ANOTHER LETTER FROM HOMER WINSTON

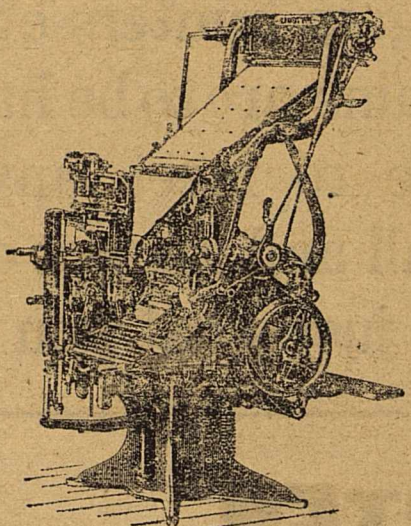

Dear father:

On Sept. 10th we moved to Dieulouard, which had been shelled and there was nothing much left of it, we thought at the time, but since seeing Verdon battlefield, we have decided that it was still a pretty good place. A miracle to me is a church stands with two enormous bombs in it that were dropped from enemy aeroplanes and did not explode. This church was built in the year 1504. The old house that I was billeted in was built in the year 1330, being 538 years old. This house seemed awful fine to us after living in barns so long.

The big drive in which our Division participated, started with a barrage at 1 a. m. Sept. 12th, 1918. The barrage lasted until 4 o'clock a. m. at which time the infantry went over the top. The whole world was on fire in that neck of the woods. You could not tell one gun from another, and it was put through with great success, and much ground and many prisoners. This will be known in history as the St. Mihiel drive. From here on we were not so particular about lights at night, artillery or aeroplanes, for we got to where we didn't give a darn for nothing. Right here is where I want to say that a motorcycle rider has as dangerous a job as any man in the army, for riding one in the dark and no light and big motor trucks going in both directions, and those with no lights, is no play. On top of that you ride through shell fire in the day time, but that is play beside the riding at night. Of course we saw lots of funny sights and the like, but we can't tell them here, but will as soon as we get home, if we don't forget them.

On Sept. 14th, I took a trip to the trenches that the Germans had just been forced out of, which was my first sight of seeing the dead buried. The trees were all absolutely bare; not a leaf to be seen, caused from gas. Went to a town that had just been deserted by the Huns. The houses were furnished with fine fixtures; visited the wine and beer joint and found glasses of wine just partly full. Saw clothes still hanging on the lines as they left in a hurry. The work shops there were equipped as fine as any I ever saw. Saw quite a bit German breads; some curiosity, and awful black and heavy. Some of the dugouts had electric lights, and had women right there with them, and from all appearances, had a very soft job on their hands. They had some of the deepest dugouts that I ever saw and if we had such ground in our possession, I don't think there is an army in the world that could have taken it. There is no question in the least about them being well prepared and intended to stay there, as they had held this sector for four long years, and just think—what boys from the United States didn't run off, they took prisoners. The only comment the British military critic made, was, that there were a few blocks on the narrow roads, that the boys ate two days rations at the first days lunch, and threw away their rain coats when it quit raining, but broadly speaking did a nice job. On the 18th, I had an opportunity to go to Decieze to a motor Transport school; took it and went via Paris. This opened up my country eyes quite a bit, but I can't see how it can be compared to New York. This whole country is more talk that we hatch in the U. S. than anywhere else. Back here the Red Cross was mighty good to us, and it almost made me want to get wounded, but I realize that I had a mission to fill, and didn't get to stay but about eighteen hours. Just as soon as I came back from this institution, my company was moving to Verdon, and I joined them on the move. That was sure like getting home once more, to be back in the same old company again. The town we moved to was named Vadlin-court, and we went into the same old barracks without any floor. Winter was now setting in and everything in the building, as well as on the outside is ankle deep in mud. These are the longest roads and the roughest, I believe that I ever saw, and if you get two nights sleep in every seven, you are lucky. From here we moved to Sivey le Perche. Here I worked day and night, getting very little rest until the armistice was signed. It is absolutely impossible to describe the country between where the lines used to run, as the whole outfit is shot to pieces. The St. Mihiel font was a paradise beside this front. You pass through many places that use to be towns, the maps showing them to be towns, but you would never know they were there, if it were not for the sign boards tacked up on a post, have been put there since the battle. All the hills around Esnes, Avoncourt, etc. The shell holes are thicker than ants around a bed.

On Nov. 1st, our division was in another big drive, that forced old Fritz back 32 kilometers in two days. On the morning of the 2nd I was truck master of 28 trucks, all loaded with rations, and I had orders to carry 120 gallons of extra gas on each truck. It is useless to say that we caught our boys before arrival of nightfall, and there were some holes in the road deeper than I am tall. Right here is where things begin to look like peace, for they had just about quit fighting, and went to running, except the machine guns and artillery. Nov. 5th, we all moved up north of Cierges and camped right in the middle of a fresh battlefield.

Eleventh month, eleventh day and eleventh hour: La Guerre Finis. No more growling of large guns; no more whistling or crackling of the shells; no more G. I. Cans sent for us. BOYS SHE IS ALL OVER.

From Cierges, we moved to Briculles, a town on the Meuse, which the Dutch had left a day or two before. They had set fire to everything. We found several cars of kroust still burning; also coal.

On Nov. 17th, our division went on guard duty in Belgium, and I was in charge of 30 trucks that took the 1st battalion of the 360 inf. to Virton Bilg, and as we carried our dough-boys into towns, the Germans left in a hurry. From Sassey, we moved to a German aviation field just outside of Marville, and the poor old mess sergeants had to serve Cornwooley and hard tack to the boys. From here I hauled two trucks of officers to Nancy, and returned via Metz, which is some nice city; also country. No wonder the Germans wanted Alsace-Lorraine. Here we lived in old barracks, which seemed awful soft after sleeping in the rain and sloop, and here I visited an old grave yard. In one corner of the old building that has 40,000 human skeletons stacked all around the wall. I don't compré this outfit, but a Frenchman says that there are the skeletons of Napoleon's men that died in battle near there.

Was sent on special duty with 358 and explored the whole country in and around Montmedy, and went all through the old fort. (To be continued.)

GOOD ROADS AND MARKETS

At Crosby, Texas, a shell road was built for one mile out of town. A farmer four miles out of town came to town with a team of two mules, and loaded on his wagon at the railroad station two tons of wire fencing. At the end of the improved shell road, on his return, the farmer was compelled to throw off 3000 lbs of wire. He then hitched two additional mules to haul one thousand pounds on the three remaining miles of unimproved roads. This man had to make three more trips for the remaining 3000 pounds of wire, and it required his time for the four miles from ten o'clock one morning until eleven o'clock next morning to finish the hauling. If the improved road had extended four more miles on to the farm, the original team of two mules could have hauled the two tons of wire in two and one-half hours.

In the south, the average haul of cotton from farm to shipping point is eleven miles, and the average of the loads is about 1700 pounds, or a little more than three bales. The average cost of haul is 80c per bale and $3.00 per ton for seed, or from 25c to 30c per ton mile. The haulage cost (from farm to shipping point) of the 1911 crop, cotton and seed, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, was $37,375,634. The farmers who grew this cotton paid this sum out of such profits as the 1911 crop brought to them, and as the average price of cotton that year was but 8 cents per pound, it will be seen that the profits were small and that the farmer could not well spare this charge upon it. If the farmers had to pay this charge in money instead of in work, very few farming communities would be without good roads; they would vote for whatever bond issue that were necessary to lift their operations on the farm out of the mud. Texas can add to its agricultural prosperity by building better roads.

School Trustee Election

The school election last Saturday went off quietly as usual, not more than a third of the qualified voters participating, but we believe an unusual well qualified set of men are in the four vacant places on the board of the Brownfield Independent District, and further more, we believe they are men that will try to sell our bonds, and get busy with the new school building in order to have it ready for the coming term of school. Upon the school trustees rest to a great extent, the progress of our schools, and it takes real men sometimes, to get in the collar and push it alone. In electing trustees, it is a good thing to keep in mind, that with other good qualities to get men on the board who are permanently located, and whose business does not often call them away. In Saturday's election, we believe we elected just such men.

The following men were elected on the local board: Messrs. Pat Brothers, Simon Holgate, W. C. Smith and O. T. Halley.

The result of the County Board election was as follows: Messrs. J. F. Winston, Tom Glover, Raymond Simms, J. E. Shelton, and Fred Smith was the member at large.

A Message to the Business Man

A Monograph by Prof. Irving Fisher of the Department of Political Economy, Yale University.

Prices are the most vital concern in the business man's life, at this juncture. Is the general level of prices going up or down? Upon the answer to that question depends the commitment which buyers, merchants and producers will make. If there is to come a long period of sinking prices, men will not, and dare not buy except from hand to mouth. Therefore men cannot produce. That means unemployment for labor, disruptions for working organizations, loss of capital, deficiency in public revenues, general business stagnation.

If, on the other hand, prices as a whole are not going to drop, business can confidently go ahead. The stage is set for prosperity, full production, universal employment, good times. Whether this comes depends on the answer to the question as to the course of the price level.

Professor Fisher is probably the country's first authority on the subject of prices.

He confirms the conviction that is growing in the minds of many men throughout the country, namely, the high price level to which we have attained is no temporary thing, but permanent. We are simply using more counters than before in eecentric exchanges.

To everyone engaged in trade, finance or industry, Professor Fisher's message has especial importance. In general, prices, and hence wages, are not going to fall. In the case of particular products, there may be drop, but in the absence of definite knowledge of such special reasons it is safe to assume that prices are not going to drop. In other words you can go ahead with the assurance that even if it costs you more now to produce, you will be able to sell your products at a higher price. There is a new price level all around.

Prices are the steam gauge that tells the business engineer how much pressure he has in the boilers.

Have you been misreading the gauge?

If you have, acknowledge your mistake, open the throttle, and full speed ahead!

Questions For the Boys

Here is a list of questions for the wide awake boys? Can you answer all of them? You can any day see a white horse, why do you never see a white colt? How many kind of trees grow in your neighborhood, and what are they good for? Why does a horse eat grass backward, and a cow forward? Why does a hop vine wind one way, and a bean vine another? Where should the inside of a chimney be bigger, at the top or bottom, and why? Can you tell why a horse, when tethered by a rope, always unravel it while a cow always twists it into kinky knots? Why do leaves turn upside down just before a rain? What is the length of a horse's head—is it as long as a flour barrel? What animals have no upper teeth in front and why?

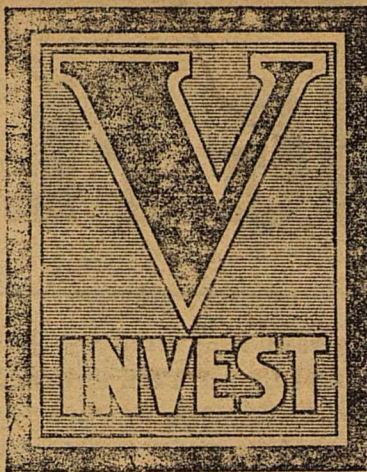

Brownfield reports that work will start on the lakes in Terry county within a short time to develop the potash industry. Companies of Ft. Worth are looking over the field, and prospects are good for a string of factories to produce this substance in both Terry and Lynn. Let the good work go on.—Lynn County News.

Yes, let it go on. If there was ever was a section of country that needs its natural resources taken in tow by real, live wire capitalist, it is the south Plains of Texas. This a great big beautiful country, and every part of it has so many advantages of its own, that the upbuilding of one part is a real advantage to the other, and as for local prejudices, they should not be allowed to exist in this great country. Come to the South Plains.

Our son Milton informs us that he and wife are the proud parents of a fine baby girl. This is our third grand child, and we rejoice with them over the arrival of the little lady. We hope she doesn't favor us much, as our style of beauty never seemed to appeal to the masses.—Lamesa Reporter.

Well, what difference does it make whether your special style of beauty appeals to the masses or not; it pleases Ma Reporter, don't it, and that is sufficient for the most fastidious, it seems to us.

Suffering Described As Torture Relieved by Black-Draught.

Rossville, Ga.—Mrs. Kate Lee Able, of this place, writes: "My husband is an engineer, and once while lifting, he injured himself with a piece of heavy machinery, across the abdomen. He was so sore he could not bear to press on himself at all, on chest or abdomen. He weighed 165 lbs., and fell off until he weighed 110 lbs. in two weeks.

He became constipated and it looked like he would die. We had three different doctors, yet with all their medicine, his bowels failed to act. He would turn up a ten-cent bottle of castor oil, and drink it two or three days in succession. He did this yet without result. We became desperate, he suffered so. He was swollen terribly. He told me his suffering could only be described as torture.

I sent and bought Theford's Black-Draught. I made him take a big dose, and when it began to act he fainted, he was in such misery, but he got relief and began to mend at once. He got well, and we both feel he owes his life to Theford's Black-Draught."

Theford's Black-Draught will help you to keep fit, ready for the day's work. Try it! NC-131

HIGGINBOTHAM, HARRIS & CO. BUILDING MATERIAL MERCHANTS AND HOME BUILDERS

Where the Largest Chinese Hospital is Located

What optimist a generation ago would have thought that backward China would have a hand in the settlement of a world war. But China is having a very important role in the great war that is just being brought to a close. Not as soldiers—fighting men—but as laborers behind the front line trenches. And just so many allied troops have been released for other duties. Practically one hundred and fifty thousand of these coolies have been transported by way of the Zuez to France. This work has been done under the direction of the British Government and the Church Missionaries. And among these missionaries are many of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, which is just finishing the details of its campaign to secure $35,000,000 to further work of the kind that is being done in France by education and direction.

A long cattle train went down to Seagraves this week, after stuff that are being shipped back to the home pastures, as the long drouth has at last been ended all over western Texas, and there are going to be more grass than cattle this year, we are thinking.

South Plains Sheep Raisers to Organize

In response to the notice sent out by County Agent, Carroll Thompson, most of the sheep raisers of Lubbock county, and some from adjoining counties, met at the courthouse in Lubbock on March 25th.

This meeting was called for the purpose of discussing the advisability of organizing a sheep and wool growers association at Lubbock, and after the purpose and benefits of such an organization was explained by Mr. M. W. Coll, Sheep specialist from the A. & M. College of Texas, all the men present were very enthusiastic over the proposition and determined to organize the South Plains Sheep and Wool Growers Association, with headquarters at Lubbock, Texas.

A committee composed of Messrs. O. L. Slaton, J. C. Stanford, Russell Myrick, F. C. Olivar and W. H. Vaughan were appointed to draw up a constitution to be presented at the next meeting.

An invitation is hereby extended to all the adjoining and nearby Counties to become members of this association. We wish to urge that the sheep growers of all those counties arrange to be present at the next meeting, and join in the work which we expect to do.

The object of this Association is to advance the sheep and wool industry in this section. The principal work which will be taken up at the present time, is the co-operative marketing of wool. Other things will be handled through the organization are; co-operative marketing of lambs; co-operative use of valuable rams for breeding purposes; promotion of legislation beneficial to sheep men; destruction to predatory animals; etc.

Plans are under way to secure a warehouse in Lubbock in which the wool growers products may be held for sale. It seems assured that two hundred thousand pounds of wool will be concentrated at Lubbock this spring, and if the sheep men of the adjoining counties will join in this work, this amount can be easily doubled. By this plan you can readily see that buyers will be anxious to inspect such a concentration of wool, and tender bids.

Another meeting has been called for Wed. April 9th. This meeting will be held at the court house at Lubbock, and will start promptly at 2:00 p. m.

The election of officers to handle the business of the Association, the adoption of the constitution prepared by the committee, and other important items of business will come up at this meeting, and it is essential that all the sheep raisers of the south plains arrange to attend.

MAIDS AND MATRONS

This Club met in regular meeting on April 1st at the hospitable home of Mrs. O. T. Halley, where an interesting program was rendered. Germany being the subject of the lesson, led by Mrs. Bell. Every one of the members responded with something worth while about the past history, and outcome of the present war. This subject proved to be one of the most thoroughly studied and discussed, of any one this far. The spacious living room was fragrant with pink and white carnations and sweet peas. The hostess served just a pleasant April fool surprise, giving each guest an empty cup; "What the Kaiser had left when the war was over. Then buttermilk and cornbread, German delicacies, was served. Next was the American poplar, consisting of Angel food cake and pink and white brick cream. Mrs. Halley has made an enviable reputation as a hostess, both in originality, and in gracious manner.

The Club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Dallas at the next meeting, and the subject will be Russia, led by Miss Treadaway.

To Deduct Advertising Expense

Expenses incurred in advertising and promoting the sale of Liberty Bonds and War Saving Stamps are deductible on the part of individuals and corporations as a business expense in the computation of income taxes, according to advice given out by Commissioner Roper of the Internal Revenue Department at Washington. It is the intention of the Government to show every consideration to those men and women as have given of their time and means in previous loans and to whom it looks for assistance in putting across the final effort of the Victory Liberty Loan.

It further explains the effort on the part of the government to show its appreciation for the work of patriotic Americans, as evidenced in the announcement that medals that were struck struck from captured German cannons are to be awarded workers in the Victory Liberty Loan campaign, which will open April 21. The medal will bear on its front an embossed design of the Treasury building at Washington. The reverse side will bear an inscription giving a history of the emblem, with space for the name of the winner of the medal.

LUMBER ADVANCES LEAST

Experts representing the four great building material industries have compiled statistics showing how war conditions affected the market. Comparison of price variations cover a period of six years. As was expected, the figures show steel far in the lead of other building materials in its climb skyward since 1912, with an advance of 148.5 per cent. Cement is up 55.5 per cent, brick 38.1 per cent, and lumber only 17.07 per cent.

"Y" Indian on Rhine

Coblenz Germany, March 9th Miss Anne Ross, a descendant of a Cherokee warrior, who has followed the doughboy trail from Paris right in to Germany, serving as a Y. M. C. C. A. entertainer, is not very much impressed with the boche "super-warrior" as she finds him in his native haunts. Too fat, is her frequent comment on the inhabitants.

Miss Ross, of Princess Galilohi, to use her Indian name, has just been assigned to Coblenz as an entertainer. When she dances she always furnishes her own accompaniment with a tom-tom or a gourd rattle and chants the tune to which the Cherokees have danced for a generation. She finds that the do-boys like the Indian music best of all. Even a New York doughboy and raised on Broadway, has to admit that he has seen something new in the way of a dance when the Cherokee maid takes the stage at one of the Y. M. C. A. shows.

Checkers Working Over Time

Cobenz, Germany, March 9th. The checker and chess market in Coblenz is as clean as a bleached bone. You cannot in a shop in Coblenz today, buy or steal a game of chess or a chess or checker board. Blame it on the doughboy. Two thousand soldiers come into the town every day on leave, and as soon as they land, they get the chess and checker fever, so that any hour of the day between 10 o'clock in the morning and nine o'clock at night, every available checker board is in use in the Fest Halle, the municipal theatre, which was taken over by the Y. M. C. A. as a club for the soldiers in that city.

Two of our soldier boys belonging to the 133rd field artillery, came in this week, being Hugh M. Pyeatt and Bunyon Odam. While they are of the same regiment, they belonged to different batteries. These boys did not get to see active service, but that is no sign that they were ready for it if their services had been in need, and we assure you that these old Texas cowboys would have given a good account of themselves, too. Anyway, we are all glad to see them back home, and are glad that they did not have to face the Hun bullets.

The provisions of the act apply to all persons, who have served in the United States Army, Navy and Marine Corps during the present war, honorably discharged since April 6, 1917. Encourage Returning Soldiers to Register.

Camp Travis, April 7th, 1919. Soldiers being discharged at Camp Travis are notified that the people of their home towns are anxious to keep accurate record of all men who have been in service. To that end, discharged soldiers are urged to call on city or county clerks at their homes for the purpose of registering.

Through such registrations, the friends of such discharged soldiers may be enabled to get in touch with them, employers will be enabled to select workers, and other information for the benefit of the men is thereby obtained.

Men who land in immediate cities between camp and home should register at post offices, society huts, and similar points where their townsmen may locate them. Provision for such immediate registering will be established shortly.
