seeks election as Congressman from the 17th District of Texas, brought his door-to-door campaign to O'Donnell last Saturday, and plans to be in the Tahoka, New Home, and Wilson areas on Saturday, February 4th.

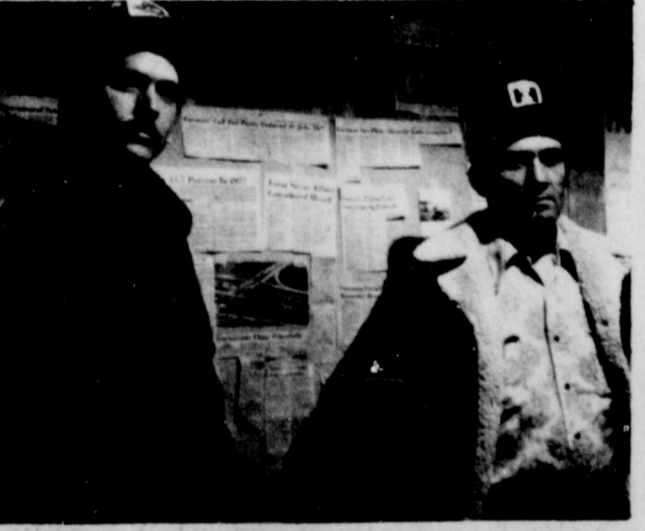

Baum met with businessmen in O'Donnell most of the morning, following by a door-to-door campaign by himself, his wife, and three of the couple's four children. "By going door to door, I have a chance to talk face to face with voters," Baum said.

He said most citizens wanted to discuss issues related to the farm situation. He says he supports the American Agriculture Movement and its call for 100 percent of parity. "I think (see Baum, page 3) to be done which may well affect the future of the nation. And when it's presented in that light, the list of volunteers is long and they make their motives plain.

BILLY RUSS, from the O'Donnell area, has been to Washington and reported on his trip to more than a hundred people on Monday night of this week. He spends all of his spare time in the American Agriculture headquarters in Tahoka, taking care of telephone calls, etc.

DANNY OWENS and WILLIE NIEMAN, from the New Home area, lend their support to the issues of the American Agriculture Movement in Lynn County. They pose before a wall covered with news articles about the nationwide farm movement.

USDA Requires Identification Of Swine Moved Interstate

Swine producers in Lynn County should be aware of a regulation change moving interstate movement and indemnity provisions to fight swine brucellosis. Indemnity regulations became effective December 23 and shipping regulations become effective January 23.

The new regulations require testing of sows and over six months old are moved interstate for breeding purposes and identification of such animals moved interstate for slaughter purposes. The identification requirement allow tracing of swine infected at slaughter to their herd of origin. Indemnity regulations allow up to $25 indemnity per head for purebred swine and $10 per head for other breeding swine tested on farms and found infected. Known infected swine moving interstate must be identified as reactors and must move directly to slaughter or to markets to be sold for slaughter.

Testing requirements call for a negative blood test of breeding swine within 30 days of shipment across state lines unless they are from a validated brucellosis-free herd or area.

Sows and boars sold interstate for slaughter must be identified as to a herd of origin by an APHIS (Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service)-approved tattoo applied to the back of each animal before it is mixed with other swine or moved interstate.

Approved identification tags can be used instead of the tattoo if this is requested in writing by state animal health officials. Provisions are also made for shipments from farms of origin to slaughter or to markets for sale to slaughter.

Brucellosis is a contagious disease of livestock that spreads through movement of breeding animals. It may also affect humans who come into contact with infected animals.

Proper Tree-Planting Important

February is an ideal time to select shade or ornamental trees for planting so that they can become established prior to spring growth. But tree planting should be done with care.

To begin, select a tree that suits your particular landscape needs. Before buying, ask yourself these questions: Will there be adequate room for the tree when it reaches maturity? Will it fit the existing landscape? Is it to be used for shade, screening, wind protection, or just to balance the landscape?

Choose a tree that is well adapted to area soils and weather extremes. Consider possible insect problems such as elm leaf beetles, common to various elm species, and disease susceptibilities such as anthracnose, common to sycamore trees.

The potential tree buyer will have to choose between deciduous and evergreen trees. Deciduous trees provide shade in summer and shed their leaves to let sunlight through in winter. Evergreen plants provide shading and screening the year round, but do not change color or texture in the fall.

After selecting the tree, make certain it's planted correctly. Start out by making sure the planting hole is large enough for the root system.

For a bare-root tree, make the hole large enough to allow the root system to spread out naturally. It should be deep enough for the plant to set no deeper than its original soil level—slightly higher (1-2 inches) is even better. Next, trim broken or damaged roots, and then form a mound in the bottom of the planting hole, letting the roots flow down the mound. Do not allow roots to dry out.

For a balled-and-burlapped tree, dig the hole about one-and-a-half times the diameter of the ball. Plant it so that the top of the soil ball is at or slightly above the existing soil surface.

Finally, prune the tops of transplanted trees to compensate for loss of roots. As a general rule, prune about one-third of the top growth. Then fill the hole with a good soil mixture such as peat moss and topsoil and water thoroughly.

As your newly planted tree begins to grow, you can feel proud of improving your landscape and environment.

Sherry Etheredge Says

Make dietary calcium a part of normal everyday meals--and avoid destructive calcium loss.

Too little calcium for a long period of time may lead to osteoporosis (porous bones)--which can result in bone fractures and backbone deformities in older persons.

All persons, including babies, need calcium for bones and other body tissue--whether from milk or other sources.

Recommended Dietary Allowances of calcium needed each day for different age groups are: 360 to 540 milligrams for infants, 800 milligrams for children, 1,200 milligrams for teens, 800 milligrams for adults, and 1,200 milligrams for pregnant and lactating women.

Milk--or calcium equivalent amounts of milk products--recommended daily for adults is a minimum of two cups, three or more cups for pregnant women, four or more for nursing mothers, four or more for teens, three or more for children nine to 12 years of age, and two to three for children nine years and under.

Other food sources rich in calcium are dried fruits, leafy green vegetables, molasses and dried beans.

Some people need extra calcium.

Women on weight reduction diets lose calcium--so they require an additional supply of calcium.

In some older people, the small intestine does not absorb calcium well. Increased calcium intake is needed to overcome this problem.

In addition, hormone systems affect calcium balance. The hormonal balance change brought on by menopause causes a major loss of bone calcium.

Emotions also affect calcium retention adversely, as does inactivity.
