WEATHER EXPERT SAYS
DROUGHT CYCLE BROKEN

WASHINGTON.—The generally dry cycle that lasted from 1930 through 1936 may be at an end, according to J. B. Kincer of the U. S. Weather Bureau. He bases his prediction on plentiful rains this year following those in 1937.
"This suggests the possibility," Kincer said, "that the long drought has spent itself and that the years immediately ahead may bring more abundant rainfall to the country."
He compared the 1930-36 drought with the one that extended from about 1886 through 1895. Following that period of deficient moisture came a series of years—1896 through 1909—when rainfall was generally abundant.
The first half of 1938 was outstanding for its precipitation. About 50 per cent of the United States had more than normal rainfall. The country as a whole averaged 12 per cent above normal. All states, excepting the tier extending from New York to Florida, and Louisiana and North Dakota, and Washington had above normal rainfall.

BULLETS

By Myron Griffin

Joel had seen the woman before. When she went by the window of his hardware store, he kept an uneasy eye on her and, when he saw her staring, with unmistakable malice, across the way toward the office of old Judge Denton, the feeling of apprehension born vaguely in him that morning in court began to take disturbing form.

He moved slowly to the window. The woman was standing at the corner, looking up and down the street; in a moment, she turned and disappeared.

Joel hadn't felt easy in his mind since he had seen the bitter smile the woman gave old Judge Denton as her husband's sentence was pronounced and he was led away by the bailiffs. Her husband was a

"somebody else will—somebody that don't know her." He was especially careful in his selection. He took a box, dumped out six shells, and dropped them into an envelope.

"Here you are," he said.

The woman dropped a half dollar on the counter, eyeing him suspiciously, and took the shells.

"You sure they're the right size? I don't want any mistakes."

"Then you better try them, lady," advised Joel's pa. "That boy of mine, he don't always—"

She tried to break open the gun. "Here," said Joel again, "let me—"

"Get away!" the woman said.

She got the gun open and, fumbling with the shells, inserted them in the cylinder. They went in snugly, fitting perfectly. She snapped the loaded gun shut and dropped it into lumber-camp man. He had stabbed another husky nearly to death over a small insult.

The woman took a revolver from her handbag. "Fill this up," she demanded.

The hateful expression in the woman's eyes, the bitter curve of her lips as she had looked at the judge, had been uncomfortably real in Joel's mind all day. And yet, he strove to reassure himself, what could she possibly do?

Joel's pa spoke from the rear of the store.

"What d'ye see at the window, boy?"

Joel turned. "I guess I don't see nothin', Pa."

Folks considered Joel a slow man, and he did move in a leisurely fashion, and spoke in an easy, dragging drawl. His father was forever at his heels. "You heard 'Hurry up, boy!' and 'All right, Pa.' all day in that store."

Joel's pa got so nervous when more than one customer came in at once that usually he sprang up to wait on them himself. There must have been a reason, but folks never quite understood why it was the son who owned the store, not the old man.

Suddenly, Joe became aware that his father had been speaking again. "What did you say, Pa?"

"You mean to say you ain't heard me?"

"I was thinkin'," Joel explained. "I asked you," his father repeated, "what was doin' at the courthouse this mornin'."

Somehow, when the buzzer over their heads sounded at that moment Joel knew, without turning, that it was the woman from the lumber camp. He turned casually. It was her handbag. Then she looked up. She smiled.

"Thanks," she said. Her lips became thin lines. She crossed the floor with rapid strides and, flinging the door open, went out.

Joel's pa came behind the counter. "I declare, boy, you never waited on a customer right in your life! Pushing his son aside, he picked up the box of shells and turned to the shelf. "I never seen the like!"

Joel saw the woman step off the curb. She would cross the street, open the door, go through the outer office . . . enter the Judge's little office . . . and there, in old Judge Denton's face, pull the trigger of her gun six times . . . people would rush in.

"Now look at that!" cried Joel's pa, his voice angrily rising, his trembling fingers extending the cartridge box. "Look at that label, boy!"

Joel took the box.

RIM-FIRE RIM-FIRE

"You dang idiot, them old rim-fire shells ain't any earthly use to that lady! That's a center-fire gun she's got!"

"All right, Pa. Don't get excited."

"Well, if you ain't the dumbest! Run out and catch her! Hurry up, 'fore she gets away!"

"There ain't no use hurryin', Pa," said Joel, moving himself slowly from behind the counter. "It just so happens the lady won't get away for some time."

She was wearing a cheap fur-collared coat and a red hat, and her rouge was vivid on very pale cheeks. Her eyes jerked over shelves and showcases, then fastened on Joel.

"You got bullets?"

"There was a moment's silence. Then, 'That we have, lady,' Joel's pa said. "Wait on your customer, boy."

Joel went behind the counter, feeling a queer tightness inside him. He was certain now, but instead of fear, he felt a taut alertness in every nerve. The woman took a revolver from her handbag. "Fill this up," she demanded.

Joe leaned over the counter. "All right," he said. "Let me see it a minute."

She extended the gun, then quickly withdrew it.

"Never mind, you!" she said. "Look at it from there."

"But I can't make out the caliber," Joel said slowly. "If I could just have it for a minute—"

Joel's pa cleared his throat impatiently. Even his old eyes recognized the gun's make and bore. A common make. A 32 caliber center-fire gun.

"Don't argue with the lady, boy!" he called. "I can tell that gun from here!"

"All right," Joel said easily. "All right, Pa."

He ran his fingers down the stacks of cartridge boxes. "If I don't sell them to her," he was thinking, than in June last year and those of Fort Worth firms showed a decrease smaller than the district average, while in other cities the decrease in sales were somewhat larger than the average.

Generally favorable weather the past six weeks improved the outlook for agricultural production in the eleventh district, the review says. Excepting a few limited areas the moisture supply is sufficient for current needs. Summer crops on the whole have about overcome the handicap of an unfavorable start, and the July 1 report of the department of agriculture shows prospective production and per acre yields of field crops generally are above the average.

Livestock range in most sections of Texas continued in good condition in June and much improvement occurred in the western part of the district where heavy rain broke the drought. Notwithstanding, there are a few locally dry areas in south and northwest Texas, but livestock in

COSDEN REFINERY DOUBLES CAPACITY

Producers of Cosden Higher Octane Gasoline complete $800,000 expansion program at Big Spring, Texas. The above picture shows the 6,500-barrel Dubbs Cracking Unit, the completion of which on July 10th, established the Cosden Refinery as the most modern in the United States, combining the latest improved features of automatic control now known to the petroleum industry.

To meet the ever-increasing demand for its Higher Octane Gasoline and to still further insure the uniformity and quality of its production, the Cosden Petroleum Corporation has just completed improvements and additions to its refinery at Big Spring which practically double its potential output and increases the octane of its Higher Octane Gasoline to a consistent 72.

The major addition, shown in the picture, includes a 6,500-barrel, Universal Oil Product, Dubbs Cracking Unit. This unit is of latest design, featuring U. O. P. Up-shot cracking furnaces along with the latest design of reaction chamber and fractionating column. The equipment is designed to operate at a high degree of pressure and temperature as is necessary to secure maximum yield of high quality gasoline from crude.

This installation increases the output of higher octane gasoline by 175,000 gallons per day and gives the refinery sufficient capacity to completely process into gasoline and fuel oil 14,000 barrels of crude oil daily, and by manufacturing various grades of Diesel and furnace oils will have a flexibility of 17,000 barrels of crude oil per day.

In addition to this new Dubbs unit, the No. 1 Dubbs Unit which has been in operation for several years, has been brought up to date by the installation of new centrifugal hot oil pumps, and has a daily capacity of 5,500 barrels.

FAMED STARS CAVORT IN MEXICAN MUSICAL

Movie audiences are due for three big surprises when they see their favorite stars in Paramount's new romantic fiesta, "Tropic Holiday," which opens Saturday evening, Aug. 27, also Sunday and Monday, Aug. 28 and 29 at the Palace theatre! Bob Burns, the favorite son of Arkansas, quits the state he has made famous and becomes a Senatorial candidate from Oklahoma. Hilarious Martha Raye comes down to earth as the secretary to a screen author and the elusive sweetheart of Burns, and Dorothy Lamour, trades her sardonic for the gay native costumes of southern Mexico.

Ray Milland, heading the cast as the Hollywood writer who tries to "get away from it all" in the tropics, has a "straight" role, reminiscent of the one he played so successfully in "Easy Living." He comes to Mexico to forget the movies and stays with Miss Lamour to forget the world, forsaking even his Hollywood sweetheart, blonde and lovely Binnie Barnes.

The comedy highlight of "Tropic Holiday" is Martha Raye's bullfight which she bravely undertakes for love of Bob Burns, the bombastic would-be-Senator from Oklahoma. For this unusual act Martha trained under one of Mexico's foremost bull-fighters, imported from his native country to teach the star all the tricks of his trade.

Other Latins who do their bit for the screen musical are Tito Guizar, the popular troubador of the air waves, last seen in the "Big Broadcast of 1938," Roberto Soto, the "Charlie Chaplin of Mexico," and the Ascencio Sisters, the Central American counterparts of America's Boswell Sisters.

"PENROD'S DOUBLE TROUBLE"

Palace—Thursday, August 25
The latest chapter in the film adventures of Booth Tarkington's famous Penrod is thoroughly sprinkled with laughs and action and should prove vastly appealing to the juvenile matinee trade as well as to family audiences in the neighborhood showings for which it is obviously aimed. The amazing likeness between the Mauch twins is capitalized upon to good advantage, and they do excellent work, aided considerably by Gene and Kathleen Lockhart, as Penrod's parents, and Dick Purcell as the villain. Penrod stows away in the basket of a barnstormer's balloon at a county fair and is accidentally carried away. Hugh O'Connell, sideshow operator, and his assistant, Bobby Mauch, try, unsuccessfully, to palm Bobby off as the missing boy. Lewis Siller directed.

Players—Bobby Mauch, Bobby Mauch, Dick Purcell, Gene Lockhart, Kathleen Lockhart, Hugh O'Connell, Phillip Hurtle.

"THE CHASER"

Palace—Tuesday and Wednesday August 30 and 31

Metro adds another to its list of brisk, workmanlike program offerings in this commendably novel and interesting-sustaining expose of the ambulance-chasing racket. It is well mounted, briskly directed and played to the hilt by a competent cast—a film any exhibitor should book quickly. Dennis O'Keefe shows considerable improvement, while Ann Morriss, screen newcomer, delivers with sincerity. Acting honors, however, go to that old veteran, Lewis Stone, past-master at picture stealing. O'Keefe is a slyster lawyer whose pet peeve is the local traction company. Stone, a tipping medico, and Nat Pendleton compose his staff—Stone to assure accident victims they are seriously hurt; Pendleton as a professional "flopper" who pretends serious injuries and collects. Ed Marini directed.

Players are Dennis O'Keefe, Ann Morriss, Lewis Stone, Nat Pendleton, Henry O'Neill, John Qualen, Jack Mullhall.

Jennie Fae O'Neal was back at her post as cashier at the Max Ber-man department store this week after a vacation trip to San Angelo last week. She visited Mr. and Mrs. Frank O'Neal in the Concho city.

THEY'LL ALL LOVE THIS CHOCOLATE OATMEAL PUDDING

Q.—What for dessert?
A.—Quaker Chocolate Oatmeal Pudding.

And there you have a tasty solution to a ticklish problem because everybody will like this delicious new kind of pudding... father, brother, sister—and you, too, mother.

Because it's made with Quaker Oats it's just as good for your family's health as it is good to eat. Oatmeal you know is nature's richest economical source of Thiamin (Vitamin B), which everybody, young and old, should have every day. Since Thiamin is not stored in the body new fresh supplies are continuously needed to nourish nerves and aid digestion. Oatmeal also is rich in muscle-building proteins and those valuable minerals, iron and phosphorus. So this Quaker Chocolate Oatmeal Pudding is really a health pudding as well as taste satisfying treat that's fine to top off any meal. This Quaker Chocolate Oatmeal Pudding is a thrifty dessert, too, because Quaker Oats is very economical. If by chance there's cooked oatmeal left over from breakfast, use it. And this is one pudding that's just as easy to make as it is economical. Tear out the recipe now. Enjoy this unusual dessert tonight.

QUAKER CHOCOLATE OATMEAL PUDDING

HERD OF MILKING SHORTHORNS ON BOWEN FARM AND PASTURAGE METHODS WHICH ARE USED THERE ATTRACTING WIDE INTEREST

The herd of registered Milking Shorthorn cattle which J. L. Bowen of Colorado is developing on his model stock farm at Hermleigh is attracting wide interest among cattlemen and agricultural leaders of this section.

BRUCE HART

Saturday For

TAX ASSESSOR-COLLECTOR

Mitchell County

Claiming almost an equal amount of interest are the methods which Bowen has used in developing artificial pasturage on this 361-acre farm which could be called his "hobby" if it claimed only his spare time instead of having first claim on all his time.

It was in 1928 that Bowen bought his first registered Milking Shorthorn stock. He was one of the first Mitchell countians to become interested in this dual-purpose breed, and is still a pioneer in the field.

R. Temple Dickson

FOR

REPRESENTATIVE FISHER MITCHELL NOLAN

DON'T BE MISLED

A man's character and ability are best portrayed by what his neighbors and acquaintances think of him.

In Nolan County, where the people knew both Dickson and his run-off opponent, Dickson carried the county by the following vote:

Table with 5 columns: Name, Docket, Hubbard of Nolan, Plot of Nolan, Jones, DICKSON of Nolan. Lists precincts like Sweetwater 1, Blackwell, etc.

Dickson lead his nearest opponent over the entire District by over 1400 votes.

DICKSON STANDS FOR:

MORE RIGID INSURANCE LAWS, thereby increasing protection to policy holders.

ASSISTANCE TO OUR OLD PEOPLE, carry out the mandate of the people as expressed by the Old Age Assistance Amendment to our Constitution.

ABOLISHMENT OF THE OLD AGE ASSISTANCE COMMISSION; LIQUOR CONTROL BOARD AND OTHER UNNECESSARY BUREAUS AND COMMISSIONS, IMPROVED WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION LAW, thereby affording greater protection to workers.

AMENDING OUR "HOT CHECK" LAW.

DICKSON IS AGAINST:

SPECIAL SESSIONS of the Legislature, except in extreme cases of emergency.

He is against Lobbyists and special privileges and is for the abolishment of all jobs created for political favors.

Analyze the above vote and see what the "home folks" thought about Dickson and his opponent (Paid for by Mitchell county friends of R. Temple Dickson) from a stock farm near Fairy, Texas. For two years Bowen kept these cattle on his two tenant farms in the southern part of Mitchell county.

In all this 361-acre farm there are only 60 acres of natural pasture, and this is used only when the cultivated pastureland is too wet to permit grazing.

Perhaps the most attention has been drawn by the 40 acres of pastureland which Bowen has developed with Rescue grass and Italian rye grass. This land was planted to the grasses in 1928, having previously been used for maize.

The grasses begin growing in August and September and are ready for grazing in October or November, remaining green and lush throughout the winter and spring.

For the summer months when these grasses are dying down Bowen has 76 acres in sudan, divided into three patches. Sudan grazing is usually good until October, Bowen says.

To supplement the sudan and grass pastures, Bowen has 50 acres devoted to wheat. He harvested some wheat in June, and volunteer wheat in that harvested field is now ready for grazing.

winter and spring months. Wheat for harvesting will be grown on still another field, and the pasture wheat field will be planted to feed next June.

With a bumper feed crop on his hands, Bowen has become an ardent believer in trench silos. On his Hermleigh farm he has had 96 acres in feed this year, and he plans to put all of the harvest in trench silos, filling two and perhaps three. He expects to store at least 200 or 250 tons of ensilage.

It is a special hobby of Bowen's to make his feed crop a cash crop by using it fattening yearlings. By mid-October he plans to have at least 100 yearlings and long yearlings on feed. He will keep them on silage and bunched feed for 150 days. The calves he buys usually average 500 pounds each when placed on feed, and by marketing time they weigh 800 pounds, representing an average daily gain of two pounds per animal.

One well supplies ample water for all the Bowen stock, and chutes are so built from each pasture that cattle have access to the water at all times without mingling.

Bowen's Milking Shorthorn herd now numbers some 20 head. He still has one of his first cows—Lackawana Flower V. The present herd bull is Aviator, secured from Henry C. Barlow at McKinney.

often surprising to those unfamiliar with the breed, Bowen says. Lackawana Flower V and one of her daughters, Flower Girl, will weigh about 1,400 pounds each. Aviator, the bull, weighs 1,700 pounds. The cows are excellent milkers, and at the same time are good beef stock.

The Milking Shorthorn calves which Bowen sells command $100 each. He never parts with a heifer calf, however.

During the spring months, when there is an excess of milk, the Bowen farm includes a number of pigs which are sold off when the milk supply lessens. The family which lives on the farm is allowed the use of all the milk and butter they need, and Bowen lets them raise chickens on the half and half basis.

The Bowen farm was recently the scene of a trench silo demonstration held by E. R. Eudaly of the A. & M. Extension Service.

PICKED UP ALONG THE NEWS PATH

Wandered into a local shoe shop the other morning and found Dr. Harry Logsdon trying to buy some authentic cowboy boots to wear when he accompanies Colorado's newly organized "Hillbilly" band on Frontier Round-up advertising tour. He was having quite a time because he couldn't buy the boots without taking the toes, and his feet didn't, he declared, take to the toes at all. It all reminded him of the time when he proudly acquired some "toothpick" shoes, which had their heyday while the horse-and-buggy era was still in sway. But his pride was short-lived, because the first time he wore the shoes he only managed to endure them from a dance to his home via horse and buggy. He confesses today that he wouldn't have endured them that long if his best girl hadn't been in the buggy with him. The shoes cost $10. He sold them next day at a second-hand store for 50 cents, and considered that he'd made a shrewd deal.

Look to the east and look to the west these clear summer evenings and note the two brilliant stars which come out and shine, one in the pale green western sky, the other in the deep blue eastern sky, even before twilight goes into dusk.

My, my, but this column rather stuck its chin out when it said last week that there are only a few mahjong sets in Colorado. It seems that there are several sets tucked away in any number of Colorado closets, having somehow remained intact during the more than twelve years since the game was played extensively here. This in spite of the fact that they would have made such excellent playthings for the babies.

Traveling by plane has another enthusiastic advocate in the person of Lottie Pritchett since she flew from Dallas to Mexico City on her recent vacation trip. Lottie made the trip on a plane where one of the Jenkins Twins (does it matter which?) was serving as stewardess. She says the twins are just as cute as you'd think they would be in the snappy little uniforms, and their being so identical has won quite a lot of notice. The plane trip to Mexico City left Lottie rested, refreshed, and read for any amount of sight-seeing. The trip home by ordinary conveyance seemed exorbitantly slow, she says, after the swift trip down there.

Around at Max Berman's department store last week they were enjoying a print from an old picture made in Sonora in 1898 by N. H. Free of San Antonio. The picture showed Austin Roundtree and four other youngsters who made up the "Sonora gang" in those days, all astride a rather long donkey.

The most remarkable memory I know is that of Mrs. C. H. Earnest. Because she sincerely shuns the limelight of publicity, I don't get to credit nearly as many things to Mrs. Earnest as I should, and I sometimes feel rather badly when I'm passing off some of her information as my own. It's almost a shame how often I have to ask her to help me in straightening out little facts in connection with some long-ago happening or condition in Colorado. The memories of such a person should be preserved for the generations to come. A gracious lady, Mrs. Earnest, and a wise one. I've never been able to talk to her quite as long as I wanted to.

Inspired by all the colorful cowboy regalia he's seen hereabouts since preparations for the Frontier Round-up got underway, young Les Terry, Jr., has put in his order for a red silk cowboy shirt to wear to the rodeo.

She's probably the youngest miss in Colorado with a "boyish" haircut, and she's more than probably the prettiest one. "She" is little Mary Ruth Shell, brown-eyed, 18-month-old daughter of the C. B. Shells. Strictly for summer comfort, her curls were shorn in a boyish-style haircut a few months ago, and now her wavy brown hair fits softly around her small head in a manner that is as unusual as it is becoming. Those who know Mary Ruth say that the world is an "o-o-o-wee!" affair to her right now, a sound something like that being her favorite expression.

Fifty-five years ago the Georgetown Sun published this local item: "Dr. H. N. Graves, who lately moved here from Colorado City, has his card in this issue of The Sun. He is an experienced, skilled physician and offers his services to the public."

Recently, 55 years later, it published this: "In 1884, Dr. H. N. Graves and family moved from Colorado City to Georgetown, their future home. Fifty-four years later their son, Harry Graves was in Colorado City, his childhood home, asking the people to elect him Associate Justice of the Court of Criminal Appeals. In the March of time history makes some noticeable contacts."

There's a new diamond twinkling on the left hand of the feminine half of one of Colorado's established "keeping company" couples. But we understand the wedding plans are still indefinite.

Meeting and talking to a "sure shoe" author was the experience of Mrs. Frank Kelley and Mrs. A. L. McSpadden on a recent visit in Snyder. The author was Mrs. Kathryn Cotten, whose newest book, "Shifting Winds," is to be published by Mathis, Van Nort & company of Dallas in the near future. Mrs. Cotten is a retired professional woman living in southeast Snyder. "Shifting Winds" is her first novel and is said to be definitely in the "slick" category. When published it will retail for $2.50, along with other best sellers. Mrs. Cotten was county clerk of Scurry county from 1921 until 1926, and prior to that operated abstract offices at Snyder and Brownfield.

If it would do anybody any good, I'd be in favor of a monument or something to commemorate the courage and endurance of hayfever sufferers, who are very muchly with us at this season. It's a miserable affliction that gets little manifested sympathy because it's so common and because those who have it can usually go on about their daily business. It's even the subject of friendly jesting. I even joked about it once myself—cut out a cartoon of a horse with hayfever and hung it in front of Bill Cooper's desk on one of his sneezy days while he was on the Record staff. I've been afraid ever since that the law of compensation would eventually hand me some hayfever to make me sorry. Well, I'm announcing to all and sundry that I'm already very, very sorry—and I'm in earnest about this monument business.

Jottings as the Frontier Round-up boosters got off Wednesday morning amid much yip-ee and yowling: Chester Jones in an authentic-looking red-and-black checkered shirt with a red bandana, but Mrs. Chester declared: "I'm a real cowhand. When I come to town I wear my store-bought clothes." Earl Gunn,

"Sure we do... and it's better business, too"

When you drink Beer in a tavern... choose your tavern

WHEN YOU restrict your patronage to legal, respectable retail outlets, you not only encourage those better outlets but you've made a start toward driving out the bad spots in your community. And that is exactly the aim of the great body of honest retailers of beer who, along with the brewer, recognize that Beer's only problem is to remove the anti-social conditions that sometimes surround its sale. Existing laws can curb these evils. Help us by demanding their strict enforcement! Sales to minors, or after legal hours... or use of a beer license as a screen, for selling illicit liquor or for operating an illicit resort... all these are violations of the law and should be stopped. Public opinion, once aroused, can see that such practices are stopped!

Round-up president, decked out in a cowboy outfit that featured a bright orange shirt. Orange also the favored color of Bill King. Boyd Dozier in a yellow shirt with red bandana. Young Bobby May in red chaps, trying to quiet the snary stamping of the Round-up mascot's diminutive Shetland pony mother, who made no bones about not liking the fact that she had to stay in the Bob May pick-up while her baby was paraded around. The James Paynes, Mrs. Payne armed with her accordion and Jimmy with a diminutive pistol, just in case any big bully along the way tried to take advantage of his being a runt. Mrs. Top Snyder in a tan silk shirt that blended becomingly with her blonde hair. The little Snyders, D. H. the Third and Frankie, all chapped up, along with their sombered father. But the "Poppe" of the whole Snyder tribe, the real "old cowhand" of them all, in the plain garb of a true modern ranchman. Lavendar-shirted Jenks Powell. Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Moseley a la western. Red shirts favored by Louis Cooper, Al Brooks, Joe McEwen. The "hillbilly" banders—L. B. Elliott, Boyd Dozier, Harry Ratliff, Dr. Harry Logsdon, Mrs. Payne, Chester Jones, luging their instruments. But since when do hillbillies wear boots? I thought you had to catch hillbillies to get even shoes on them. Clarence Hornberger in a yellow silk shirt with the store creases still in it. Meco Grantland in a blue shirt with a dashing touch of orange at the throat. Roy Warren looking like a real working cowhand, as did Irvin Terry and Irvin the second. Mrs. Van DeVenter tolling Mrs. Chester Jones into the notion of going along. H. B. Spence here, there, and everywhere. And so they were off in a blare of snaros and a final chorus of yells.
