The Silo Its Value

IT IS SAID that there is nothing new under the sun, and the truth of this saying is well brought out in the present agitation among the well-informed to induce the farmers of this State to give more attention to the silo. To many the name silo conveys no meaning, as they are in total ignorance of what it is, and yet the ancient Egyptians used the silo thousands of years ago. Reduced to its simplest terms, a silo is really a big can, corresponding in nearly every way to the cans in which the housewife preserves her fruit, and it is intended to, and does serve, the same purpose. It is a means of preserving green feed in its original form for stock of all kinds. Just as the housewife can insure a plentiful supply of both fruit and vegetables for the use of her family during the whole year, so the provident farmer who provides himself with a silo can be assured of an abundance of wholesome, nutritious food for his stock in times of scarcity. The principle upon which the silo is founded is the fact that decomposition and decay can only take place in any material through the agency of germ life, and in the presence of air. If this material is placed in an air-tight vessel, the germs it contains are killed, the air surrounding the material withdrawn and if no new germs are allowed to enter, the material will remain in the same condition in which it was gathered for an indefinite time, and will be just as valuable as a feed as when fresh. The housewife accomplishes these desired results first by heating the material and then by sealing up the can. This would not be practical with the large quantities of feed required for our stock. So the same result is accomplished in a different way. Using the ground as a bottom a structure is erected the sides of which are air-tight, or are made air-tight, when they get wet. These sides are made of a variety of materials, the most common being lumber, stone, cement and brick. It does not make much difference what the material used just so the sides are made air-tight, and that they will hold the pressure of the material with which the structure is filled. What is known as the stave silo is usually made of pieces of two by four lumber, set up on end, just as the staves of a barrel are put together and bound around with hoops that can be drawn together. It is usual to have these staves twelve to sixteen feet in length, and often two are placed upon end so that the structure is from thirty to thirty-two feet high. The diameter of the silo will vary, for reasons given later, with the number of stock that it is desired to feed. After the silo is erected it is filled with such material as green corn, sorghum, kaffir, milo, or almost any green feed which is chopped into lengths, varying from one-half to three-quarters of an inch and packed firmly into the silo. When first placed in the silo the material undergoes quite a heating and some souring. This heat, however, expels the air that is held between the particles of material, and at the same goes so high that it kills all germ life. As in the meantime the material has packed down very closely, no new air or germs can enter; so the material soon cools off and remains unchanged for an indefinite period. This first heating has done two things. It has generated a small amount of acetic acid, a substance that aids digestion and has also acted upon many of the substances of the food and rendered them easier of digestion when taken into the animal's stomach. The result, then, is preserved green feed for stock for any time of the year and that green feed is even more digestible than when it was first cut. A silo can be built at a cost of a little over a dollar per ton capacity to two or three dollars, depending upon the material and the finish. No cover is necessary, as rain does not injure the ensilage. Even a pit in the ground can be made to do service as a silo, especially in the dryer sections. After the silo is filled to the top, two or three inches of material spoils, so in designing the silo it is necessary to calculate to feed a layer over the whole surface each day. In this way it is fed up before it has time to spoil.

Ensilage keeps better in a deep, than in a shallow silo, so it is customary to build them twenty to twenty-five feet in height. A silo ten feet in diameter and twenty-five feet high will hold about thirty-six tons of ensilage. A well-fed dairy cow will consume from thirty to forty pounds of ensilage a day. From this data one should be able to calculate the size of silo needed.

Ensilage can ordinarily be grown and put up for about three dollars a ton while in feed value, when properly combined with other materials, it is easily worth six dollars. Outside of the actual nutrients it contains it is of especial value to the dairyman, because it enables him at all times to have green feed. It is of equal value to the beef feeder as it is well known that animals never take on flesh as rapidly and as cheaply as when supplied with a certain amount of green succulent feed. Besides proving of value during winter, the Texas feeder will find ensilage of inestimable use in helping him tide over the hot, dry summers and falls. While almost any feed material, except those consisting of hollow stems, will make valuable ensilage, there is nothing quite so good and so valuable as corn and the grain sorghums. Ordinarily for each five bushels of corn that a field will yield it will make a ton of ensilage. The corn from a thirty-bushel field would be worth, at fifty cents, fifteen dollars, while the ensilage from the same field would be worth twice as much. So, besides being a means of supplying green food to stock, the silo is also a means of adding very materially to the value of the feed stuff, and also of utilizing the cornstaks that constitute forty per cent of the value of a cornfield, and that are too often lost. Again, it costs less to save ensilage than to save the crop in any other form. At the same time a man with a silo is independent of the weather. He can fill his silo while the rain is pouring down. On the other hand, should there be danger of losing his crop from dry weather, he can cut it and place it in the silo and so save it. Corn makes the best ensilage when cut after it is well glazed, but it can be cut at any time during its growth and will still make valuable feed. The farmers of Texas therefore cannot afford to further neglect this means of adding to the value of their crops.

WARNING to the cheap school land people, whose interest was due prior or up to November 1st 1912. You had better not let it forfeit on July 1st, as the appraisers might put it higher.

For the last four years Terry has been held down with a severe and perhaps the longest drouth ever witnessed here, but doubtless held up better than any of her sister counties. But with these good rains she will soon be on her feet again and then the world is going to hear something from her. Let 'er shower.

According to a statement sent out by State Superintendent Bralley, the young men and women of Texas can now go to school until they are 21 years of age without paying tuition. The new law will increase largely the scholastics without corresponding increase in the available school fund. But the disadvantages, it seems to us, fall far short of the advantages when it is recalled that at regret of lack of education fails to strike home many boys and girls until, under the old law, it was too late without the payment of tuition. The young childhood of others may have been unfortunate in that they lacked the opportunity of getting an education. Under the beneficence of the new method, young men and women have their lives until they are 21 to correct earlier educational lacks.—Crosbyton Review

Houston—It is expected that the Houston ship canal will be open to sea-going vessels by the first of January 1914. There remains but 26,800 feet to be

Mrs. Hansen, In a Letter From Mobile, Tells How She Gained It.

Mobile, Ala.—"I suffered for seven years, with womanly trouble," writes Mrs. Sigurd Hansen in a letter from this city. "I felt weak and always had a headache and was always going to the doctor. At last I was operated on, and felt better, but soon I had the same trouble.

My husband asked me to try Cardul. I felt better after the first bottle, and now, I have a good appetite and sleep well. I feel fine, and the doctor tells me I am looking better than he ever saw me."

If you are sick and miserable, and suffer from any of the pains due to womanly trouble—try Cardul.

Cardul is successful because it is composed of ingredients that have been found to act curatively on the womanly constitution.

For more than fifty years, it has been used by women of all ages, with great success. Try it. Your druggist sells it.

Ordinary Chicken Ills.

Here are a few remedies for chicken diseases: Canker is a disgusting ailment, but generally in the start it can be checked by several applications of fine salt rubbed on the sore spots. Four drops of aconite in a half pint of drinking water, given daily for a week or more, are effective in cases of catarrh.

Chickenpox can be successfully treated by anointing the head and wattles with carbolated vaseline, after having been bathed well with hot water. A one-grain quinine pill should be given each night for a week.

A one-grain quinine pill given each night for a week will also work wonders in cases of cold. Cases of constiveness can be relieved by adding ten drops of sulphate of magnesia to each pint of drinking water.

Another Good Rain.

About three quarters of an inch of rain fell here Tuesday afternoon, and about sundown we had another steady rain for an hour or more, followed by light showers all night, with a total rainfall of something like one and one half inches. Showers practically throughout the day Wednesday and indications good for more. Although the rain was not so heavy in some parts of the county as at Brownfield, it was probably heavier in some places. Reports from Plains and Tahoka say they had good rains.

This on top of a season that still had the ground good and moist will keep grass and crops coming. It was a regular silo filler. Whose howling?

CORN ON DRY FARM

Conservation of Rainfall Is Key to Success.

Enough Live Stock Should Be Kept to Pay Most of Farm Expenses in Semi-Arid Regions—Hay and Pasturage Short.

In all dry farming areas the conservation of the rainfall in the soil where it becomes available to growing crops is the keystone of successful agriculture, writes W. R. Porter in the Farm, Stock and Home.

This is generally done by the cultivation of the soil during the entire growing season. If no crop is produced on the land this operation is called summer fallow or summer culture. Over most of the dry farming area nearly if not as good grain crops can be grown following a cultivated crop as after the summer fallowed land.

When the bare fallow system is used a whole year elapses without any returns either on the investment or for the labor performed. If a cultivated crop can be grown with as good crops following it should more than pay its expense, which will consist of seed, planting and harvesting; the cultivation would have to be done anyway, so this would not be counted against the cost of production of a crop of corn. Corn is pre-eminently this crop, first, because it produces an abundance of cheap feed; second, it shades the soil during the excessively hot days of July and August, thereby preventing loss of soil fertility, and third, a corn field has a cooling rather than a heating influence on the winds that blow across it. This may have a very beneficial effect on surrounding crops when the temperature is near the 100 degree mark.

On most farms in the dry farming area enough live stock should be kept to pay most of the running expenses of the farm. Hay and pasturage are very short in such areas and consequently too dear for cheap live stock production. Enough corn should be grown to supply, first, the work horses with roughage during the winter if not the working season; second, to supplement the pastures of the summer and fall as a soiling crop or in the form of ensilage and to from the bulk of their winter ration; third, to supply the sheep and hogs a cheap fattening food for finishing them off in the fall.

The first essential to corn culture on the dry farms is live stock, for without such there is no way of utilizing the corn crop, but if live stock are kept feed must be had, the corn crop can be converted into beef, pork, mutton, wool, butter and eggs, commodities that can always be converted into cash or its equivalent. The by-product of lye stock (manure) should go back onto the land to replenish the diminishing supply of humus and fertilizing elements so essential to large yields.

The second essential to corn culture is a conviction that it will pay to grow live stock on the corn crop produced and a determination to grow corn as their chief feed in spite of adverse circumstances. In order to be successful in growing corn on a dry farm the selection of the proper variety is essential. In western North Dakota and eastern Montana Squaw, Gehu, Mercer, King Phillip and Triumph will probably prove the best flint varieties, while Golden dent and North-western dent will probably prove the best dent varieties. Good seed is very important. It should always germinate strong and 95 per cent. or better.

The time to seed is from the tenth to the fifteenth of May in a well prepared seed bed which has been manured and plowed the fall before and which has been harrowed at intervals from the time the soil had thawed out in the spring until the time of seeding. Thorough cultivation is very important as it warms the soil, decreases evaporation of soil water, and forces the corn ahead very rapidly. On the dry farms the corn should be cultivated after every rain as soon as possible in order to bottle all water possible in the soil. As soon as the corn is cut the land should be disked lightly but it should not be plowed. Should any heavy soaking rains come after this in the fall the land should again be harrowed. In the spring wheat should be sown as early as possible but very rarely should the corn land be plowed before seeding wheat.

BIT OF A SCOTCH PUZZLE

Because Scotch Policeman is Not Policeman on Sunday Leaves Question Unsettled.

When is a policeman not a policeman? This is a question that has seriously agitated the Scotch players appearing in "Bunty" at the Comedy theater, New York, since they received a letter from a distinguished resident Scotchman. In the letter he objected to the use of the word "policeman" in "Bunty," and suggested that "balliff" or "sheriff" be used instead. "Policemen," he insisted, would never be heard in Scotland.

Scotch policemen, in certain communities, do not work on the Sabbath. There is no such thing as a Sunday policeman in Scotland, but upon any extraordinary occasion, the Scotch players contend, any self-respecting policeman, if called upon, would do his duty.

Will Jaxone, who plays the part of the policeman, insists that, although he has had no personal experience with Scotch policemen, he has had a social acquaintance with many of them, and that the word "policeman" is the only description of these men he has ever heard. Also Graham Moffat, the author, has also used the word "policeman" in the actors' lines. "When we were boys we all had a good deal to do with a policeman," says George Ingleton, the stage manager.

However, the point made by the writer of the letter is not settled, because a Scotch policeman is not a policeman on Sunday.

Two Sets of Nests.

It is a good plan to have two sets of nest boxes easily moved, not attached to the building in any way. While one set is being used the other, having been cleaned and painted with some insecticide, if necessary, is exposed to the sun, wind and rain. When it comes time to change the nests in the house are brought out and treated in the same fashion. The clean ones filled with nesting material are placed in the house.

White Specks in Butter.

White specks in butter are caused by particles of casein in over-soured cream, or by particles of dried cream in cases where cream is raised by gravity process and is exposed to currents of air. They are not often troublesome except in winter.

FARM FACTS

Peter Radford

By Peter Radford Pres. F. U.

When honesty is merely a good policy, it is a poor virtue.

Lazy farmers are just as useless as dead ones and take up more room.

There are two kinds of farmers. One tries to take all the advice he hears and the other won't take any at all.

Agriculture is as old as Methuselah and is just now cutting its wisdom teeth.

In every field of human activity the demand for more competent men is growing every day. Especially in agriculture.

A successful farmer must at least possess three virtues—honesty, energy and economy.

Whatever change the tenant farmer makes, it is bound to be for the better—it couldn't be for the worse.

Education is a development of the mind, not a stuffing of memory. Digest what you read.

Old men have visions, young men have dreams. Successful farmers plow deep while sluggards sleep.

Home pride is a very valuable asset, and the farmer who has none is carrying a heavy handicap on the road to success.

The soil is like a man's bank account. It can soon be exhausted by withdrawing and never depositing.

The growing of legumes will retard soil depletion and greatly add to its power to produce.

It is an established fact that legislation regulating the hours of a farmer's work has never been suggested; neither has a vice-commission been appointed to see why farmer's boys leave home.

Ben Franklin had good roads in mind when he said: "If time be of all things the most precious wasting time must be the greatest prodigality."

Dots From Tokio.

Mr. O. Bellah of N. M., came by Monday on his way to visit kindred in Big Springs. Mr. Bellah is an old time Terryite having settled on the Broughton place north of Gomez, ten years ago. After selling his Terry county property he spent some time in south Texas, then went to N. M.

Mr. John Day received a letter from Mrs. R. K. Benton Saturday saying Mr. Benton was dead. He died at the home of his father at Wall, Texas, and was buried in the old family cemetery.

Mr. Benton numbered his friends by all who knew him, and while we bow in humble submission to the will of the Heavenly Father, we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.

Miss Frances Wyatt came in on the mail hack Monday. While her parents have been living in Terry county for more than a year, this is her first visit to the Plains.

Mr. Guy Taylor of Gomez passed Tokio Tuesday, moving the National Art Co. to Plains.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Snodgrass visited at H. L. Ware's, Sunday.

Robert Hill, of Glen Park passed Monday with a large load of maize he had purchased from S. B. Johnson. Last year was a dry one, but this is the second load of Terry county maize that has passed Tokio in eight days for Yoakum county ranches.

Another big rain fell here last night; about an inch if correct measure can be gained from a vessel left out on the prairie. Some claimed that the wind that lasted about five minutes during the hardest part of the rain, blew the rain over the vessel.—If the vessel was standing upright and was the same size all the way; had sharp edges and no shelter, your measurement was very near correct, Digger. Just as many drops blew in as over.—Ed.

Bro. Cox will preach at J Cross next Sunday. Everybody invited to come and bring dinner.

A Mr. Rabb and family, of near Roswell, camped at Tokio Monday night. He is a native of Texas; his father coming to Coryell county when the Indians were there, and Mr. Rabb is moving back after spending several years in New Mexico.

Digger

Envied His Dog

A Dutchman, envying his dog's carefree life, indulged in the following soliloquy: "You was only a dog, but I wish I was you. When you go, mit your bed in, you shust turn round dree times und lay down; ven I go mid de bed in, I have to lock up de brace, und vind up the clock, und put the cat out, und ondress myself, und my vrow wakes up und skolds; den de baby wakes up and cries, den I have to volk mid de house round; den maybe, ven I gets myself to bed it is time to get oop again. Ven you get oop you shust stretch yourself, dig your neck a liddle, und you vas oop. I haf to light de fire, put on de .ettle, scrap some mid my vife already, und get myself breakfast. You play around all day und haf plenty of fun—I haf to work all day and lave plenty of drouble. Ven you die you vas dead. Ven I die, I haf to go to hell yet already vonce.—X

To Pursue Agricultural Work.

College Station, Texas, May—Out of thirty eight men who will receive degrees in the school of agriculture at the A. & M. College on June 10, thirty-seven have already announced their intention of returning to agricultural work. Twenty-two will go to farms while fifteen will accept positions as teachers and experts on demonstration farms. Some of these boys own their farms while others will assume the management of plantations or work on their fathers' places.

THE MAN IN A PINK SHIRT

Plays Stiff Game of Poker, Hunts a Good Deal and Is Familiar Figure at Ball Game.

The telegraphic story of the events which threw the fat into the fire in Mexico and started the war over again, mentions a man in a pink shirt as the one who led the attack on Juarez. Having touched the spark to the powder magazine just as the belligerents were shaking hands for peace and reformation, the man in the pink shirt passes out of the telegraphic narrative and out of the history of Mexico.

Unless this man in the pink shirt is an exception, those who live in a country town know him well. The pink shirt itself was bought at a racket store for 69 cents. The man plays a stiff poker game, hunts a good deal without reference to the game laws, and is a familiar figure at ball games, country fairs and foot races where betting is tolerated.

Wagering money on the outcome of a ball game is too slow for him. He bets on whether the next throw of the pitcher will be a ball or a strike; whether the batter misses or breaks his bat; whether the catcher running for a foul gets or is cut on the barbed wire fence.

It is disturbing to know that a man in a pink shirt could overrule the general of an army and scatter death and destruction as at Juarez; doubly disturbing to believe that he could change the destinies of a nation.

Her Luncheon Bag.

While calling on a business friend about the lunch hour yesterday I was greatly surprised to see his fair stenographer eating and drinking from what had the appearance of being an ordinary hand bag. Invited to inspect the article in question, however, I was amazed at the clever manner in which the "buffet" bag was arranged. It contained specially made places for sandwiches and pie, besides a flask-like arrangement with a screw top for the coffee. To cap the climax, salt and pepper shakers were set in the sides. "It's a little idea of my own," explained the young woman. "I had the bag, that looks just like an ordinary hand bag when you carry it on the street, made from my own drawings." —Boston Post.

GOMEZ DOTS

More rain and cloudy weather all last week. Most of us had to wear our overcoat, and felt comfortable with them on. The weather was very appropriate for transplanting plants, as we never saw the sun over 9 hours all the week. Everything has turned from its brown color to a beautiful rich green.

Last week a train of wagons came to Gomez loaded with families hunting homes. Upon inquiring we found they had come from Throckmorton Co., and their names were Ellis and Houston. We welcome these people with gladness and hope they will settle in our midst.

School is progressing nicely and we have one new pupil. The school has regular attendance in most ever case and all are working hard.

Grandma Willey has been quite sick for the last few days, but is some better at this writing. We hope she will soon recover.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hays were in town Monday, shopping.

On last Saturday evening, the Odd Fellows and Woodmen with their wives and children, assembled at the school house. An appropriate program was rendered, then came the supper and it certainly was fine. All kinds of meats, cakes, pies, etc., was brought and not all was eaten, for there was so much it would have taken an army to devour all of it. After supper ice cream was served in great abundance. A large crowd attended. All report a fine time and plenty to eat.

Prayer meeting has been changed from Wednesday night to Friday night so that the school children could attend. We had a good prayer meeting Friday, which was attended by several.

Mrs. Joe Lane passed through town Monday on her way to visit her mother, Mrs. A. P. Seitez.

The young people enjoyed a party at the Hotel Saturday night, after the supper. We had good music by Messrs. Timm, Lewis and Mrs. G. W. Taylor. All had an excellent time.

Monday morning Mrs. L. T. Brooks was sprinkling her barn with lime, when the wind blew some in her eyes. She went to the doctor at once, and has been suffering ever since. We hope it will not prove serious.

Old and young enjoyed a singing at Mr. W. H. Black's Sunday night. There was a good crowd and every one enjoyed themselves.

Roy and Lena Green were in town Sunday and Monday.

Quite a crowd of young folks went to Harris. All report a nice time.

Mrs. Oscar Adams is visiting her relatives in Gomez.

Mrs. S. H. Key has been on the sick list, and we are sorry to say she is feeling worse today. We hope she will soon recover.

Mr. E. A. Key was sick the first of the week, but is now shaking hands with old friends.

Dr. Blackmore of Fortsmith Ark., has been instructing a large class in drawing the past week. Their plans are to con-

Happening In Yoakum.

From The News:
We learn that Mr. A. C. Copeland has commenced work on his contract to grade and clay the Plains and Brownfield road.

The Commissioners Court last Monday cut eighteen sections of land off of the Sligo school district and added them to the Glen Park district, which will enable it to have a six month school this year.

After going over the route mapped out for the proposed new county road from Plains to the southwest part of the county, the reviewers decided on a different and more practical route for the road.

The Commissioners' Court at its meeting last Monday ordered an election to be held in this school district on the 5th of July for the purpose of voting on the question of 10 cents additional tax, which is required to run an eight months school.

Rev. B. F. Dixon stated while here this week that he feels sure the Baptist people will erect a church building in Plains this year. He says that he has already the promise of several large subscriptions from ranchmen and other parties for that purpose, and he believes he will have very little trouble in raising the necessary amount.

We have had several good rains during this week, and there is now a thorough season in the ground. The rain has not been confined to certain localities but has been general throughout this and adjoining counties and from reports received it has extended below the cap-rock on the east and far into New Mexico on the west. Not only are the prospects good for a fine crop of corn and all kinds feed stuff, but the rains have been sufficient to insure fine grass for summer and fall pasturage.

NOTES From MEADOWBROOK FARM
By William Pitt

- Cows like pumpkins.
- Separate all indisposed turkeys.
- Have a regular day for greasing the wagon.
- The cow is a vital part of the dairy machine.
- The olive trees date back to very early times.
- Few horses can digest perfectly clear timothy hay.
- There is no animal more unprofitable than a poor sheep.
- Horses that have a light hay diet are seldom affected with heaves.
- It does not make very much, if any, difference when a cow is fed grain.
- Good horse blankets are savers of valuable horse flesh and high-priced feed.
- You can hardly push pigs too fast, providing you use the right kind of food.
- Dirty collars are probably as responsible for sore shoulders as ill-fitting ones.
- You cannot fatten a brood sow and fatten a hog alike and make the best success of both.
- The cow your neighbor does not want to sell is the one you want to buy. Get around this dilemma by raising that kind yourself.
- Three years of spraying, pruning and cultivation will bring an orchard that you are ashamed of into a condition that you will be proud of.
- Scrape off loose, peeling bark from the trunks of trees before spraying them; because this serves as an excellent breeding place for insects.
- To get the best eggs for hatching, the rations should be of good grains balanced by milk or meat food and must include green food in some form.
- High prices should not tempt the wise dairyman to part with his good cows and heifers. Remember they are just as valuable to you as to anybody else.
- In yarding sheep, don't forget a constant supply of good fresh water and rock-salt are a necessity; also, plenty of good fresh bedding, and always a dry lair.
