BUYING your shirts is important enough to do with discrimination.

We feature EAGLE SHIRTS because the man who wears them is always pleased with his taste and judgment.

The makers design their own fabrics; experiment with them till they make good; dye their own yarns with fast colors; and then put the results of fifty years' experience into the cut and tailoring.

No wonder you admire the fineness of texture in EAGLE SHIRTS, the cleverness and exclusiveness of design. These, with superiority of fit and finish, make unnecessary the absolute guarantee nevertheless given by the maker and by us.

Our Fall assortment is large and varied enough—now—to show you what we mean by individuality of pattern, richness of color, expertness of weave and refinement of craftsmanship.

THE TERRY COUNTY FAIR WAS BIG SUCCESS

From the looks of the elements last Wednesday and even on Thursday morning, it looked as if the fair was going to be a blowed up sucker, to use the popular expression, but by nine or ten o'clock the clouds had lifted further enough apart that the sun could be seen occasionally, and the faithful old farmers of Terry Co. begin to arrive in wagons and buggies—too muddy for cars—and despite all the hindrances, from the point of classy exhibits, there never has been a fair here that equaled this one is the almost unanimous verdict of the old timers. Of course we have seen more on exhibit here, and we have seen many more live stock, but when the fair is considered from a real quality standpoint, it has had no equals, and everyone manager to exhibitor was more than pleased.

The best of everything was boxed up Friday and loaded out for the Dallas Fair, and as usual, Uncle Bill Howard will go along to see that they are shown and that old Terry gets the maximum of advertising from the exhibits. The Dallas Fair begins Saturday, and if old Terry don't bring home its full share of the blue rags, we are going to be very badly surprised.

The following is a list of the prize winners of the day, and if your name is not mentioned, or is wrong, we assure you that we will take great pleasure in correcting any error that we make, or that of the committees, for they want all to have justice, and no one's name or what they won will be purposely withheld. Another explanation: The list was handed to us just like it was wrote down while the exhibits were being judged, and you can guess what the editor is up against. Of course we ought not to accept such copy, but you know a news paper man has more time than any thing else:

J. I. Crump, 1st on white kaffir.
G. B. Swan, 2nd on Spanish peanuts.
Mrs. J. B. Hill, 1st on bundle kaffir, oyster plants, cellary and pepper, and 2nd on carrots.
R. H. Timmons, 1st on apples.
T. H. Bingham Jr., 2nd on bundle kaffir, bundle red maize and also on shelled maize; 1st on shelled kaffir and on red topped cane.

S. L. Greathouse, 1st on broom-corn.
O. T. Halley, 1st on large peanuts, 1st on ornamented gourds.
A. J. Stricklin, 1st on squash and plums.
A. B. Bynum, 1st on preserved peaches of both the Chinese cling and the Elberta varieties.

POULTRY

On account o the weather being so unfavorable for carrying the poultry to town, this department of the fair was very slim.
Jno. S. Powell, 1st on coop of Rhode Island Reds; Will Pool, 2nd.
Jonn Dennis 1st on White Leg-horns.
Mrs. John Raymer got blue ribbon on best floral display.

FANCY WORK

Mrs. Lottie Greathouse, blue on Hardanger bag.
Crochet, Mrs. Homer Scott 1st, Mrs. R. R. Hughes, 2nd and Josie Stewart, 3rd.
Turling: Josie Stewart, 1st.
Tatting: Mrs. Hughes, 1st.

There was a lot of this department that was like Chinese to us as we are not familiar with fancy doings, and not being able to make head or tail of the matter, we were obliged to leave some of it out.

When we saw this vast display of the many good things that old Terry so readily produces, it made us even the "glader" that we are a citizen of the best all round county on earth.

There we no stock to speak of, and if there was anything judged in that department, we never heard of it. Come to Terry.

Mrs. Jno. S. Powell left Saturday for Plainview to attend the bedside of her daughter, Mrs. Jessie Hamilton who is ill.

Editor's Wife Returns

There was kind of a family reunion at the editor's house this last Friday, when the madam got in from the Lubbock sanitarium, and we believe we were the prouder of the two although she stood all the suffering. But like all the other patients that come out of that great institution, there was nothing but praise of it from Mrs. Stricklin, and that praise reached from the youngest nurse to the head nurse, and on to the heads of the sanitarium. By the way, they are going to add a new story to the building in the near future, and Dr. Ponton assured us that it would be dedicated to Terry county. Well, when the big dedication ceremony takes place, and the big banquet is spread, they can just bet that old Terry will be there with a great majority. These folks are needing some more nurses badly, and any young lady in good health, and with a good character can get in there, and good wages are paid. After a young lady serves the allotted time, and becomes a graduate nurse, their career is then assured at splendid wages the balance of their lives. No, this is not an advertisement, and we have not been asked to write this—it is merely an expression of gratitude for the efficient service they rendered us when a "man needs a friend", and there are very few of us but that they have a little of that fellow feeling left that will cause them to return good for good, and if this happens to be of any benefit whatever to them, they are surely welcome to it.

Married.

On last Sunday afternoon, Elmer Green and Miss Addie Whitley, both of Gomez, were quietly married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Whitley, of the above place, Rev. J. C. Lewis, officiating. Both are popular young people of the entire county, being well known, and they have a host of friends who join the Herald in wishing for them a long and happy married life.

THE IRON TEST

(Synopsis)

Bert Forde, adventurer, who is heir to the Bresford millions, is a performer in the Jenkins circus, in which his cousin, Lewis Craven, is manager. Both are in love with Edith Paige, a beautiful rider. Craven learns that old Beresford is dead and that ten millions await Bert. If Bert dies he (Craven) gets the fortune. Craven keeps the news from Bert, who becomes the victim of mysterious "accidents" bringing him almost daily near death. A stranger wearing a red mask figures in the accidents. One night a knife is thrust between a rope and a horizontal bar. When Bert and Edith are in mid air the rope parts and they are plunged into almost certain death.

Chapter 5—"The Tide of Death"

Bert struggled with all his might as he realized that he had been trapped and left to strangle as would a hare. Suddenly he remembered the sheath knife in his belt and determined to cut the rope and take a chance on the fall. Ceasing his struggle, he stopped swaying and then with his free right hand he slashed the rope and dropped to the ground.

Edith, Jenkins and others arrived on the scene, and soon Peaky and Craven appeared.

"I'm going to stand guard here till two o'clock," announced Jenkins, "then Bert can take it till four and I'll finish out the night," volunteered Craven.

At two o'clock Bert took up the watch and at four he went to the ticket wagon, where Craven had his cot, and summoned him to the job.

Before going to his own van, he walked over to that of Edith and she, unable to sleep on account of the events of the night, heard him. Slipping on a kimono, she peered out of the door and saw him. She came out and he told her he was going to turn in.

"Please don't sleep in the van to night," she said, go to the dressing tent instead."

Laughingly, Bert agreed to do as she asked. He bade her good-night and she blew him a little kiss as he started away. As he passed the menagerie, he saw Bob, the bear, moving restlessly. Bert patted the bear and then an idea came to him.

"Come along Bob," he said, loosing the big beast's chains. "I've got a job for you."

He took the bear, now quiet, to his own van, opened the door and put him inside.

Craven mounted guard about ten minutes after Bert had retired. He paced the beat for a few minutes, then opened the door of the van quietly and entered. He went to Bert's cot and peered down. He made a move as though he would murder, raising a knife in the air. There was a movement in the corner, then a growl, as Bob, resentful at being awakened, rose to punish the invader.

Craven, alarmed, stepped back toward the door, turning his flashlight on the bear. He drew his revolver and fired. The bear leaped and clutched the man. Their began then a battle, with the infuriated bear trying to kill while the man fought for his life. Craven began to lose consciousness and sank to the floor the bear on top of him, clawing and snarling.

Edith, not knowing who the intruder was, seen Craven enter Bert's van, and fled to the dressing tent and awakened Bert. Together they started to the van, Bert calling for assistance. Jenkins, Peaky and a half a dozen canvasmen responded. Bert peered into the van and saw the beast clawing at his victim. When the light was turned on the face, the watchers gasped as they recognized Craven. Bert hurled the bear aside and rescued his foe, the he and Jenkins quickly revived him.

"What were you doing in my van?" questioned Bert as Craven tiredly opened his eyes.

"Heard disturbance— went to investigate—brute got me."

Bert was the first to sympathize and he ordered Craven carried to his quarters. To Peaky he said:

"It looks like a nice day ahead. Get my horse and Miss Paige's ready so we can start after breakfast for a ride. I think a gallop along the shore, with a view of the Pacific from Overlook Hill will do us both good this fair Sunday."

Peaky, ill-concealing his venom said he'd have the horse ready, then exited toward the ticket wagon, where Craven now lay with bandaged arms. He resented Peaky's presence, but the latter shot at him:

"I'll git out when I've asked a few things—RED MASK!"

Craven started up from his cot.

"What do you mean?" he shouted.

"You know what I mean," replied Peaky, as he drew something from his pocket.

"This is the knife that cut the trapeze rope and damn near killed Forde and Miss Paige—an' it's yours."

Craven started to speak, but Peaky went on:

"Besides, I found a raincoat with 'L. C.' in it, a old souch hat and a red bandanner right near Forde's van. I know they don't belong to Forde or Bob, the bear."

"Wait, a minute, Peaky! You'er wrong about me being the 'Red Mask.' That is my coat and these other things are mine, but the 'Red Mask' is another man. I don't know him and I've never seen him without the makeup. He said for me one night, said he knew Bert was the only thing that stood between me and ten million dollars left by Bert's grandfather, who was also my grand uncle, and said he had a reason of his own for wanting to get rid of Bert. He asked me for money and an overcoat, so I gave him a little money and that old raincoat. I also gave him my knife. Next day the guy rope on that pole was cut and Bert came pretty near cashing in. Personally, I shouldn't have been sorry if he had."

"Now, here is a proposition," continued Craven. "You keep your mouth shut and help me out, and if Bert passes out and I get that ten million silver lozenges, I'll give you a million. Are you game?"

"In a minute!" exclaimed the villainous ground boss. You tell your "Red Mask" friend to take a few days vacation and let me alone—I know where Forde is going today and we may be millionaires before the sun goes down tonight. Right now, though, I got to have a little dinero."

Craven reached under his cot, took out the circus cash box and opened it. He handed Peaky a hand full of bills and the latter left the wagon.

About the time Edith and Bert mounted and started away on their ride to Overlook Hill, Peaky was in conference with three men, burly and unkempt, in a saloon across from the circus grounds. He had been outlining a plan and when he finished, arranged to meet them at a point away from the circus. He handed each of them a sum of money and went back to the grounds. As he came up to the main entrance, Jenkins drew up in his automobile and was about to order it away, when Peaky asked him if he could borrow it to do a little errand in town.

"Sure," replied the circus owner.

"Keep it all day if you want."

Peaky leaped in, started the car and drove by the horse tent. He went to his locker, pulled out the bundle containing the disguise of "Red Mask" and four revolvers and took two long lariats from a hook. Putting these in the car, he jumped in and started away at high speed. Less than a thousand yards from the circus he overtook his villainous friends. Then he pointed for the coast drive and Overlook Hill.

Running the car into the high weeds at the side of the road, he got out the ropes and the "Red Mask" disguise and posted his three aides where they would best fit his plans.

They had to wait some time, but finally Bert and Edith, riding easily, came into view. Just as they reached the hill top an armed, masked man appeared from either side of the road. A third came up behind them. Bert drew his gun and started to raise his arm to fire. A lariat shot through the air, dropped on his wrist and he was yanked to the ground, his wrist bleeding. The man nearest Edith seized her and pulled her from her horse.

Then Peaky, wearing the "Red Mask" disguise, ordered them carried to the brink and lowered over the cliff until their feet were in the water.

For the first few minutes after he had been left suspended, Bert thought that he and Edith had been left to certain death. He struggled and in so doing, managed to turn around. He saw that in the inden-tation of the rock there was a shelf about three feet above the surface of the water. He began to swing violently and urged Edith to do the same. He finally managed to land on the shelf, balanced perilously and was safe. With his feet on solid rock he was able to work his hands free and reach into his pocket for his knife. He cut his own bonds and then as Edith swung toward him he grabbed her and landed her on the shelf. He quickly cut her free.

Peaky and his ruffians had returned to the saloon near the grounds in jubilant mood and the villain went to Craven's wagon to report on his work. Craven leaped from his bed as the recital ended.

"You damned fool! Don't you know you'er killing the girl I want to marry. Com on—help me dress, and get out of here."

Peaky did as he was bid and the two went out and got into Jenkins' car, driving desperately to Overlook Point. Arriving there, they looked over the brink and saw that the ropes were immersed.

"Too late!" said Craven. They drove away and Bert hearing the motor, shouted for help. His voice failed to carry, of course, and the others did not hear him.

The water was fast rising in the shelter the unfortunate lovers had sought and it was now reaching their shoulders.

A NEW SERVICE FOR HOME BUILDERS

The ever onward march of progress records another victory. The old fashion lumber yard is fast becoming a memory, with its bleak unpainted and dirty office and in its stead is the Modern Building Store where in place of boards and timbers to greet the customers we see extensive displays of actual photographs of homes and buildings, a large assortment of plans and helps to assist the builder in obtaining the complete building he desires. The material merchants have come to realize that the home builders are not interested in "How many feet of 2 x 4's it takes to frame a house or what that material is worth per thousand feet", but the information they seek is What will my new home look like? How will it be arranged? What will it cost completed?

In answer to this demand of the reading public an extensive building service has been established, known to the country over as the most practical, helpful and economical ever offered to home builders. This organization by name, "Ye Planry" Service furnishes its builder's advise and plans only through the local lumber dealers in each territory. They furnish their dealers, the local lumberman, with a display of modern home plans, suggestions, information etc. pertaining to every department of the building. The owner can go to this local dealer and buy a home or garage from actual photographs just like he would buy any other commodity. The designs they show are the same homes as featured in the Ladies' Home Journal, Holland's Magazine and others. National Publications as well as larger city Home Building Campaigns. The citizens of Brownfield should welcome this valuable service as it will bring the latest and best in beautiful homes to our midst and will be instrumental in elevating our civic attractiveness by encouraging the building of more and better homes. The local dealer who has secured this service is the A. G. McAdams Lumber Co., where this display of Homes may be seen by all. You are invited to inspect it and the manager Mr. Prideaux states that every possible assistance will be rendered the builder, even to furnishing complete blue print plans and specifications. The Present Text Book Situation

While the present situation as to textbooks in Texas is far from satisfactory, Texas is faring better in this respect than are several other states. In the past whenever new adoptions of books have been made, difficulty has been experienced in securing a sufficient supply at the opening of school. This condition, therefore, is not a result of the free textbook law.

There are not now a sufficient number of books in the United States to supply the schools for the fall term. This situation is partly due to war conditions. Publishers, generally, hoping for lower prices have permitted their stock to run down during the last two years. Paper mills followed the same course, but instead the prices have soared. The book shortage has been made worse by the difficulty of securing trained workers. Most publishers have found it necessary to double their working forces, at about twice the wages paid a year ago. The supply of cloth for binding is insufficient, and it has been found impossible to secure an adequate corps of workers for book-binding.

In Texas much of the delay has been due to the procrastination of certain trustees and school officers in the matter of requisition blanks and making bonds. Frequent notices and appeals of the Department of Education have been disregarded. In consequence, it was impossible for the publishers to ascertain early the number of books that would be needed. The depositories have endeavored to supply first the schools that would open early. But in many cases, they are forced to ship only a partial order, because of having exhausted the supply of certain texts. There have been frequent delays in transit. Sometimes boxes of freight have been left at junctions for a week or more. At times the congestion at the Dallas shipping offices causes delay of a number of days. The recent strike of New York Longshoremen greatly delayed freight shipments by boat.

It may be of some small consolation to compare our situation with of some of the other states. No books have as yet been shipped from Chicago to Oklahoma, Tennessee and Florida have made adoption since those of Oklahoma, and in some cases cannot get a promise of their books before November or December. Kentucky made a late adoption and will have a longer delay than Texas, while Oregon is in a worse situation than Kentucky. None of these states have free textbooks. Texas with this additional tax on the book situation is faring, comparatively, well. The schools of Chicago opened about two weeks ago, and, as yet, have not been supplied with readers. In Arkansas the depository, with most of the fall supply of books was burned about a week ago. Many publishers are refusing to take further contracts.

The prospects for relief of the Texas shortage are good. Investigation made this week indicate that most of our schools will be supplied with the majority of books by the first of October. At the first of the week the Texas School Book Depository and the Southern School Book Depository were practically empty, the supplies having been exhausted. But both of these depositories expect large shipments this week. Ginn & Company report a shortage in algebras only. Nearly all of the independent districts and most of the large commonschool districts have been supplied with the basal books. Six carloads of Ashley Histories and the Civics are expected this week. Others shipments daily expected are the Mental Arithmetics the Algebras and the American and Texas histories. Most of the schools have been supplied with spellers, readers, and geographies. The Language book may still be delayed several weeks. As this text has not been changed, the schools may manage for a short time, by permitting two or more children to use the same text, in turn. Reasonable allowance should be made for the unusual conditions this year, and delays resulting from the fact that the textbook bill did not become a law until June, and, therefore, its provisions could not be rigidly enforced. If, after allowance for reasonable delay, the schools are not supplied with books, each school should avail itself of the recourse which the law gives.

KEPT HER AWAKE

The Terrible Pains in Back and Sides. Cardui Gave Relief.

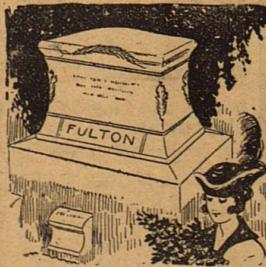

Marksville, La.—Mrs. Alice Johnson, of this place, writes: "For one year I suffered with an awful misery in my back and sides. My left side was hurting me all the time. The misery was something awful.

I could not do anything, not even sleep at night. It kept me awake most of the night... I took different medicines, but nothing did me any good or relieved me until I took Cardui...

I was not able to do any of my work for one year and I got worse all the time, was confined to my bed off and on. I got so bad with my back that when I stooped down I was not able to straighten up again... I decided I would try Cardui... By time I had taken the entire bottle I was feeling pretty good and could straighten up and my pains were nearly all gone.

I shall always praise Cardui. I continued taking it until I was strong and well." If you suffer from pains due to female complaints, Cardui may be just what you need. Thousands of women who once suffered in this way now praise Cardui for their present good health. Give it a trial. NC-133

HARRIS HAPPENINGS

By Sand Bur.

Mr. Walker from near Broncho passed through Wednesday with 116 head of fat cows, which he had sold to Bert McWhoirter of Lubbock, and was to deliver them at Meadow.

Abbie Taylor went to Brownfield, Thursday, and brought Mr. A. M. McBurnett out to begin work on his new house.

Roy Harris and family came out from Brownfield Saturday evening, and returned Sunday afternoon.

Glenn Harris and wife went to Brownfield, Sunday-afternoon.

On Sunday afternoon, September 12th, at the home of the brides' parents, near Spur, Texas, Miss Mintie Reed and Mr. Walter Frazier were quietly married.

Mrs. Frazier taught one term of our school at Harris, and her many friends here are delighted that she is to make her permanent home in their midst. She is a charming young lady and we congratulate Mr. Frazier.

Mr. Frazier is one of our best known stock farmers, who is much admired for those qualities of a true gentleman. May life's richest blessings be theirs.

Millard Ellington and wife returned to Meadow, Sunday, after spending three weeks at F. M. Ellington's place, here.

Walter Frazier and wife spent Saturday night at Brit Clare's, and Sunday and Sunday night at W. H. Harris'.

Will Fitzgerald has been visiting home folks for several days, and today, Monday, his sisters, Misses Ollie and Vergie took him to Brownfield, from whence he will return to his work on the Clayton ranch near Gail.

J. E. Fitzgerald has moved the bulk of his cattle to the John Kendrick pasture, near Seagraves, which he recently leased.

Mrs. J. M. McMillian visited Mrs. W. H. Harris, Monday.

Brit Clare learned Saturday that his Ford car can bog down so it can't crawl out without the aid of a good strong team of horses. We think that in the future he will make a larger circle around the nice lake of water in his pasture.

(This Week)

Reed Bros. of New Mexico, passed through Thursday, with a small bunch of horses and mules, which they were taking to market.

W. H. Harris and wife and Brit Clare and family went to Brownfield Saturday.

Roy Fitzgerald and family, visited Brit Clare and family last Sunday.

Millard Ellington and wife came down Sunday for a few days stay at Harris.

F. M. Ellington and family arrived at Meadow Friday, on their return from an extended visit in Pennsylvania. We were sorry to hear that Mr. Ellington was sick when he reached Meadow. A physician was called in who pronounced it a case of pneumonia. We sincerely hope he will soon recover and be able to come on home with his family.

Brit Clare moved his family to the Winn neighborhood Monday for the benefit of the school there, which opened Monday morning with trustees, patrons, teachers and pupils all enthusiastic for a good school.

This rainy weather has surely cut off our mail service. We are very hungry for some news; haven't even received a Terry County Herald in two weeks.

Johnnie and Alton Fitzgerald came in from Seagraves Friday.

Mrs. John Spear and children arrived home about a week ago, from an extended visit with relatives in Parker county.

Our old friend and citizen, J. A. Miller was exhibiting a 25c bill on the streets, one day recently, that while it showed considerable wear, one could plainly make out most everything except the date. It was United States Money and seemed to be of early vintage.

Killing Takes Place on Ranch

A deplorable tragedy was enacted at the Capps and Lucas ranch northeast of Coahoma, Wednesday afternoon in which a young fellow by the name of Wiley Hendrick was killed. Pat Sullivan was arrested charged with the crime.

From the most reliable source it seems that Mr. Sullivan who was in charge of the ranch refused permission for Hendrick to ride a horse and a fight followed. Sullivan taking a knife away from the young fellow during the fight. He ordered Hendrick off the place. Just what took place when they came together later some two hundred and fifty yards from the scene of the first fight is told, several ways.

Hendrick's body was found lying face downward and the evidence is that death was due to a blow on the head.—Big Spring Herald.

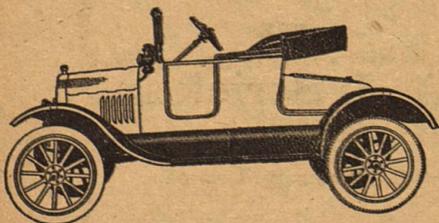

Ed Moore, one of our most popular farmers of the north side happened to an accident on day recently, Monday we believe, that came very near proving fatal. It seems that he was cutting binds on some feed with his knife, and stumbled forward with the blade open and toward him, and his whole weight was against the blade, which struck him over the heart, and a local physician who attended him, informed us that the knife point struck a rib was all that saved him. Anyway it is a close call, and we are glad to report that Ed is now doing well.

MY MADE TO MEASURE clothes are high but they are sure to go higher I have had fifteen years experience in this line of business and am glad to take all the risk of fitting and pleasing you. You can't go wrong in ordering a suit now.

When Train Men Get A Grouch

Operating expenses of railroads are increased by numerous methods of waste and carelessness. Probably one of the oldest and by far the most destructive and useless of them is practiced by train men and engine men when they get on the "peck." We have reference to their methods of switching and handling trains. In the local yard Saturday evening was a crew that was on a "peck" good and stout. The engine crew would allow the train men to signal until it looked as if they were exhausted before a move would be made. When the engine got under headway it would strike standing cars with such force that one standing beside the train could see the cars buckle upward in the center when the impact was made. In the train he hauled were several cars of cattle, some containing calves and others with cows and calves. These cars while standing appeared to be moderately loaded, but when they struck in switching one could see daylight through fully one-third of the car. They were jammed to one end of the car tighter than any saw-logs were ever packed in a car. After switching was about completed train men had the engine men backing up and pulling forward apparently for no other reason than to get even. When men adopt such measures to show their contempt for each other it is time to call a halt. They are not injuring one another one cent. The railroad owners and the shippers are the classes that suffer from such foolishness. Turning the railroads over to such a class would be the most destructive act the people of this country could permit. Claud News.

It is kindly like we heard a gentleman remark recently: "Just let the government and the brotherhoods run the railroads another twelve months and they won't have an engine that will move three empty box cars."

Texas After the Great Gulf Storm

The great storm that has swept Gulf coasts furnishes a reason which all will appreciate for the permanent maintenance of the Red Cross at its present high state of organization and efficiency.

Early estimates of the loss, are likely, as is usual to be exaggerated, but this storm of an intensity having few parallels has a place among the great disasters of recent years, due to natural causes. Galveston was fortified this time against its fury, but it brought great distress to gulf communities farther south. The needs of the victims have an especial appeal for St. Louis.

To relieve the first discomfort caused by the property damage and provide for those left dependent by injury and death, money is needed, but we are not compelled to rely on a haphazard improvised organization to collect the money and distribute inefficiently and wastefully the means of relief. The Red Cross, one of whose objects is to minimize suffering after just such a disaster due to the elements, has a machinery in readiness that may be put in instant operation. On the first receipt of the dismaying news from Texas, two workers of the American Red Cross Southwestern Division left St. Louis for that State to determine the extent of the need and take prompt measure of relief. Thanks to the popular generosity of the past there are funds that may be drawn on for emergency use without waiting for public subscriptions.

The Texans who have been hard hit have a particular claim upon us. Sympathetic St. Louis may be depended on to do its share toward toward meeting the total relief bill whatever its total. The duty of liberal all year round support for the Red Cross is made plain.—St Louis Post Dispatch.

ALL WAR SAVINGS SOCIETIES URGED TO KEEP WORKING

"Official statistics show that there are more than 164,000 War Savings Societies in this country and 17,500 of these are in our district," says Frank M. Smith, Federal District Director for the Eleventh Federal War Savings District, in discussing the nation-wide thrift movement.

"These Government War Savings Societies have well proved their usefulness under war conditions in the marketing of War Savings Stamps and Thrift Stamps. Their mission is just as important now, and will therefore be permanently continued in order to push and extend the sale of War Savings Stamps. Thrift is power. When we save, we succeed. "We have learned that thrift is not hoarding. It doesn't mean cutting down expenses foolishly, but it does mean cutting out foolish expenses. It means spending thought before spending money. It does not require expert knowledge of the laws of finance; all it requires is common sense.

"War Savings Stamps are within the reach of anyone, no matter how small the opportunities for savings. A quarter buys a Thrift Stamp. A War Savings Stamp costs $4.14 during March and one cent a month additional till December, when the price will be $4.23. Each War Savings Stamp bought now will bring the owner $5 on January 1, 1924. The rate of interest is the highest for any Government security ever issued.

"I hope every community in the district will maintain its War Savings Societies and add to their number. Everyone who is concerned in the business of living is vitally interested in Thrift and the Savings Campaign and should be a member of a War Savings Society.

"None is too poor to have a part. None so well off he can be indifferent. Thrift is good management of the business of living. The man, woman or child who has mastered Thrift is master of his fate. The people who acquire the Thrift habit are on the high road to success.

"One of the best ways to practice thrift is to practice intelligent buying. We should buy, not what we think we want, but what he know we need. This kind of buying is far from miserliness. The business man will appreciate it for it means frequent turnover in staples on which they can calculate accurately the demand in advance, rather than hazardous stocking up with the opposite kind of goods.

"We must save for ourselves and for our country's sake. We have saved enormously under the pressure of war, but our work is not over. We have great saving still to do. It is a certainty we can do it if, individually and nationally, we back up the Government and take an active part in 'getting ahead' by following the War Savings plan."
