He declares that he was ap-pointed at the request of General Gar-field, and that he accepted the place "at the earnest solicitation of General Arthur, representing the Grant side of the House, and of Hon. W. E. Chandler, representing the Blaine side. Speaking of his paid checks, which he retains as evidences of his contributions to the Committee, he says: "I regret more than I can tell that I made it pos-sible that such records should be in my hands, but they are here, and I think best to keep them as a reminder of the splendid gratitude of dishonest power. I do not owe the Republican National Committee a cent of money or a grain of thankfulness. In the midst of the storm brought about by the efforts I had put forth under its directions and in its behalf, a brutal assault was made upon me at the last meeting of the Committee when I was not present to defend myself. Not one among the forty mem-bers present had the courage or manhood to resent the miserable cowardice of the ambitious hypocrite." It will be observed that Mr. Dorsey at-

Though acquittal was something of a surprise, conviction was hibit in question should go Republichardly expected. The minds of reflecting men, therefore, turn to the offenses and to the consideration of a service in which such abuses are possible. It may be taken as absolutely certain that all opportunities permitted by the Govern-ment to peculate on and defraud the Treasury will be promptly noted and fully improved by the watchful class which lives and fattens by what it thus gains. The only method, therefore, of protecting the public interests is to put the Executive department in the hands of men capable of transacting business and honest enough to refuse to conuive at any and all efforts to get money without honest service. Whistling to Keep Their Courage Up. A leading organ of Republican opinion hereabouts devotes itself with elaborate detail to an exposition of the necessity of counting New York and Ohio in any calculation of a Republican victory at the next Presidential election. It has compiled an ingenious tabular exhibit of the extreme possibilities of Republican success, if victories in New York and Ohio are assured, showing that the Republicans might get a ma-jority of one in the Electoral College even if New Jersey, Connecticut, Indiana, Colorado, California, Nevada and Oregon should go Democratic. It is a fair presentation of the desperate situation in which the Republican party finds itself and the exhibit is hardly calculated to stimulate Republican confidence. New York and Ohio together cast fiftynine electoral votes, and, if not impossible, it is at least highly improbable, that the Republican party can make up their loss. It could not be done if the seven States already mentioned as acan, for they aggregate only forty-seven electoral votes. Add Virginia to the Republican list and the loss of New York and Ohio would just be counterbalanced. It need not be said, however, that the Republican party will not have even a remote chance of carrying the eight States named, if it can not carry New York and Ohio. It must make its fight for life. in these States and if it fails in either it can not hope to make up the loss. Indeed there is no escape from the evident fact that the Democracy will go into the next campaign with the odds heavily in their favor. Out of the fifteen States which are accredited to the Republicans in the exhibit of our contemporary, there are only four-Iowa, Rhode Island, Mianesota and Vermont -in which the Democrats have not been able to poll a majority vote at some general election within the last six or eight years. Out of the four hundred and one electoral votes which the country will cast at the next election, but twenty-eight belong to States which have proved impregnable strongholds of the Republican party. On the other hand the record shows fourteen States, casting one hundred and twenty-nine electoral votes, no one of which has ever given a Republican majority, except under the reconstruction regime. Is more needed to show how the odds stand?-St. Louis Republican.

How Ju was Deposed.

Much speculation has been indulged in since the return of General Crook concerning the whereabouts of the notorious Ju, the wily Chiricahua chieftain. He was known to have led many of the most daring raids from his Sierra Madre stronghold into both Sonora and Chihuahua, and his numberless fiendish atrocities had caused his name to become a synonym with the Mexicans for all that was bateful and terrible. At the time the Chiricahuas surrendered to General Crook it was stated that Ju and his band were absent in the foothills on a marauding expedition, and such was generally believed to be the case; but from information recently obtained by an Epitaph reporter, it seems pretty certain the dread savage, in addition to being at war with the entire white race. is also an outcast from his own people. The story, as told to an army officer by one of Crook's captives, who was formerly enlisted as a scout and stationed at Fort Bowie, is about as follows: Some time last fall Ju and his band made a descent from their mountain fastness upon a small foothill settlement in the State of Chiliuahua. The village was surprised by the savages and the fighting portion of the inhabitants either killed or put to flight. After the red devils obtained possession they burned and pillaged the town, maltreated and murdered defenseless women and children, as is their usual custom. Among the plunder was a large quantity of mescal, and the savages, deeming themselves safe from attack, celebrated their victory by free indulgence in the favor-ite beverage of the Mexicans. The re-sult was a debauch which would have been worthy of Satan and his imps. Meanwhile the inhabitants who had fled at the time of the attack returned to the scene. They found the savage marauders nearly overcome by their excesses, and in no condition to defend hemselves. Realizing that their turn had come, the Mexicans were not slow to wreak vengeance upon the murderers of their families and destroyers of their homes. An attack was made and only our of the band escaped, among whom was Ju and the ex-scout. They returned to their mountain stronghold, where the families and friends of the exterminated warriors were waiting their coming. When the result of the Il-fated expedition and the cause of its ailure were made known, a howl of inlignation was raised, and Ju, as the eader of the band, was held responsible for the disaster. His past successes and popularity were not sufficient to with-stand the storm of indignation, and the discomfited chief was forced to flee for his life, several relatives of the deceased bucks taking a shot at him as he disppeared. Since then the once powerul Ju has had no communication with his tribe, and is doubtless wandering bout the Sierra Madres mourning for

How Pig is Made Pork.

Of course I went to see the stock ards of Chicago. A lively piebald porker was one of a number grunting and quarreling in a pen, and I was asked to keep my eye on him. And what happened to that porker was this: He was suddenly seized by a hind leg and jerked upon a small crane. This swung him swiftly to the fatal door through which no pig ever returns. On the other side stood a man--

That two-handed engine at the door was the valet of General Braddock, and was left behind after the defeat of the and through another doorway, and then there was a splash! He had fallen head first into a vat of boiling water. Sonte anseen machinery passed him along swiftly to the other end of the terrible bath, and there a water-wheel picked him up and flung him out to a sloping counter. Here another machine seized him, and with one revolution scraped him as bald as a nut. And down the counter he went, losing his head as he slid past a man with a hatchet, and then, presto! he was up again by the heels. In one dreadful handful a man emptied him, while another squirted him with fresh water, the pig-register-ing his own weight as he passed the eller's box-shot down the steel bar from which he hung and whisked around the corner into the ice-house. One long cut of a knife made two 'sides of pork" out of that piebald pig. Two hacks of a hatchet brought away his backbone. And there, in thirty-five seconds from his last grunt, dirty, hotheaded, noisy, the pig was hanging up In two pieces, clean, tranquil, iced!-Cor. London News.

TORNADOES.

Scientifically Accounted for; and Som Remote Causes that Produce Pain-ful Results Explained.

The following synopsis of a lecture de livered by Dr. Horace R. Hamilton before the New York Society for the Promotion of Science contains so much that is timely and important that it can be read with both interest and profit:

and important that it can be read with both interest and profit: There is probably no subject of modern times that has caused and is causing greater attention than the origin of torna-does. Scientists have studied it for the benefit of humanity; men have investi-gated it for the welfare of their families. It has been a vexed subject long consid-ered, and through all this investigation the cyclone has swept across the land carrying destruction to scientists as well as to the innocent dwellers in its track. One thing, however, is certain; the cause of the cy-clone must be sought far away from the whirling body of wind itself. Its results are powerful; its cause must also be pow-erful. Let us therefore consider a few facts. First, the appearance of a cyclone is invariably preceded by dark spots upon the face of the sun. These spots, indicating a disturbed condition of the solar regions, necessarily affect the atmosphere of our earth. An unusual generation of heat in one part of the atmosphere is certain to cause a partial vacuum in another portion. Air must rush in to fill this vacuum. Hence the disturbances—hence the cyclone. This theory finds additional confirmation in the fact that tornadoes come during the day and not at night. The dark spots upon the surface of the sun, whatever they may be, seem to cause great commotion in the atmosphere of the world, and it is almost the surface of the sun, whatever they may be, seem to cause great commotion in the atmosphere of the world, and it is almost certain that the extremely wet weather of the present season can be accounted for on precisely this basis. Is it reasonable to suppose that the marvelous effect of the sun on vegetation and life in general shall be less than upon the atmosphere itself through which its rays come? The causa is remote, but the effect is here. After describing some of the terrible ef-fects of the cyclone, the speaker went on to sav:-- tects of the cyclone, the speaker went on to say:— This rule finds its application in nearly every department of life. An operator is in San Francisco—the click of the instrument manipulated by his fingers, in New York. The President makes a slight stroke of the pen in his study at the White House, and the whole nation is aroused by the act. An uneasiness and disgust with everything in life, commonly called home-sickness, is felt by many neople, when the cause is to life, commonly called home-sickness, is felt by many people, when the cause is to be found in the distant home thousands of miles away. An uncertain pain may be felt in the head. It is repeated in other parts of the body. The appetite departs and all energy is gone. Is the cause neces-sarily to be found in the head? The next day the feeling improvement and day the feeling increases. There are ad-ded symptoms. They continue and be-come more aggravated. The slight pains in the head increase to agonies. The nausea becomes chronic. The heart grows irregu-lar, and the breathing uncertain. All these effects have a definite cause; and, efter varys of deep avariance upon this these effects have a definite cause; and, after years of deep experience upon this subject, I do not hesitate to say that this cause is to be found in some derangement of the kidneys or liver far away from that portion of the body in which these ef-fects appear. But one may say, I have no pain whatever in my kidneys or liver. Very true. Neither have we any evidence that there is a townado on the surface of the sun; but it is none the less certain that the tornado is here, and it is none the less certain that these great organs of the body certain that these great organs of the body are the cause of the trouble although there his departed greatness. - Tombstone

I know whereof I speak, for I have passed through this very experience myself. Nearly ten years ago, I was the picture of health, weighing more than 200 pounds, and as strong and healthy as any man I ever knew. When I felt the symptoms I have above described, they caused me an and as strong and healthy as any man 1 ever knew. When I felt the symptoms I have above described, they caused me an-noyance, not only by reason of their ag-gravating nature, but because I had never felt any pain before. Other doctors told me I was troubled with malaria, and I treated myself accordingly. I did not be-lieve, however, that malaria could show such aggravated symptoms. It never cc-curred to me that analysis would help solve the trouble, as I did not presume my difficulty was located in that portion of the body. But I continued to grow worse. I had a faint sensation at the pit of my stomach nearly every day. I felt a great desire to eat, and yet I loathed food. I was constantly tired and still I could not sleep. My brain was unusually active, but I could not think connectedly. My existence was a living misery. I continued in this con-dition for nearly a year; never free from pain, never for a moment happy. Such an existence is far worse than death, for which I confess I earnestly longed. It was while suffering thus that a friend pain, never for a moment happy. Such an existence is far worse than death, for which I confess I earnestly longed. It was while suffering thus that a friend advised me to make a final attempt to re-cover my health. I sneered inwardly at his suggestion, but I was too week to make any resistance. He furnished me with a remedy, simple yet palatable, and within two days I observed a slight change for the better. This awakened my courage. I felt that I would not die at that time. I continued the use of the remedy, taking it in accordance with directions, until I be-came not only restored to my former health and strength, but of greater vigor than I have before known. This con-dition has continued up to the present time, and I believe I should have died as miserably as thousands of other men have died and are dying every day had it not been for the simple yet wonderful power of Warner's Safe Cure, the remedy I em-ployed.

been for the simple yet wonderful power of Warner's Safe Cure, the remedy I em-ployed. The lecturer then described his means of restoration more in detail, and concluded as follows: My complete recovery has caused me to investigate the subject more carefully, and I believe I hare discovered the key to most ill-health of our modern civilization. I am fully confident that four-fifths of the dis-eases which afflict humanity might be avoided were the kidneys and liver kept in perfect condition. Were it possible to con-trol the action of the sun, cyclones could undoubtedly be averted. That, however, is one of the things that can not be. But I rejoice to say that it is possible to control the kidneys and liver; to render their ac-tion wholly normal and their effect upon the system that of purifiers rather than poisoners. That this end has been accom-plished largely by means of the remedy I have named I do not have a doubt, and I feel it my duty to make this open declara-tion for the enlightenment of the profes-sion and for the benefit of suffering human-ity in all parts of the world.
