For a new thrill
IN LOVELINESS TRY NEW PLEX

by Dorothy Perkins

When you are tired and feel the years' relentless march, step out of the busy whirl and masque your face in New Plex. It's a cream masque (not a clay) — different from any you have ever used, for as you relax beneath its soothing calm your circulation is stimulated, impurities come to the surface, facial muscles become firmer, more youthful, and when a few moments later, you remove the masque, lo and behold, the years too seem to have vanished.

THEATRE NEWS

By SHERMAN HART, Asst. Mgr. "I MARRIED A DOCTOR"

Thursday—June 18th
Adapted from Sinclair Lewis' satirical indictment of small town life, "Main Street." Considerably changed from the original, it tells the story of a big city girl who settles in a small town with her native doctor husband. Her modern and idealistic viewpoint is ungraciously received by the villagers. Results: Social hostilities, unwarranted matrimonial suspicions, and a climatic controversy over a plan to beautify "Main Street," submitted by the doctor's wife and rejected by the smug and complacent citizenry. Players are Pat O'Brien, Josephine Hutchinson, Ross Alexander, Guy Kibbee, Louise Fazenda, Olin Howland.

"YELLOW DUST"
Palace—Friday and Saturday June 19 and 20
Much of the typical blood and thunder element conspicuous in the average western has been substituted here by a well-developed plot, some especially good performances, nice vocal renditions on the part of Leila Hyams and a pleasing sprinkling of romantic interest. Players are Richard Dix, Leila Hyams, Moroni Olsen, Jessie Ralph, Andy Clyde, Onslow Stevens.

"SMALL TOWN GIRL"
Palace—Saturday Midnite Matinee and Sunday
Modern Cinderella story with the usual happy ending, this is better than average entertainment for all types of audiences. From Ben Ames Williams' book, it deals with the bored smalltown girl who, seeing a chance for her place in the social sun, marries a rich socialite doctor when he proposes as a drunken prank. Sobered, he takes her home to his parents and the girl to whom he had been engaged and who he thinks he loves. To avoid scandal, the situation is tolerated by all concerned pending divorce arrangements. When she saves him from missing his big professional opportunity, disregarding embarrassment to herself, he discovers that he loves his wife and reconciliation results. Players are Janet Gaynor, Robert Taylor, Binnie Barnes, Lewis Stone, Andy Devine, Elizabeth Patterson.

"THANKS A MILLION"
Palace—Monday only—June 22nd
One of 20th Century-Fox big musical hits with that grand star of radio, stage and screen, Dick Powell. Also co-starring with him one of the prettiest little girls of the screen, Ann Dvorak.

"GREAT IMPERSONATION"
Palace—Tuesday and Wednesday June 23 and 24
Edmund Lowe's excellent interpretation of a difficult role lifts this somewhat out-dated spy story slightly above the average program. The star plays an Englishman and his impersonator, a German baron, differentiating the two characters in clever fashion. Supporting cast is competent with Valerie Hobson standing out. Players are Edmund Lowe, Valerie Hobson, Vera Engles, Lumsden Hare.

"CHATTERBOX"
Ritz—Sunday-Monday, June 21, 22
Anne Shirley, as a country girl.

Judge Ed Hamner, Pioneer Colorado Attorney, Is Dead

Career Ends At Fort Worth Tuesday Night After Long Illness; Burial Friday

Judge Ed J. Hamner, 79, well known West Texas attorney and a former judge of the 39th judicial district, died at a Fort Worth hospital Tuesday night following a lingering illness. He had been in poor health several months from effects of a stroke suffered while guest at a hotel in Mineral Wells.

Judge Hamner had spent much of his lifetime in West Texas. He came to Colorado in 1899 to form a partnership with the late Judge R. H. Looney. He and family made their home here until 1910 when they located in Sweetwater. Judge Hamner retired from law practice a few years ago. During the past two years he and wife had spent the Winters at a Mineral Wells resort hotel.

The late attorney was a native of Fort Bend county and was reared at Galveston, where he began the early study of law. Taking advantage of a special dispensation he was admitted to the bar before attaining the age of 21 years. He moved to Haskell county in 1884 and was elected district judge ten years later.

The body was received in Sweetwater late Wednesday afternoon and during Thursday lay in state at a Sweetwater funeral home. Funeral rites were to have been conducted in Sweetwater Friday.

Surviving are his widow, six daughters, Mrs. Mose Newman and Mrs. Paul Sorenson of Sweetwater, Mrs. C. M. Wilcher of El Paso, Mrs. Minnie Sorenson of Houston, Mrs. R. S. Malone of Waxahachie, and Mrs. Lizzie Lovelady of Fallon, Nevada; two sons, Staxton W. Hamner of Healdton, Oklahoma, and Edward J. Hamner, Jr., of Indianapolis, Indiana, and fifteen grandchildren.

Jim Greene's Face Familiar In Austin Highway Offices As He Makes 31st Trip

"As familiar as Jim Greene's face in state highway offices at Austin" can be listed as another striking simile, in case you are collecting similes, because J. H. Greene's trip to Austin early this week to try for—and get—designation of a state highway from Robert Lee to Colorado was his thirty-first trip to the state capital in the interest of good roads in this section.

Back in 1912, when the fight was on to secure the designation of state Highway One through Colorado Mr. Greene made his first such trip to Austin. In those days there wasn't any state highway commission, and highway questions were submitted direct to the governor. Mr. Greene made that trip as chairman of the good roads committee of Colorado's Commercial club, and he accompanied representatives of towns to the east and west along the proposed highway route.

Four trips to Austin, spread out over a two-year period, were necessary to secure that designation. Then the question of a highway designation north and south came up. The first meeting ever called in the interest of such designation was called by Greene, Jesse Bullock (then county judge) and R. M. Webb at the old St. James hotel. Representatives of towns from Amarillo to Del Rio responded.

But Colorado lost out on that designation in a later meeting held at Snyder. Towns to the north of Colorado were well-represented in the Snyder meeting, and so was Roscoe, Colorado and the smaller towns to the south fell down, Greene being the only person present from Colorado. So those at the meeting voted to ask for designation from Snyder southward via Roscoe.

Later Greene and the late Ben Van Tuyl and Dr. P. C. Coleman tried in Austin to get the designation for Colorado instead of Roscoe but failed. The question of a state highway leading southward from Snyder through Colorado has been looming ever since that time. Twelve years ago Greene and W. S. Cooper, then secretary of the Colorado chamber of commerce, went to Austin and secured designation of Highway 101 from Snyder to Colorado. Cooper was spokesman. Some time after that the highway was designated to Sterling City but the designation was later revoked on the recommendation of a highway engineer.

When paving Mitchell county's part of Highway One was a pressing question Greene made a number of trips to Austin in the interest of that work. Because he had worked so hard for good roads, yet had within his county the notorious Iatan Flat, known as the worst place on the highway in muddy weather, Mr. Greene was jokingly given the title, "Mayor of Iatan Flat" when he visited out of town gatherings. He gladly shed that title when the county celebrated the "funeral of Iatan Flat" in 1928.

Three trips were made to Austin by Greene in the interest of Highway 89, the cut off from Ranger to Weatherford. He and Judge Milburn McCarty of Eastland presented that cut off proposition to the highway commission.

As an official in the Broadway of America Highway association, which he helped to organize, Mr. Greene appeared before the highway commission a number of times in the interest of closing paving gaps in the Broadway through Texas.

HIGHWAYS MOST DEADLY AGENCY, EDITORIAL SAYS

The highways of Texas are developing into a most deadly menace to life and property and the condition presents a serious problem to the public, suggests the Abilene Daily Reporter in a recent editorial. The Reporter says:

"The most frequent and sustained, conversational subject to which men commit themselves regardless of where they forgather is not politics, the weather, money or religion. It is the subject of highway traffic and what can be done to make it safer.

"Such drivers can be eliminated and traffic safety brought to a high pitch only by passing and enforcing the strictest of drivers' license laws. A license to drive should be issued only to those who have demonstrated their ability to handle a car under severe tests and who can be held responsible for their acts as drivers.

"Under present conditions nobody's life and property are safe."

"If you have within recent months done any traveling by automobile or motor bus you'll understand why.

"The highways of the state and nation are more deadly today than ever before, and it is small wonder that the motor traffic subject should bob up so often when men converse.

"Everybody has his own ideas about promoting highway safety but after all is said and done it resolves itself down to the personal equation. It depends almost wholly upon the intelligence, experience, skill and sense of social responsibility of the driver.

"The best efforts of engineering skill, law enforcement agencies and manufacturing efficiency are made useless if a fool or a conscienceless driver is at the wheel.

GET GULFLUBE— It's "Stripped for action"!

Poorly refined motor oils, like a swimmer with all his clothes on, can't do an efficient job. They carry too much excess baggage—waste that should be "stripped off" by refining.

Most 25c oils, like a swimmer stripped of part of his clothes, are rid of some waste—but not enough for best performance. No refiner of 25c oils could afford to go further, before Gulf's Multi-sol process was perfected.

GULFLUBE MOTOR OIL, like a swimmer stripped for action, is rid of every bit of excess waste. It's the only Multi-sol-made 25c oil—the finest, purest oil a quarter ever bought. Gulflube gives you better lubrication, lower bills and a cleaner motor. Prove it—at the Sign of the Orange Disc.

Their Positions To Continue With WPA After Bonds Arrive

Veterans On These Projects Not Affected, Washington States In Announcement

Jobless world war veterans in Mitchell county who may be employed on WPA or Federal relief projects are not to be discharged now that they have received their bonus bonds. The Record was informed this week in announcement from Washington. Such a policy was outlined by the Works Progress Administration headquarters Saturday.

There are 250,000 jobless veterans employed on these projects in the United States, it was pointed out. Status of another 300,000 needy ex-soldiers remained in doubt, however. The number of men affected here however, is small. There are few veterans of this county registered on the relief roster.

CANDIDATES DEBATE MEANS FOR RAISING PENSION FUNDS

Various Methods Advanced By Aspirants for Governor as State's $13,000,000 Deficit Is Overlooked

By Raymond Brooks

AUSTIN.—Candidates for governor are debating ways to raise $7,000,000 or $8,000,000 a year for old-age pensions. Each in his own way has ignored the thirteen-million-dollar deficit in general revenue, and this debt of the state, since it will not cure itself, may be expected to last on down through several years at least.

It is about nine millions down, but to exceed 13 millions by the end of the year. It will be reduced by annual tax payments early next year, then rise again to present levels or higher.

Each of the candidates has his own plan to raise more tax money. Each proposes to apply the new revenues, supplementing liquor taxes, to full payment of old-age pensions on the $30 monthly maximum fifty-fifty matching with the federal government.

The deficit is not considered particularly serious, and many legislators and officials believe a moderate overdraft is beneficial, in protecting the treasury from too liberal legislative grants.

Basic truth is that the state's administrative machinery is constantly expanding. The number of departments and the personnel are increasing necessarily to render the services now required of government. Such an expansion has been constant for many years, and too many prospective future agencies, departments and services already are being planned to permit any let-up now. Most of the early additions will be for cooperative work with the federal government, under some basis of matching money. Liquor, pension and public safety departments recently have come into being.

The state now collects from taxpayers and citizens more than 100 million dollars a year, and receives around $50,000,000 from federal agencies, naturally also collected from the people of Texas. It spends this money, plus the extra amounts by which it increases its debt.

Tom F. Hunter, candidate for governor, proposes principally to raise money for pensions through a

1/2 of 1 per cent income tax, with liberal basic exemptions, and to reduce the amount the state collects now in ad valorem levies on property. He would look to the income tax finally to help the general revenue account, as well as the pension fund; but he would necessarily have to apply several millions to the ad valorem offset before he could begin whittling at the deficit.

Gov. James V. Allred, when he opens his re-election campaign at Washachie soon will reiterate his demand for an increase in the levies on natural resources—oil, sulphur, gas and the like, and on the income of utility services.

His proposal calls for at least enough to meet the unsatisfied demands of the pension law. They do not touch specifically the adjustment of the general fund.

Candidate Roy Sanderford favors a heavy "selective" sales tax of 2 per cent. This would raise much money. Its proceeds first would go to the payment of pensions, then to the second part of his tax plank, the reduction of the levies on property. He would waive considerable revenues by a tax-exemption period for new industries, thus encouraging new industries and giving them a definite advantage over those already in existence.

F. W. Fischer seeks the governorship on the proposal to greatly increase the natural resources tax. His proposal is for something like a 600 per cent increase in the tax on oil production. With it is coupled the plan to reduce the consumers' gasoline tax from 4 cents to 2 cents per gallon. He would apply some relief to ad valorem levies.

Fischer's plank is based on the theory that 85 per cent of the natural resources go out of the state, and thus the heavy tax would be laid by non-residents, as it is claimed Texas pays many taxes of other states as a consumer. It recognizes that the gasoline tax is paid wholly by people in Texas. His system would require a very large increase in one form of levy to offset the reduction of the other, before he even started paying the pension, or gave thought to the existing deficit.

Government in Texas long ago ceased to be government solely. It first went into essential supervisions of industry, and regulation of these branches of industry "impressed with a public interest." From that it progressed to substituting services performed by governmental agencies for those originally offered unregulated by private interests, then administered by private agencies under its supervision.

Either supervision or performance costs money. The stock argument is sovereignty, and spreading its costs very broadly, can perform services affecting large numbers of people more cheaply than any other agency.

Furnishing a doctor in a maternity case is not primarily a function of government, yet the state has come, working with the federal government, to the decision that the general public welfare is benefitted by levying some sort of tax and providing such a service in cases where private means hazard the lives of people.

In the past, the state recognized that when a person became hopelessly insane, or disabled by disease, it was a governmental function to take over that person's support. Now, it has progressed to the belief that by psychiatric and medical hospitals, the cure and prevention of the mental and physical afflictions, so as to avoid permanent wards, is a correct function.

The state has assumed the burden of providing for persons over 65 years of age, without private resources for their support. It does the job of building public highways, and of carrying on public education. The candidates this year have three broad economic issues before them: 1. Rearranging present tax loads. 2. Providing means to assume new burdens assumed by government. 3. Making both ends meet as to existing functions.

At present, the state is spending slightly more than it takes in for general administrative procedure. It has adopted a scale of spending much more than so far it has arranged to collect in pensions. Candidates for governor have concentrated on meeting the pension demands. Some of them touch ever so lightly on the granting of relief to taxpayers assumed to bear an unfair share of the present burden. Forgotten general revenue likely will have to stagger along without much attention for several years to come, on the theory that its burden isn't too great, and that some burden of debt is better than a burden of cash.

READ THIS A letter from Tom Love is here submitted in which he comments on the keynote speech at the Republican convention:

Tuesday evening I sat in my home and heard by radio every word of the keynote speech of the Republican national convention at Cleveland; Senator Steiwer of Oregon.

This was the eleventh address by the chairman of a national convention which I have been privileged to listen to, either personally or by radio, since I began attending national conventions in 1892; and it was altogether the worst speech of its kind that I have ever heard. At best, it was a regrettable and discreditable collection of baseless diatribes, worthy of a hardboiled criminal lawyer defending a desperate cause.

The high light of Senator Steiwer's oration—or rather its low light—for I submit that it registered the low water mark of national convention oratory for all time, was the wholly gratuitous slur contained in his reference to "a debacle such as we had in March 1933, when a President-Elect without a conscience refused for four months to co-operate with a President who had a conscience, resulting in a bank crisis and a panic of fear and fright." This plainly charges that it is unseemly for one elected President of the United States to decline to assume responsibilities of office prior to the date fixed by the Constitution; and it also misstates American history, for it implies that we had no bank crisis or panic of fear and fright until after March 1933, whereas the school children know that Roosevelt stopped a Republican banking panic of ten years duration.

The Treasury records at Washington show that during the ten calendar years preceding 1933, more than 10,000 American banks closed their doors, making a record of an average of over 1,000 American bank failures for each of those ten years, all under Republican administrations, and the same records show that the situation was rapidly growing worse. In the year 1931, 2,294 American banks failed or one out of every ten banks doing business at the beginning of that year; and the next year, 1932, 1,456 American banks failed, or one out of every twelve that remained open at the beginning of that year.

The same Treasury records show that President Roosevelt's new deal administration has substantially put an end to losses to depositors in American banks from bank failures, for the first time.

During last year, 1935, there were only thirty-four bank failures in the United States, involving aggregate deposits of approximately $10,000,000, as against 1,456 bank failures for 1932, involving more than $715,000,000; and 2,294 bank failures for 1931, involving more than $1,690,000,000 (billion); and the same records show that in the 14,207 American banks insured in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, set up by the Roosevelt administration and the Democratic Congress for the insurance of American bank depositors against loss, against the loud protest of Governor Landon of Kansas, there have been and can be substantially no losses whatever to any bank depositor; and this group of insured banks includes practically all the active banks of deposit in the country.

But while the speech of Senator Steiwer, who admits that he voted for many of the measures he so bitterly denounces, writes a regrettable page in American history, it is hard to prove most effective in its good, think there can be no doubt that it made at least a contribution to Roosevelt and Garner in November. It proved that there is nothing so difficult to say against their re-election as "God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform." THOMAS B. LOVE.

Thirty-Nine 4-H Club Boys Return From Encampment At Water Valley

Thirty-nine 4-H club boys of Mitchell county returned to Colorado Saturday afternoon at 3:30 from a tri-county encampment of 4-H club boys at Water Valley. They had left here on Thursday afternoon, accompanied by their county agent, B. J. Baskin, and by Ralph Beal, who drove the truck in which they rode.

The encampment was arranged by Baskin and the county agents of Coke and Tom Green counties to W. I. Marschal of Tom Green county.

UNWRITTEN HISTORY The following is a bit of unwritten political history in the life of Sam Houston:

In 1854 Sam Houston was a candidate for Governor of Texas, and he had as an opponent Congressman Louis Trezevant Wigfall. They engaged in a number of heated joint discussions at different points in the State. One of them was at Alton, the county seat of Denton county which was located in dense timber on the bank of Hickory Creek, seven miles south of where Denton now stands. People came from far and near to hear the debate.

Houston, in his accustomed satirical eloquence, said: "Wigfall, pistol-ed up to his elbows, is following me around over Texas as a jackdaw would follow a hen." As should have been expected, Houston was elected Governor.

This column has been severely criticized about making so many errors and this is written not as an effort to squirm out as many of our readers may imagine. It is merely a capitulation of contravention circumstances.

reward their 4-H club boys who had made a good record in club attendance and in carrying out 4-H club projects during the year. Business men of Colorado and Loraine financed the trip for the Mitchell county boys, each of whom took along a dozen eggs and his camping outfit. Fun was combined with instructive trips during the encampment. The boys judged sheep on the D. T. Jones ranch in Tom Green county and examined trench silos there. On the Carter-Rawlins ranch they were instructed in the budding of pecan trees and saw terraced pastures.

One of the most interesting things they saw was a soil erosion demonstration being carried on by government labor near the D. T. Jones ranch. In this demonstration between 6,000 and 7,000 acres of pasture and farm land lying on a certain watershed had been terraced to get the full benefit of every drop of water, falling on the watershed. The terraced pasture lands have been grubbed free of superfluous mesquites and shrubs and cacti, only enough trees being left for shade. The boys were greatly impressed with the green luxuriance of grass on these pastures.

Swimming, soft ball, and supervised play were recreations enjoyed during the outing. The two county agents in charge beside Baskin were and Houston Smith of Coke county.

Mitchell county boys rating the trip were Elden Adrian, Neal Blassingame, Murrell Blassingame, Wayne Blassingame, Lee Brown, Howard Lee Boyd, Rayford Boyd, James Colebank, Cecil Collier, A. J. Felts, Jr., James Hart, Harris Hamilton, Leland Hamilton, Lynn Hamilton, Eugene Homer, Macon Homer, Jay

Public's Interest In Berry's Museum At Fairview Quickened By Centennial

Out northwest of Colorado in the Fairview section of Mitchell county there lives a man whose interest in historical things wasn't increased a whit by Texas' Centennial year—for the simple reason that his interest in such things has always been at white-heat.

Will Berry has been collecting old firearms and buffalo knives and Indian arrowheads for so long that most Mitchell countians have been taking him for granted, along with the private museum which he maintains at his Fairview home, one of the most modern farm dwellings in the county.

But the things which Mr. Berry has collected and made are coming in for renewed notice now that folks of this section have become Centennial minded. A number of his items will probably be on display at the Fort Worth Frontier Centennial exposition in Fort Worth, if present plans work out.

As you enter Mr. Berry's museum building, constructed of natural rock and with the name "Hillcrest" above its door, you see at least two objects of historic value. By the door there is a flat worn rock which was found in Sam Bass canyon in Palo Pinto county and which bears a triangular inscription enclosing the initials "E. H. W." The year 1882 is carved above the triangle, the date April 8 below. The rock is believed to have been the grave marker of one of Sam Bass' men.

To the other side of the door is a huge iron pot suspended from a tripod and with it an old ox-wagon hub and a fish "gig," all secured from an old German woman at Junction and all silent reminders of Texas life in pioneer days.

Visitors in the museum usually notice first the startling designs which Mr. Berry has worked out with his Indian arrowheads. One of these designs represents a life-size Indian chief standing in a frame that measures 6 foot 6 inches by 3 feet. Nearly all the arrow-heads used in this piece of work were found "down on the Spades" by the late John Prude, pioneer rancher of Mitchell county and Fort Davis. The characteristics of different Indian camps, especially those of the Kiowas who camped on Kiowa creek south of Sterling City, can be clearly discerned in this design.

Most of the arrowheads used in another design of a deer at bay were found in Monument draw north of Monahans. All arrowheads in these two works are of flint. Mr. Berry has several smaller designs worked out with valuable arrowheads of other materials and found mostly in states other than Texas.

Old guns are Mr. Berry's particular hobby. He has traveled miles to secure them, paid double prices for some of them, and dug others out of trash heaps where they were thrown by people not knowing or caring for their historical value.

He has a flint-lock rifle which was used in the Revolutionary war with England. He got it from the Whit Barnes family over in Kaufman county on a crossing of the Sabine river. Whit Barnes himself is long since dead. The gun was handed down to him and he loved it so that during the Civil war, when guns were scarce and were therefore being confiscated, he hid it in a hollow tree. He had to saw it in two to get all of it out of sight. There are marks on the stock

GEORGE BLACK WINS HIT PARADE CONTEST

George M. Black of the Magnolia offices is in receipt of a carton of Lucky Strike cigarettes as an award in the Lucky Strike Hit Parade contest on the radio.

Each week a carton of cigarettes is given by the American Tobacco company to any person who guesses in order the three song hits which are the most popular in all parts of the United States. On the Lucky Strike broadcast each Wednesday and Saturday night, these three hits and the next twelve most popular numbers are played.

Black guessed that "Is It True What They Say About Dixie?" "Robins and Roses" and "You Started Me Dreaming" would be the three top number in that order, and as a reward for his prediction he was sent a carton of cigarettes. However, he says that no one can mooch any off him as he has traded them to Lester Manning for a box of cigars.

FARM FACTS

The following interesting news notes are furnished The Record from office of Ben J. Baskin, county farm agent:

The Highway Department of Texas has been allotted 20,000 cotton mats for curing concrete by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. These mats are to be used in such manner as the State Highway Department sees fit so long as their use is deemed practical, efficient and economical. The A. A. A.'s interest in supplying such mats is in the hope a greater demand for cotton and cotton products may be created.

Poisoned grain for use in exterminating ground squirrels and other rodents is now available at the office of the county agent. Farmers may secure same by calling at the county agent's office.

BONUS BONDS CREDITED IN FUGITIVE'S ARREST

Arrival of the veterans' bonus bonds occasioned some two hundred broad smiles in Mitchell county but at Sherman a fugitive is back behind jail bars, all because of the bonds. Roy Lovelady, fugitive from the McKinney jail, was so interested in trying to get his bonds that his presence became known and he was arrested and returned to the lock-up, there to think things over. "Sherman must have been right about war," he commented as a grated cell door clanged behind him.

[QUESTIONS THAT ARE ASKED ABOUT BANKING]

Do Banks want new checking accounts?

YES, most banks welcome new checking accounts. At least, we know that our bank is glad to have them—for checking accounts constitute one of the most important financial services we render to the people of this community.

A checking account is a valuable service to depositors. Naturally, it costs the bank money to handle every account. These expenses include check books, signature cards, deposit slips, other supplies and necessary time and cost of handling the account. Consequently, the bank expects an adequate balance to be kept in the account in order that its earnings will help to cover its cost. Otherwise, a moderate service charge is ordinarily made.

If you do not have a checking account now we invite you to open one here.

By Lone Star Gas System

DALLAS.—Dedication of the Hall of Religion, Centennial Exposition, Dallas, will be broadcast Sunday afternoon from 2:15 to 2:45 by Texas Quality Network, WFAA, WBAP, KPRC, WOAI, four of the largest radio stations in Texas, according to announcement of W. A. Scott, Hall of Religion director.

Right Reverend Harry T. Moore, Bishop of Dallas Episcopal church, will make the dedicatory address and L. B. Denning, president of Lone Star Gas system who gave the building to the churches of Texas.

The Hall of Religion, given in recognition of the importance of church influence in the conception and development of Texas, affords all religious groups a prominent and distinctive place in celebration of the state's 100th anniversary, according to Scott.

"Visitors to the Centennial will find the Hall of Religion a convenient and restful place to meet friends. It is air conditioned and cooled, contains exhibits depicting history of religion in Texas, and affords comfortable furniture, rest rooms, and a spacious outdoor patio," the director said.

Livestock In Good State;
Grazing Assured Through Summer, Fall Months

Range conditions in Texas are the best since 1932, it is reported in the monthly survey of the U. S. department of agriculture. Due to the effects of the good general rains received during May, the report said, summer and fall grazing is virtually assured in most sections of the state.

Livestock are in very good condition and losses were light.

Cattle ranges for the state as a whole are in very good condition. The prospects for summer and fall grazing are good. The condition on June 1, 1936, was 88 per cent of normal, compared with 74 per cent a month ago, 79 per cent a year ago, and 86 per cent the 10-year (1926-1935) average on June 1.

Although good general rains fell in practically all sections of the state during the latter part of May, there are areas in the northwest Panhandle, trans-Pecos region, and southwest Texas where subsoil moisture may be a little short. Surface stock water and soil moisture are ample in most sections of the state. Some areas in the Gulf coastal region received excessive rainfall during May, and dry, clear weather is essential for the production of a better quality of grass.

Sheep ranges are in good shape and prospects for summer grazing are very good. The condition on June 1, 1936, was 90 per cent of normal, compared with 73 per cent a month ago, 79 per cent a year ago, and 88 per cent the 10-year average on June 1. There is good soil moisture in the entire sheep area to make ample feed.

Cattle condition on June 1, 1936, was 85 per cent of normal, compared with 80 per cent a month ago, 77 per cent a year ago, and 86 per cent the 10-year average on June 1. Cattle are in very good condition, and a good crop of spring calves was dropped.

Sheep condition on June 1, 1936, was 87 per cent of normal compared with 81 per cent a month ago, 81 per cent a year ago, and 88 per cent the 10-year average on June 1. Sheep are in good condition and have made rapid progress since the good rains during May. Ewes are in good condition, and a very good crop of late lambs was dropped.

Crops Being Replanted

Roaring flood waters that in some localities rushed across plowed and planted fields Saturday left considerable property damage in its wake. A few miles east of Colorado, on either side of Highway One, terraces were broken and gaping ditches resulted from the near waterspout. Heavy rains were reported west of town and in other parts of the county.

Farmers in several parts of the territory were here Saturday and Monday to purchase seed to replant acreage on which young crops of cotton and feed had been destroyed. Low places on both farm and pasture lands were inundated by the flood torrents.

New Unit Deliveries Climb
During May; Used Cars,
Too, In Heavy Demand

Chevrolet dealers rounded out the greatest three months in the history of the Chevrolet Motor Company by delivering 129,816 new cars and trucks in May, W. E. Holler, vice president and general sales manager, announced today. May sales were the highest on record, exceeding those for the highest previous May, that of 1928, by 7,379 units.

The company's sales in April established a new all-time high for any month of any year, and the totals for March and for May approached that high point so closely as to concentrate within the past 90 days all three of Chevrolet's biggest months. Total sales for that period were 389,556 units, bringing the total for the year to date, from Jan. 1, to 535,634.

May used car sales by Chevrolet dealers set an all-time high of 229,223 units, Mr. Holler announced, resulting in a substantial decline in the stocks on hand, and contributing to the outlook for heavy new unit volume in June.

LOONEY H. D. CLUB
Mrs. Trudo Webb, Reporter

Rural home owners can add bathing equipment to their homes at a reasonably low price, said Miss Emma Gunter, agent, to the Looney Home Demonstration club which met Thursday, June 11, at the home of Mrs. Trudo Webb.

Bath towels and bath mats were studied and Miss Gunter demonstrated materials and styles. Cannon towels were recommended as inexpensive and serviceable. Bath mats may be braided of old sheets, tufted of different colors on feed sack or ducking, or they may be quilted. A worn out piece of quilt covered with colored cloth and quilted back and forth, makes a serviceable mat. If desired applique work may be added to this type of mat.

It was voted to send Mrs. Bill Gale as delegate to A. & M. short course from this club. Mrs. Johnnie Burk was chosen as alternate. Plans are being made to raise money for their expenses.

Members present were Mrs. J. M. Thompson, Mrs. M. A. Webb, Mrs. Keith Miles, Mrs. Trudo Webb. Visitors were Mrs. Louis Small, Mrs. J. A. Thompson, Dorothy Thompson, Luine Miles, Weldon Miles, Miss Quinney of Colorado and Mavis and Wanda Webb.
